A horse belonging to Harry Potter, of Rahway road, ran away on Belvidere avenue Monday evening. After giving the two young men in the buggy a lively ride, the horse was finally pulled up by the driver without any damage being done. The runaway ended on East Fifth street near Washington street.

Her Solos Appreciated.

At the prayer meeting Monday of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, Miss L. Messersmith favored the young people by singing two solos, both of which were very much appreciated.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked: "Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS
R·I·P·A·N·S
ONE GIVES RELIEF

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES packed in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale by druggists generally throughout the United States. This low-priced carton is intended for the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL CO., No. 10 Spruce Street, New York. Or a single carton will be sent for five cents. RIPANS TABULES may also be had of some druggists, general storekeepers, or wherever there is a sale of patent medicines. Ask for RIPANS TABULES, and refuse substitutes.

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $3 a call.

A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." The time of this interview there were present two daughters who especially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to this the elder Lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

have their vineyards stocked of the same grape, the only vineyard of the kind in this country, the vines were imported and planted here over forty years ago. The Speer Port wine and Burgundy are now regarded the finest in the world, their rich, full body and high character is unexcelled. Invalids, weakly persons, especially females, and the aged are made strong and vigorous by its use, as a medicinal wine it has no equal; as a family wine it has no superior. First class physicians all over the country, here and in Europe, who have tried them recommend them as the best.

A close study by physicians on the effect of different brands of wines on the system convinces them of the superiority of the Speer Passaic wines for their patients.

AN AGED FRIEND DEAD.

Mrs. Hannah C. Adams, Formerly of Plainfield, Lived to be Four Score and Two.

The death of Mrs. Hannah C. Adams, who will be remembered as a resident of this city twenty-five years ago by some of the older Plainfielders, died at her home in Indianapolis, Ind., August 26th, at the age of eighty-two years. She was the mother of Harry G. Adams, of 222 West Front street. In 1873 Mrs. Adams resided in the house then standing at what is now the head of Sandford avenue. The house faced Front street. She was the head of a family of twelve and reached the oldest age of all. She leaves three children, as follows: Mrs. John D. Sherman, of Indianapolis; Harry G. Adams, of Plainfield; James C. Adams, of Newark. She was a most exemplary Christian and a life-long member of the Society of Friends. Her funeral was held at Indianapolis last Sunday.

TO AWAKEN INTEREST.

A Public Meeting of Temperance Adherents to be Held Regularly.

Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, held a public meeting Monday, in their lodge rooms, to which there was a good attendance. It is the intention of the members of the order to hold these public meetings once each month hereafter, and in this way try and awaken a temperance spirit in this city.

The exercises opened Monday night with devotional exercises led by D. W. Hand, and an address of welcome from Michael Armstrong, Worthy Patriarch of the order.

Mrs. Cox, of New York, a slum worker, related some of her experiences, which were very interesting. She followed her address by a vocal solo.

Miss Anderson then gave a cornet solo accompanied on the organ by Miss Thompson. Mr. Hand sang a song about Dewey, which brought down the house, and William C. Smith, president of the Reform Club, and a member of Howell Division, sang a temperance song accompanied by his daughter. Recitations were delivered by Miss Try Mattox and Robert Mattox, and Professor Stevens sang two temperance solos.

When Mr. Armstrong asked for signers to the pledge and applications for membership, there was quite a response, among them being Mrs. Cox.

Trouble Over Fixtures of Butcher Shop Taken in Court.

The trouble over the ownership of the fixtures in the butcher shop of John F. Murphy, on South Second street, has culminated in a suit in the Union County District Court. It will be remembered that John F. Jackson, the dealer in fixtures in New York, attempted to take the fixtures back claiming them for a debt. Then the Plainfield Beef Company jumped in and secured judgment for the same fixtures on account of a bill that Murphy owed them. Jackson claims that the goods haven't been paid for and are, therefore, still his.

To get them back, if possible, he secured a writ of replevin from Judge Atwater which was served on August 19th by the deputy-sheriff. The matter will come up in court Thursday at Elizabeth when Judge Atwater will decide whose rights are being violated.

PROFITS OF CAMP MEETING.

Total Receipts Were $183.36—$94.36 Applied to Debts of Church.

Rev. W. B. G. Coster, pastor of St. Peter's A. M. E. Zion church, who has been conducting the series of camp meetings in Hyde's grove at Nethermood for the past three weeks, reports that the total receipts were $183.36. The expenses were $88.90, leaving a balance of $94.36, which has been applied to the floating indebtedness of the society. After his tireless efforts to make the meetings a success, Rev. Mr. Coster has left town to enjoy a week's vacation.

PLAINFIELD G. O. P. HUNGRY FOR OFFICES

Already Well Supplied With Plums They Want More.

COUNTY AND STATE HONORS

MAYOR FISK AND ERNEST ACKERMAN MENTIONED FOR SENATOR.

It is Not Certain That Roger Murray Wants to Go Back to the Assembly—If Judge DeMeza Will Keep Out of Courses for City Cudi He Might Receive a Boost for the Legislature.

While by no means certain of the future course of events in municipal affairs, the Republicans of Plainfield are fairly certain of presenting a united front on all State issues and in the fight for recognition at the next county convention this fall. There was a time when Plainfield was given little or no patronage by the Union county G. O. P. organization, but that time is past. It may be, however, that the choice morsels already granted to the Plainfield Republicans have but whetted their appetites and made them anxious for more. However it is, there are already a number of local aspirants for county and State honors to be conferred by the coming G. O. P. convention at Elizabeth.

Plainfield now has one assemblyman, the sheriff, the warden of the county jail, the deputy county clerk, the county attorney and several minor offices. The county seat has the senator, now acting-Governor, and two assemblymen with a batch of minor "plums." Rahway has the clerk and intended to have the coroner, but for a hitch at the convention last year that gave that coveted office to one of the smaller townships. While there are some Republicans in Union county who believe that Plainfield has all she deserves for a while, there is every prospect that Plainfield is going to make an attempt to get more.

If Roger Murray wants a renomination for the Assembly, he will in all probability get it by the courtesy rule at the convention. If, as it is rumored, one term is all that Roger cares for, then there are a number of local Republicans who will be after it. Now down in Westfield, there is a feeling that that township deserves recognition in the lower house of the State Legislature, and it seems likely that Westfield will make a bid for one of her candidates. Elizabeth seems to think that she is fairly entitled to two assemblymen, and so Westfield may try to win over the rest of the county to allot the other now held by Plainfield to her.

City Judge DeMeza is prominently spoken of as a candidate for renomination for his present municipal office. It is hinted, however, that other local workers who are looking after the city judgeship will give Judge DeMeza a strong boost for the assembly nomination if he will only go running for that and leave the city office alone. Harry C. Runyon has also been mentioned as being willing to take a hand in the race. The race is too young yet, however, to be able to even pick the prominent candidates.

There has been lots of gossip about the State senatorship now that it seems very likely that Acting-Governor Voorhees will resign his office in the senate and make a run for governor. Elizabeth does not look with friendly eyes on the reports that Plainfield is going to have the senatorial nomination. In fact, the workers in the county seat are likely to fight bitterly for the coveted nomination.

Whatever the chances are, there has been plenty of talk about Mayor Charles J. Fisk being after the office. Fisk's term as Mayor of Plainfield expires this year and it is a settled thing that he does not want the nomination again even if it was tendered to him. There are some who say that he does not want the State senatorship either but what his sentiments in that direction are remain to be seen. Another Plainfielder whose name has been whispered as candidate is Ernest R. Ackerman. Mr. Ackerman has not made any apparent effort as yet to appear in the contest. It is too early to expect that, even if he intended to start a boom. He has always taken a more active part in National politics and was considered a candidate against Mr. Fowler in the race for the congressional nomination.

That recalls to mind the fact that this congressional district elects another representative to the Capital at Washington. The Republicans are strong here and their candidate will, unless there is some new phase to the situation, capture the election. Fowler has stood for two terms and is beginning to make a name for himself in the legislative halls at Washington. All through the State it will be noticed that there is a general tendency to put back the same men in Congress that have already been representing Jersey there. The apparent reason for this is that a man thoroughly accustomed to the methods of Congress can look after his constituents far better than a man of equal ability who has not had the experience. Thus Maine has secured for herself the Speakership by continually returning Mr. Reed to the House.

The Republicans of this district are not essentially different from those of the other districts in the county and it seems likely that they will prefer to see Mr. Fowler back in his old place with the chance of winning new laurels for the State and for himself.

Meanwhile, between the war and the hot weather, politics have not yet taken a very active turn in this section. Any attempt to point out the probable course of affairs, as yet, is sure to be premature. It seems quite likely, however, that Plainfield will be up to the front this year and will look for still further recognition of her claims.

Seventh-Day Baptist Centre.

Under the caption "Home of Saturday Observers," a writer in the New York Herald of Sunday tells how the Seventh-Day Baptists flourish in and around Plainfield, with the establishment of the sect in New Market. An account is given of the conversion of Rev. Edmund Dunham, who preached the doctrine of Saturday observance. Randolph Dunham, of Plainfield, is a great grandson of this Seventh-Day preacher.

LAD ABOUT TO DROWN.

WM. SUTTON, A PAINTER, PERFORMS A DARING RESCUE.

The Little Fellow Was Playing Along the Bank at Tier's Pond When His Feet Slipped and He Fell in Deep Water.

Wm. Sutton, a painter, performed a heroic rescue of the three-year old son of Abel Solinsky, of Pearl street, late Saturday afternoon, after the little fellow had fallen into Tier's pond and was in imminent danger of being drowned.

The lad had strayed away from his home and was playing along the bank of the pond, when in some manner he lost his foothold and fell into the water. Several other boys were in the vicinity and when they saw the child's body plunge into the water and sink out of sight they gave an alarming cry. Sutton was not far off and he hurried to the rescue. Sutton started to take off his coat so it would not impede his movements in the water, when he noticed that the child was about to sink for the third time. Instead of taking off his coat he plunged into the pond and grabbed the body of the little fellow. Gaining the shore again Sutton, with great presence of mind, commenced to roll the body of the unconscious boy over his knees until he had succeeded in forcing nearly all the water from his lungs. Then he carried him to his home, where a physician was called who successfully treated the youngster.

Verdict Against the Estate.

Justice Mosher handed down his decision Monday in the case of Kane against Ettinger and Coyne as executors of Mrs. Ettinger's estate. Kane, who was Mrs. Ettinger's brother, sued the widower and the executors, one of which was Ettinger for a $100 loan he made Mrs. Ettinger. The Justice gave as his verdict that there was no cause for action against Ettinger, but gave a verdict for $100 against the estate.

MASONIC HONORS FOR THE LATE A. B. DARBY.

Jerusalem Lodge Members Attended Services in a Body.

IMPRESSIVE RITES AT GRAVE

REV. DR. J. H. PARKS OFFICIATED AT SERVICES IN THE HOUSE.

He was an Intimate Acquaintance of the Deceased, and Paid a Glowing Tribute to the Worth of His Character as Reflected in Every-Day Life —Masons Accompanied the Funeral.

A large circle of friends and relatives gathered at the bier of Albert B. Darby, at his late home on Grove street Sunday afternoon, to pay their last respects to the dead. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Dr. James H. Parks, a former pastor of the Baptist church at Scotch Plains, where the deceased was born, and a life-long friend and advisor.

The services were held at 3 o'clock and were impressively simple. A number of selections from the scriptures were read. There were a few words from the speaker and a short prayer and then the remains were borne away to the cemetery.

Dr. Parks' remarks were comforting to the bereaved ones, as he had been well acquainted with the dead one and he spoke intimately of him. He chose these words as the subject of his remarks: "There's but a step between me and death." The Doctor said that we feel the truth of this scene of death comes into our own families, and breaks the ties we cherish most. Then it is we realize as never before that death may come to us next. But death is not the universal enemy we imagine him. Death itself is controlled by God. It is God's messenger, His peace angel, that comes to unlock for us the gate that shuts us out from the better, the grander, the eternal life beyond.

In speaking of the departed, Dr. Parks said, "I was well acquainted with the dear one who lies in the casket. I knew him to love and esteem. He had noble qualities, was honorable, upright, and a loving son and husband. Oh, how I loved his mother! and what a tender husband he was! He was a dear social friend, identified with the best interests of this city and the Plains. He was a reliable friend, a business man of standing, and of thirty years experience as a member of the firm he was connected with when he died.

"As a business man he was identified with the interests of those in business with him. I have had enough conversation with him to know that he had found the way to God and as we stand here today we can feel that the Master of the garden has plucked the rose, and is wearing it upon his bosom."

The deceased was a member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, Free and Accepted Masons, and forty-one of them attended the funeral and took charge of the services at the grave. Before the services began Senior Warden Garret T. Dunham, acting in place of Master H. O. Hance, who was absent, entered the room where the casket lay and laid the emblem of the order, the white apron, upon the coffin.

The late Mr. Darby was the third oldest member of Jerusalem Lodge—his seniors being Dr. Henry R. Cannon, of Elizabeth, and E. C. Mulford, of this city.

The Masons were provided with seats on the veranda, and were given the first opportunity to look at the remains after the services were over. The casket was closed and carried by four colored porters to the hearse.

The Masons formed around the hearse and accompanied it on foot to the corner of Eighth street and Park avenue, where they took stages. In the procession the main body of the lodge marched ahead, the pall-bearers, William H. Sebring, James E. Turrill, C. H. Suggs, Henry Woodland, Dr. D. O. Adams and A. L. Force, walked beside the hearse, three on each side, while the officers, bearing their insignia of office, were behind.

At the gates of the cemetery the Masons alighted and accompanied the remains to the grave. Arrived there, Past Master C. C. Howard, of Anchor Lodge, led the members of the lodge in the Lord's prayer, which was recited in concert. This was followed by the recital of the beautiful and impressive Masonic burial service by Past Master B. F. Coriell, who had committed the forms to memory.

The white apron was cast into the open grave and the service closed by each member of the order marching around the grave and depositing the "acacia branch," a bit of evergreen on the casket. With the pronouncing of the benediction by Dr. Parks, the services were over.

The floral offering were beautiful, and an extra carriage was required to bear them to the grave. A large pillow of yellow roses was sent by Jerusalem Lodge, and there were broken columns, a harp, wreaths and handsome bouquets sent by the members of Mr. Darby's firm, his relatives and others.

WENT THROUGH WINDOW

THE YOUNG COLORED SCAMP AT HOLLY GROVE FARM ESCAPED.

While the Guard Was Engaged in Conversation, "Novel" Veta Jumped Out of the Window and Hasn't Been Seen Since

George Washington Veta, the little colored lad who stole about $200 worth of jewelry from David M. Kellogg, of Holly Grove Farm, Thursday morning, as was told in this paper, is at liberty again. He was locked up in the coach house on the farm and several men placed as guard over him, but Friday morning he gave them the slip and took leave through a rear window without even a good-bye.

By Friday morning, as "Novel," as he nicknamed, seem so docile, and apparently had no thoughts of escape, the watch began to be relaxed a little. Only one man was left with him at the time of the escape, Martin Ryan, an assistant foreman, and he was standing outside the door talking with Mrs. Kellogg.

When the conversation was finished Ryan opened the door and looked leisurely in the coachhouse. It was not very light inside, and at the first look Ryan did not see "Novel." He looked again, and scanned the entire room, but the boy was nowhere to be seen. By this time Ryan began to become frightened, so he went carefully over every part of the house, but no "Novel" was to be seen. An open window told the tale, and a hole in the earth directly under the window showed where Novel's little heels had struck when he dropped.

Ryan is feeling crestfallen, especially as the farm hands are teasing the life out of him because of the poor watch he kept over the colored lad.

As for "Novel," he has not been seen since. It is supposed that he took to the woods as soon as he got clear of the farm and made his way to this city, where he may have some friends. Holly Grove Farm is well clear of him, and that is all they want.

HE JUST ADMITTED IT.

James F. Rogers Was Very Accommodating to the Lady's Charge.

James P. Rogers, colored, is very accommodating to the ladies, especially when they make an assertion that they can prove conclusively. Monday morning, in the borough court room, "just to make a long story short and to please that girl," as he said, he pleaded guilty to striking Mary J. Hurling, a young damsel of dark color, and calling her names. His chivalrous conduct cost him $10 or ten days.

Miss Hurling and Maggie Belle Jackson were walking down Somerset street early Sunday morning, returning from a Saturday night "racket." Maggie and her "gentleman friend" were ahead, but not far enough to prevent them seeing Rogers throw Mary against the fence and strike her twice. Mary ran away from Rogers, and meeting Marshal Campbell had her assailant arrested. The two had quarreled, and this was Rogers' way of getting even. His friends are trying to gather together enough money to get Rogers out of jail.

THE GOSPEL TRAIN HAS LEFT CAMP MEETING.

Close of the Three Weeks' Open-Air Services in Hyde's Grove.

ENDED WITH WIERD SCENE

A TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION THE FINAL ACT.

The Camp Grounds Crowded With a Large Number of People at the Services Sunday—Some Sinners Have Been Touched—A Large Amount of Money Raised for the Benefit of the Church.

Out into the grove went the procession of the colored worshippers. In advances strode the tall and burly form of the colored preacher, the shepherd of the little flock, waving a lantern as if to call in all the stragglers of his band.

"Get on board," rang out from the little procession as they sang that wierd but pleasing jubilee melody, "Get on the Gospel Train." It was the closing of the greatest colored camp meeting Plainfield ever saw and the concluding ceremonies were thoroughly in keeping with the character of the services. They were strange and possessed a fascination that has attracted many thousands to the little grove that lies right at the foot of the Netherwood hill in the centre of one of Plainfield's most aristocratic neighborhoods.

For week after week the grove, situated at the corner of Woodland and LaGrande avenues, has been the scene of these camp meeting services. Every night has the grove been lighted with flaring torches nailed to the trees and old-fashioned lanterns fastened on convenient boughs. Rude board benches served as seats for the worshippers and curicaity seekers who came. The services were given by the St. Peter's A. M. E. Zion church, a new religious organization recently established here. The objects of the meetings were two-fold. While they wanted to convert as many sinners as possible, it is known as though the collecting of funds for the new church formed an important part of the services.

They took in a goodly amount which will go to pay for their sanctuary, the one formerly occupied by the Filmore Avenue Baptist church. How much it was will be announced later.

Of late the meetings have been attracting remarkably large crowds. The trolley company has been reaping a rich harvest and extra cars were put on to accommodate the throng that assembled there almost every evening.

It was on Sundays that the camp meeting saw its greatest attendance. Three services were held Sunday—morning, afternoon and evening—and there was little interval between them. Preaching, praying and singing were continued without cessation. Yesterday the jubilee singers were there and their queer minor melodies sounded plaintively on the clear, cool air. It was at night, however, that the singing was the most effective.

Rev. Dr. Coster, the big preacher of the church, was in command. His voice was husky from his continued efforts to reach the uttermost recesses of the grove, but he stuck to it and added his powerful bass voice to those of the jubilee singers.

All yesterday the crowd thronged to the camp meeting ground. In the afternoon there must have been fully 2,000 people, who filled the open air auditorium or wandered about the outskirts of the grove. In the evening the crowd was greater if anything. There was a frequent change in the jubilee singers who began to work themselves into a frenzy in their enthusiasm. Then there were short addresses by several.

It was nearly 10 o'clock when Rev. W. H. G. Coster, the leader of the meeting, rose up and began the closing services. With a lantern in one hand and the other beating time, he led the Jubilee singers to the open space in front. Then the other people fell into line and the strange procession began. Torches were pulled from the fastenings, lanterns were gathered up and all joined in the singing of "Get on the Gospel Train." Round they went, the torches flaring, the lanterns waving and the bodies of the dusky worshippers swaying in time with their song.

The circle grew larger and larger until they reached the bounds of the camp, then they turned and came back to the centre. Down they knelt while the tall leader invoked Divine protection of them and gave thanks for the great success of the meeting. They rose again and burst into another negro melody. That ended the camp meeting and the audience slowly departed leaving the "katy-dids" in sole possession of the grove.

WON THE GAME IN THE LAST INNING

Riverdales Defeated the New York Athletic Club.

A FAIRLY-FOUGHT CONTEST.

THE EXCITEMENT BEGAN IN THE FIRST INNING.

The Riverdales Scored Four Runs in the First and One in the Third—Then the Visitors Crawled Up at the Last—A Very Satisfactory Game—No Unpleasant Features—The Score.

It was the closest kind of a game, but timely hitting told, and the boys of the Riverdale Field Club, of this city, retrieved their reputation by winning out from the New York Athletic Club in the last half of the last inning. It was a game greatly resembling the usual collegiate match, full of spirit and dash and abounding in all kinds of exciting features, and the crank who was not pleased with it had better give up the National game—nothing can suit him.

Exciting does not half express the situation down at the Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon when the game was in progress. Many of the players were old college men and they gave an exhibition of ball playing the like of which has seldom been seen in Plainfield. The match was absolutely free from any unpleasant features. While the rivalry between the two teams was very keen, there was a friendliness and an absence of kicking shown that marked both teams in the eyes of the audience as being composed of gentlemen who were in the game for sport and not to win the game by hook or crook.

The local enthusiasts were expecting something great in the nine from the New York Athletic Club and they were not disappointed. The crowd, while by no means as large as the game deserved, was the best since the adoption of the Riverdales by Plainfield. Then, too, the audience was running over with enthusiasm which it divided between the two teams with delightful impartiality. Anything worth yelling at, and there were plenty of such occasions, received its full measure of applause.

The visitors were as gentlemenly a lot of young men as could be found on the diamond. They were great talkers, however, and "joshed" the Riverdales and each other without cessation.

The fun began when the first man went to bat. The New York team came up first. Cowan sent a long fly, which Hardy caught after a hard run. Then Powell made a clean hit over centre field, on which he made two bases. Affeld, the great Cornell fielder, followed with a single. Buckbee, who took Easton's place in left field, handled it so quickly that Powell who attempted to take third, was put out by Romig. Then "Jimmy" Dunne sent a long fly to Will Smith who caught it.

Reinacker opened the inning for the Riverdales with a pretty single. Buckbee bunted and went out at first, advancing "Reiny" a base. Fred Smith drove a hard fly to Ayres, who made his reputation at Lafayette. Ayres didn't get it and "Reiny" went round to third. Smith stole second without delay. Then Hayes hit safely and "Reiny" and Fred Smith both scored.

Will Smith sacrificed and Hayes went to second, while Hardy was next given his base on balls. A wild pitch advanced each of the base runners. Romig sent a fast grounder to Affeld, who threw wild to first after fumbling it. Hayes scattered for home. Now Jimmy Dunne, Hayes and the ball all arrived at the home plate at the same instant. Hayes butted the New York catcher in the neck as he stood in the road and the ball went flying by. Hardy also scored and Romig went round to third.

As a result of the collision, Dunne's neck was strained and he could not turn it. He went about holding it while the crowd yelled "rubber." It troubled him so much that he finally went out to centre field, and Cowan, the ex-Brooklyn High School catcher, took his place. Wood ended the inning with an easy fly to Reed.

Nobody scored again until the third when Fred Smith went to first on a hit, took two more bases on Hayes' single and stole home while they were trying to catch Hardy at second. That made it 5 to 0 in favor of the home team.

So it continued until the sixth when Romig threw Reed's slow grounder clear over Wood's head, and Reed scampered round the bases before Hardy could find the ball.

In the eighth, Powell, the Yale 'varsity man, reached third safely on an error by Wood and a sacrifice by Affeld. He was thrown out at the plate by Westervelt on Dunne's easy grounder. Dunne stole second and scored on a fumble by Wood.

The ninth inning was positively hair-raising in the excitement it furnished. Ayres made a hit, stole second. Then Murphy went out to Fred Smith, Cowan hit safely and Ayres scored, he stole second and Powell took first on another wild throw by Romig over Fred Smith's head at second. Before they could get it, Ayres was home and Powell at second. Powell stole third and then came home, tying the score, on a poor throw to first by Westervelt. Affeld, who was safe thanks to "West's" error, attempted to steal second and was thrown out just as Jimmy Dunne struck out.

With the score 5 to 5, the Riverdales came up for their half of the ninth inning. Hardy reached second on a dropped third strike and started for third on Romig's grounder to be caught there. Wood made a lovely hit over first base that advanced Romig to third. Westervelt was up and the crowd was wild. He sent a hot grounder to Powell. Powell held it an instant, dropped it, picked it up and dropped it again and then lost himself. Romig made an awful leap for the home plate and crossed it safely, scoring the winning run. That ended the game.

Steinmetz, the crack shortstop of the Plainfield Crescents, was in left field for the visitors and did some good batting.

FEAR OF OCEAN IS GONE.

MR. AND MRS. A. C. LACASSE SAILED FOR FRANCE SATURDAY.

They Were the Heroes of the Bourgogne Disaster, and at the Time Declared They Would Not Sail Again.

As if to tempt the fates again, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian C. LaCasse, of Craig place, whose marvelous escape with their lives from the wrecking of the Bourgogne was the talk of the world for a few days while the excitement of the disaster lasted, have again sailed on the French line and on the very sister ship of the one that went to the bottom of the ocean. Despite their declarations, after they reached terra firma from their thrilling experience sixty miles off Sable Island, that they would never cross the sea by voyage again, Mr. and Mrs. LaCasse were passengers on the LaGasgogne when she sailed out of New York harbor Saturday morning with her prow pointed over practically the same route that was the death trail for the Bourgogne. In the immediate excitement of the collision of the ships, the floundering around in the sea, the hours spent on a frail raft and the final rescue by the crew of the Cromartyshire, they declared an everlasting aversion to the ocean. But as the realism of the accident gradually faded into memory in their once more mingling in the incidents of quiet home life, that fearfulness slowly disappeared, aided by thoughts of dear relatives on the other side and a desire to see them.

Mr. and Mrs. LaCasse were on their way to Paris to visit their former relatives when their trip was interrupted by the collision of the two ships at sea, and since their return the old people have been more than anxious to see them. Mr. LaCasse received a pressing letter from his folks Friday, and he immediately decided to sail for France. After a little thought Mrs. LaCasse also consented to go. The couple will return in two months to resume their business in Plainfield.

ROBBED POOR MAN'S GARDEN.

A Piece of Despicable Thievery Committed at Warrenville.

A despicable thief was committed in this community Friday night when the truck garden of Henry McKenzie was looted of pretty nearly all its produce, consisting of tomatoes, corn, peaches, etc. McKenzie has been sick for some time and has a large family and he has been depending to a large extent on the sale of his garden truck to secure actual necessities of life. The theft will undoubtedly prove just as it was ready to market leaves him in this shape. It is thought that the thieves are known.

THE CLIMAX PONIES SURPRISED THEM ALL.

Won the Team Race From the Veterans.

TWO WINS NOW FOR CLIMAX.

INTERESTING SWEEPSTAKES FOLLOWED THE TEAM CONTEST.

The Climax Club Wanted to Even Things Up and Left Its Strongest Shooters Off the Team—The Club Won Though Just the Same—The Winners in the Other Shooting Events.

The third tournament of the Central New Jersey Trap-Shooters' League, held at the Fanwood shooting grounds Saturday afternoon, was by far the most successful meeting yet held by the league. Of course, the feature and principal event of the meet was the contest for the ownership of the handsome silver loving cup, which was presented for competition by T. H. Keller, of the Peters Cartridge Company. There were a number of interesting sweepstakes held in addition, that were participated in by many crack shots who were not eligible to take part in the team match.

The team contest has aroused great interest among the shooting clubs of this vicinity. Saturday the Reservoir Gun Club, of New Brunswick, made its first appearance in the race. After winning Saturday, the Climax Gun Club of this city now has two victories to its credit, while the Dunellen Club has secured one.

It was apparent that the Climax Club was not out to win Saturday, but would have preferred to see some other club come forward and carry off the honors. This was evidenced by their leaving off the Climax team such steady shots as Capt. Money, C. Smith, Neaf Apgar, Douglass Darby and "Tee Kay" Keller. The "Pony" team put up a good score, and considering the hard conditions and difficult background that prevails at the Climax grounds, their scores, particularly that of Swoody, was remarkably good.

The day was a delightful one and resulted in bringing out an unusual number of local trap shooters and many spectators. There was some wind but not enough to seriously interfere with the flying of the targets.

The scores in the team race were as follows:

CLIMAX GUN CLUB OF PLAINFIELD.

Manning	20
Goodman	17
Swoody	15
Squires	20
Total	91

DUNELLEN GUN CLUB OF DUNELLEN.

Fletcher	14
Williams	18
Simpson	16
Barron	20
Total	87

BOUND BROOK GUN CLUB OF BOUND BROOK.

Jackson	17
Hoover	19
Qualey	19
Mengel	17
Total	86

RESERVOIR GUN CLUB OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

Beloff	18
Smith	19
McDowell	16
Gillen	17
Total	90

There were eight sweepstakes of various kinds offering a variety of sports to such of the shots as could not take part in the team race. The first, for ten targets, went to Waters, Goodman and Hooey, each of whom broke nine out of the ten. "Dudley," Lindley and McDowell were tied for second money with eight.

The second match was for fifteen targets, some twenty contestants taking part. Banks took first money all alone with a score of thirteen, while second was divided among Money, Waters, Keller, "Dudley," Hooey and Merrill.

"Dudley" never missed a target in a race of fifteen of them. Money was second with a score of thirteen. The following sweepstakes saw twenty-five men toe the mark. It was for ten targets each. "Dudley" again won out with a clean score, with Banks, Keller, Hooey, H. Smith and Merrill second with nine.

Another shoot at fifteen targets saw Banks and "Dudley" first without a miss, and Keller second with a single loss. Banks, "Dudley" and Cramer divided first money in a match of ten targets with a score of nine each. Keller, Linzey, McDowell, Merrill and Swoody were second with eight.

In an event each contestant shooting at five pairs, the two targets being released at the same time, McDowell won with a score of seven, Money, Banks, "Dudley" and Lindsey dividing second money.

The next event of the day was a match at ten singles. Captain Money made 9½, Waters and "Dudley" each scoring 7.

The last event on the programme was not finished until darkness had set in, and it was a fitting finish to the day's sport as it caused lots of fun, and reminded old duck hunters of sport they had had shooting wild fowl at nightfall. In this race the use of both barrels was allowed, but a target broken by the second scored but half a point; in their desire to make sure many of the shooters used the second when unnecessary and penalized themselves by doing so. The next shoot of the league will be held at New Brunswick, Saturday, September 17th, under the auspices of the Reservoir Gun Club.

FAST STEPPING HORSES.

GOOD RACING WITNESSED AT THE DRIVING PARK SATURDAY.

The Handicap Event Proved Very Exciting and Interesting—A Good Attendance—Several Exhibition Heats by "Paul."

Saturday afternoon was a big time for the horsemen at the Driving Park. They were out in full force, and witnessed some novel racing between young horses, as well as a handicap event between horses that would otherwise have been unevenly matched. There was a large attendance of local horsemen, and the ideal day put every one in the mood for racing and some good work was shown on the track.

The old favorites, "Woven Wind," "Alpanza," "Amber" and several other horses were on hand, and so was Mr. Fairbank's "Paul," with a record of 2:07. The horses were in good condition, and the races were as exciting as could be desired.

The first event was a race between young colts that had never been on the track in a race before. J. W. Johnson entered a bay mare; C. L. Wright a sorrel mare; Harry Gwynette a black horse, and Phil. Jenner, of New Market, a bay mare. No very fast time was made, the best being 3:09½. Three heats were trotted, the first being won by Jenner with Gwynette second and Wright third. The second heat was won by Wright, with Jenner second and Gwynette third. Wright also won the third heat, Jenner second and Gwynette third. The race was given to Wright.

What attracted the most attention were the handicap races. In the first race there were three entries, "Charles Tammany," with a record of 2:29, was placed at the wire. "Woven Wind" was placed back 160 feet, and "Arpansa," C. L. Wright's mare, 420 feet. The horses were placed according to their records. "Woven Wind" won both heats trotted. "Tammany" got a second and so did Wright.

In the next race, N. B. Smalley's "Amber" was placed at scratch; George Conover's "John L." given 60 feet; William Baldwin's pacing mare, 60 feet and Mr. Edwards' "Molly Prince," 100 feet. Two heats were trotted again. The first was won by Smalley in 2:43; Baldwin second, Edwards third. Baldwin got the second heat in 2:34; with Cannon second and Smalley third.

After the races were over, Mr. Fairbanks sent "Paul" around the track in two slow exhibition miles.

A YOUNG LIFE CUT SHORT.

Miss Florence Loomis Dies From Typhoid Fever in Her Eighteenth Year.

Very sad, indeed, is the death of Miss Florence Loomis, daughter of Mrs. Loomis, of Craig place, who passed away at an early hour Saturday morning after several weeks' illness. Typhoid fever was the fatal disease. She was a young girl of eighteen years who had a host of friends among all who knew her. She was bright, pleasant-spoken and of kindly nature, making those around her happier with the sunshine of her life.

She was born in the borough where she was educated at the North Plainfield Public School. About five years ago, her mother moved to Bethlehem, Pa., where her older brother attended Lehigh University and recently graduated as a mechanical engineer. It has only been a few months since Mrs. Loomis and her daughter returned to Plainfield and they began stopping at Mrs. Harned's boarding house on Craig place. There the daughter was suddenly stricken down and has been in a very critical state for a week.

The Election Boards.

Numerous applications have been received by the Somerset County Board of Elections requesting the appointment of individuals on the election district boards. The chairman of the County Executive Committee of the respective political parties is the person to whom must be made nominations to the county board. Application for appointment as an election officer must be made to the chairman of the Executive Committee, of either party, respectively.

A Mighty-Fried Gift.

There is on exhibition at Findlay's saloon on East Second street a cutlass of gun crew taken from the Vizcaya at the fall of Cervera's fleet off Santiago, July 3d, at 3 p. m., by the boarding crew of the flagship New York. The cutlass was secured by Fred Bennett, of the engineer crew of the flagship, and presented to Theo. Smith by Mr. Bennett. The cutlass is prized very highly by Mr. Smith as a memento of the great victory of the Americans.

Officiated as Organist.

Albert W. Pangborn officiated very acceptably as organist at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning and evening.

SOLDIERS COMPLAIN OF HARSH TREATMENT.

Officers Said to Be Too Severe in the Punishments.

WAGES GO FOR THE FINES.

MEN CONFINED FOR DAYS IN ILL-SMELLING GUARD HOUSES.

Privates Allege That the Best of Excuses Have Been Ignored by the Officers — Men Compelled to Work Overtime in Trenches Without Rations—When Rebelled Were Punished.

According to the stories that come from a good many of the privates in the Third Regiment, stationed at Pompton Lakes, where nearly all the Plainfield volunteers are, they are treated more like animals than men who have enlisted to fight for their country, and give up their life blood in its defense, if necessary. The following letter of complaint has been framed and promulgated by a number of them:

"As privates who have volunteered our services to the United States Army we desire to make public through the columns of your respective paper the unjust and unmilitary treatment we are constantly receiving at the hands of our officers.

"The prisoners are confined in the guardhouse on small offences, namely, the thirty-second article of war, which constitutes from one to twenty-four hours absent without leave. In many of these cases the best of excuses have been given, but have been received with deaf ears. Sickness, and even death at times, will not be considered as sufficient excuse to escape punishment.

"The punishment laid down by the officers as being just and legal is a fine comprising four entire month's wages, five and ten days, and even as much as twenty days, in close confinement on bread and water in a building four by ten, which had previously been used as a storage room for high explosives at the powder mills. In this foul-smelling dungeon at the present time can be found eight young men, whose conduct has always been soldierly, with the exception of the charge mentioned above, battling for sufficient air to maintain life. This is no exaggeration, but can be seen daily by those who are interested enough to make an investigation.

"With a feeling of deep regret we are compelled to go still further. On the afternoon of August 17th the men were made to work in their shirt sleeves digging ditches in a downpouring thunder storm. The work laid out by the officer of the day, namely, Lieut. Wm. T. Cobb, was more than could be finished at the regular hour of recall from fatigue. These men were informed at the late hour of 9 o'clock that not only must they finish the work, being drenched to the skin, but they must also finish the work started, even if it took all night, before they receive their supper. The men objected to this after the bugle call had sounded indicating the finish of work at this post for the day. This refusal on the part of the men was looked upon by the officers as a breach of discipline. In consequence these men were ordered to the dungeon in this drenching condition, without supper or food of any description being given them, and compelled to remain all night in their wet clothing and without blankets.

"The treatment these men received at the point of bayonets was so unjust and cruel that the sympathy of the regiment was aroused. Fearing that retribution would follow this act of barbarism, these officers called out extra guards, arming them with dead ly ammunition, and gave strict orders to shoot down any man whose manner might indicate sympathy with these prisoners or caught bringing food or clothing to these men.

"At present there are confined at the guardhouse, which consists of two small tents in an extremely leaky condition, thirty men, who are obliged to find shelter within these tents. The number is rapidly increasing to the extent of five men a day. Last night fifteen men were compelled to sleep on the wet and rain-soaked ground with a finger of ponchos as their only protection from rain and dew.

"We wish the public and sympathizers to indirectly understand that within the ranks of this Third United States New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, now stationed at Pompton Lakes, N. J., we can point with a finger of pride as being composed of some of the most intelligent, obedient and respectable class of young men in the service. Upon the grounds of this unjust treatment we hope that these charges will be thoroughly investigated, which will disclose many more charges which have not here been mentioned."

Made the Wrong Kind of Music.

Vito Damian, an Italian organ grinder, chose the wrong place to be saucy to the lady of the house, and as a result spent a few hours in the lockup. Vito was impertinent to a member of Chief Marshal Wilson's household, and the Chief, who was home at the time, marched him down to the lockup. Sentence was suspended on him later in the day.

LIFE AT HUNTERSTON

GUESTS FROM MANY PLACES FIND PLEASURE AT NETHERWOOD.

Many Improvements Have Been Made in the House Under the New Management—Music for the Dinners and Hops.

The Hotel Hunterston, for many years known as the Hotel Netherwood, is now enjoying one of the most prosperous seasons in its history, under the management of Webb & Morrison.

Many improvements have been made since last season, among them a new cafe and dining room for the exclusive accommodation of wheeling parties. Many prominent and wealthy families from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburg, Louisville and Cincinnati are at the hotel. A fine orchestra, under the leadership of Prof. Henry Wagner, discourses excellent music during the day and evening, especially for the Saturday evening hops, which are largely attended by the society people of Plainfield and vicity.

Among those registered at the hotel are:

A. H. Astrom, M. B. Richter, D. L. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Lyons, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Balch and daughters and H. D. Heisenbeutel, all of Brooklyn; Mrs. G. W. Cass and daughters, Orange; Miss Anna Olten, Brooklyn; D. H. Merritt and daughter and C. S. Campbell, New Brunswick; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Smith, East Orange; Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Hartford, Marie L. GOLF AND TENNIS.

Hillside Club Will Inaugurate Fall Sport Next Week.

The annual tennis tournament of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club for the club championship cup will be held on the Plainfield avenue courts Saturday, Sept. 3d, at 3 o'clock. Entries (active members only) may be made to Henry V. Ryder, 615 East Front street, not later than Sept. 2d.

The return match at golf with the Suburban Club, of Elizabeth, will be played on the Plainfield avenue links Saturday, Sept. 3d, commencing at 3 o'clock.

The formal opening of the new clubhouse and grounds will be held Labor Day. The Bogey handicap match will commence at 10 o'clock. Entries for the above must be made to F. W. Walz, 302 LaGrande avenue, and be received by him not later than 6 p. m., Saturday, Sept. 3d.

A cold lunch will be served to members Labor Day, from 12 to 2 o'clock. Arrangements have been made with Captain Hand for stage service Labor Day.

Enjoying Summer Life.

Society notes from various summer resorts make mention of a number of Plainfielders who "Are spending their days

In many merry ways."

The pleasant house party of Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Ackerman, at the Manhasset House, Shelter Island, is among the recent. The enthusiastic rowing parties of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Barnaby and Miss Evans at the Normandie-by-the-Sea, Seabright, have happy comment. Tableaux for the benefit of the Red Cross Society, at Jefferson, in the White Mountains, are reported, with Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, one of the assistants, and at Mt. Pocono, Pa., Laurens VanBuren is given as one of the helpers in a series of tableaux.

Geo. Thatcher's Rhode Island Day.

The long looked for clam bake to be held at the "Maples," Fanwood, by Host Thatcher, will take place Thursday, September 1st. George publicly extends an invitation to his many friends. The "menu" will embrace everything that belongs to a first-class "blow out", and more too, and the entertainment to be offered should ensure a "full house." Preparations are being made to feast a regiment, and there will be no reason for his army of friends to complain of the rations.

YAS, SAH, 'TWILL BE A DAY FOR THE DARKIES.

The Great and Glorious Dewey Bicycle Club in Action.

AN ALL-DAY JUBILEE, SURE.

CRESCENT OVAL WILL BE A GAY PLACE NEXT SATURDAY.

To Be Known as the "Peace Carnival," and It Won't be Any One-Horse Affair, Either—Many Old Time Sports to be Indulged in—Evening to be Given Up to a Concert—Fireworks to End Affair.

The colored folk of Plainfield are to have a jubilee, a real up-to-date "Peace Carnival," and for one whole day they are going to reign supreme up at the Crescent Oval.

The cause of this rather startling outburst is the Dewey Bicycle Club of New Jersey. Like many other things that have just made their appearance, this organization has taken the name of the great admiral. It was the creation of a number of well-known colored men about town who decided that the time had come for them to show just what they could do. As a result they have arranged a carnival for next Saturday that is proposed to entertain their white and colored friends in a fashion never before realized.

This "Peace Carnival" is not going to be any one horse affair. Its promoters have laid out a programme that will give the staid Plainfielders something to think about. It's going to last all day, from early morn to dewy eve. And while it does last there is to be no cessation in the fun.

Now to begin with the attractions in their order. The morning is to be chiefly devoted to contests of various kinds. First, there will be a foot race, then a contest in climbing the greased pole, after which will follow a sack race. Early in the afternoon, a lively young porker is to be turned loose and a swarm of contestants will entertain the crowd in their efforts to capture it. Bicycle races and a baseball game between two teams of color will complete the fun during the daylight.

In the evening, the "Peace Carnival" will be continued. There will be a concert with music by a brass band, together with quartette singing and banjo and guitar playing. It will be somewhat on the lines of the open air concert once given by the darkie brothers, only on a larger scale this time. And to complete the list of attractions, there will be "fireworks galore," as the poster says.

The promoters of the "Peace Carnival" of the Dewey Bicycle Club are well known to most Plainfielders. They include Edward Martin, the genial porter at the North avenue station, a reliable and good all-round kind of a fellow. He is president. Then his brother, Thomas Martin, warden of the city jail, holds the office of vice-president. R. B. Norwood is the secretary of this warm aggregation and James L. Scott, veteran polisher of shoes, presides over the treasurer's duties.

This is the situation in a nut-shell These colored men have decided to give Plainfield something new in the line of entertainment and all they ask is good support of the people of the city. If they get that, they promise that those who attend will get their money's worth.

HER HOME FOR AN ARMY HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Murray Offers It, and Food, Medicine, Physicians and Nurses Besides.

Wentworth Murray has addressed a letter to Judge John D. Bartine in which she offers to convert her handsome summer place, "The Wentworth," on the Raritan river, into a hospital for sick and wounded soldiers. Mrs. Murray says she addressed Judge Bartine because she is ignorant of the proper source through which to communicate her offer. She desires the Government officials to be informed at once that she will vacate her mansion, which will accommodate 100 sick soldiers, and that she will furnish food, cots, doctors and nurses. The Wentworth is healthfully located on the south bank of the Raritan river, three miles from this place. It is built on the site formerly occupied by the mansion of the late Frederick T. Frelinghuysen. During Mr. Frelinghuysen's term as Secretary of State under President Arthur the place was the scene of many notable gatherings.

If Mrs. Murray's offer is accepted by the Government, she will live in a little cottage on the estate, and will aid in the care of the sick. Judge Bartine has forwarded Mrs. Murray's communication to Gov. Voorhees, with a request that it shall receive the consideration of the Government.

Supt. Donnelly's Successor.

The Perth Amboy Chronicle says that W. O. Sprigg will be the new superintendent of the Easton and Amboy division of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, to succeed James Donnelly September 1st. Mr. Sprigg is a man about 45 years of age. He is a college graduate and a civil engineer and knows the railroad business "from A to Z."

HOW THE COUNTY VIEWS THE TROLLEY.

Review of the Trolley War in Plainfield.

FREEHOLDERS SIDE OF IT.

THEY PICTURE THE RIKERS AS MAKING THE TROUBLE.

A Good Authority Says that County Officials Will Not Object to Both Lines Using Richmond Street—Why They Served Notice on the Council—Council Will Probably Pass Ordinance.

The "trolley war" between the city fathers and the county freeholders remains just where it was a week ago. The circumstances have not changed a bit, but there has been lots of talk on the subject. The impartial statement of the trouble as published in The Daily Press a week ago gave rise to any amount of discussion. It also gave the people a chance to express their opinions to their representatives in both Council and Board.

The next move is likely to be on the part of the Common Council. On the evening of Tuesday, September 6th, the regular monthly meeting of the Council will be held, Monday being Labor Day and a holiday. Then the ordinance granting the Plainfield Street Railway Company a franchise will come up for final consideration. At present there seems no possible doubt but that it will be passed by the Council.

Just exactly what such action on the part of the Council will be followed by, it is impossible to say. Even if the franchise is granted, the local trolley company will be unable to lay their tracks without permission from the County Board of Freeholders, unless the present law should be declared unconstitutional.

The motives of the Board of Freeholders and of the Plainfield Street Railway officials have been the subject of much discussion. While no one except those persons themselves knows what their motives are, there are certain facts that are suggestive.

Ever since the birth of the Bergen county trolley scheme, it has been fought tooth and nail by the capitalists in the State who control the trolley corporations in this vicinity. Riker & Riker, of Newark, are leading factors in the Newark trolley system. They also have a controlling interest in the Plainfield Street Railway Company. The same Riker & Riker who were the leading workers in the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company which proposed to run its lines from Elizabeth to Plainfield. The Rikers have made no secret of their objection to a county trolley road and the skirmishes between the two forces have been lively.

While the wish of the Plainfield Street Railway Company to run from Second street to Fifth street on Richmond street is apparently innocent enough, the advocates of the county boulevard and trolley road say that it is really an attempt to stir up trouble for the county scheme here and thus block its progress. By involving the county and city in a squabble, there would be long delay in the building of the through line by the county.

One who is thoroughly in touch with the members of the Board of Freeholders says that they are not trying to block the efforts of the Riker combination. It is just the opposite, according to his view of the situation. He stated very emphatically that the Rikers have been fighting the Bergen scheme from the start and that this was merely another plot to wreck it before it can be completed.

The Plainfield members of the Board of Freeholders are as greatly interested in the interests of the citizens of Plainfield, whom they represent, as the Councilmen. They are in favor of the county trolley line and believe it should go through.

The situation from the point of view of the Board of Freeholders, as summed up by one intimate with their views, gives the following picture. During the first of July, Richmond street and the rest of the proposed course of the county trolley was adopted as a county road at a meeting of the Board of Freeholders. Under a recent act of the Legislature, the streets so designated immediately became county property. According to the county road act, no tracks can be laid in the county roads without permission of the Board of Freeholders. This permission was not asked but the Council announced its intention of granting a trolley company the required permission. The Board then felt called upon to see that the law was obeyed and notified the Council on the subject. It was this notification that has caused all the trouble.

Now this same authority says very emphatically that the Board is not going to try to keep the Plainfield Street Railway off the road in question. On the contrary, the members of the Board realize that a connecting line between Plainfield and Scotch Plains is necessary for the development of that section and for the good of the city.

The course pointed out is that the local trolley company and the Kean trolley people should confer and settle between themselves some way in which both lines could pass over the same street. The result would, in all probability, be satisfactory to both county and city officials and would thus overcome the difficulty. This course, he stated, the Riker combination was unwilling to do.

A prominent Councilman in speaking of such a course of affairs expressed his belief that such was the only way in which the affair might be settled but he doubted whether either trolley company would consent to it.

As things stand at present, however, it looks as if the first move toward an amicable settlement would have to come from the trolley corporations with a view of arranging affairs whereby both can use Richmond street without interfering with the other.

HAS A SCORNFUL TONGUE

MRS. ANNA ROBINSON, PILLAR IN THE CHURCH, IN COURT.

Mrs. Ada Belle Mitchell Couldn't Stand the Epithets Applied to Her, and Had Her Neighbor Haled to Court.

"And she called me names. And —I'm a poor lone woman. And—and —my husband's away. And—and— and—" Then the facial flood gates gave way and the young colored woman burst into tears. Meanwhile her neighbor, the prisoner at the bar of justice, leaned against the rail with her black straw hat set rakishly over one eye and listened to the effusions of Mrs. Ada Belle Mitchell with a scornful air.

Mrs. Anna Robinson has a temper despite the fact that she was one of the "pillars" of her church. It has already been noticed in the court room when she came down on the learned Corporation Counsel "like a wolf on the fold." That was in the famous trial of Parson Gibson. It was this same temper of hers that this time entangled her in the meshes of the legal net.

Mrs. Robinson lives on West Third street. She occupies the ground floor of the house and Mrs. Mitchell and her niece lives upstairs. Life there has not been found in its most delightful phases and all was not peace and quietude between the two women.

This trouble arose over a registered letter. Mrs. Mitchell expected it but it came not. Now Mrs. Robinson says that her upstairs neighbor accused her of taking it. Mrs. Mitchell says no. At any rate, they began to talk and choler of the older one down stairs rose. Her claim is that Mrs. Mitchell first called her a "great big fat grey-haired jay-bird." Mrs. Mitchell's witness all agree that she did not call any names whatsoever.

But oh, the naughty names that Mrs. Robinson said according to their story. She let forth such a stream of vituperous remarks that a caterpillar crawling on the clap-boarding was singed by the blast. They repeated two of them in court Saturday for the edification of the City Judge at which even the small boys peeping through the blinds jumped back aghast.

Mrs. Robinson had the courage to deny it all. She stood out against the crowd, folded her hands in resignation at the enormity of their charges and waited her turn to speak. Then the Judge signalled for her to take the stand and she opened fire without waiting to be sworn. It finally took two officers and a reporter to stop her and give Chief Grant a chance to get a word in edgewise.

After he had heard it all, the Judge pronounced her guilty. It never worried her though. She smiled coyly at the head of the city judiciary and then cast a sidelong glance at Patrolman McCue. The Judge paroled her to appear next Saturday for sentence.

ROLLED A MAN IN FRONT OF TRAIN.

Two Hungarians Nearly Cause the Death of an Italian in a Fight.

Two Italians got into a row with two Hungarians at the Aldene saloon Thursday. As the Hungarians were too much for their opponents, the Italians ran upon the tracks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, where the Hungarians caught one of the Italians and knocked him down.

They were struggling on the track in front of an approaching train, and several men in the road below shouted to them. The Hungarians rolled the Italian between the rails in front of the train and then ran. The Italian saved himself, however, by rolling off the tracks just in time, and brought up in a barbed wire fence at the foot of the embankment.

On a Thirty Days' Furlough.

Howard Bennett, a private in the Ninth Regiment, New York Volunteers, which is stationed at Camp Townsend, Ga., is home on a thirty days furlough. He was sick for six weeks with the typhoid fever and was sent North with a lot of other convalescent soldiers. He enlisted May 2d, and was disappointed not to get in active service.

DARKEY LAD STOLE JEWELS WORTH $200

A Few Squeezes on His Neck Made Him Confess.

GUARDED BY FARMHANDS.

THIEVING YOUNGSTERS WORKED ON THE HOLLY GROVE FARM.

George Washington Veta Was the Name of the Young Pilferer—He Had Been Left to Wash the Front Porch, But in the Absence of the Family He Ransacked the House.

A more delightful day could not have been asked for. Everyone last Friday felt refreshed and invigorated and the world seemed brighter to them except poor little George Washington Veta. It wasn't a particularly happy day for him. There he sat in a corner of the barn, his woolly head clasped in his hands, a prisoner. His guards, six brawny farm hands, were grouped about in various positions of ease and precluded all possibility of escape.

The story of the fall of George Washington Veta is short but sufficiently exciting to please the most exacting. It began Thursday morning and Friday afternoon saw the opening of a new period in his career.

Two months ago there came a wandering little colored lad to Holly Grove Farm, the summer home of David H. Kellogg. Mr. Kellogg now spends much of his time at Holly Grove Farm, which is located on the Oak Tree road, near Holly's Corners.

The lad looked hungry and had such a pitiful expression that he was taken in and fed and afterwards fitted out in some old clothing. Since then the lad has been working about the barn and stables making himself useful in various ways. There was one trouble with him—he was woefully lazy. He was a stockily built lad of perhaps sixteen summers. George Washington Veta rather long, he was called "Novel" for short and by that name he soon become known.

And now for the story of the temptation. Thursday morning Novel was ordered to wash the front piazza of the house which stands far back from the road in a grove of trees. The family were away and Novel had it all to himself. The door was unlocked and Novel's curiosity led him inside. Then he wandered to the upper floor and prowled through the apartments. A pair of diamond cuff buttons caught his eye. They disappeared in his pocket. A gold watch and other little trinkets followed. Then he helped himself to various other articles that took his fancy. Their value in all amounted to about $200.

When the family returned at noon they missed some of the valuables that Novel had taken. There were signs that someone had been rummaging the place. It looked very much as if Novel was the guilty one.

David M. Kellogg, Jr., is a Yale man. He is spending his summer at home this year. When heard of Novel's raid, young Kellogg went out to the barn. Novel was working about there.

The first thing the colored boy knew was when the stalwart collegian grabbed him by the nape of the neck.

"What did you do with my cuff buttons?" demanded the young man, administering an admonitory squeeze to the neck of the dusky lad. Novel sputtered out something to the effect that he had not had time. Then the college man tightened his grip and the eyes of the light-fingered boy began to bulge out of their sockets. A little more pressure brought out a confession. Then young Kellogg demanded their present location. A few extra twists brought out the fact they were in the lad's pockets. Kellogg then went through them and found the missing articles which were immediately restored to the house.

It remained to be seen what was to be done with the prisoner and he remained under guard until Friday. He will not be prosecuted as the Kelloggs do not consider the offense worth the trouble it would make to the county and themselves. He is to be deported, however, and will either be placed in some institution for just such characters or left somewhere where he will not be likely to trouble Holly Grove Farm again.

Himself the Fish.

Robert Davis, assistant secretary of the Y. M. C. A., met with a painful accident while on his vacation a week ago. He was at Liberty, N. Y., and was fishing for trout in one of the streams. In making a cast the hook was caught in one of his fingers and was driven so far in that a physician had to cut away the flesh to release the hook.

Glass Cut His Hand.

Lawyer Charles J. McNabb, of Rahway road, met with a painful accident several days ago. He accidentally struck his hand against the pane of glass in a door and broke it. The glass cut his hand and arm in several places.

FOR SCIENTIFC BOOKS.

THE NEW EXTENSION BUILT ON TO PUBLIC LIBRARY BU LDING.

It is Designed to Shelve as Many Books as Possible and at the Same Time Being Convenient of Access.

There has been remarkably little said about the addition to the Plainfield Public Library now in the course of erection, although it promises to be a worthy improvement and a valuable addition to the city's possessions. It will only be in the course of a comparatively few weeks before the new portion of the library will be ready, and then the books will begin their journey to their new quarters.

Every one remembers the generous offer of the late George L. Babcock to provide the volumes for a Babcock Scientific Library, if the city would build a suitable place to hold it. It was a part of his will and a suitable amount was set aside by the provisions of that will for the purpose mentioned. Now, a structure is almost completed that will be ready to hold 50,000 volumes.

While no one need be ashamed of the present library, it is not arranged after the modern ideas of library building and with an eye to use every available inch of space. The new addition, however, is drawn up on the most modern ideas and is very carefully arranged. The architect, Evarts Tracy, of this city, designed the building so as to utilize every bit of room and yet make every part easy of access.

There was not enough money to permit any elaborate decoration of the building so it was made absolutely simple, the efforts of the architect being turned to make it perfectly safe and fire-proof and as convenient as could be wished. The stacks which will hold the books will be made of metal. They will be placed in four rows on the ground floor. Above that will be two galleries where more stacks will be placed.

This paper has already told of a notable test that was made of the floor in the building. The place is fireproof in the strictest sense of the word, and Chief Doane, of the fire department, is confident that he will be able to handle any conflagration that may be started there. The door and window casings and a floor of boards laid over the cement are the only inflamatory things down stairs. The roof is built of very heavy beams which will burn for several hours before falling, which would give a chance to extinguish any flames before the roof should fall.

HE DROVE TOO FAST.

A Colored Sport, With a Livery Rig, Paid $3 to Perth Amboy.

William Brown, a well-known colored man living on Plainfield avenue, went over to Florida Grove Thursday with a host of other colored people. He drove over in a buggy with a young woman by his side. They had one of Roberts' grey horses hitched to a red buggy.

After enjoying life at Florida Grove they drove over to Perth Amboy late in the afternoon. Brown had partaken too freely and started the horse on a gallop. He flew around corners, knocking several spokes out of a wheel, and wound up at the Perth Amboy jail. He was charged with being drunk and disorderly and with reckless driving.

He was tried before the City Judge in Perth Amboy and paid a fine of $3 for his fun.

CLAUDE WANTS REVENGE.

A Colored Man's Wearing Apparel Slightly Disarranged in a Dispute.

Claude Marsh, colored, had a great tale of woe to tell to Justice Mosher Friday night. He was found waiting around the Justice's office in the First National Bank building, after sunset. Claude did not know that His Honor was a Seventh-day Baptist Friday night, so when he was informed on these points, Claude resolved to call tonight.

Claude is a tall colored man, and had on an enormous "choker," sadly bent and wilted, which, he explained, was due to a fight he had another man had a short time before.

Claude refused to give any of the circumstances of the affair, but stated that he and "another colored gemun" had a dispute over cards which ended in blows, and Claude wanted a warrant for the other's arrest.

THE BOROUGH SCHOOL.

Work on the Foundations of the Building Has Been Started.

Wm. C. Smith, the mason, has begun work on the new borough school house, located on the corner of Watchung and Mountain avenues. The first earth was taken out of the cellar Thursday morning, and now the cellar is completely dug and the workmen are at work building up the bed of crushed stone on which the foundation will be laid.

Mr. Smith has a large force of men working on the foundations, and at the rate the work is being pushed there is little doubt but what it can be nearly completed by Dec. 10th, when the contract expires.

WEAK HEART COULD NOT STAND THE HEAT.

Albert Darby Stricken Down While at Work in His Office.

WELL KNOWN IN THIS CITY.

RESIDED ON GROVE STREET AND HAD A HOST OF FRIENDS

Left Home Thursday Morning in Apparently Good Health, But Succumbed to the Oppressive Air in His Office in the Afternoon—Remains Were Brought Home Friday Night.

Among the many deaths that occurred Thursday in New York was one that deeply affects a North Plainfield home and a large circle of friends and relatives here and in Scotch Plains. Albert Darby, of 75 Grove street, was attacked with heart disease in his office at 101 Bleecker street, and before help could be summoned he had passed away. The remains were brought home Friday evening, and buried Sunday.

Mr. Darby is a member of the firm of Harper, Hollingsworth & Darby, dealers in hatters' fur, with factories in Scotch Plains and Brooklyn.

Mr. Darby had been in poor health for several years past suffering with his heart, particularly so for the past year. He seemed to be as well as usual Thursday. He left home to go to business and no one thought but that he would return at the regular time at night.

One of the members of the firm, Mr. Hollingsworth, said that Mr. Darby attended to his duties all the morning. He complained of the heat a little, but didn't seem to be suffering any pain. In the afternoon he went out for a few minutes, but soon came back. Then came the first real complaint he had made during the day, and he sank into a chair, fanning himself vigorously.

In a few minutes the clerks who were in the room were startled by a faint noise. They ran to Mr. Darby, but found that death had come during those few minutes, and that he had expired. An ambulance was summoned, and the physician in attendance said that death was due to heart disease. A permit from the Coroner was obtained and the remains were moved to an undertaking establishment, where they will lie until tonight.

Mrs. Darby was not notified of the death of her husband till 9 o'clock last night. It was feared that the news would be too great a shock for her to stand to break it suddenly. The unpleasant duty was performed by Mr. Hollingsworth, a partner of the dead man. Mrs. Darby was nearly prostrated by the news.

Mr. Darby was born in Scotch Plains, and was in his sixty-fourth year. His family can be traced back to the first old settlers.

Mr. Darby was well known among the business men here. He was a member of Trinity Lodge of Masons, and although not a member, he was a constant attendant at the First Baptist church. He leaves a wife and mother, both of whom reside with him.

DELIGHT IN YACHTING.

Two Plainfield Boys Who Spend Most of Their Vacation on the Water.

Nathan E. Lewis, of West Eighth street, and Sydney R. Titsworth, of West Fifth street, are spending their summer at Watch Hill, R. I. Most of their time is spent on the waters of the Atlantic in their yacht. Both of the young men have become experts in the art of navigating their handsome little skipe, which is known as one of the fastest of its kind in that neighborhood.

Besides sailing they have enjoyed the excellent fishing in that vicinity. Titsworth has captured the largest cod brought into that port this season and their records of various excursions to the fishing grounds are enough to make the hair of the landsman rise on end. Both of them are very darkly tanned and resemble the returning soldier boys of Shafter's army.

LIKE TO GET THE FORBIDDEN FRUIT.

Police are Still Looking for the Boys who Stole Halsey Compton's Apples.

The orchards of Halsey Compton, on West Front street, are still the accepted gathering grounds each night for sundry young men and boys who help themselves to the fruit without stopping to inquire of the owner his wishes in the matter. Mr. Compton is thoroughly indignant over it, and is now laying for nocturnal callers.

The police have already captured several, and the trial of Robert Scott and others was to come off this morning. The police are still on the trail of several of the youngsters, and the case was laid over for a week to give them a chance to find them.

Plumber Hurts His Finger.

D. J. Galbraith, the North avenue plumber, suffered an injury to one of the fingers of his right hand a few days ago, and has been carrying the member in a sling ever since.

THE TINGLEYS GOOD TIME

BIG FAMILY REUNION ON BROAD ACRES OF A NEW MARKET FARM.

It was the Eighth Annual Gathering of the Family, and 250 Enjoyed the Festivities—Genial "Uncle John" There.

There was a round-up of the Tingleys on the broad acres of David Blackford's farm Thursday, the occasion being the eighth annual reunion of the Tingley family. It was a trifle hot in the sun, but under the cooling shade of the trees the members of the family who attended were otherwise blessed with pleasant weather for the joyous occasion.

The head of the families with their various descendants commenced to gather at the Blackford farm as early as 9 o'clock in the morning, and from that time up till noon they were coming in a constant stream until 250 had assembled to enjoy the festivities of the day.

David Blackford—himself a direct descendant of the original Tingleys—had made every preparation for the pleasure of those who attended the reunion. Tables and seats had been erected for the occasion, and supplied with monster lunch baskets, filled with all kinds of holiday edibles, the Tingleys set down for dinner shortly after noon. "Uncle John," of Dunellen, was everywhere and attended to the wants of young and old, little and big, with a genial nature that added much to the happy occasion.

Gavett, of Plainfield, discoursed enlivening music for the occasion. There was no special exercises and not one speech was made. The time was spent on the part of the older ones in renewing friendships and indulging in reminiscences of a family nature while the younger ones indulged in games and other pastimes to while away the day into pleasant memories.

When the first reunion was held eight years ago there were ten of the original Tingleys from one family, but since then five of them have passed over the great divide—two in the last year—and now the remaining ones are: "Uncle John," of Dunellen; Ebenezer, of Roycefield; Mary E. Smith, of Illinois; David, of Brooklyn; and Hester Blackford, on whose son's farm the reunion was celebrated.

WORK ON THE STREETS.

Street Commissioner Gavett, Back From His Vacation, Full of Push.

Now that Street Commissioner Gavett is home again, work will be pushed on the streets that are undergoing repairs. Another course of inch stone will be spread on Watchung avenue between Fifth and Sixth streets. As the street is now, it does not show the work that has been done on it, and Mr. Gavett does not want it to be thought that he intends to leave the street this way.

John Darling, of Prospect avenue, who owns quite a little property on that street between Park avenue and Cedar brook, has curbed and flagged his property, and he and other residents are anxious to have that part of Prospect avenue macadamized. Westervelt avenue, when the workmen get back to it, will be macadamized from curb to curb, just as Sandford avenue has been done.

Another Fruit Store.

Woolston & Buckle have rented one of their new stores, No. 136 North avenue to two Armenians from New York, who are going to open a fruit and candy store there September 1st. They have leased the store for five years.

Free Medical Advice

You need a doctor many times when you don't call one. You suffer pain in fifty forms and yet won't call the doctor, because you hope that the pain "will go away after a while." And, too, you know by experience, that that first visit of the doctor is generally followed by many others, with the inevitable consequence of a big bill "for professional services." You don't know what to do for yourself or what to take.

But suppose that you could get free, absolutely free, the advice of one of the most in the United States? You can. The physician is right here. He has an office in the building, and a staff of correspondents to assist him, and anyone and everyone who needs medical advice is invited to write to him. If it's baby's health or mother's or the head of the family member of you may write about it, sure of a careful reading of your letter, sure of a conscientious diagnosis of your case, if cure is possible. Every letter will be held as a strictly confidential communication. Remember these facts.

We offer you medical advice from one of the most eminent practitioners in the United States, whether our medicines suit your particular case or not. We offer you this advice at the cost of the two cent stamp which it will take to bring your letter to our office. Address the Medical Department, Dr. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

PILFERING SERVANT RUN TO EARTH.

George Demler Played Detective With Success.

CAUGHT HER IN ELIZABETH.

HAD TAKEN CLOTHING AND MONEY FROM THE DEMLERS.

The Young Woman Was Working as Domestic in a Washingtonville Household—Demler Traced Her to Elizabeth—Confronted Her—She Gave Up all the Stolen Articles and Was Let Go.

George Demler, a well-known resident of Washingtonville, has been playing detective on his own account. His little game was successful. The cause of all the trouble which necessitated these unusual proceedings was a young woman employed in the home of Mr. Demler as a domestic.

Some time ago a young woman, apparently an American, came to the Demler household and assisted Mrs. Demler in the care of the place. She was a good servant and did the work fairly well. She was rather good-looking and apparently about eighteen years of age.

One day early last week she asked Mrs. Demler for permission to go to Warrenville to visit her sister who, she claimed, was working there. The permission was granted and the girl left the house at an early hour. Now after she had gone, Mrs. Demler was looking through her closets and missed several gowns.

She immediately instituted a search and found that a number of articles and a considerable amount of cash were missing. The search revealed the fact that Mrs. Demler's silk wedding gown, a new cloth gown, several pairs of gloves, a veil and several other small articles were nowhere in the house.

Five dollars had been removed from a pocketbook belonging to Mrs. Demler. There was also missing $3 belonging to her daughter Carrie, together with some change belonging to a guest at the house.

That night the young woman did not return, although the family waited for her. Next day she came not and so Mr. Demler decided to go after her. There seemed conclusive evidence that she took the articles and he decided to accuse her of the crime if he found her.

He went to Warrenville, but she was not there and had not been there. He managed to discover that she had a home in Elizabeth and traced her there. August 19 he went to Elizabeth and found his former domestic. She was confronted with the proofs of the theft and the return of the missing articles demanded. Mr. Demler told her that he would make no attempt to prosecute her, providing they were all returned at once.

The girl finally broke down, acknowledged that she had taken the clothing and money. She returned them to Mr. Demler and made up the full amount of the cash that had disappeared. Then Mr. Demler returned home satisfied and the matter was allowed to rest.

THE CROP REPORT.

Flourishing Conditions Reported All Over New Jersey.

The observers and crop correspondents report for the week ending Monday, August 23d, that in all sections the late crops are much improved, and are now in a most flourishing condition. Corn, although prostrated in some fields by the high winds and heavy rains, which accompanied the thunderstorms on the 17th, 18th and 19th, promises an abundant yield. All vine truck has a fine growth and only needs a little more sunshine to perfect its development and flavor; buckwheat is heading out well and pasture fields and meadows are improved; the second crop of clover is being harvested; early peaches are rotting and are dropping from the trees, but later varieties are more promising. Fall ploughing has been delayed, the soil being too wet. Some grain has been sown in the central and northern sections.

Echoes of the War.

Echoes of the battle at Santiago de Cuba, July 1st, when the American troops suffered their heaviest losses, are being heard these days in the offices of the big life insurance companies. The Prudential Insurance Company of America has paid all its war claims as soon as proofs of death could be made complete. Two claims paid this week were those of Louis B. Skinner, twenty-two years old, of Chester, N. J., and Charles W. Stapleford, twenty-three years old, of Baltimore, Md., both of whom were shot dead in the battle of Santiago.

Big Powder Works.

The DuPonts recently purchased a large tract of land adjoining their powder works at Gibbstown, and it is said they are about to enlarge their plant to three times its present size, making it by far the largest in the United States. They will manufacture smokeless powder.

The Conduct of the Third.

To control a large body of restless men such as the Third Regiment of New Jersey Volunteers makes is no easy matter, even though the officers are backed by a severe code of rules and the whole people of the United States. The army rules are framed with a view of enforcement in times of conflict when every man must be held to strict accountability, but now when slight neglect or indiscretions are likely to prevail in the ranks—the men knowing that their duties are merely perfunctory at present—a good deal of leeway and leniency is shown in the enforcement of the regulations. Offences that receive but little punishment now would be regarded with a great deal of severity in a time of actual war. To a certain extent, therefore, the officers take a good many if the infractions of the rules as a matter of course while the privates think they are still good and obedient soldiers even if they do a few things that a strict interpretation of the rules would not countenance.

It is this condition of affairs that has lead the privates to become unruly in wholesale numbers. Considered individually, perhaps, their offenses might seem very light, but taken in the aggregate they are important to the good conduct of the regiment. In order to put a stop to the practices that promised to seriously impair the discipline of the soldiers—a vital point in the efficiency of an army—the officers have doubtless found it necessary to impose punishment on the men harder than they would have done if only the good demeanor of each separate offender was to be taken into consideration.

In another column of today's Press we print a letter which some of the privates have furnished, and in which they rehearse their complaints in dramatic recital. Army life at its very best is no picnic, but we can hardly convince ourselves that the officers of the Third Regiment are imposing the severe sentences simply for the purpose of impressing the privates with the power and superiority in the camp.

Mixing the Gay With the Grave.

The three New Jersey commissioners sent by Governor Voorhees to Jacksonville to ascertain the preference of the men of the Second New Jersey as to whether they want to stay in the army or be mustered out, have met with some funny experiences. Unmarried men were the ones asked if he had anybody dependent upon him, what his prospects were, had he left a good place to enlist, was that place still open, and similar questions. Married men were doomed, it would seem, according to what the men said afterward. As soon as one answered that he was married and that his family was dependent upon him, a short "That will do, sir," from the General, and a hasty jotting down of the report opposite his name on the roll showed that he would probably go home.

One man in Company B being asked if he was married, replied:

'Sure, sir, I don't know; the jury is still out."

A smothered laugh followed, in which even General Spencer had to join. Another man of Company A was asked if he wanted to go to Cuba and said:

"I didn't know I had command of the regiment, sir; if I had, I never would have ordered it here. We would have been at the front long before this."

How Congressman Howell Feels.

A Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune has the following to say about Congressman Howell, of the Third district:

Representative Howell has not at any time been a candidate for renomination, as his private business is there. It is known that there is no candidate for the nomination, the people desiring Mr. Howell, who has made an industrious, popular and sensible member of Congress, to accept another term. A Tribune correspondent asked him before he returned to New Jersey yesterday if he would probably run again for the House. He repeated what he had stated before Congress adjourned, and intimated that if the nomination came to him by the will of the people he would probably accept it.

Griggs May Preside.

Attorney-General Griggs has been requested to act as temporary chairman of the coming Republican Gubernatorial convention. The special committee, consisting of Franklin Murphy, John Kean and Major E. J. Anderson, has deputized Mr. Murphy to write the letter of invitation to the Attorney-General.

The sub-committee of the Democratic State committee will meet in Newark tomorrow to fix the date of their State convention.

Conversation as a Fine Art.

A brilliant young Lochinvar in the shape of a woman professor of the art of conversation has come out of the west (in this instance she hails from Denver) to teach the young women of New York how to talk. She professes to have studied her art in the most polished European circles. With new world energy and originality, combined with old world culture, she has made a descent on the crude girls of Manhattan to gild their intellects with the highest of social accomplishments, while she gilds her own pocket withal in the operation. Her plunk is admirable, and is to be hoped that she will make a financial success in her novel business, for there would seem to be ample field for its use. But we fear she proceeds on an unsound premise. The art of charming conversation is born in the individual and cannot be taught. It is a matter of tact and temperament and sympathy even more than of intellectual culture and vivacity. The most brilliant talkers are not always adept in the art of agreeable conversation. To evoke from others their best, to put them at their ease and smooth away all sense of friction, to mingle with the stream of talk unobtrusively, as oil does with the dressing of a salad, blending and perfecting diverse elements—this it is to know conversation as a fine art. All the teaching in the world will not bestow it. A simple country girl may possess it. The most brilliant woman of society may lack its subtle delightfulness. If the equipment exists by nature, the higher the culture and intellect the more charming the art. Without the other essential gifts mere culture, wit and knowledge amount only to the beating of tomtoms, a pyrotechnic display of vanity. To converse delightfully is to be intent on making others talk well, no less than the personal achievement of display.

The Royal Geographical society has for a long time refused the persistent attempt made to have it father new schemes of antarctic exploration. But Sir George Newnes, founder of a number of successful periodicals, has taken up the rejected burden and given £50,000 to capitalize an expedition. It is proposed to exercise the tactics of Nansen in taking advantage of the drift of the polar current. And a boat the exact model of the Fram will be used for the purpose. The head of the expedition will be a Norwegian naturalized in England, Carsten Egeburg Borchgrevink, who is a member of the Geographical society, an intimate friend of Nansen and an enthusiast in polar exploration, in which he has had some experience. The party, it is believed, will be gone at least two years. What end of science not already secured by north polar adventure can be achieved except the advancement of purely geographical knowledge it is difficult to see.

The latest decision of the naval board as to what should be recommended to congress at the forthcoming session is in line with the lessons of the war. The conviction is not to the effect that we should have the biggest navy in the world, but the very best warships which can be built. The factor of speed has impressed itself on experts as a superlative need in the most effective work. The new programme proposes three battleships of between 12,000 and 14,000 tons displacement and not less than 19 knots of speed. These would greatly surpass any battleships now afloat. For armored cruisers three are to be recommended of about 12,000 tons and of 24 knots speed, if possible, but not less than 22. Besides these a number of protected cruisers superior in class to Admiral Dewey's Olympia and several 2,500 ton cruisers are deemed important. It is in the line of increased speed that naval improvement now recognizes the most need.

The establishment of game farms or private preserves by rich men is becoming more and more a fad, even by those who never fired a gun. Mr. William Rockefeller has purchased 25,000 acres in the Adirondacks with the purpose of stocking it with our finest game animals and birds. Nearby the place, which is in the vicinity of Paul Smith's, are the lands of other large game preserves and hunting clubs. Austin Corbin's experiment in New Hampshire is bearing multiplied fruit.

Senhor Mendonca, the new Brazilian minister to Portugal, on his presentation to the king indulged in an unusually flowery outbreak over the glories of the Portuguese race. "When at the end of the century about to begin, the Portuguese language will be spoken by 100,000,000 of men," said he. If other races increase in proportion, there will be standing room only.

The Snowqualmie falls in Washington bid fair to rival the marvelous resources of Niagara as a fountain of electric energy to be distributed for purposes of lighting and motor forces. It is estimated that 100,000 horsepower will be easily made available when the plant is completed.

There is a hackneyed apothegm which says, "Strike while the iron is hot." The man who finally clutches fortune by the hair is he who does not wait for the iron to be hot. He makes it hot by hammering on it.

University Training For Women.

Woman is held in higher regard as a social power here than in any other country. She has more political and business rights than elsewhere. Her competition in nearly every line of occupation, so far as her physical power enables her to enter any, which she wishes to do, is unrestricted. Even her lack of fitness to carry a rifle in the battle front she offsets by her generous ardor in going to the front as a nurse in larger numbers even than masculine red tape can be persuaded to countenance. But proportionately to population her university advantages are even greater in several other countries than our own. The test is in the admission to university training under the same conditions as those given to men. Columbia, Harvard and the University of Michigan are the only high class universities in the United States which put her on an equal footing as to curriculum and degree. In England Oxford and Cambridge open their doors, with two colleges in each, while there are three other large university colleges of less note where she is welcomed. Several medical colleges also admit both sexes. The University of Copenhagen makes no distinction, nor do several of the German universities, though the rude burschen often make it very unpleasant for the women students with their cruel staring and impertinences. Switzerland is the great power in the higher education of women, and there are more woman students in its universities than are found elsewhere. The fact that it is the political asylum of Europe causes a constant escape to its hospitable shores of hundreds of refugees from their own lands. So among its woman students, perhaps indeed a majority of them, are to be counted many foreigners. Much of the nihilistic plotting which in times past threatened the lives of czars emanated from the Swiss universities and their women. That nihilism, fed so constantly by Russian student life among the women, has not induced the successive czars to shut the doors of their own universities is the fair sex certainly scores a credit mark to the imperial generosity. But half barbaric Muscovy is in the very van of forwardness in this respect, even in the Russian schools, while France, with its most artificial of European civilizations, frowns persistently at the whole theory of woman's higher education.

The progress made throughout the world in the fuller extension of educational chances for women is one of interesting phases of the last quarter of a century more clearly marks the advancing wave of intellectual and moral progress. Whether woman does or does not need to support herself, a larger intellectual outlook equips her by that much the better for any duty or station which falls to her. In answering this need the latter half of the nineteenth century has developed one of its most striking features.

Some curious experiments have been recently made on animals raised on sewage farms. The result shows an interesting effect on the flesh and secretions as influenced by the herbage manured by the sewage. Where no more sewage goes into the soil than is fully assimilated and transformed by the substance of the plant cattle and other animals fed on the grass show no deleterious trace in their flesh or milk. If the soil, however, is fully gorged with the sewage, then the herbage crop will be surcharged with the sewage elements and dangerously unfit for cattle to graze. Both meat and milk will be replete with the same constituents, unpleasant to taste and dangerous to the health. The susceptibility of milk to the flavor of the food eaten by cows is well known. But it seems that the effect on the flesh is even more marked and unwholesome.

The quaint old couplet about the sick devil and the well devil finds a fresh illustration in the action of the sultan of Turkey in refusing to grant compensation for American losses at the time of the Armenian massacres. When the pressure was sternly forced, he was profuse in promises and agreements. Now that the powers of the civilized world have begun to show their teeth and snarl not at him, but at each other, the shrewd Moslem laughs in the faces of applicants and repudiates all responsibility.

The present snubbing which the new Prince Bismarck and his family have given the kaiser from the funeral to the present time should be wholesome discipline for the imperial young man. It is not often that he experiences such a shower bath. It is to be assumed that he forgets all thought of less majesty and anguished fancy revels on a certain literary dynamite magazine in London.

There is no country in the world where such immense benefactions are given in America. In England or Germany such a thing would instantly excite universal comment. Here it passes without a ripple.

The most enviable persons are not such as have the largest possessions. They are the happy spirits able to get the most out of the things they have who never suffer dyspepsia for lack of discretion at the banquet of life.

A Misapprehension.

Many and grateful are the tributes paid to this country for the heroic stuff which enters into the composition of her volunteers. Among others is a glowing compliment from the London Daily Chronicle, involving, however, a slight misconception, which may be corrected. Writes the Chronicle after enumerating the results of the war and specially emphasizing the results of the Santiago victory:

"Above all, they have improvised the army with which they did this part of the work. Not had for the interval between rent day and rent day! The manner of this improvisation is a striking vindication in some ways of the American system. Most of the troops who swarmed up the slopes at Santiago and captured intrenched positions held by seasoned troops and swept by artillery were mere untrained butchers, bakers and candlestick makers at the beginning of the war."

All this is very nice and warms the cockles of the American heart. But it is based on a misconception. The excellence of our militia and volunteer system is that it draws into its service all classes, not merely that of the "butcher and baker and candlestick maker" alluded to by the English paper. If any feeling of caste exists in times of peace, it is completely burned away by the fierce flame of patriotism which blows across the country in time of war. The dude fought splendidly by the side of the cowboy in the ranks of the rough riders and the butcher boy by the side of college graduate in the storming of the heights of San Juan. War is almost worth making and suffering when it teaches us so effectively that "a man's a man for a' that," no matter what kind of a coat he wears.

The Last Chemical Discovery.

One never knows when new and interesting discoveries will be scored by scientific research. Neither can one be sure that any such discovery, at first apparently of mere abstract or academic interest, may not soon prove to be of great practical importance. Professor Dewar in London about three years ago amazed his audiences by his experiments in the liquefaction of gases. It was scarcely to be prophesied that it would soon prove to be revolutionary in some practical processes of great value, a fact which now seems probable. Cooke's "New Chemistry" in 1874 specified the existence of 63 elementary substances, and five new ones have been rapidly added, the last three being helion, argon and metargon, gases which almost refuse to unite with any other substance. A few weeks ago the identification of another elementary gas was made known to the French Academy of Sciences by three Italian physicists, MM. R. Nasini, F. Anderlini and R. Salvadori. The discovery came about by the agency of spectrum analysis, that all compelling tool of chemical and physical research. For many years the green line in the solar corona, known to spectrum analysts as 1474 K, was attributed to the aurora, but it was finally believed to represent some elementary presence in the sun lighter than hydrogen, but nonexistent in the earth. The investigation, mentioned above, found the same line in the spectrum of the gases thrown off by the volcanic springs of Possaoli, and the inference was that it was the identical gas previously recognized in the sun. This, it is believed, will soon be isolated and prove to be the lightest substance known to man.

The real importance of an individual can only be judged by the effect his death makes. Yet great men survive the active period of their greatness, and the effect is purely sentimental and critical. Dead Bismarck and Gladstone! The world is not moved a whit except in curious contemplation. "Imperial Cæsar dead and turned to clay" becomes only good for Hamlet's moralizing over an open grave. The death of the biggest man, after all, makes a very small ripple in the ocean of life.

The retired officers of the United States army, constituting a large body of able and in many cases physically competent men, have not been encouraged in giving their services to the government in our recent needs. Hundreds of military offices have been filled by civilian appointments and the trained soldiers debarred. In the naval service this rigid exclusion has not been enforced. It is not easy to grasp the philosophy of the distinction.

There is a strong question against the "manual training" idea which has been introduced into the school methods of many of our large cities. The argument is that the children of the poor need more than aught else to receive careful drill in the elementary English studies, for which time is too limited. The manual drill wastes time for a mere smattering without skill.

Society is composed of two great classes, those who have more appetites than dinners and those who have more dinners than appetites. The returned heroes of Santiago will have belonged to both these classes when they are free to receive social attentions.

The weakness of the average man is never shown more potently than in the fact that he will glibly excuse himself at a fault while he will blush speechlessly at a blunder.

The Medico-Military Quarrel.

The controversy between General Shafter, who commanded in the Santiago campaign, and General Sternberg, the chief of the medical department of the army, as to the responsibility for the neglect of requirements due to the sick and wounded and for the condition of the transports Seneca and Concho, which brought the wounded north, has naturally aroused widespread interest. The eagerness to fix a shameful responsibility somewhere has been general. General Shafter indignantly repudiates the assertions made by the general medical staff that it lay within his power to have obviated any of the evils of an ineffective medical service. The fact that he has no direct control, under military practice in this country, where the whole staff departmental service is not unified under the single head of the commanding general in the exigencies of a campaign, was held to be a good justification of his innocence of responsibility. General Sternberg's accusation is that the quartermaster's department, which is under the control of the commander absolutely, failed to put at the disposition of the medical department boats and pack mules for the landing and carriage of supplies to the front. It is stated that a great part of his reserve medical equipment, including the ambulance corps, was left at Tampa, on account of insufficient transportation, when the expedition started. At Siboney the soldiers, in light marching order, with their rations, were landed first and hurried to the front, for it seemed imperative to force a short, quick campaign, without waiting for a full equipment of all the paraphernalia of war. The Relief, with a complete outfit of all medical supplies, did not arrive at Siboney till four days after the fight at El Caney. She was not able then to land her needed complement for medical and surgical work promptly, because proper transportation was not supplied by the chief quartermaster, all the launches and mules being diverted for purely military service; hence delay in dispatching medical supplies where they were so urgently needed.

In the matter of the hospital ships Seneca and Concho, which were overcrowded and poorly supplied with water and food, aside from the comforts needed by the wounded, General Sternberg does not present so good an argument. Their overcrowding may have been unavoidable, but it certainly was imperative on the medical department to insure their adequate supply of everything needed, even if to some respect the care would trench on the technical duties of the commissary department.

The truth seems to be that there was fault on both sides, the errors and slips which always come from divided responsibility. The American army's radical fault is the lack of a perfectly organized general staff department. In European armies this important feature is the medium through which all details are harmonized and administered under the direct control of the commanding general. Every factor in military service is thus under the management of one man. The troubles of the Santiago campaign might easily have been averted under a better system. This defect was the evildoer in the deeds of omission and commission complained of rather than any individual. Perhaps, too, the evils themselves have been overstated.

Professor Mommsen, the great historian, is a bitter hater of England in common with most of his countrymen. He does not think that England will ever bend her proud knees to beg a German alliance, for she knows Germany would not do her dirty work, for that, in the professor's mind, is what alliance with Great Britain means. Neither does he think that there will be an Anglo-American alliance. He has too exalted an opinion, too, of the United States to credit such a degradation. This learned doctrinaire is sure that it will not be many years before the detested Englisher will suffer the colonial fate of Spain at the hands of Russia, France and Germany. Russia will swallow India, France will capture Egypt, and Germany will share the spoil by uniting over Cape Colony and South Africa. Professor Mommsen is a most brilliant master of the art of hind sight, but there is serious question as to his foresight.

Dr. Domingos Freyre of Rio Janeiro has conducted some very timely experiments with soil taken from a cemetery near Rio which had been removed from the graves of victims of the yellow fever. His series of cultures with the resultant fluids produced conditions in animal life exact counterparts of those created by yellow fever. From the cocci cultures he also produced a fluid, to be used as vaccine is, with the effect of propagating, a perfectly safe form of the dreadful disease. The statement that the soil in tropical cemeteries is so apt to be germ laden suggests interesting hints for sanitary measures to be used in dealing with tropical pests.

The Egyptian sirdar, General Herbert Kitchener, is only a practical soldier without political pull. His great genius, however, as shown in the Egyptian campaigns, makes it probable that he will yet be in command at the Horse guards. He and Lord Roberts are without doubt the most gifted soldiers in the British service.

THE SMITHS PICNIC.

appropriate to the occasion. The Smiths gathered under the trees while an old Dutch banner, which is always swung to the breeze on the occasion of the Smith picnic, was an evidence of how the first Smiths came to this country. Isaiah Smith presided over the exercises.

Rev. J. A. Wells, who gained considerable notoriety two years ago by running for Congress in the Third district on the Free Silver ticket, but who is now editor of the Bernardsville News, which is read by many Smiths, delivered the principal address of the occasion. The political parson eschewed politics and dwelt on the noble record of the Smith family. He referred in glowing terms to how the Smiths were renowned in all the walks of life, from the bloody fields of battle to the peaceful pursuit of tilling the soil. No matter, he said, where the Smiths were found, they were always up with the procession. No Smith had yet occupied the White House, but that didn't show that they wouldn't some time, but anyhow they had done their share in making other men occupants of the White House. Rev. Mr. Wells ended with a fine peroration about the Smiths, and when he sat down the Smiths yelled with delight.

Other remarks were made by Rev. Dr. J. E. Smith, pastor of the Methodist church at New Germantown; Rev. Dr. J. E. Appley, of Basking Ridge, and Abner Smith, secretary of the Smith Family Association.

After the band had played several patriotic tunes and the Smiths were filled with good words about themselves the exercises were concluded. Then came the time of separating the Smiths into family groups, which was no easy job. A few of the younger Smiths couldn't be found by their Pa and Ma Smiths, and many a distracted Smith was to be seen skurrying here and there looking for the lost children. After two hours, however, the Smiths got together and went home to wait for the twenty-third gathering next year.

SALARY QUESTION IN COMMON COUNCIL.

Members Cannot Agree About Pay of 1st Assistant Chief.

MATTER FINALLY REFERRED

COUNCILMAN HETFIELD WANTED TO FIX IT AT $100.

Councilman Runyon Quoted Corporation Counsel Marsh as Saying That a Salary of a City Official Could Not Be Changed During His Term—Councilman Barrows Advises to Go Slow.

The city fathers had no desire to linger long at the special meeting held last Tuesday, for the oppressively hot weather had its effect. Strange enough, all of the members were present, and it was a few minutes past 8 o'clock when President Baker called the meeting to order. The chief topic of interest discussed was the question fixing the salary of First Assistant Chief J. W. Murray, Jr., of the fire department, which matter was laid on the table at the last meeting. Mr. Hetfield called the matter up Tuesday and moved that the salary be fixed at $100 a year.

Mr. Runyon took exception to the motion and stated that the corporation counsel had informed him that the Council had no right to change an official's salary during the term.

To this statement Mr. Hetfield objected and expressed an opinion that he thought it very strange if the salary could not be changed. The salary of the second assistant was changed and why not change that of the first assistant.

Mr. Barrows made a few remarks on the subject, and thought that it would be wise to have the matter referred to the fire and building committee. He said that there had been too much similar trouble of late in determining just what rights the city has. He said it seemed to be a question as to what streets the city own, or whether the Council has a right to govern the city. His opinion was that it is better to go slow and act right.

Mr. Hetfield stated further that if the Council elects a man to an office they certainly have the right to fix his salary.

Mr. Buckle coincided with Mr. Hetfield as did also some of the other members, but the matter was finally referred to the fire and building committee and a report from them will be received at the next meeting.

The minor business of the evening did not consume much time and it was quickly transacted. Mrs. Franklin P. Chase, of East Front street, asked the Council to lay a crosswalk on the above street at the head of Westervelt avenue. The matter was referred with power. The Plainfield Electric Light Company informed the Council that new lights have been located as ordered. Assessor J. A. Hubbard, in a communication, informed the Council that he believed the tax of $3.30 for 1894 on a Jefferson avenue property was an error. The matter was referred for investigation. The report of the sewage assessment commissioners was received and laid on the table.

Street Commissioner Gavett reported the granting of nine sewer permits, and the same number of building permits were reported by Building Inspector T. O. Paine.

Mr. VanHerwerden offered a resolution providing for the borrowing of $5,000 on account of general fund and $1,000 on account of fire fund, in anticipation of taxes.

The city now has the use of eleven free telephones and it is entitled to twelve. In view of this fact Mr. Andrews has been anxious to have a telephone placed in the City Industrial Home. The necessary steps were taken at the meeting last evening and a 'phone will be located as desired.

Mr. Barrows offered a resolution which provide for the enforcement of the ordinance compelling property-owners to curb their property. The resolution includes a small number of properties, but was amended before adoption, to exclude the property at the corner of Westervelt avenue and East Front street. This action was taken owing to the fact that the owners are in France and no one at present occupies the property.

An effort was made to adjourn the meeting to Thursday evening, September 22d, but this was found to be illegal, and Mr. Barrows requested President Baker to call a special meeting. The date will probable be September 22d. After Mr. Runyon offered a motion that the amended building ordinance be adopted on third reading, the meeting adjourned.

Rev. Mr. Caldwell, of Camden, is visiting Thomas Quinn, of Avon Park.

HIS CLOTHES NOT STOLEN

BALDWIN BOY WAS VICTIM OF HIS OWN MISTAKE.

In Returning to a Bath-house at Boynton Beach He Got Into the Wrong One—Preferred $12 to Clothes.

Boynton Beach, Sept. 7.—Walter Baldwin, the Plainfield boy who alleged that his clothes were stolen from one of the bath houses here on Labor Day and whom Mr. Boynton reimbursed $12 for the reported loss, was not the victim of a thief but of this own mistake. After leaving the water he entered the wrong bathhouse, the key he had fitting two different locks. When he found that his clothes were not in the house he entered, he concluded that they must be stolen. At the time it was not thought of to search any other bathhouses to try to find them.

Yesterday morning when the bathhouses were being cleaned up workmen found the missing clothes in the bath house just as the young man had left them when he went into the water. E. H. Boynton, son of the proprietor, at once done the clothes up in a bundle and went to Plainfield. He visited the Baldwin family and explained the circumstances of how the boy had missed the clothes solely through his own error. He asked for the return of the $12, offering the missing clothes in place of it.

Much to his surprise, however, the young man's folks refused to return the $12. They evidently figured that the money was worth considerable more than the clothes that their son had lost. Mr. Boynton found it impossible to persuade the Baldwins that they had no right to keep the money, but inasmuch as they declined to return the cash he refused to return the clothes. He brought the bundle back last night, and the apparel will probably be given to some poor person in this vicinity.

EVADES A PUBLIC INSTITUTION.

A Young Lad Runs Away From His Mother in Dunellen.

Dunellen, N. J., September 7.—A good-sized crowd turned out yesterday morning to search for Omelia, the thirteen-year-old son of Mrs. Fyquette, who had run away from his mother Monday night to escape being placed in a home in Hopewell, N. J.

Mrs. Fyquette's husband, who was a car sweeper, was killed in the spring, leaving a widow and five little children. The widow is employed in one of the cottages at Mountain Park and has found places in the home for all of her children except this one, the oldest.

Monday she made arrangements to have Omelia sent away, but when night came the boy was gone. She followed him yesterday morning, but when the mother came in sight, Omelia disappeared, and kept out of sight until she had given up the search. It is thought that he has found a refuge for a few days with some old friends, and will make his appearance again as soon as his mother goes back to her place.

PADDEL HEARD FROM.

But the News is Too Old Now to Result in His Capture.

Justice Mosher has received word concerning the movements of George Paddel, the machinist-boarder whom Mrs. Lizzie McLean, of West Fourth street, accuses of leaving town a week ago Sunday with her wearing apparel and jewelry belonging to her husband and herself.

Paddel has a sister-in-law, Mrs. Minnie Paddel, who lives at Elizabethport. A friend from this city called on her last week, and showed her a copy of The Press telling about the charge made in the court against him. Tuesday Justice Mosher received a letter from Mrs. Paddel asking if the story was true. She said in her letter that her brother-in-law came to see her Sunday, August 28th, the day he disappeared from here, and spent several days with her. Wednesday he went away, and she does not know where he went.

Fingers Crushed In a Wringer.

Walter McKinley, a young son of William McKinley, of West Front street, was playing around a tub of wet clothes which his mother was washing Tuesday. The little fellow thrust one hand through the wringer and the full set of fingers were drawn through before his mother understood what the matter was and stopped her work. A physician said the fingers were badly crushed but were not broken.

Called Bad Names.

Charles Saueracker was accused of calling Michael Doyle bad names. The case will be thoroughly ventilated in the City Court Saturday morning.

—Excellent progress is being made on the new fire department engine house in the West End.

SPANISH IS TABOOED IN PLACE OF GERMAN.

Language of Dons Wont Be Taught Right Away.

GERMAN TOO IMPORTANT.

MR. LOUNSBURY'S PROPOSITION NOT FAVORABLY RECEIVED.

He Wanted the Board of Education to Substitute Spanish for German in the Public Schools, But Superintendent Maxson and Others Opposed the Subject of Playgrounds Also Discussed.

The meeting of the Board of Education Tuesday was mainly devoted to paying bills. August is generally the heaviest month of the year, as bills for repairs and for coal come in to be acted upon at the September meeting. The bills approved and ordered paid last night aggregated a snug sum.

The entire Boa rd was present at this meeting.

The ex-collector reported that taxes to the amount of $552.57 had been collected during the past month with interest, $16.27, making a total of $568.84, which had been deposited to the credit of the Board.

The teachers' committee reported that two new teachers, Miss Helen W. Peckam and Miss Cora Perry, had been secured, Miss Peckam to teach in the High School and Miss Perry in the Irving. This report was accepted.

A communication was read from H. P. Reynolds, of the managing committee of Muhlenberg Hospital, in which a request was made for three or four old settees to use in the reception room at the hospital or in other parts of the building. It was voted to permit Mr. Reynolds to pick out as many old settees from the cellar as he needed.

A. C. Rogers wanted to rent the Rogers' school building on West Fifth street, which the Board lease and do not use. Mr. Rogers stated that he wanted to open a real estate and architect's office. The matter was left with the committee on buildings with power to act.

Mr. Lounsbury suggested that Spanish be taught in the schools, if necessary, in place of German. Mr. Abbott thought that German was necessary, especially for those pupils who go to college. Superintendent Maxson was opposed to substituting Spanish in place of any other language taught, but the subject did not reach a vote.

Mr. Lovell spoke and said that suitable playgrounds for the pupils, with instructors who would see that they played properly and engaged in games that were moral as well as healthful, was more necessary in his mind. This, too, was dropped, and the Board went into executive session.

AWED BY THE REVOLVER.

Charles Bock Delivers an Italian Into the Hands of the Police.

"Me bad man," exclaimed the Italian ragpicker as he lifted the iron poker high in air. It was Tuesday evening and Charles Bock, of Somerset street, had seen the Italian picking up all sorts of things about the yard. For the time being Italy was victorious. Then the representative of America went into the house and secured his revolver. The tables were soon turned.

With one eye on the muzzle of the revolver, the native of sunny Italy marched up the street until they found a policeman. Then the ragpicker was turned over to him.

Yesterday the man who had the poker, Dominico White, and his partner, Lawrence Lingro, were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza. White was fined $8 and the other man ordered out of town.

CARS RUNNING BY SATURDAY!

A Question as to Time Brunswick Company Will Open Dunellen Extension.

Dunellen, Sept. 7.—According to good authority the street railway company will be running cars through here by Saturday. The trouble seems to be at Bound Brook, in crossing a bridge which divides two townships, and is controlled in part by each. But Mayor Silas Drake, of Lincoln, says the cars will be running through that place and to Dunellen in a few days.

The bridge over the brook between here and Lincoln, is nearly finished; the poles are almost all up, and the track about completed.

Pity For a Man From Elizabeth Street.

Philip Glennon, of Elizabeth street, had been drunk. That was all the police could say against him yesterday morning when he was haled before the City Judge. As a result, sentence was suspended.

W. W. West, of Brooklyn, is visiting friends in this city for a short time.

ICE NOW MORE COSTLY.

THE LOCAL DEALERS INCREASE THE PRICE TEN CENTS A HUNDRED.

Excessively Hot Weather Has Caused Extraordinary Consumption and Has Brought the Supply to a Low Point.

The price of ice is on the rise. The first step was taken September 1st, and unless cool weather comes soon, and comes to stay, the local dealers may be obliged to put it up again.

As a well-known ice dealer told a representative of this paper Tuesday, that double the quantity of ice has been consumed here this summer as compared with last summer or any previous seasons. The extremely hot weather and the prolonged spell of constant heat are to blame for it. There are four great wholesale ice dealers in the northern part of this State upon whom the local dealers depend for their stock, the Hopatcong Ice Company, at Lake Hopatcong, the Mt. Pocono Company, the Goldsborough Company and the Greenwood Lake Company.

The Hopatcong Ice Company are about sold out and the other three so near so that it is only a question of a few days before they will have exhausted their supply.

This week ice has gone up from 10 cents a hundred wholesale to 20 cents; and from 20 cents retail to 35 cents. The dealers even now say that they are selling the ice for just what it costs them to place it in the refrigerators at 35 cents a hundred, and that before they were losing money.

The mild, open winters have made the ice harvests light, and even now much of the ice used here, it is said, comes from Maine. The dealers also say that several big dealers are holding back their stock waiting for a higher price. But, even at 35 cents a hundred, consumers ought not to complain, especially now that it is so late in the season and ice has been so cheap all through the summer.

STATE FAIR AT WAVERLY.

"Politicians' Day," It is Expected, Will Attract at Least 30,000 Visitors.

One of the features at the Waverly Fair Tuesday was the horse show in the track enclosure. The exhibition horses were brought out in the morning, put through their paces, and then the prizes were awarded by the judges. Contrary to the usual custom, the judging of exhibits in the other departments was deferred until yesterday, which was "farmers' day."

"Politicians' day" will be observed tomorrow. It is usually the big day of the week. All the public men and office holders in New Jersey, Republican and Democratic town, city, State and some of the National leaders, will be there, and the usual reception will be given to the Chief Executive of the State in the big tent on Governors' Hill. It is expected that at least 30,000 visitors will pass through the gates.

AN UNRULY TONGUE.

Mrs. Bridget Dake Gave Various City Dignitaries a Piece of Her Mind.

An unruly tongue nearly made trouble for Mrs. Bridget Dake in the City Court yesterday. The worst of it was that it belonged to her. It first got her into trouble with Patrolman Myers Sunday afternoon and he was finally constrained to bring her down to the city jail. Then she opened fire on the Chief. This morning, after City Judge DeMeza had suspended sentence on her, she let go at the Judge and was suddenly landed in a cell. Her two children wept and Prosecutor Kennedy Revell made a successful plea for her. She was released again in the charge of the clergyman who persuaded her to keep silent.

Underwent an Operation.

Word has been received in this city that E. E. Marshall is now ill at Niagara Falls, after having undergone an operation for appendicitis. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall left for Niagara Falls Saturday partly for pleasure and partly for the benefit of Mr. Marshall's health. Yesterday, Mr. Marshall was compelled to undergo the operation. No news has been received as to his exact condition.

Collision Brings a Lawsuit.

George Rhyno, of Piscataway, has brought suit in Justice Mosher's court against a Mr. McCarthy, in tort, for $200 damages. Several weeks ago there was a collision on the railroad crossing at Samptown between these two. Rhyno claims that McCarthy was to blame, and has brought the suit for damages.

An Approaching Marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hangiter, of Monroe avenue, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Annie Hangiter to Adam Angerbauer, of East Third street. The ceremony will be performed at Hope chapel Thursday evening, September 22d, at 7:30.

BICYCLE SCORCHER'S HEAD WAS CUT OPEN

Riding at a Fast Pace Ran Into a Vehicle.

AMBULANCE CALLED OUT.

CHARLES T. WOOLSTON, THE VICTIM, ON WRONG SIDE OF ROAD.

Accident Occurred Near Avon Park—Woolston Rode Fell-Mell Into the Shafts of the Approaching Wagon—Severe Scalp Wounds From Which Blood Flowed Freely—26 Stitches.

A wheelman scorching, a wagon rattling along the road at a fast pace, a collision, and the bicyclist lying along the roadside dangerously wounded, caused excitement enough at Avon Park Tuesday. The young man who was hurt was Charles T. Woolson, son of Councilman Woolston of the borough, and when the accident happened he was scorching along Park avenue towards home in company with eight other companions.

When near Michael Quinn's place, the bunch of bicyclists met a buggy. Woolston, who was ahead, rode directly towards the rig. His head was down, and one of the shafts came in direct contact with his skull, making two long scalp wounds, seven or eight inches in length, and cutting up his face and neck.

When the accident occurred Woolston was about a quarter of a mile ahead of the others. As those going at the slower pace neared the scene of the accident they passed the rig that was collided with, and a woman was seen to thrown a bicycle out of the wagon into the road. The rig did not stop. It is supposed when Woolston struck the wagon the force was enough to throw the machine into the vehicle. A few feet further on Woolston was found lying in the roadway.

His companions picked young Woolston up and carried him to Quinn's house and laid him on the piazza. He was conscious, and one of the wheelmen was despatched to town for a physician. Dr. Endicott was at home and went out there at once. In dressing the scalp wounds it was necessary to take twenty-six stitches. The cuts in the head were so deep as to expose the bone.

Dr. Endicott sent for the ambulance and had Woolston removed to his home. The accident occurred at 9:30 o'clock, but it was not until 1:30 o'clock that Woolston was fit to be moved.

When the young man was picked up his head and neck were covered with blood and it was almost impossible to tell where the cuts or wounds were. At this time it is impossible to tell whether the injuries will result disastrously or not.

THE PIANO SOLD.

Richard Menzel Claimed it But Did Not Offer Any Proof.

When the goods of the departed A. D. Warde, late proprietor of the New Jersey Military Academy, were sold at public auction August 24th, at the Arlington Hotel on Somerset street, among the effects was a Mahogony Baby Grand piano, which at the time of sale was claimed as the property of Richard Menzel by notice in writing served upon Constables VanHorn and Pangborn, who were conducting the sale. The other goods were sold but the sale of the piano was adjourned until September 6th, at 2 p. m., in order to give the claimant an opportunity to prove his right of property. As nothing was done by Menzel in the way of proving property, the piano was sold Tuesday afternoon by Constable VanHorn at public auction to the highest bidder, W. R. Brokaw, the East Front street piano dealer.

IMPROVING ROCKVIEW AVENUE.

Roadway Being Macadamized in the Middle of the Street Only.

A decided improvement is being made in the borough in the macadamizing of Rockview avenue, from Rockview terrace to West End avenue. That section of Washington Park has been built up recently with a number of handsome residences which add greatly to the beauty of the place. The only drawback was the very poor condition of the roadway. Now, however, the street is being regularly macadamized under the direction of Borough Engineer Frank J. Hubbard. The borough will stand half the expense and the property-owners the rest. The macadam portion will be sixteen feet wide, leaving a dirt driveway on either hand, according to the wishes of the property-owners who want the dirt driveway for summer time and the permanent pavement for other times.

TAX RATE IN SOMERSET.

COUNTY BOARD OF ASSESSORS WENT OVER ASSESSMENTS.

Longest Session on Record—Increase of One Per Cent. in School and Three and a Half in the County Tax Rate.

Somerville, Sept. 7—The longest session of the Somerset County Board of Assessors on record was held yesterday in the courthouse. The Board convened at 10 o'clock in the morning and it was 6:30 in the evening when the work was concluded. The Board found everything correct except a case in one district where the assessor neglected to take the proper affidavit where a property owner claimed reduction for a debt which he owed. The amount of the deduction was added to the assessor's tax duplicate.

There is an increase of 1 per cent. in the State school tax, and an increase of 3½ per cent. in the county tax, making the county tax rate for the coming year 2.54 and the State school tax rate 2.27, with a small fraction over on each rate.

The North Plainfield tax rate would be lower for the coming year if it was not for the increase mentioned above. The increase brings the borough rate up to about what it was last year.

The Board of Freeholders appointed a committee to investigate the methods of caring for insane districts and the Board of Assessors passed a resolution allowing that committee to be present at the meeting yesterday.

Not once during the session was the North Plainfield assessment questioned, neither were any questions asked concerning the assessment. Below will be found the total amount assessed throughout the county, together with the county and school amounts:

SHORT BUT DISASTROUS RUNAWAY.

Coachman Left the Horse Untied and the Wagon Was Wrecked.

A runaway of short duration but attended with disastrous results to the vehicle occurred at Netherwood yesterday. The coachman, who is employed by Mr. Eagan, of Terrill road, started out this morning with a spirited horse harnessed to a fancy rubber-tire road wagon.

At Robert Guttridge's store, at Netherwood, the coachman left the horse untied while he went into the store. The horse became frightened at a passing coal train and ran away.

The animal only got as far as the corner of South avenue and Belvidere avenue where the road wagon collided with a tree and was completely wrecked. Before the horse could run again William McDonough, of South avenue, ran up and caught him. During the short run the horse almost ran over a woman who was hurrying to catch a trolley car.

VARIAN-ARNOLD NUPTIALS.

Were Married in Opposition to Desire of Bride's Parents.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Minnie Arnold, of Manning avenue, to Clarence Varian, of East Fifth street. The ceremony was performed last Monday in New York by Rev. H. G. Taylor, D. D., and was in opposition to the wish of the bride's parents who would not give their consent. The bride spoke to her father a few days before the marriage concerning the affair, but did not get his consent. The only objection offered by the parents was that the bride and groom are cousins. Mr. and Mrs. Varian will probably take up their residence in this city in the near future.

Returns to His Family.

Dunellen, Sept. 7.—Elston Lowrie, formerly editor of the Dunellen Call and secretary of the Board of Education of that place, who suddenly and mysteriously disappeared one night about a year ago, leaving his wife and children to care for themselves, returned home Sunday night and asked the forgiveness of his wife. He spent Labor Day with his family and left early yesterday morning for New York State, where he is employed.

Overcome by the Heat.

Among those who were overcome by the heat at the firemen's parade at Bayonne Labor Day was Nathan Guttman, leader of the Plainfield Band. He was taken to the hospital in an ambulance, but recovered sufficiently later on so as to be able to return home.

BENZOL FUMES KILL A PLAINFIELD BOY.

Was Overpowered in a Camden Chemical Works.

TANK'S SUDDEN OVERFLOW.

GEORGE ECKHART ONE OF THE UNFORTUNATE VICTIMS.

Employes Sprang for the Stairway, but Fell in Their Tracks—Courageous Efforts to Rescue Them—Two Other Men Besides Eckhart Also Kills d—Relatives Notified That He was Ill.

Philadelphia, September 7—Fumes from an overflowing tank of benzol at the Crown Manufacturing Company's chemical works, Seventeenth and Stevens streets, Stockton, a suburb of Camden, carried death to George Eckhart, formerly of North Plainfield, but of late an employe at the works, and two other employes, yesterday afternoon. The company produces flavoring extracts, using benzol as a basic principle for many of them.

Eckhart, together with two other employes, was at work in the crystalizing department. At the tank were several employes watching the boiling mass. The tank is charged by hand, and the temperature is kept down with ice to prevent too rapid volatilization. Suddenly one of the employes standing near the tank saw the wooden lid of the tank raise, and some of the benzol flow over the sides. The stifling fumes instantly filled the atmosphere, and wafted by a southern breeze through the windows, caught the four employes in the little room. The employes made attempts to get out of the room by a pair of stairs. Eckhart turned in an opposite direction and tried to get out by a pair of stairs in another corner. All three employes fell unconscious before they had traversed half the distance, and they died in a few minutes. All attempts to resuscitate proved fruitless.

County Physician Jones viewed the bodies last evening and ordered Coroner Lippincott to hold an inquest.

George Eckhart was well known in this city and vicinity. He was born here and when he was fourteen months old his parents died. He was then taken by his aunt, Mrs. Clare, of Jackson avenue, who brought him up and educated him. He was a person that everybody admired for his many excellent qualities. When he became old enough he sought employment of various kinds. He was employed by Seely Edsall, and for a long time was in the employ of Wikoff & Stiglitz. Later he associated himself with a local milk dealer, where he worked for sometime. After he gave up that position he went to Philadelphia to secure work. He remained with relatives during the time, and after awhile he secured employment with the Crown Manufacturing Company. He frequently wrote to his aunt telling her how nicely he was getting along, and he was much encouraged. He was a Christian young man and while in this city he attended faithfully the Park Avenue Baptist church where he was an active member.

A Daily Press representative called at the home of Mrs. Clare, on Jackson avenue, yesterday and learned that she had received a telegram telling her that George was seriously injured and to send a physician. That is all that she knew of the affair and she did not know that he was dead. Miss Clare informed the reporter that nearly all day Tuesday there appeared to her a heavy cloud that seemed to cast a gloom over her mind. She had strong feelings that something serious had happened.

No doubt arrangements will be made to have the body brought to Plainfield for interment.

City in a Healthy Condition.

Owing to the absence of several members of the Board of Health no meeting was held Tuesday night. The Inspector reports the town entirely free from contagious disease since the first of the month, and otherwise the sanitary condition of the city is excellent.

All the Offenders Didn't Appear.

The trial of Mrs. Cahill and Mr. and Mrs. Hunban was to come up in the City Court yesterday. Mrs. Cahill was the only one to appear and the case was laid over until today, the police being instructed to bring the other offenders without fail.

ARTIC STOREHOUSES.

CACHES ON WHICH THE TRAVELER RELIES FOR FOOD ON HIS REUTRN.

The Natives Never Disturb a House Except in a Case of Great Necessity—They Are Built to Keep the Animals from the Edibles.

As more and more news comes piecemeal from the Arctic regions and each new detailed map of the world has fresh lines and names put upon it in the nearly blank spaces marking the frozen zone, there is not a little interest felt in those primitive, temporary structures of the explorer without which a trip in the icy wilds would seldom be possible—the caches of the North. The books, the magazine articles, the lectures of the explorers of fame, rarely do more than casually mention these storehouses of their expeditions and thus few realise the part the caches play in Arctic work. And still less is known of their actual construction,

Unlike other monuments of civilization and exploration, they leave no sign behind them once they have ceased to be of practical use. The heavy fall of snow or a windstorm comes and tears their last remnants to pieces. On occasions something of this sort happens to a cache even while it is serving as a repository and is being depended upon by some slowly tolling party far away. Peary was unable, on returning, to trace his steps on one of his Greenland journeys so find several of the caches he had carefully established and plainly marked. Snowstorms and gales of wind had obliterated every sign of them, and no amount of searching was of avail. Had the Peary party at this juncture not happened to fall in with plenty of game starvation would have been certain.

A cache is an Arctic storage warehouse, made to keep provisions in until they are wanted. The word is the French word cache, meaning simply hiding-place. A hiding-place is precisely what it is, for while men are not to be feared on the score of theft in the Arctic lands animals of all sorts are. The great white bear that abounds in these regions will readily sniff out food and any supplies left behind, need to be hermetically sealed.

Thus the cache is the first outpost of civilization in the far North. When the Hudson's Bay region was being traversed and explored for the first time caches were set up everywhere. Now, the region being a fairly well-known land, permanent supply posts in the form of tiny villages, of perhaps but two or three families, have been established, and men are to be found settled there the year round.

The great Northern belt of the land at perpetual ice circling the Pole has, however, none of these permanent settlements, though year by year the Danish Government is planting new supply villages still further north on the snowy coasts of Greenland. These Danish villages are intended primarily for the benefit of the Greenlanders, but no explorer is ever turned away from their hospitable doors. Food is given him outright, if he wishes it, or he is allowed to buy it at cost price. Each year sees the extension of these Danish villages further north, mainly on the west coast, really the only habitable part of the island.

Once beyond the last of these villages an exploring party must plan its own food supplies. This it does by establishing these caches along its line of march. An Arctic expedition moving overland practically always intends to return by the same route. Even in these days of compressed foods, the weight of several months provender for a large party is considerable. In caches as it is, however, stowed along the route several days' journey apart.

What is simply a hole in the ground is first dug, a matter of extreme difficulty at times. Then, painfully digging elsewhere, earth is brought in the smallest possible quantity of each is lumped into the hole. Ice is then added and the water from it poured upon the earth, the entire mixture freezing in a few moments into a compact mass. This is the bottom of the cache. On it the provisions to be quickly sent to put aside for a future day are laid, and many pounds for each man, carefully calculated. There should be just enough to support life comfortably until the next cache is reached on the return, with only three days' rations over for emergencies.

With stones, ice and snow the walls of the cache are now built up, water being poured over the snowy structure hermetically to seal it. It is a point of honor, observed by the poorest natives, not to ride a cache unless in case of the direst necessity; but the provisions must be kept safe from the bears. Properly built the structure is impregnable, and it needs the work of pickaxes to break it down.

It is marked by anything that the explorers can spare or find in the vicinity, generally by a staff of wood. In Siberia the tooth of a mammoth is not infrequently used. Despite this precaution, many caches can never be found again.

Children and Fans in China.

Almost every child in China has a fan of its own. They are the playthings of Chinese babies, as children in this country delight in rattles. Chinese nurses amuse their young charges with their fans, which they are never without. The children learn how to handle their fans very expertly, for the fan in the hands of a Chinese has a certain language of its own. Rich and poor alike, every boy and girl must have a fan. A poor little Chinese boy who has scarcely a whole garment and who rarely gets a good meal will still have a fan and use it constantly.

MAJOR GEN. W. R. SHAFTER.

Was Considered Just the Man to Free Cuba From the Spaniards.

Major General William Rufus Shafter, commander of the United States army of invasion into Cuba, was recently described by his life-long friend, Senator Julius C. Burrows, as "every inch a soldier, and just the man to clean the Spaniards out of Cuba."

The son of a pioneer farmer, William R. Shafter was born in the town of Galesburg, Kalamazoo county, Mich., October 16, 1835. With scant educa*tional opportunities, the future general* toiled on his father's farm until he attained his majority. By that time he had saved sufficient money to carry him through the winter term at the Prairie Academy. He returned to agricultural pursuits, but the monotony of a farmer's life was irksome to his ambitious spirit, and the outbreak of the civil war found him ready and willing to become a soldier. At the first opportunity that presented, young Shafter tendered his services as a private. He was a fine specimen of manhood physically, hardy, athletic, a dashing rider, and very handy with a gun. Persons in local authority appreciated his worth, and he was commissioned first lieutenant in Company I of the Seventh Michigan Infantry. He was mustered into service a few days after the repulse of the Federal troops at Bull Run, and from that time to the present he has been in the military service of the United States.

MAJOR W. R. SHAFTER

One of the first engagements in which Lieutenant Shafter's company participated was the battle of Ball's Bluff, which resulted in disaster for the Union forces. Fortunately the Michigan militia emerged from the battle in fair condition and rendered effective service with McClellan in the peninsula campaign. At the battle of Fair Oaks Shafter was wounded, but he so distinguished himself that the commanding general said in his official report: "Lieutenant Shafter of the Seventh Michigan volunteers, in charge of the pioneers, was slightly wounded, but kept the field and furnished a beautiful exhibition of gallant conduct and intelligent activity."

In the summer of 1863 the Nineteenth Michigan regiment was organized and Shafter was assigned to it with the rank of major. He served a year or more saw a great deal of hard service in Kentucky and Tennessee. In the official reports of the middle Tennessee campaign Major Shafter is praised for meritorious conduct and especially mentioned as "one of the most deserving officers of the Nineteenth infantry." Together with other Federal officers, he was captured by the Confederates, but his gallant bearing and his cool conspicuous that his captors allowed him to retain his horse and side arms. He was a prisoner of war for three months and was exchanged in May, 1863.

Soon after Shafter's return to his command he was commissioned lieutenant colonel of the Nineteenth regi*ment and this* promotion was speedily followed by two successive brevets, the first as colonel in recognition of his gallantry at Fair Oaks, and the second as brigadier general for "gallant and meritorious conduct" at Thompson's Station. He served for about a year as lieutenant colonel of the Nineteenth and was promoted to be colonel of the Seventeenth regiment of colored troops. He remained in this latter command until the close of the war, and was mustered out of the volunteer service November 2, 1866.

Prior to his retirement from the volunteer army, however, Colonel Shafter was commissioned a lieutenant colonel of the Forty-first United States infantry, and his connection with the regular army has been unbroken ever since.

In every station of responsibility he has acquitted himself with credit.

With the development of plans for the invasion of Cuba the president and secretary of war began to look about for suitable leaders. Prominent among the eligibles was General Shafter. President McKinley made him a major general of volunteers on the fourth of last month, and he was assigned to command the troops in the Santiago de Cuba campaign. "Put Shafter on the job!" was the command Senator Burrows to Secretary Alger, "and I will guarantee that he will speedily clean out Cuba from end to end."—New York Times.

COUSIN EVELYN.

A long shaft of sunlight crept through the rose-briar shading the study window, and fell across the table where the rector sat writing.

He moved aside a little, and finished the last sentence of his letter somewhat hurredly.

"I told Constance last night that her Cousin Evelyn was coming. Her first remark was, 'How delightful to have a girl living here!' You may expect a demonstrative welcome! Con*stance is very impetuous. She sends* you her love, and is longing to see you."

The rector smiled as he wrote, especially when, after a moment of deliberation, he affixed a postscript. Then he folded his letter, and put it into his breast coat pocket with a good deal of care.

"I must not let Constance question me about her cousin too much," he thought, as he pushed open the French window and walked across the sunny lawn. "A little mystery"—here he smiled—"will only add a charm to the coming of Evelyn Dudley."

A tall girl was walking in the garden, reading and dreaming by turns, as she paced between the rows of heavy white lilies which bordered the garden path on either side. She was Constance Dacre, the rector's orphan niece, and the acknowledged beauty of the neighborhood.

The rector joined her.

"What a glorious afternoon, my dear!"

Constance closed her book, and took his arm.

"If it wasn't so insufferably dull! This is such a lonely paradise!"

"But you will have Evelyn soon."

"I don't forget. What a joy it will be! I am nineteen. Uncle Gerard, and have never had a real companion of my own age yet!"

"You will like Evelyn.

"I am sure of it and"—a little smile of pleasure parted her lips.

"It is strange to have heard nothing of her before! She is your own niece, is she not?"

"Yes; but my sister married a man whom we all detested, and went away to India with him. She never wrote to any of her family afterwards. I did not know of her death, or even of Evelyn's existence, until the other day."

"And is Evelyn like her?"

"Very much. Constance, do you remember my aversion to the form of catechism, even though I do happen to be a clergyman?"

The rector's face was quizzical. Constance sighed.

"I feel so dreadfully curious about her." she said apologetically.

"So I see. But in a week from to day she will be here; then you can learn all you desire."

The rector stooped to kiss his niece, then left her, and went into the village to post his letter.

* * * * *

The day of Evelyn Dudley's expected arrival had come. Constance, as the afternoon wore on, became excited, and hovered from room to room in a state of indecision. Finally she went up to the room she had prepared for her cousin.

Constance sat on the end of the little white bed, and remembered all this with a smile.

"Uncle Gerard said she would be shy at first, but I think my letter would dispel much of that. I hope she won't be disappointed in me."

She went to the glass, and arranged the dainty ruffles at her throat.

She turned from the glass suddenly, at the sound of the rector's laughing voice in the hall.

"It's all right Evelyn. We've come in quietly, and Constance hasn't heard us, but I know she is on the lookout somewhere."

Constance rushed down-stairs, and into the study.

"Evelyn!" she cried.

But only a man was there. A dark, handsome man, who came forward looking a little shy, as the rector, with infinite gravity, introduced them su*avely.*

"Constance, my dear—your cousin, Mr. Evelyn Dudley!"

* * * * *

"But I'm awfully sorry for your disappointment; I am, really!"

"Being sorry doesn't mend matters. It was very cruel of Uncle Gerard, and you, too, I expected 'Evelyn' would be a girl, naturally."

"And a mere man turned up! I've been here three weeks, Constance, and I've never dared to sympathize with you. You've looked such daggers at me!"

"It serves you right!"

"Does it?"

"Certainly. I thought I should have a companion. Now, you're going away soon, and I shall be as lonely as before."

"Will my going make any differ*ence?*"

"You're—better than nobody"

Evelyn Dudley looked down at the lovely, petulant girl he was swinging in the hammock.

"That's sweet of you."

"When are you going, Evelyn?"

There was something in the voice now that caused the man's heart to beat. He bent down suddenly, caressingly.

"Not till you tell me something that you once wrote—that you love me. Now?"

He caught sight of her blushing, self-satisfied face—then laughed low at her struggle for freedom, as he held her in his arms.

"I insist that you make good all your protestations," he said.

And she had to obey him.

"What is a truism?"

"It is a truth which is so true that it makes everybody tired."—Chicago Record.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Special Correspondence.

The thory that the aboriginal inhabitants of America came originally from Asia is to be looked into by expeditions representing the American Museum of Natural History. They will visit the tribes of Indians in the northwest corner of the country, live among them for a season, study their modes of life, make a collection of their implements and dig into their mounds for skeletons. At least ten tribes will be inspected for proofs that the American Indians are descended from tribes that found their way to this continent over the narrow Behring Strait. It is an easy way to account for the first natives of the New World.

Receipts from Stamps.

A statement issued by the Post Office Department shows that the receipts from the sale of stamps for the quarter before last were $22,361,705, an increase of nearly $2,000,000 over the receipts for the corresponding quarter of the previous year, and the largest increase on record. For the last quarter the money orders issued numbered nearly 5,000,000, an increase of 1,500,000 over the corresponding quarter.

These remarkable increases are attributed by post officials to the revival in business.

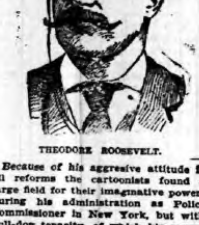
Work in Navy Yessels.

Marked progress in the work on all vessels building for the navy is shown in the report by Chief Constructor Hichborn, who assigns the improved conditions of affairs to the peremptory instructions issued recently that work and material must be pushed forward with despatch. The list of new vessels under construction shows that battleships and torpedo boats are practically the only types now being constructed for the service, and that the boats of the latter class are now so far advanced that all except two will be in readiness for service within three months. The report shows that the battleships Kearsarge and Kentucky are more than half completed.

The three sister battleships Illinois, Alabama and Wisconsin, contracted for one year later, are only ten per cent. behind the Kearsage and her twin, and all three will be launched some time this summer. The submarine boat Plunger is behind two years, and will not be in service for three months.

An Aggressive Politician.

Theodore Roosevelt has been a unique figure of President McKinley's administration. He has kept himself before the public eye more or less for full fifteen years. He began his career in New York City, and his record as a reformer, national and civic, is equaled by few of his fellow citizens. The political interests of this country are his interests, and he is always found ready to fight for a just cause.



THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Because of his aggressive attitude in all reforms the cartoonists found a large field for their imaginative powers during his administration as Police Commissioner in New York, but with bull-dog tenacity, of which his square chin is indicative, he went on his way, never once phased by the ugly pictures of himself or the criticisms of the journals.

Judgment Was Entered.

One of the cases disposed of recently by the Supreme Court was that of the New York Indians vs. the United States, appealed from the Court of Claims. The New York Indians brought suit against the United States to recover $2,000,000 claimed to be due them by virtue of the failure of the Government to carry out terms of the treaty of Buffalo, promulgated in 1838. This treaty provided for the removal of the Indians to a point west of the Mississippi River, for which the Government was to appropriate $400,000. There was also to be paid to the Indians $128,500, and a half section of land was to be allotted to each Indian. On the other hand the Indians were to cede to the Government the lands they held in Wisconsin. To carry out the provisions of the treaty the Government expended $9,464 and gave 10,240 acres of land in Kansas to thirty-two Indians. Later the Government paid $2,000,000 to the Tonawanda band of Senaca Indians and secured a release of their rights under the treaty. Upon the basis of this arrangement the remaining Indians calculated the value of their rights under the treaty at $2,232,000, and sued this brought suit. The Court of Claims dismissed the bill, and the Supreme Court reversed that judgment and ordered that judgment for the claim of the Indians be entered. SENATOR.

Profits from Small Inventions.

A patent for fastening kid gloves has yielded a fortune of several hundred thousand dollars. Its fortunate owner, and the inventor of a collar-unsap, enjoys $20,000 royalty a year as the reward for his endeavor. A new kind of sleeve-button has made $50,000 in five years for its patentee, and the simple twisting of safety pins in such a way that there is no possible danger of the point sticking in the child promises to enrich its owner beyond any of his early dreams of wealth.

THE LOST GERANIUM.

Mrs. Wigley lived at Jasmine Cottage, which had no jasmine growing over it and did not rightly deserve the name of cottage, seeing that it was one of a long row of houses at the east end of the village. Mrs. Wigley had no back garden whatever, only a tiny piece of ground in front with a wooden railing; and there was not much growing on it. But it contained a fine geranium bearing magnificent trusses of a pale pink that, stood in a pot on the window sill. This geranium was the pride of Mr. Wigley's simple soul; she took daily delight in it in spite of falling sight, and words of praise from admiring neighbors warmed the cockles of her heart.

Her friend, Mrs. Hubbard, Christian name Eliza, was more eulogistic than all the rest put together, for Mrs. Hubbard was a great gardiner and knew a fine specimen as well as any one and better than most.

She called on a certain Saturday afternoon and paused before entering Jasmine Cottage to inspect her friend's possession. It was in full bloom.

Sarah Wigley was sitting out of the window, but failed to recognize her friend; her eyes were contracted to a narrow slit, and she strove her hardest to trace the familiar features, but in vain.

"That there geranium is deliberately wasting itself!" said she.

At this moment Sarah Wigley opened the window and stood revealed—a small, shrunken widow woman, with a pale face and a pair of gentle eyes, in every this latter expression, albeit somewhat dimmed by defective sight.

"It't it ain't Sara, it's my double."

"You've been looking at my geranium, Eliza," said her friend. "Isn't it a picture?"

Mrs. Hubbard responded heartily; there was much talk about the flower, how fears had been entertained that the blight had got to it, et cetera.

"Go in, my dear," she said to Sarah Wigley; "you will catch your death of cold."

Mrs. Wigley retired. Eliza Hubbard drew the door close. Her face was crimson, her heart beat fast.

"It isn't as though she could see," said she; "she won't even know it is gone, and if she does, what does it signify? What she don't see the heart can't grieve for!"

She seemed rather proud of the quotation; of a certainty it had never been used in such a connection before. But pride was replaced by a dull sense of shame, she lifted up the geranium and, hiding it under her shawl, sped home with it.

A few days later Eliza Hubbard called on Sarah Wigley. She peeped in through the window and saw her old friend sitting over the handful of fire, though the evening was sultry, shivering and holding her thin hands to the blaze.

"My gracious!" said she, stepping briskly in, "you ain't cold to-night, are you?"

Sarah Wigley rose stiffly.

"I'm a bit poorly, my dear; I ain't felt myself since my loss. You've heard tell how some tramp or the other made off with my pink geranium, haven't you?"

"I did hear some such tale," said she. "But I don't suppose you grieve much, eh, Sarah? It ain't as if your eyesight was as good as mine. You can't keep looking at the blossoms."

For answer Sarah Wigley burst into a flood of tears.

"I know I am worse than a fool to make a fuss about a geranium plant," said she, "but I suppose I am kind of low in health. Any way, I can't help myself. I ought to be ashamed of myself," said she, "at my time of life not to have faith greater than a grain of mustard seed. Haven't I prayed the good Lord to put it into the heart of that tramp to bring me back my geranium? He knows that He won't see fit to do it, I'd had that geranium three years, 'Liza, and I'd got it from store on it as though it was a child, I hope you don't think me a weak sort."

Eliza Hubbard cleared her throat.

"No," she said softly. "I don't. I wish I was half as good as you. But I ain't. I yield to temptation right away. I ain't more strength of mind than a baby. I say, Sarah, I wouldn't take on so if I was you. Perhaps—perhaps"—she hesitated and cleared her throat again. "Perhaps you'll get your flower back again, after all."

She leaned forward and kissed her friend's wrinkled cheek. It was an unusual action, but accounted for by the unusual circumstances.

"Good-night, Sarah," said she. "I'd pray again to-night, if I were you, just as you did before."

"I will, replied Sarah, meekly, "I mean to."

She was cheered by her friend's sympathy; there was a glow at her heart, *a ring of confidence in her quaver*ing tones.

The moment she rose the next morning she glanced out of the window. Did her weak eyes deceive her? Was it really the geranium she saw below? She dressed herself hastily and hurried down stairs. Yes, there was no mistake about it; it was her pet flower, in the same pot, with the splotch of red paint on its rim.

"The Lord be praised!" *said she hug*ging it close; "the Lord be praised!"

And Eliza Hubbard, meanwhile, her face red with flame, clasped her hands together and offered her prayer.

"There ain't a meaner sinner on earth than me," she said, "but I never found it out till now." She stooped low and dug up her finest white geranium.

"I'm going round to Sarah's now at once," said she; "and while I'm about it I'll take this other white geranium to her as well. The pink one will look uncommon nice between them two."—Windsor Magazine.

CHARLES EMORY SMITH.

The New Postmaster General a Man of High Attainments.

Mr. Smith, successor to James A. Gary, was born February 18, 1842, at Mansfield, Conn., and seven years later removed with his parents to Albany, N. Y., where his early education progressed until, at the age of 16 years, he graduated from the local academy. *Six months later he entered Union Col*lege and during the interim, though he was then, as stated, but 16 years old, he wrote leading articles for the Albany Evening Transcript. He graduated from Union College in 1861, and was soon afterward appointed to the staff of General Rathbone, who was in command of various depots in New York state where volunteers were organized into regiments, and having *spent two years in this work he ex*changed the post for one in the faculty at his old school, the Albany Academy.

In 1865 Mr. Smith left the scholastic world and entered the journalistic pro*fession, becoming the editor of the Al*bany Express, of which he had charge for five years, undertaking, in addition, for several months of 1868, the duties of private secretary to Governor Fenton. In 1870 he became associated with George Dawson in the conduct of the Journal, the leading Republican paper in Albany, becoming editor-in-chief on Mr. Dawson's retirement in 1876.

In 1874 he was president of the State Press Association and delivered the annual address at its meeting. For six successive years he served as delegate to the Republican State convention. In 1880 he was selected as temporary and permanent president, and was chairman of the committee on resolutions in each of the years, excepting 1877, when Roscoe Conkling held that post and Mr. Smith was secretary. He was also a delegate to the National Repub*lican convention in 1876, and, as* New York member of the committee on resolutions, a large portion of the platform was drafted by his hand.

In 1871 Mr. Smith was elected a trustee of Union College by his fellow alumni, and in 1879 the State Legislature elected him a regent of the University of the State of New York.

In February, 1880, Mr. Smith resigned the editorship of the Albany Journal and the following month took up his residence in Philadelphia, of which he was since been a citizen, having at that time acquired the editorship of what had been known as Forney's Press and of which he assumed charge March 8 of that year, becoming, soon after his appointment as editor, part owner of the paper. He transferred to this city and State the active interest that had made him a prominent participant in the political affairs of New York, especially in State and national politics. In the interim he has become a well known figure in Republican State and national conventions, as well as upon the stump as a Republican speaker. He was one of the committee having charge of Mr. Blaine's nomination in 1884, and made the speech in the convention of 1888 presenting Mayor Fitler as a presidential candidate.

He was made minister to Russia by President Harrison in 1890, assuming charge of the mission on May 14 of that year at St. Petersburg. During his ser*vice there he bore a large part in the* distribution of the extensive relief supplies sent from this country for the benefit of the famine-stricken peasantry. He left Russia in January, 1892, and resumed the editorship of the Press, a position he has since retained. His name was mentioned frequently, in connection with a portfolio when President McKinley's cabinet was first being formed, and particularly in connection with the one that has now been given him.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Bomb in Jeff Davis' Desk.

When the United States troops occupied Richmond, Va., April 3, 1865, General Edward H. Ripley, of Vermont, who was appointed military governor *of the city, found in the desk of Jef*ferson Davis, in the house occupied by the Confederate President, a cast-iron bomb in the shape of a lump of coal. It was evidently cast from a goodsized piece of coal, was coated with coal tar and coal dust, and could hardly be distinguished when handled from a lump of coal. It was hollow, and would be powder enough to make a heavy explosion. Army authorities have never doubted that the otherwise unexplained blowing up of a steam vessel loaded with amunition at City Point was the work of a bomb of this kind, which had been dropped into a pile of coal and travelled into the furnace of the steamer, and similar bombs probably occasioned similar catastrophies during the war.—Burlington, Vt. Free Press.

"Mamma," said Bobbie, "when you go to town buy me a whistle, and let it be a religious whistle, so that I can play with it on Sunday."

SECRETARY LONG.

HIS POSITION AT THE HEAD OF THE NAVY DEPARTMENT NO SINECURE.

Is Chief of the Bureaus of Ordinance, Equipment Accounts and Construction —An Immense Amount of Business Accomplished Each Day.

A day at the Navy Department, such as the writer recently spent, is full of instruction as to what it means to be the head of the navy in war *time. The place is assuredly no sin*ecure. Secretary Long reaches his office promptly at 9 o'clock every morning. After thirty minutes with his mail, the stream of people who are waiting in the large ante-room begins to pour in upon him. It is the etiquette of the department that whenever a Senator arrives he has the right of way over all others, no matter how long they may have been waiting there before him. A Representative in Congress also has precedence of general callers.

Dispatches of all sorts are continually coming in, and the Secretary is kept busy dictating answers to them. Communications from the department of navigation, which deals with the personnel of the service, detailing the officers to the various ships and ordering the ships hither and thither, have to receive prompt attention.

The bureau of ordnance makes another large daily demand upon the Secretary's time. This bureau deals with all *matters relating to ammuni*tion, projectiles, weapons, and armament generally.

SECRETARY LONG.

The bureau of equipment makes another considerable call on the Secretary's working hours. This is the bureau which furnishes all the equipments of the ship—the ropes, the sails, the anchors, and especially the coal. The coal buying for the navy is in itself an enormous business, and the providing of coal stations and the furnishing of a dozen coal lighters at one point or another, to carry the coal to our war vessels, is in itself a large task.

The bureau of accounts is another branch of the naval service which gives Mr. Long a great deal of hard work. This bureau has to do with the purchase of supplies, which are all bought under bids, except in cases of emergency. Another new feature of Mr. Long's administration is the hospital ambulance ship, the Solace, a magnificent vessel of 4,000 tons, equipped and fitted with all modern surgical appliances. This ship will sail under the rules of the Geneva Red Cross association, and will be free from attack. The women of the country have shown great interest in this new departure, the like of which was never attempted in any previous naval war.

Yet another share of the Secretary's time is taken up by the matter of construction and repair, which has to do with the building and repair of our ships. All the new ships that we have been buying of late in other countries have had to be put into condition under the direction of this bureau.

At half past 2 o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. Long makes his escape from the flood of visitors—the department doors are closed to the general public at 2 o'clock—and then he begins to sign his mail. He is kept busy writing his signature for a full hour, during which time he writes his name about 300 times. Then the clerk of the department makes his appearance, bringing with him a large number of papers, offers of service, requests for the naming of ships, suggestions for advice of all kinds. No letter addressed to the department oh any of these subjects is left without a reply.

He lives in very modest style in the capital. His family consists of his wife, his oldest daughter, Miss Margaret Long, 24 years of age, who is studying medicine at the Johns Hopkins university; his younger daughter, Miss Helen Long, who is of great assistance to him socially; and his little son, Pierce Long, a bright boy of ten, who is busy with his schoolbooks and his bicycle. Mr. Long is a devoted husband and father, and the domestic side of his life has always been very happy. He is jealous of his evening leisure and callers at the family hotel where he lives, who come on business, are not cordially welcomed. He believes that after a hard day's work at the department the serenity of the lamplight hours should not be intruded upon, except for grave reasons. He enjoys walking very much, and can be seen nearly every afternoon, after the cares of the Navy Department have been dropped, tramping sturdily around the beautiful squares and circles of the capital. Mr. Long is, by the way, a teetotaler, and almost a non-smoker, his limit being one cigar a day. He has always had a friendly side for woman suffrage and for civil service reform.—James W. Clarke, in Chicago Inter-Ocean.

A BIG PURCHASE.

HOW DUPONT SUPPLIED THE POWDER FOR THE CIVIL WAR.

As "Mr. Jones" the Great Powder-Maker Bought All the Saltpetre There was in England and Charged the Government Nothing for His Services.

On the banks of the Brandywine, in Delaware, are the great Dupont Powder Mills. Established in 1802 by the French Royalist, Eleuthere T. Dupont de Nemours, who found republican France an uncongenial home, they have grown to be the greatest mills in the world for the making of explosives. At the time of the civil war the Duponts were, as they are to-day, powder makers for the United States government. In 1861 the secretary of war sent for the Duponts, and La Motte Dupont, one of the heads of the firm, went to Washington in reply to the summons.

"Are you prepared to furnish a very large amount of gunpowder?" asked the secretary of war.

"That depends on our obtaining saltpetre," was the answer. "The saltpetre of the world is mined in India, of course, under the control of the British government and the markets are in London and Liverpool."

The secretary of war was startled. If England should prove unfriendly during the course of the war which was opening, the saltpetre market would, of course, be closed to the United States.

"The government must buy a large amount at once," he said.

"Excuse me," said Mr. Dupont, "the United States cannot go into the market and buy saltpetre at any reasonable price—indeed, it might not be able to buy it at all, but the Duponts can get it without exciting comment."

"Will you go to England and buy it—buy all there is?"

Mr. Dupont agreed to go, and he and the secretary of war talked a few moments longer; they made a few figures and the powder man was provided with letters of credit on the Rothschilds.

On the next steamer he sailed for England and presented himself with letters of introduction to the Rothschilds, [illegible]

"Very sorry, Mr. Dupont, your letters of credit have not arrived," and he was politely told by the clerk.

He next presented letters of introduction to Baring Brothers, the London correspondents of the Duponts. One of the firm, a Mr. Archibald, cordially received the powder manufacturer.

"Very happy to meet you, Mr. Dupont. We have never had the pleasure of meeting a Dupont, although we have done business with the firm for fifty years."

"I am very glad to meet you," said the American, "for I am in need of money."

"We shall be most happy to furnish you with all that you require. About how much will you need?"

Mr. Dupont looked meditatively at the floor for a moment, and Mr. Archibald looked with some curiosity at his American customer. A homely man was this powder maker; high cheek bones, a square chin, covered with a thin, straggling beard, spectacles on his deep, kind eyes; a man who somewhat resembled Lincoln in the character of his face. Mr. Archibald thought he might want several hundred pounds. This American had perhaps formed London ideas of expensive than in his western simplicity he had supposed. Mr. Dupont, looking up, said:

"I shall want 500,000 pounds, and I want it right away."

Mr. Archibald was amazed. Only his British phlegm prevented him exhibiting his astonishment. Was this American a new Monte Cristo!

"By right away, do you mean now?" he managed to ask.

"I mean in twenty-four hours; that is what we call 'right away' in the United States."

"You will pardon me if I consult my partners—it is a good deal of money."

Mr. Dupont admitted that it was a good deal of money and he took his hat.

"By the way, when you send word to my hotel, ask for 'Mr. Jones.' I am registered under that name."

Before he was out of bed the next morning Mr. Archibald called. The Baring house would let Mr. Dupont have the money.

Mr. Dupont now had money to burn (this is not altogether slang) and he set out to buy saltpetre. He proposed to buy only the large lots, but to buy them all. He went first to Liverpool, and found the saltpetre in the hands of four dealers. He was a "Mr. Jones," who wanted some saltpetre.

He bought the stock of all the dealers and each man hugged himself with delight because he had sold his saltpetre until he discovered that there was none in the market, and the price had advanced; therefore, the balance of his days, he cursed the tricky Yankee.

This great supply of saltpetre bought the next thing was to hire ships to carry it to America. He found American vessels in Liverpool which would undertake to transport it, a matter of some risk, for saltpetre was contraband of war.

The loading began; everything moved slowly. Mr. Dupont was exasperated at the tedious delays, for all the means of transportation moved deliberately in England. At last the vessels were ready and he informed the harbor master that the ships would sail at high tide that evening. The harbor master found it impossible to have the papers ready—it would take two or three days. There was red tape here and red tape there. Mr. Dupont was now in a fever of impatience. Every hour increased the danger of the government finding out that all the saltpetre in England was about to go over the sea; another day's delay and the ships might not sail at all. He pressed the harbor master for the clearance papers. The polite official explained that it would cost him his position if it was known that he had violated the rules.

"And how much is your position worth?"

"Three hundred pounds a year."

Mr. Dupont looked at the harbor master attentively; he was a man of over sixty years. Then he put his hands in his pockets and looked out the office window, which bristled with masts of all nations. Now Mr. Dupont knew his Dumas well, and at that moment he was turning over in his mind the method the Count of Monte Cristo used to rid a garden of dormice which ate his peaches.

"I should like to draw a check for three thousand pounds in exchange for the papers," he said. The ships sailed on the next tide.

When Mr. Dupont reported to the secretary of war there was a love feast in the office of the war department. After the congratulations were over the secretary said:

"How much do we owe you, Mr. Dupont?"

The powder maker named the amount of his expenses, to which he added $15,000 to the harbor master.

"And the charge do you make for your services in the negotiation?"

Then this Franco-American, who might have demanded a princely sum for his extraordinary services, bowed to the secretary and replied:

"I have had the distinguished honor of helping the government; I wish nothing further."

There is a sequel to this story. When the war was over, Mr. Dupont, realizing the tremendous risk run by the government in relying upon native saltpetre, set himself to inventing an artificial substitute, and therefore, with mountains of nitrate of soda in Chili, and potash everywhere, the United States will never be in such straits again.

In 1884 this distinguished powder maker fell a victim to his enthusiasm for his business and while experimenting with high explosives, was killed in an explosion.—New York Tribune.

HARDTACK BETTER THAN BREAD.

Army Food Which Improves Upon Close Acquaintance.

"One of the queerest things about new troops is the prejudice against army crackers," said the major, as he recalled some happenings of the civil war, "but they all get over it in time, and come to understand that the soldier's stomach has no standby like hardtack. Our company had this tenderfoot notion that fresh or dry bread is better than crackers for soldiers on for march. On one occasion we loaded up with bread for three days. The second day most of it was sour, and the third day it was worse. Before we returned to camp we were crazy for crackers, and we never went back to eating bread.

"We learned to appreciate hardtack in the forced march from southern Tennessee to Louisville in 1863. Regular rations ran out and flour was issued instead of crackers. This didn't seem objectionable at first, for each of we had to march all day and got our rations of flour at midnight, with orders to move at 3 a. m., the heavy sweaners came into action. There was no time to cook anything fancy for ours, and if you attempted to carry flour in the rain you came out at night with a bag of paste. A cast iron stomach could not stand such messes as the soldiers made of the flour. They made dough and baked or half baked it in ashes or on dirty hot stones, and ate so-called biscuits, with the soft, unbaked centers burning lips and throats, and, after they were swallowed, lying like lumps of lead in not overstrong stomachs. The whole division cheered like wild men when we struck the cracker line at West Point, on the Ohio."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

After Long Years.

"Do you remember," said Miss Ancient Oldgirl to Col. Crabtree, "how when you were a young man you proposed to me and I rejected you?"

"It is one of the happiest recollections of my life," said the Colonel with an air of gallantry. And Miss Oldgirl is still wondering.—Puck.

THE SONG OF THE BULLET.

I peacefully slumbered a thousand years,
A thousand years and more.
The centuries left with noiseless tread,
Marched past my chamber door.
And grasses grew and flowers bloomed
At my lowly bed for years,
At peace with God and man were we
And nothing knew of fear.

A rude awakening came one day,
Changed the long night to noise,
When the awful fire of hate had set
The heart of man aglow,
Then was I called to messenger
Of misery and death.
Woe was in my cursed voice,
And evil in my breath.

Over the land and over the sea,
A frantic thing, I fly.
Courageous men grow faint with fear,
When they hear my vengeful cry,
And women list, with anguished hearts,
To the dreadful song I sing.
For tidings of death and ravished love
To their tortured ears I bring.

ORRA'S CASE.

BY M. E. WOOD.

"Do something for this arm; it is scalded." The man sank into the large surgical chair and closed his eyes as though faint. The woman poured dressings and bandages upon the table near him, then ripped out the coat sleeve, cut away the shirt sleeve, and applied something that brought such relief that the man opened his eyes and watched her deftly bandage the injured arm.

"I think I'll ailing it; it will not be apt to pain you as much; have you a large handkerchief?"

"Yes," producing one. "Does the scald amount to much?"

"Painful, but not dangerous."

"I am an awful coward about bearing pain."

"Another boiler burst at the mill?" queried the woman.

"We were measuring for new ones when I got this beastly scald."

"I am glad. The old ones were always hurting somebody, and now the mill hands will not have to suffer from your negligence. You are Mr. Harriman?"

"And you are Doctor Owen?"

"Of course. I should not be in the office attending patients if I were not."

"I've been wondering why he did not come in."

"Whom did you think me?"

"Oh, an assistant—his daughter, perhaps."

"I am Doctor Owen's daughter and successor." Her face softened. "Papa was ill a long time, and scarcely able to make his rounds. I went with him and helped him in his work. Afterward I took the State examinations. When he died the people sent for me, and," smilingly, "here I am."

The man was silent a few minutes; then he said,—

"So you wrote me those letters?"

"Did you think me very impertinent?"

"I said, 'Confound that fellow's impudence!' every time I got one of them. You wrote in your last you would like to shake me for my neglect of the mill employees, and now," comically, "I am at your mercy."

"I never ill treat a patient, so you are safe for the present. This object lesson," touching his bandaged arm, "will do more for your men than all my letters."

"So they brought me home from Heidelberg to get this, and to be denied sympathy from my doctor, too."

"We are proverbially hard-hearted, you know."

"You do not look so, Miss Orra, and you are very different from my idea of women doctors."

"What was your idea?"

"Oh, big nose and eye-glasses, loud voice and—and horrible."

"No doubt you thought we smoked and chewed and swore," sarcastically.

"No, not that; but I have an old-fashioned aversion to advanced women."

"I am glad you admit it is old-fashioned, I," emphatically, "have always disliked prigs."

Miss Owen went on refilling bottles and placing them on their shelves. Her eyes were very bright. The patient coughed and placed his feet heavily upon the floor. The woman turned.

"You are angry now, aren't you?" he asked. "I am sorry. I didn't think you would mind what I said. I am willing to take it back. Besides, you are not long-nosed and spectacled," laughing. "Shake hands and make up."

He extended his firm white hand, and compelled by the friendliness of his eyes, she placed hers within it.

"I am so tired of being considered advanced woman. I love to earn my bread and mamma's too, and this is the only way. Besides, I love medicine and though I say it who shouldn't, I am successful in my practice."

"I take my arm as proof of what you say; it is painless."

"You must go now. I will give you some pills to put you to sleep if the arm is troublesome to-night, and do not eat a heavy dinner. Good-by."

The man went; he could not do anything else after he dismissed. He walked away thinking about her. She was something new; he had not associated with women during his college life, and had been without women relatives from boyhood. While Orra was not pretty she had a sweet, true face and mind.

Every day for a week Harriman went to the doctor's office and remained for the entire afternoon, and the two quarreled, and discussed their favorite books, and became chums. Orra liked this merry fellow with his air of the outside world, and when with him forgot the wooer who had so long before loved and ridden away, leaving her desolate. She could never care for another man; her heart was still with her faithless lover. But she and Philip understood each other; he knew her thoughts from her face, and she could finish his sentences for him, and did when he was not quick enough to finish them first. She went with him to the mills and gave helpful suggestions, and he smiled when he heard one workman call to another,—

"Here's our Miss Orra."

After the visit to the mill, Orra invited Harriman to stay to tea. She said,—

"Mamma will be glad to see you. As she never leaves her rooms, a stranger is a delight to her." She hesitated a moment, then added frankly, "She has rather peculiar ideas, and doesn't know that I am a practising physician. You will never undercolve her?"

Without waiting for a reply she led him up a few steps from the office, across a wide hall into a bribht, cheery, homelike room. The pale old lady sitting by the fire put out a weak hand for him to shake.

"Orra has told me about you, and I knew you when you were a little boy and used to pull my Bettie's hair. You were very mischievous, Philip. Have you outgrown your tricks?"

"Well, I have not pulled any one's hair lately, but Miss Orra and I have almost come to blows several times."

He looked roguishly at Orra, who smiled in return. She was laying the cloth, bringing in different dishes, and boiling the water for tea in a pretty brass kettle.

"Orra has everything as convenient as she can, so she may be with me as much as possible. Nursing is a miserable occupation; it keeps her away from home. I almost wish I had consented to her practising medicine, but it was so unmanly that I couldn't endure the thought."

"Mr. Harriman will quite agree with you, mamma; he thinks women doctors are all old maids, with long noses, spectacles and freckles. How is the salad? I gathered it on that."

"Did you make it?"

"Oh, I do all our fancy cooking. Janet is young, and cannot do very much as yet."

"She was hurt in the mill and had nowhere to go. So Orra very foolishly lured the little sums of money saved by his mother in her widowhood, and gradually his letters ceased. It was known that he was in Chili, and there was fever and cholera, and yet the good old lady's faith never wavered.

"He will come, Joyce. He will sure ly come."

And the girl would go to the window and draw aside the curtains, looking down the quiet country road toward the village.

"Yes, mother, he will come," was her usual answer; and one day she gave a little exclamation of surprise and almost of fear.

"Mother," she exclaimed, "there is some one coming along the road."

The old lady was already sitting up in bed, straining with her sightless orbs toward the window.

Thus they waited. The man stopped opposite the cottage, and the two women heard the latch of the gate. Then Joyce, turning, saw that her mother had fainted. But it was only moments [illegible] By the time she reached the bed her mother had recovered consciousness.

"Go," said the old lady, breathlessly, "go and let him in yourself."

Down stairs on the doorstep the girl found a tall man of thirty or there bhouts with a pale face that the English suns could account for. He looked down into her eager eyes with a strange, questioning wonder.

"Am I too late?" he asked, in a voice which almost seemed to indicate a hope that it might be so.

"No, no, no," she answered. "But mother cannot live much longer. You are just in time."

The young man made a hesitating little movement with his right hand and shuffled uneasily on the clean stone step. He was like an actor called suddenly upon the stage, having no knowledge of his part.

When he followed the girl across the threshold of their mother's bedroom the old lady was sitting up in bed holding out trembling hands toward the door.

Here Stephen Leach seemed to know better what to do. He held his mother in his arms while she sobbed and murmured out her joy. He had no words but his arms meant more than his lips could ever have told.

It would seem to the best part of happiness is sharing it with some one else.

"Joyce," continued the old lady, feverishly, "I am not afraid to die now for Stephen is here. Your brother will be to care of you, dear, when I am gone."

It was strange that Stephen had not spoken yet, and it was perhaps just as well, because there are occasions in life when men do wisely to keep silent.

"He is strong," the proud mother went on, "I can feel it. His hands are large and steady and quiet, and his arms are big and very hard."

The young man knelt upright and submitted gravely to this maternal inventory.

"Yes," she said, "I knew he would grow to be a big man. His little fingers were so strong—he hurt me sometimes. What a great mustache. I knew you would become a soldier. And the skin of your face is brown and a little rough. What is this? What is this, Stephen, dear? Is this a wound?"

"Yes," answered the prodigal, speaking for the first time. "This is a sword cut, I got that in the last war. I am a colonel in the Chilian army, or was, before I resigned."

Such was the home-coming of the prodigal. After all he arrived at the right moment in the afternoon, when the house was ready. It sometimes does happen so in real life, and not only in books. There is a great deal that might be altered in this world, but sometimes by a mere chance things come about rightly. And yet there was something wrong, something subtle, which the dying woman's duller senses failed to detect. Her son, her Stephen, was absent and had no need to say for himself. He apparently had the habit of taking things as they came. There was no enthusiasm, but rather a restraint, in his manner, more especially toward Joyce.

After the first excitement of the return was over it became glaringly apparent that Stephen had just arrived in time. His mother fell into a happy sleep before sunset, and when the active young doctor came a little later in the evening he shook his head.

"Yes," he said. "I see that she is asleep and quiet—too quiet. Some old people have it."

Presently the doctor took his leave. He was a young man engaged in getting together a good practice; and his own interest he had been forced to give up waiting for his patients to finish dying.

"I am glad you are here," he said to Stephen, who accompanied him to the door. "It would not do for your sister to be in charge of a hired nurse, whose services Joyce had been forced to seek.

After supper Leach seemed at last to find his tongue, and he talked in his quiet, almost gentle voice, such as some men possess. Not about himself or the past, but about Joyce and the future. In a deliberate, business-like way he proceeded to investigate the affairs of the dying woman and the prospects of her daughter; in a word, he asserted his authority as a brother, and Joyce was relieved and happy to obey him.

It is not in times of gayety that friendships are formed, but in sorrow or suspense. During that last evening this brother and sister suddenly became intimate, more so than months of ordinary intercourse could have made them. At ten o'clock Stephen quietly insisted that Joyce should go to bed, while he lay down, all dressed, on the sofa in the dining-room.

"I shall sleep perfectly; it is not the first time I have slept in my clothes," he said simply.

The next morning Mrs. Leach was fully conscious and appeared to be stronger; nevertheless she knew that the end was near. She called her two children to her bedside, and turning with blind eyes toward them, spoke in broken sentences:

"I am ready now—I am ready," she said. "Dear' I am going to your father —and . . . thank God I can tell him that I left you together. I always knew Stephen would come back. I found it so everywhere in the Bible—kiss me, dear!"

The man leaned over the bed and kissed her.

"Ah, she sighed. "how I wish I could see you—just once before I die; Joyce!" she called, suddenly turning to her daughter, who stood at the other side of the bed, "tell me what he is like. But I knew . . . I know—I feel it. Listen! He is tall and spare, like his father. His hair is black, like his father's. It was black before he went away. His eyes, I know, were dark—almost black. He is pale—like a Spaniard!"

Joyce looked across the bed with slow horror dawning in her face, looked into a pair of blue eyes beneath tawny hair, cut short, as a soldier's hair should be. She looked upon a man big, broad, fair—English, from crown to toe—and the quiet command of his lips and eyes made her say:

"Yes, mother, yes."

For some moments there was silence. Joyce stood pale and breathless, wondering what this might mean. Then the dying woman spoke again:

"Kiss me," she said, "I—am going. Stephen first; my first born! And now, Joyce . . . and now kiss each other —across the bed! I want to hear it . . . I want . . . to tell . . . your . . . father."

With a last effort she raised her hands, seeking their heads. At first Joyce hesitated, then she leaned forward, and the old woman's chilled fingers pressed their lips together. That was the end.

Half an hour afterward Joyce and this man stood facing each other in the little dining-room. He began his explanation at once.

"Stephen," he said, "was shot—out there—as a traitor. I could not tell her that! I did not mean to do this, but what else could I do?"

He paused, moved toward the door with that strange hesitation which she had noticed in his arrival. At the door he turned to justify himself.

"I still think," he said gravely, "that it was the best thing to do."

"Joyce made no answer. The tears stood in her eyes. There was something very pathetic in the distress of this strong man, facing, at it were, an emergency of which he felt the delicacy to be beyond his cleverness to handle.

"Last night," he went on, "I made all the necessary arrangements for your return—just as Stephen would have made them—as a brother might have done. I . . . He and I were brother officers in a very wild army. Your brother was not a good man. None of us were."

His hand was on the door.

"He asked he to come and tell you," he added. "I shall go back now."

They stood thus, he watching her face with his honest, soft blue eyes, she failing to meet his glance.

"Shall I come back again?" he asked suddenly.

She gave a little gasp, but made no answer.

"I will come back in six months," he announced quietly, and then closed the door behind him.—Anon., in the Cornhill Magazine.

Her First Impression.

"Oh, do look at that dear little lamb?" said Frances, on seeing a young lamb for the first time in her life.

"Isn't it pretty?" asked mamma.

"Yes; and it is so natural, too. It squeaks just like a top lamb, and has the same sort of wool on its back."

JUSTIFIABLE DECEIT

"Yes, mother, he will come. Of course he will come!" and the girl turned her drawn and anxious young face toward the cottage door, just as her blind mother could see the action.

It is probable that the old woman divined the longing glance from the change in the girl's tone, for she, too, half turned toward the door. It was a habit those two women had acquired. They constantly looked toward the door for the arrival of one who never came through the long summer days, through the quiet winter evenings; moreover, they rarely spoke of other things; this arrival was the topic of their lives. And now the old woman's life was drawing to a close, as some lives do, without its object. She herself felt it and her daughter knew it.

He had left them eighteen years before in a fit of passionate resentment against his father, whose only fault had been too great indulgence for the son of his old age. Nothing had been too good for dear Stephen—hardly anything that money could bought. Educated at a charity school himself, the simple old clergyman held the mistaken view that no man can be educated above his station.

Stephen Leach left England, and before he landed in America his father had departed on a longer journey. The never-do-well had the good grace to send back the little sums of money saved by his mother in her widowhood, and gradually his letters ceased. It was known that he was in Chili, and there was fever and cholera, and yet the good old lady's faith never wavered.

"He will come, Joyce. He will sure ly come."

And the girl would go to the window and draw aside the curtains, looking down the quiet country road toward the village.

"Yes, mother, he will come," was her usual answer; and one day she gave a little exclamation of surprise and almost of fear.

"Mother," she exclaimed, "there is some one coming along the road."

The old lady was already sitting up in bed, straining with her sightless orbs toward the window.

Thus they waited. The man stopped opposite the cottage, and the two women heard the latch of the gate. Then Joyce, turning, saw that her mother had fainted. But it was only moments [illegible] By the time she reached the bed her mother had recovered consciousness.

"Go," said the old lady, breathlessly, "go and let him in yourself."

Down stairs on the doorstep the girl found a tall man of thirty or there bhouts with a pale face that the English suns could account for. He looked down into her eager eyes with a strange, questioning wonder.

"Am I too late?" he asked, in a voice which almost seemed to indicate a hope that it might be so.

"No, no, no," she answered. "But mother cannot live much longer. You are just in time."

The young man made a hesitating little movement with his right hand and shuffled uneasily on the clean stone step. He was like an actor called suddenly upon the stage, having no knowledge of his part.

When he followed the girl across the threshold of their mother's bedroom the old lady was sitting up in bed holding out trembling hands toward the door.

Here Stephen Leach seemed to know better what to do. He held his mother in his arms while she sobbed and murmured out her joy. He had no words but his arms meant more than his lips could ever have told.

It would seem to the best part of happiness is sharing it with some one else.

"Joyce," continued the old lady, feverishly, "I am not afraid to die now for Stephen is here. Your brother will be to care of you, dear, when I am gone."

It was strange that Stephen had not spoken yet, and it was perhaps just as well, because there are occasions in life when men do wisely to keep silent.

"He is strong," the proud mother went on, "I can feel it. His hands are large and steady and quiet, and his arms are big and very hard."

The young man knelt upright and submitted gravely to this maternal inventory.

"Yes," she said, "I knew he would grow to be a big man. His little fingers were so strong—he hurt me sometimes. What a great mustache. I knew you would become a soldier. And the skin of your face is brown and a little rough. What is this? What is this, Stephen, dear? Is this a wound?"

"Yes," answered the prodigal, speaking for the first time. "This is a sword cut, I got that in the last war. I am a colonel in the Chilian army, or was, before I resigned."

Such was the home-coming of the prodigal. After all he arrived at the right moment in the afternoon, when the house was ready. It sometimes does happen so in real life, and not only in books. There is a great deal that might be altered in this world, but sometimes by a mere chance things come about rightly. And yet there was something wrong, something subtle, which the dying woman's duller senses failed to detect. Her son, her Stephen, was absent and had no need to say for himself. He apparently had the habit of taking things as they came. There was no enthusiasm, but rather a restraint, in his manner, more especially toward Joyce.

After the first excitement of the return was over it became glaringly apparent that Stephen had just arrived in time. His mother fell into a happy sleep before sunset, and when the active young doctor came a little later in the evening he shook his head.

"Yes," he said. "I see that she is asleep and quiet—too quiet. Some old people have it."

Presently the doctor took his leave. He was a young man engaged in getting together a good practice; and his own interest he had been forced to give up waiting for his patients to finish dying.

"I am glad you are here," he said to Stephen, who accompanied him to the door. "It would not do for your sister to be in charge of a hired nurse, whose services Joyce had been forced to seek.

After supper Leach seemed at last to find his tongue, and he talked in his quiet, almost gentle voice, such as some men possess. Not about himself or the past, but about Joyce and the future. In a deliberate, business-like way he proceeded to investigate the affairs of the dying woman and the prospects of her daughter; in a word, he asserted his authority as a brother, and Joyce was relieved and happy to obey him.

It is not in times of gayety that friendships are formed, but in sorrow or suspense. During that last evening this brother and sister suddenly became intimate, more so than months of ordinary intercourse could have made them. At ten o'clock Stephen quietly insisted that Joyce should go to bed, while he lay down, all dressed, on the sofa in the dining-room.

"I shall sleep perfectly; it is not the first time I have slept in my clothes," he said simply.

The next morning Mrs. Leach was fully conscious and appeared to be stronger; nevertheless she knew that the end was near. She called her two children to her bedside, and turning with blind eyes toward them, spoke in broken sentences:

"I am ready now—I am ready," she said. "Dear' I am going to your father —and . . . thank God I can tell him that I left you together. I always knew Stephen would come back. I found it so everywhere in the Bible—kiss me, dear!"

The man leaned over the bed and kissed her.

"Ah, she sighed. "how I wish I could see you—just once before I die; Joyce!" she called, suddenly turning to her daughter, who stood at the other side of the bed, "tell me what he is like. But I knew . . . I know—I feel it. Listen! He is tall and spare, like his father. His hair is black, like his father's. It was black before he went away. His eyes, I know, were dark—almost black. He is pale—like a Spaniard!"

Joyce looked across the bed with slow horror dawning in her face, looked into a pair of blue eyes beneath tawny hair, cut short, as a soldier's hair should be. She looked upon a man big, broad, fair—English, from crown to toe—and the quiet command of his lips and eyes made her say:

A CHANGE OF MIND.

Miss Dubarle was five-and-forty years of age on the nineteenth of March, 18—, well, no matter what year. And she was stout, and short, with no visible waist; and hands that were red and fat, instead of white and slender; and features that belonged to no Grecian type or Roman mold, but seemed to be setting up, sui generis, each on its own special account, with no reference whatever to the others.

But we have not mentioned the most important fact of all. Miss Dubarle had forty thousand dollars of her own.

And that was, without doubt, the reason that her relatives sent her pressing invitations to "come and visit them," and dispatched cases of wine and hampers of game and boxes of new books down to Dubarle Arms; the little girls worked hideous pincushions and tidies to decorate her rooms; and young men wrote acrostics for her birthday and everybody listened politely to her speeches, however prolix they might be. Every old maid is worth cultivating, and it wasn't at all likely now that Miss Dubarle would ever marry.

It was a bleak afternoon, the red and brown leaves whirling round and round in the blast, and the great wood fire upon the hearth sending, every now and then, spiteful little gushes of smoke into the room where Miss Dubarle and her second cousin and companion, Janet Heath, sat together, working rosset from a counterpane.

"Janet," said Miss Dubarle, politely, "you're a fool!"

Janet looked up with a flush of color on her pale, pretty cheek. She was not at all unaccustomed to these little complimentary remarks on the part of Miss Dubarle.

"Be a sensible girl," added the elder female. "Give him up, and I'll buy you a blue silk dress and a black lace shawl."

"But I love him, Miss Dubarle."

"Oh, psha-a-aw!" grimaced the spinster. "Love, indeed! I never was in love!"

"And," added Janet, growing more rosy than ever, as she stooped to pick up her ivory needle, "he says he would be miserable without me. Don't, please, be angry, Miss Dubarle, but indeed, indeed I must marry him."

Miss Dubarle jumped up so suddenly that the dozing blackbird in its cage uttered a shrill note of consternation.

"Very well," she said—"very well, Janet Heath. Pack your trunk as soon as you please. I'll send a carriage with your services at once. And pack mine first, if you please, Janet Heath."

"You are not going away, Miss Dubarle?" queried poor Janet, in consternation.

"I'm going to visit my relatives," said Miss Dubarle, with pursed-up lips. And then little Janet knew that her own fate as far as any worldly advantage to be derived from her kinship to the heiress, was sealed.

"Put in the black silk gown, Janet," said Miss Dubarle, in a tone as lugubrious as if she were giving orders for her own funeral. "Of all sins, I regard ingratitude as the basest—and the China crape scarf—and think that I have nursed a viper to turn and sting me at last! And don't forget my easy slippers—though I don't know either why my corns should be entitled to any such consideration than my poor bruised heart."

And then, as Janet Heath began to cry, Miss Dubarle marched out of the room.

"I never could endure the vapors," said Miss Dubarle, "I'll go to my niece Maria, or maybe I'll make Herbert Smythe a little bit of a visit; he's always saying how delighted he would be to entertain me in his bachelor quarters. They both love me, although I'm only half for them that I have for this little serpent's tooth of a Janet. I dare say she expects to be my heiress, but she'll find out her mistake, I guess."

And Miss Dubarle, who allowed no grass to grow under her feet, took the first train for New York, and slept that night in the fifth story of a marble-fronted hotel.

"I didn't think I should miss that child Janet so much," she said rather dolefully to herself the next morning, as she tried to comb out her tangled "back-hair," and nearly strangled herself trying to button up her own boots—"but I don't care! I won't give up to her love-sick whims, and I will go to see Maria Brooks and Herbert Smythe. Maria's little girl wrote me a beautiful letter last month, and all out of her own head, her mother said. Let me see—Eudocia her name was. Perhaps I will adopt Eudocia."

And Miss Dubarle ordered a carriage and drove to the mansion of Mr. Secor Brooks, on an aristocratic side street.

"They seem to live very nicely," thought the rich relation. "I didn't know Maria's income justified such style as this." [illegible]

The servant showed Miss Dubarle into a reception-room, furnished after the style of Louis Quinze. His mistress was out, but would return presently. He stayed.

"I'll wait," said Miss Dubarle.

A wizened little girl, with her hair braided in long Chinese plaits, and red, chill-looking elbows, was tinkling away at the piano. She looked round as the guest entered.

"You are Eudocia, I suppose," said Miss Dubarle, affably.

"Yes," said the child. "I'm Eudocia. And who are you?"

"I am Miss Dubarle," said the heiress, graciously. "You have heard your mamma tell about Miss Dubarle, haven't you?"

"Oh, yes!" said Eudocia, her small dusty eyes lighting up. "You're the old maid that mamma says is so out—out—"

Republicans Are Anxious.

The near approach of the date for the Republican State convention and the failure of Attorney-General Grey to give his opinion concerning Acting-Governor Voorhees' proposed resignation as a Senator from Union county are giving the friends of Voorhees a deal of anxiety, says a Trenton correspondent. The unique situation is perplexing in so many ways that grave fear is felt as to the outcome by virtue of his position as president of the Senate.

The knotty legal proposition for the astute Camden lawyer to solve is: Can State Senator Voorhees tender his resignation as the representative of Union county to himself, the acting-Governor, to take effect in January; and, having so resigned, can the acting-Governor then issue a proclamation for the election of a Senator in Union county in November, to fill the prospective vacancy? Attorney-General Grey is searching the books and growing grayer under the task allotted to him. Much depends upon that decision. Even if it is favorable, and the Republicans do elect a Senator in Union, it is hardly likely that he would be allowed to cast his vote in the United States Senator, because the enemy that would not take the election into the courts would exhibit a weakness which cannot be ascribed to the present democratic leaders in New Jersey. All eyes are on the Attorney-General.

A Fighting Ground.

Referring to the Congressional chances in this State, a Trenton correspondent says this of the Third district:

Monmouth, Middlesex and Somerset comprise the Third district, which is now represented by Benjamin F. Howell, Republican. All are, or used to be, Democratic counties, but, despite that fact, Mr. Howell carried the district twice in succession, the first time by a majority of 3,076, and the second time by 3,321. This last majority seemed phenomenal, indeed, but when the Democrats were completely demoralized all over the State over the financial issue and the district was bound to go by a big majority under that the district gave such a big Republican majority, when the State gave McKinley 87,822. At the election for members of the Assembly last fall the counties in the district rolled up a combined Democratic majority of about 3,000. It may be seen from that record that with a good candidate for Congress and the party unified the Democrats have a bright prospect of electing a Congressman.

Hot Shot For Freeholders.

The Cranford Chronicle, which has been the principal newspaper opponent of the county trolley scheme, and whose editor, J. Alfred Potter, can be very saucy at times, but always gracefully, has the following to say about the action of the Board of Freeholders in claiming Richmond street as a county road:

Only a few weeks ago, the Union County Board of Freeholders, by resolution, adopted Richmond street in Plainfield as a county road, in order to include it in a route over which a trolley franchise was to be sold to an Elizabeth corporation owned by John Kean.

The city of Plainfield, which had paved and otherwise improved this street, was not even consulted in the matter. On the contrary, the county authorities, through their attorney, had the nerve subsequently to warn the City Council not to grant a franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company, which had applied and offered to pay the city liberally for the privilege of extending its lines through Richmond street to Scotch Plains.

Such rough-shod riding over the taxpayers' rights is common enough in the Elizabeth end of the county. But in Plainfield, the iron heel of John Kean does not bear so heavily on the peoples' necks. We shall be surprised if the public-spirited City Council does not resist and defeat the grab.

The Personal Column.

The New Brunswick newspapers are indulging in a lively discussion, with a wealth of statistics, to show their superior claims in the publication of personal items. Each one claims the distinction of inaugurating the feature of recording the personal movements of the townspeople and visitors, and seems to take great glory in the claim. If the truth was known, however, they would have to credit The Daily Press with the original idea of publishing personals so fully. As a matter of fact, for several years the personal columns of The Daily Press has been one of its best and most popular features. The record of the movements of those who come and go from Plainfield has always been a matter for special enterprise on the part of the reporters of The Daily Press.

Legislative Experiment.

Attorney General Griggs has recently decided that vessels flying the Hawaiian flag do not acquire the American registry under annexation unless by virtue of a special act of congress. The principle at issue, he asserts, has been settled and so declared by the United States supreme court in the case of Florida and those regions of territory acquired from Mexico. In other words they were rather looked on in the light of property than as an integral portion of the United States. Until made so by formal legislative action, then, none of the laws and institutions of the United States would under this ruling be extended to annexed territory. Tariff laws, navigation laws, question of Chinese immigration and other debatable matters, over which the intelligence of the land is so greatly split in opinion, would not apply to Hawaii, Porto Rico or any other island which might become our own by the mere act of annexation.

It is a subject of regret that we could not have such a possession on which to try experiments before finally adopting laws in many instances for the United States. It would be like the testing room of a great factory, or the model loft of a shipyard, or, to use a more vivid and accurate simile, like the vivisection department of a medical college. It would be rather hard lines for the inhabitants of the annexed region thus kept in a condition of political nonage to become the victims of the legislative scalpel. Yet they might glory in being martyrs for the national good if they properly appreciated the supreme honor of adoption by Uncle Sam. The difficulty in making such an experiment useful would be that of finding a region where the general conditions of living are quite similar to those of this country. The inhabitants would probably object strenuously to being used for this purpose, philosophical as it is in theory. It must be admitted that on the whole the scheme is an impracticable one. It is a fascinating thought, however, to have the privilege of wreaking possibly bad laws on others to serve as an object lesson for ourselves.

Bismarck's Germanic Idea.

The Iron Chancellor wrote his own epitaph. He wished to have inscribed on his tomb the simple summary of his career, "A faithful German servant of Emperor William I." It was not as Prussian subject of a Prussian king that his giant energies had wrought such wonders in diplomacy, statecraft and war. His fervent passion of patriotism had long since swollen from the bounds of a petty or local ambition. It was the passion of race, of a region where the general conditions of living are quite similar to those of this country. The inhabitants would probably object strenuously to being used for this purpose, philosophical as it is in theory. It must be admitted that on the whole the scheme is an impracticable one. It is a fascinating thought, however, to have the privilege of wreaking possibly bad laws on others to serve as an object lesson for ourselves.

NEW GOLF COURSE OF HILLSIDE CLUB OPEN.

The Event an Auspicious One for the Members.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE LINKS AND CLUBHOUSE.

A Large Attendance of Society Folks, Who Were Received by a Committee of Women of the Club—Ten Served in the House—The Opening of the Links Creditable to Work of G. A. Chapman.

The members of the famous Hillside Tennis and Golf Club could not have selected a more perfect day for the formal opening of their handsome new club house and grounds than Monday. It was a trifle warm, but when the club house was reached everyone felt repaid for the effort made to get there for it was certainly one of the coolest places to be found in this vicinity.

All day long the grounds were used by a large majority of the club members and their friends and the course was found to be in good condition. Everyone that played was praiseworthy of C. A. W. Fox, the greenkeeper, who has succeeded in making the course one of delight. The location of the house and grounds is an ideal one in every respect and commands a most picturesque view from all sides. The house is erected directly on top of a large hill and was planned by A. L. C. Marsh, the architect. It is 67 feet long and 30 feet deep, with a veranda 12 feet wide and 41 feet long facing the southeast and one on the northwest side 12 feet wide and 67 feet long.

The entrance hall, which opens on the southeast veranda, gives access to the dining-room, lounging room, ladies' reception room and stairs to the men's locker room in the second story. To the left of the entrance hall is the ladies' reception room 10 x 11 feet, connecting with the ladies' locker room and lavatory. This locker room is provided with 31 lockers.

The lounging room, which is directly back of the entrance hall, is 30 feet long and 18 feet wide. It is provided with wide seats at both ends and a large rough stone fire place in the centre of the outside wall opposite the entrance hall.

Over the lounging room is located the men's locker room, which is 19 feet wide and 28 feet long and contains 74 lockers. Opening from the men's locker room is the lavatory, containing a large shower bath. The interior of the building is finished throughout in wood stained various colors in the different rooms. The exterior is a modification of the Dutch colonial style.

The course, which was laid out by Thomas Bendalow, the golf expert, comprises 18 holes, aggregating over 5,100 yards. The grounds consist of over 100 acres of rolling country, with numerous natural hazards. The links afford a wide variety of play and are considered to be equal to any in the country. The names of the holes, the par and distances are:

1.	Alpha	300
2.	Sunset	400
3.	Highlands	340
4.	Pacific	270
5.	Orchard	270
6.	Pitfall	130
7.	Longallow	440
8.	Stony	130
9.	Middle	220

Total par strokes, 77.
Total length, 5,130 yards.

The attraction at the opening yesterday morning was the Bogie play for club members. There were many players on the course for the first time and some excellent scores were made considering that the grounds are new to every one. The following scores were made:

	Handicap.
R. M. Shepard	14	3up
Henry Lowe	18	1 down.
A. A. Tilney	12	2 "
A. J. Wilson	16	3 "
W. L. C. Glenny	18	3 "
Carl Walz	4	4 "
W. L. Glenny	4	4 "
Walter Murray	15	5 "
C. D. VanDoozerkirk	13	5 "
H. D. West	12	6 "

C. Rangstad	5	13 "
E. P. Barrows	12	7 "

At noon a delightful luncheon was served to the members by Mrs. Fox, who had charge of the restaurant.

The feature of the day was the reception and tea given in the afternoon. It was an auspicious event in every particular and was attended by a large number of Plainfield's society folks, including many official dignitaries in local life.

Under the direction of the lady members of the club the pretty club was most artistically decorated with flowers and ferns. The picture was certainly one to be admired by all. At the reception Mrs. A. H. Atterbury received and she was assisted by Mrs. H. C. Tracy, Mrs. H. M. Stockton, Miss Wood and Mrs. G. P. Mellick.

Ice cream and dainty cakes were served and a social chat was enjoyed by those present. During this part of the event many golf lovers remained on the course and endeavored to learn as well as possible all that they could about the new grounds. During the afternoon Morris Dumont made a score of 85 and Frank Talmage made the course in 90.

The opening, it can truly be said, was a success from every standpoint and the members of the club are highly pleased in consequence. To G. A. Chapman is due a great deal of credit for the club's new quarters. As president of the club he has worked faithfully and hard to make golf a success in Plainfield and he is now enjoying the result of his labors. The club's officers are:

President, G. A. Chapman; vice-president, A. A. Atterbury; treasurer, Josiah Browne; secretary, John Doull Miller; secretary for golf, William T. Kaufman; board of trustees, A. H. Atterbury, Josiah Browne, James P. Murray, G. A. Chapman, W. T. Kaufman, John Doull Miller, Howard W. Beebe, George P. Mellick, Sylvanus L. Schoonmaker; house committee, George P. Mellick (chairman), Mrs. Howard C. Tracy, Miss Wood, Howard Huntington, James P. Murray; golf committee, William T. Kaufman (chairman), Frank C. Ard, Howard W. Beebe, Sylvanus L. Schoonmaker and Frederick W. Walz.

The club has 209 active members, 3 honorary, 4 non-resident members and 155 associate members. From now on there will be play every week on the course and golf may now be called a grand success in this city.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS OPEN.

FEWER BOYS AT THE HIGH SCHOOL THIS YEAR THAN LAST.

The Heat and Summer Outings Kept Many Away, But Still There was a Large Attendance—New Teacher at High School

It was a warm welcome that was given to the young people of Plainfield Tuesday on their return to school. While there are many who did not put in an appearance today but will come to school on their return from a summer outing and when the backbone of the present hot wave is broken, there was a large attendance throughout all the public schools of the city. It was the opening day in all the schools and, of course, very little was done except to get the pupils arranged in the proper classes and registered.

At the High School there was a large attendance. There are, however, fewer boys there than there was last year. Principal Travell and all his staff of teachers, except Miss S. Lena Bass, were present. Miss Mary Grace Caldwell has gone to Wellesley College and her place has been taken by Miss Peckham, a graduate of Vassar College, who has been teaching at Atlanta, Ga., the two years since her graduation. Miss Bass will return the latter part of the week from her European trip. She spent the summer abroad.

A YOUTHFUL LIFE SUDDENLY ENDED.

Miss Edith Titsworth Suffered a Fatal Stroke of Apoplexy.

WAS SIXTEEN YEARS OLD.

WAS ENJOYING SOCIABILITY OF FRIENDS WHEN STRICKEN.

Singular Remarks Made by Her Within the Last Few Days Which Now Seem to be Like a Premonition of the Fatal Event—She was About to Enter Pennington Seminary—Of a Happy Nature

In the death of Miss Edith Titsworth, aged sixteen years, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Titsworth, of Madison avenue, a young life has gone out that was full of promise and hope for the future. The end was so sudden that the community can scarcely realize it to be a fact. Miss Titsworth was enjoying the best of health, and while in the company of loving friends she was suddenly taken ill. It was at the home of Miss Mabel Smith, of Westervelt avenue, that she was spending last Saturday evening and having a good time, although she remarked to a friend during the evening that she was going to die soon. The words were lightly thought of. It was about ten o'clock in the evening that Miss Titsworth complained of not feeling well, and remarked that she thought that she would go home. She started to go up the porch steps when she fell on her face. Her friends hastened to her side and carried her into the house. She had no use of her hands for a few minutes, but soon displayed superhuman strength, and it was with difficulty that she was held by her friends. She continued to call for her mother and also said that she could see her sister who died a few years ago.

As quickly as possible Miss Titsworth was removed to her home and Dr. Tomlinson was called. He at once pronounced Miss Titsworth's illness that of apoplexy and was doubtful regarding her recovery. Everything possible was done to save the young life, but all efforts proved unavailing, and Miss Titsworth passed away at 3:15 Sunday morning.

In connection with the death of Miss Titsworth there are many singular co-incidents that would appear as though she had a premonition of her death. Only a few days ago she was talking to an aunt, when she remarked, "Would you feel bad if I should die?" The aunt replied, "Why Edith, it would break my heart." The remark she made to Miss Mabel Smith last Saturday evening now has a special significance, and other actions and words are recalled which appear strongly significant.

Miss Titsworth was just preparing to enter Pennington Seminary, and was to have left Plainfield next week for that place. Her hopes of success were high and she was very proud of the fact that she was so soon to enter upon her studies.

Last Saturday she attended service at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, as usual, with her mother. In the afternoon she gathered some choice flowers to take to the hospital. Her mother rather remonstrated with her and said that she ought not to go to the hospital as the weather was so warm. Miss Titsworth asked for permission to do the act of kindness and said, "If you only knew how happy it makes those at the hospital when they receive flowers you would not object." She finally took the flowers and was gratified to be instrumental in bringing them.

In the evening she attended the social gathering at the home of Miss Smith, as stated, and was in the best of spirits. The sudden death has cast a deep gloom over her many friends, and especially those who were in the party Saturday evening.

Miss Titsworth was born in this city on Madison avenue and attended the public schools and "Tot Chestnuts," on Seventh street. Her pleasant manner and genial disposition won for her a host of friends who enjoyed her company always. She was a faithful attendant at the Seventh-Day Baptist church and was active in the church in many ways. She was a member of the hospital flower committee and faithfully attended to her duties.

The parents and brothers of the deceased have the entire sympathy of the whole community in their sad hour of bereavement. The funeral services were held from the home on Madison avenue Tuesday at 3 o'clock and interment was in Hillside in the family plot.

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY.

TWO HORSES THAT WEREN'T USED TO WORKING AS A TEAM.

New Brunswick Rig Crashed Into and Wrecked—Fractious Steeds Ran Pell-Mell Into Entrance to Press Boiler Room

An exciting runaway occurred Monterday afternoon on Park avenue, in which Captain Hand's team and a horse and buggy driven by a couple from New Brunswick were mixed up. The only damage done to the rigs was sustained by the buggy, one of the rear wheels being torn off. The advertising stand which has been affixed to the side wall of Armstrongs' pharmacy, was broken to pieces.

The team that caused all the trouble was a pair of odd horses which the Captain does not drive double very often. Monday Mr. Hand was running stages to the baseball grounds and on account of the heat decided to change one of the teams about 4:30 o'clock, and to hitch a black and grey horse together.

Captain Hand went in the house after a strap, leaving Anthony Parsons, a colored man, standing at their heads. Two other colored men stood near. The team was not fully harnessed, when suddenly they bounded forward and broke into a mad run towards Front street.

Parsons held on to their heads bravely, until he became in imminent danger of being trampled upon. In front of Justice Nash's office the man and woman were driving slowly along. The man heard the clatter caused by the runaway team coming up behind him, but evidently was not used to it, for instead of whipping up and turning up the little lane that leads to the city jail, he kept directly in the path until the team came up from behind him, caught one of the buggy wheels, and wrecked it, throwing the occupants out on the hard roadbed.

The team turned at North avenue and made straight for the entrance that leads to The Daily Press boiler room in the basement.

Across the cellarway was stretched a chain to which the only thing that prevented one of the horses from plunging down to the bottom and breaking his legs. As it was one of the heavy iron rods to which one end of the chain was fastened was bent.

Alex. Filmore, who at one time worked for Captain Hand, caught the team just before they reached the sidewalk. But Filmore could not stop them soon enough to prevent this one horse plunging towards the cellarway, or keep him away from the advertising stand, which is owned by J. H. Fawkes, of 74 Henry street, Brooklyn.

The couple in the buggy were helped into Armstrong's pharmacy, but were not injured in the least. The horse was put into a livery stable and what was left of the buggy hauled on to the vacant lot next to Justice Nash's office. The rig belongs to McDead, an undertaker of New Brunswick.

KNOCKED OUT BY OLD SOL.

A Sick Man Ventured Out and was Prostrated by the Heat.

Patrick Kane, married, of 335 Cottage place, was overcome by the heat Saturday afternoon on East Second street, and had to be helped home by Captain Grant and Patrolman McCue in a carriage.

Kane is a laborer and works for George Tobin, the plumber. He was ill all day Saturday, but ventured out towards night. He got as far as the engine-house on East Second street when he felt so ill that he had to stop and rest for a few moments. After getting his breath Kane started off again, but only got a few hundred feet away before he dropped down at the foot of a tree.

Someone telephoned for Captain Grant, and he came with a carriage and took the man home. Kane was partly unconscious. Dr. Murray was sent for, and said that the man had been overcome by the heat. The physician said that he would get along all right and left him. Today Kane is rapidly getting well.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. TRIBUTE OF THE LIVING.

FUNERAL SERVICES OVER THE REMAINS OF MISS TITSWORTH.

The Lifeless Body Gowned in a Favorite Dress and Looked Very Natural—Many Floral Gifts—A Large Attendance.

Sad, indeed, was the home of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Titsworth, of Madison avenue, Tuesday afternoon, when the funeral services of their only daughter were held. The sadness experienced by the bereaved ones was shared by everyone present. The service was largely attended, especially by a large number of young people present, all personal friends of the deceased.

The lifeless young body rested in the front room in an open ashes of-rose casket, while surrounding it was the choicest of roses. Miss Titsworth was gowned in a favorite dress of pink and she looked as natural as when she was enjoying life and health. The display of floral tributes were beautiful and very touching. One large pillow of roses near the head of the casket bore the inscription "Our loved companion." This was from Miss Titsworth's young friends who were with her last Saturday evening at the home of Miss Smith on Westervelt avenue. Another pillow of roses, bearing the inscription "Our darling," was from the family. There were numerous other large and small floral tributes that testified strongly to the esteem and admiration for the departed.

At the beginning of the services a quartette, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. David E. Titsworth, and Mrs. William Hubbard and Elmer E. Runyon, sang very sweetly "Now the Day is Over," and during the services "We Shall Meet," and "Sometime We Shall Understand," was also sung with effect.

The services were in charge of Rev. Dr. Main, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Chas. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church. Dr. Main read the Scripture lesson and made a few remarks. He dwelt upon the necessity of living to Christ in the hour of sadness and in trusting Him when the burdens and sorrows come. He paid a high tribute to the departed and spoke of her many excellent qualities. He also spoke words of comfort and consolation to the bereaved ones, and told them to look to Christ for help and strength. This speaker's remarks were very helpful and full of tenderness and sympathy.

The next speaker was Rev. Mr. Goodrich. His remarks were based on the text "Weep Not, Your Daughter is Not Dead," the words spoken by Christ when upon earth. He said that he rejoiced to know that Christ's saying was true today, that the young friend just departed had entered into a fullness of Christ's joy and was resting from all pain and sorrow. His words regarding the life of Miss Titsworth reached the hearts of all present and was a valued tribute to the one who had been taken away early in life. Mr. Goodrich closed his remarks by offering a prayer full of consolation to the bereaved ones.

Those present were then given an opportunity of taking a last look upon the form of one whom they had learned to love and admire. The interment was in the family plot in Hillside cemetery. Those who acted as bearers were Thomas U. Smith, Frederick Hillman, James Taylor, Lester Walton, Roy Phillips, Harold Davis.

Gen. Miles Sticks to Charges Against Alger Made in Kansas City Star.

New York, September 7—Gen. Nelson A. Miles has returned from his conquest of Porto Rico.

During his absence in Porto Rico the Commanding General of the Army was reported to have made serious charges against the Secretary of War, Gen. Alger, and Adjt.-Gen. Corbin.

The General today declared that the interview with him published in the Kansas City Star was in the main correct. He refused to retract the most serious allegations made against the War Department. A few minor points of the reported interview, he said, were incorrectly stated, but on the whole he fathered the statements.

TO DRINK WATER WITHOUT ANY CUP.

New Hygeia Fountains Placed in the Public Schools.

SCHOOLS OPENED TUESDAY.

PUPILS WILL FIND THE FOUNTAINS SOMETHING NEW.

Interior of the High School Has Been Decorated Under Direction of Clerk Clark—New Offices for Principal Travell—Other Improvements Noted—Blackboards Removed From Sup'ts. Room.

The school children of Plainfield had one thing at least to look forward to when the Public Schools of this city opened Tuesday morning for the fall term. The new hygeia drinking fountains have been established in the Stillman, Franklin and Bryant school buildings and will furnish no end of amusement to the children for the first few days.

The fountains are altogether new in the manner in which they furnish the water for the use of the thirsty pupils. No cups are used. Instead, from the centre of a metal bowl in the fountain a metal tube projects vertically from which issues a stream of water. The stream is half an inch to an inch in height. The pupil is supposed to lean over the fountain and place his or her lips over the stream of water. The method is supposed to do away with any contagion that could otherwise be conveyed by the drinking cups of the old style.

While the fountains are planned after the latest sanitary ideas, they will be a great curiosity for the youth of the city. After the small boy has looked them over, his first idea will be to place his finger over the opening and squirt the water at his companions, but in this he will fail. The manufacturers looked out for that, and have so arranged a series of little openings that when an attempt is made to partially shut off the water and make the stream smaller and consequently swifter, the water escapes through these holes and the scheme of the small boy is foiled.

It is going to look rather startling at first to see all the young misses of the High School bending over the marble basin of the fountain with their mouths close to the stream, and it is going to be an altogether exciting occupation for the first few days, until they get used to it.

In the High School five of these new fountains have been placed, two on the first floor in the main hall, two on the second floor and one on the third floor in the hall in the rear of Assembly Hall. The fixtures are of marble and nickle and are of artistic design. Five other fountains are similarly arranged in the Franklin building. Five more are placed in the Bryant, three on the first floor and two on the second. One of those is made very low for the use of the small children.

The High School has been greatly improved by some well selected interior decorating. The halls and class rooms, heretofore a plain white, have been tinted a light green, with a darker green dado. The ceilings have been similarly tinted.

The blackboards have been removed from Superintendent Maxson's reception room, and both reception room and private office have been papered in light green with a darker dado. The ceilings have been also papered. A new and more convenient desk has been placed in the superintendent's office.

The large cabinet for the school collection of stuffed birds and the mineral collection has been removed from the secluded corner on the third floor at the head of the front flight of stairs, where it used to be, to the rear of the second floor hall.

The little room on the third floor at the head of the front flight of stairs, formerly used as a girls' cloak room, has been changed to a private office for Principal Travell and decorated like the office of Superintendent Maxson. A cloak room has been built across the hall in the space formerly occupied by the large cabinet.

A very useful convenience is a speaking tube from the platform in Assembly Hall to Superintendent Maxson's reception room.

The interior decorating was done by Woolston & Buckle, D. W. Littell had the contract for putting in the new fountains. The boys' yard has been graded and completely macadamized. A portion of the girls' yard has also been improved. Smalley Brothers had the contract for that work.

The Franklin building has also been improved by interior decoration, done by E. E. Marshall & Co. The yards at the Washington School will also be improved in a few days by Smalley Brothers.

All is now being put in order for the opening of school Tuesday. Some of the teachers have already returned and the others will be here today or Monday ready for their winter's work.

RICHARD IS A FIGHTER.

Lieutenant Commander Wainwright is a Rival to "Fighting Bob."

Contemporary naval annals are now threatened with a "Fighting Dick" in addition to a "Fighting Bob," and surely Captain Evans would not grudge this meed of glory to his junior in the line.

From that awful moment on the night of February 15, when Wainwright stood beside his captain on the sinking quarterdeck of the Maine and gave the order to lower away the boats, he had looked forward to some such opportunity as that which finds his name with the Gloucester as indissoluble as Hobson's is linked with the Merrimac.

Not that Wainwright is a man to brood on vengeance. He has a heart too big to cherish malice. Only his dearest desire was that he might have the good fortune to be an instrument of retaliation.

No man knew better than he the ghastly horrors that followed that night in Havana harbor. No man was more certain than he that the Maine disaster was not an accident, and none was better qualified to reach a just conclusion. During all the long weeks following the disaster it was Wainwright who toiled beside the wreck, and above it, from dawn till dark, directing the divers' work, recovering the bodies of the dead, familiar with every development of evidence, the confidant of every grim secret brought to light by the submarine research.

April 5, long after Captain Sigsbee and all his other subordinates had been relieved of their painful task, Wainwright, the sole surviving officer of the Maine left in Havana harbor, pulled down the weather stained flag that had floated day and night from the shrouds of the wrecked battleship. When Wainwright left Havana the United States government relinquished its sovereignty over the Maine.

"DICK" WAINWRIGHT.

Mr. Wainwright was in Havana harbor continuously for seven weeks after the Maine was blown up. During all that time he was never known to set his foot in Havana city. "I don't care about shore leave," he used to say, when his friends asked why he never appeared in the Inglaterra hotel with his fellow officers. If you invited him to a little dinner or a quiet game of poker you got the same answer, or else he was too busy to spare the time or too tired after his day's work on the water. Then, if you watched him, you might see him go below into the cabin of the Fern, where he had his quarters, and, lighting his pipe, he would spend half the night pouring over sectional drawings, perhaps with Ensign Powelson, or studying out some new bit of submarine divers' evidence that seemed to clinch the truth about the Maine.

This taciturn lieutenant commander, moreover, so it was whispered by his friends on the Fern, had registered a mental vow never again to enter Havana city until the head of a battalion of bluejackets.

Verily, if ever a man remembered the Maine, "Dick" Wainwright did. Big-hearted, as are most brave men, the death of 266 of his gallant subordinates left a wound that would not heal. He was as popular with them as with his fellow officers. Though a strict disciplinarian, the Maine's executive officer during the two months he had been attached to the ship in that capacity had won his way to their hearts.

Lieutenant Commander Wainwright has coined one phrase that will probably live in the traditions of the navy, "Fighting cannot be made a safe business."

The battle of the Yalu river had called the attention of naval experts all over the world to the terrible execution wrought by splinters from small boats and portions of the superstructure of ships of war when struck by modern projectiles. Mr. Wainwright, among other officers, was detailed to write a treatise discussing the following question: "If about to go into action what disposition would you make of your small boats with a view of securing the greatest safety of your men?"

Wainwright's reply was an able one. The pith of it, however, was substantially contained in the following:

"If about to go into action in comparatively shallow water, I should, if time permitted, strip the vessel clear of her small boats and moor them safely at a distance until after the fight. If pressed for time, I should simply put them adrift. If about to go into action in deep water, I should set my boats adrift anyhow, leaving the ship and her officers and crew to take the chances of war. Fighting cannot be made a safe business."

Mr. Wainwright probably inherits his fighting instinct. He is the son of old Commodore Wainwright and comes of good fighting stock. His appointment to the Naval Academy was from the District of Columbia.—Chicago Times-Herald.

A BICYCLE FUED.

Trouble Between Metuchen Citizens Because There is Racing on the Sidewalks.

A fued has broken out between Fred Clarkson and William Orton, over the ordinance against riding bicycles on the sidewalk. Both men are prominent members of the community. Clarkson being a New York broker and Orton superintendent of one of the Sunday schools here.

An ordinance has been passed by the township, prohibiting the riding of bicycles on the sidewalk. The ordinance has not been heeded, it is said, and every day there are many violations of it. Among the most persistent violators, it is said, is Mr. Orton. The town people could see no reason why Mr. Orton should be allowed to violate the ordinance so frequently, and several of them got together and drew up and make a complaint. Frederick Clarkson was the man to put his name to the paper however, and this is what makes bad blood between the two.

Orton claims that the ordinance is illegal and has said that he will fight it to the end, and means to certiorari the case, if defeated. He has retained Attorney George Silzer, of New Brunswick, to represent him. Clarkson's lawyer is Counselor McClure, of Plainfield.

FUNERAL OF THADDEUS HORAN.

Services Held in St. Mary's Church and Largely Attended.

The funeral services over the remains of Thaddeus Horan were held Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock from St. Mary's church. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Rev. Father C. J. Kelley, of Hoboken, a nephew of the deceased, officiated at the services, and the regular choir sang. The pall-bearers were Hugh McDonald, Edward Gavin, James Whalen, Frank Quinn, Michael Callahan and John Horan.

Rev. Father Smyth also spoke, and said a great deal about the deceased's quiet life, and told his hearers that Mr. Horan had been a just man, had lived a good life, and had gone to his reward.

The floral contributions were numerous and consisted of crosses, wreaths, pillows, etc., from the various relatives and friends.

The Assessor's Report.

A meeting of the North Plainfield Township Committee was held Thursday evening, when the assessor's books were gone over and accepted with a few slight changes. The assessor is Robt. M. Clark. His report showed the total valuation of real property to be $252,800, and the total valuation of the personal property to be $36,100. The exemptions were as follows: Schools, $1,600; churches, $7,000; soldiers, $2,200; firemen, $800; debts, $3,800. The total amount of taxable property is $273,800. The number of acres in the township are 5,009, the number of voters 132 and the number of dogs 77.

With the Nabobs Now.

Charles Hand, the bustling real estate man and town boomer, has taken up his residence among the nabobs of aristocratic Netherwood. Mr. Hand has moved his family from their old home on East Fifth street to the large fifteen-room house at the corner of South avenue and Belvidere avenue. The house has all the latest improvements.

Contract Filed.

The following contract has been filed in the County Clerk's office during the past week:

Abner M. Wilcox and George J. Tobin, plumbing work, building on north corner Watchung and Woodland avenues, Plainfield. $366.

HOME OF SEVENTH-DAYS

METROPOLITAN PAPER TELLS OF THE SATURDAY OBSERVERS.

Plainfield and Vicinity is the Stronghold of the People Who Believe the Seventh Day is the Proper Sabbath

Of all the religious denominations in New Jersey the most distinct from all other Christian believers are probably the Seventh-Day Baptists, whose home and stronghold are in Plainfield and vicinity, says The New York Herald. Once Plainfield had few others in its population but those observers of Saturday instead of Sunday as the day of worship. One of the peculiar facts about this people is that although they keep Saturday for themselves and Sunday on account of the growth of the Sunday sentiment which came with the increase of population of other denominations, they are all well-to-do, many of them rich, forming some of the staunchest of Plainfield's population, and seem to make as much money in five days a week as others do in six.

To the stranger driving through Plainfield and the suburbs and to the country between there and New Brunswick Sunday would be surprised to see business going on, particularly among the farmers, for in that direction nearly all of the whole population is made up of Saturday observers.

The sect had its beginning in Northern Jersey, at the little town of New Market, five miles from Plainfield, in a very peculiar way. Edmund Dunham, a descendant of one who came over in the Mayflower and progenitor of the Dunham family, whose members are the most numerous of any in Union or Middlesex county, was a Baptist preacher and regular Sunday observer in a little church at New Market in about the year 1700. In his neighborhood was a farmer named Bonham, for whom Bonhamtown was afterward named. One Sunday the preacher, on his way to church, saw Bonham working in the field, and stopped, in his surprise, to inquire the reason, and, if necessary, to do a little missionary work. The answer Bonham made was, "Prove to me that Sunday is the day ordained by the Lord to keep for worship and I will keep it."

This gave the dominie something to study, and he pondered over it. The more he hunted his Bible the more he pondered, and the result was his advocacy to his congregation of the seventh day doctrine as it is observed throughout all that section of the county today. The little church where the doctrine was taught still stands, and is one of the landmarks of the county. The Bible in which the Rev. Edmund Dunham failed to find sufficient warrant to continue worship on Sunday is owned today by the preacher's great-great-grandson, Randolph Dunham, of Plainfield. The little band of believers in the new doctrine worked like leaven in the loaf until the Seventh-Day Baptists were in the majority all through this vicinity, and are spread over Rhode Island, south Jersey, parts of New York, West Virginia, Wisconsin and elsewhere.

Wanted to Collect a Grocery Bill.

Counselor Wm. K. McClure secured an attachment early last week for Russel O. Howell against Mrs. Maggie F. Johnson, who kept a boarding house at Oak Tree. The attachment is returnable before Justice Koss, at Metuchen, September 6th. Mr. Howell claims that Mrs. Johnson owes him a large bill for groceries which she has not paid. Hearing that she was about to pack up and leave this State, Mr. Howell attached her household goods, and she will have to wait until the claim is adjusted before she can remove them.

Might Have Been a Fire.

Officer Cash, whose beat is on Park avenue, discovered a lamp in John VanEps jewelry store Friday after closing time which was smoking and sputtering dangerously. The officer notified Mr. Van Eps, who accompanied him to the store and adjusted the wick.

Newark Man Missing.

Edwin Steinkoof, a prosperous Newark plumber, has been missing since July 20th last, and although his sons have spent weeks searching for him and two detectives have been employed, no trace of the missing man has been learned.

TOO VALUABLE TO EXECUTE.

It Is Decreed, However, That He Shall Die When His Work Is Finished.

The city of San Luis Potosi is building a hall that will be the eighth wonder of the world. It has cost millions and will cost millions more. Seven years ago a dozen skilled stonemasons from Pennsylvania were imported to do the ornamental carving of its front. One Fourth of July a member of the party got drunk and killed a Mexican in a barroom brawl. His companions, in the language of General Cook, "broke a flock of quail and lit running." He was tried and condemned to be shot. Then arose the certainty that with him in the grave there was no one to do the fancy carving on the City Hall. It was decided to keep him at work and shoot him when he had finished. Every day, in summer's shine and winter's snow, this workman hangs like a fly against the great white wall and pecks away at gargoyles and griffin's heads. A file of soldiers stands in the street looking up at him. His life ends with his job, *and they say that he is the most de*liberate workman ever in the Mexican Republic or any other republic. At the present rate of progress, according to the data obtainable calculations, the front of the City Hall will be sufficiently scrolled and carved about the middle of 1950.—Chicago Times-Herald.

PATENT LIFE SAVING BELT.

Can Be Worn Under the Clothing Without Attracting Notice.

Among recent English patents is a belt for saving life, which consists of a band of canvas, with cork layers at intervals. Attached to the belt are four floats or bladders of rubber, with a protective covering. The belt is strapped around the body under the arms, the bladders being inflated with air by the wearer by blowing through a tube which runs around the belt, and is fitted with a self-closing valve. The filling takes less than half a minute. Provided with one of these belts, a man can walk into deep water with his clothes and shoes on, and be supported with ease in a perpendicular position without making any effort. He can, in fact, smoke a cigar while in the water. This life preserver does not prevent its wearer from swimming, but if he is exhausted it enables him to float in an erect position, it being impossible for his head to fall under the water. A passenger at sea who is nervous can wear a belt under his clothes without it being noticed by his fellow-travelers.

APPLE CORES FOR CHAMPAGNE.

The Paring and Cores Dried and Shipped to France.

The practice of the economies in the fruit-raising sections of the west has developed a new article of export. Until recently the orchard owners and the evaporator managers did not think of utilizing the cores and the parings of apples. They occasionally sold them to the jelly-makers or fed them to the hogs, but more usually allowed them to accumulate as refuse in great heaps, which slowly fermented and decayed. This year, in many places, the parings and the cores are being saved. They are spread out in the sun and dried, after which they are packed in large sacks and held for buyers, who gather them up and send away in car lots. The destination of the dried parings and cores in these large quantities is the north of France, the refuse of the orchards of the Missouri valley and the Ozark country is now largely employed in the manufacture of champagne by the thrifty winemakers of the hillside slopes of France.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

SCARED THREE MONTHS LATER.

A Curious Incident of Where the Fright was Postponed.

Cortland Cramp, son of the famous shipbuilder, was at sea some years ago. During a frightful storm he was swept overboard. His body was never found. He was perfectly calm, and recalled that people who were washed overboard by one wave were sometimes washed back by another. Presently his hand touched a rope. He held it firmly and held on until the captain of the vessel, seeing the rope dragging in the water, pulled it in, and pulled Mr. Cramp on board with it. Mr. Cramp was none the worse for his ducking, but one day, quite three months afterward, when he was on land, a realization of the danger he had been in came over him suddenly, and his knees fairly knocked together with fear. He was in a perfect panic from fright, and to this day, whenever he goes into the surf, the recollection of his dreadful experience always returns to him, and he never ventures into deep water.—Washington Post.

His Rise.

When the young man called to ask for the old man's daughter, the latter naturally thought it was necessary to start up a conversation, being the usual method of procedure. Consequently, he looked solemn, coughed once or twice as a sort of preliminary, communed with himself a minute or two, coughed again, and asked:

"Can you support my daughter in the style to which she has been accustomed?"

"If I couldn't" returned the young man promptly, "I ought to be ashamed of myself."

The old man's bluff was called.—Chicago Post.

In some parts of Devonshire the people live to be very old. An old man of ninety, living quite a distance from the nearest town, requiring some family groceries, sent his son, a man of seventy-odd years of age. When the son failed to show up with the provisions in time, his grandfather, a centenarian of 101, said peevishly: "That's what comes from sending a kid."—Tit-Bits.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Hereafter when prisoners are brought before Recorder Long the officer cannot have small offenders railroaded to Somerville unless he has a witness. That rake-off of $3 61 for each prisoner committed is, it seems, too great a temptation for some officers to resist. Recorder Long is to be commended for this decision.—Borough correspondent in Bound Brook State Centre.

It is reported that when the Third Regiment at Pompton Lake was being polled as to the desire of being mustered out or not, some of the men refused to vote because "they came out to obey orders" from the U. S. Government. And they were right. For of all the comic opera scenes of this war, few are funnier than this latest Jersey idea of asking men who have enlisted for two years whether or not they would kindly stay or go home to mamma and papa. That may be politics, but it is not soldiering.—New Brunswick Home News.

Warden Underhill, of the county jail in Newark, is in a peculiar fix. Isaac B. Jones was sent to the jail in October for embezzlement and Underhill set him to work painting. The scaffold broke, Jones was hurt by the fall and sued Underhill personally for $10,000 damages. He obtained an award of $5,000, and an appeal was taken, but the decision was affirmed by Judge Child a few days ago. Underhill was defended by County Counsel Munn and the county paid Munn $100 extra for the service, but will not stand for the $5,000, nor will Underhill's bondsmen have to pay it under any construction of the law. He was not sued as Warden Underhill but as a private citizen. He says he has not got $5,000 and does not know where to get it, and his friends say that, perhaps, he will have to take advantage of the insolvency act.

A rusty-looking individual in shabby clothes made a tour of the stores in Dunellen yesterday. He had a list of set phrases which he used, one to suit every shopkeeper he came in contact with. When he entered the jeweler's he claimed to be a watchmaker and to have formerly worked in London. On the strength of that statement he asked for a "couple of cents to get a loaf of bread with." To the grocer the tale was changed a little. There he had been a grocer in a small city, but had lost his all in the financial crisis. To the cigar seller he was a cigarmaker out of work. At each place the man of many employments ended with a request for a few pennies, and was such a slick talker that in almost every case he got it. The last place he visited was the taproom of a hotel. What occupation he told the man behind the bar he had followed was not learned, but a wag suggested that it must have been that of a bartender.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

Again we hear the jingle of the "Bunch of Keys." This dainty and tuneful farce has yearly toured the country and never failed to delight the people and compensate the management. Ada Bothner is the star, Teddy Keys (the infant terrible of the hotel). The management announces a lot of new and pretty girls, and up-to-date songs and novelties. The "Bunch of Keys" never gets rusty, and we hope never will. It is the best farce comedy ever written and Hoyt is the best satirist and humorist we have. The company will be at Music Hall next week.

BOROUGH SOLONS AND COLLECTOR'S ACCOUNTS

No Money Has Been Returned to Mr. Spencer as Reported.

MAYOR'S PATIENCE TRIED.

EX-COLLECTOR WILL HAVE TO RETURN MORE THAN HE HAS.

Councilman MacLaughlin Made the Statement in Behalf of the Taxation Committee and Was Seconded by Mayor Wilson Whose Remarks Were Quiet Teary—The Street Appropriation.

Although the regular meeting of the Borough Council was short Friday night, it was made the occasion, by Councilman MacLaughlin, of a statement in regard to ex-Tax Collector Spencer that the members hope will stifle a persistent rumor which has gone abroad concerning monies paid to Mr. Spencer by the Council, and show the true attitude of the Council towards the ex-collector.

Mr. MacLaughlin, in his report for the taxation committee, said that the report which had no doubt reached the ears of all present that the Council had returned certain sums of money to Mr. Spencer was absolutely without foundation. These remarks were seconded by Mayor Wilson, who said that the committee on the other hand had found frequent sums charged against Mr. Spencer, which sums would be demanded from him at an early date.

"We want every citizen and taxpayer in the borough," continued the Mayor, "to understand the situation of the Council in regard to Mr. Spencer. Sometimes charity is sometimes carried so far that it ceases to be a virtue."

These remarks of both Mayor and Councilman had evidently been prepared beforehand, and were but the expressions of their true feeling upon the matter.

The meeting came to order at 8 o'clock, all being present except Councilman Carey. Mayor Wilson presided. On the desk reposed a bouquet of nasturtions, mixed with geranium leaves and a yellow rose, the gift of some unknown friend.

The clerk's report stated that $2,564.85 had been paid to county and State. A debit of $617.11 left a balance of $2,147.74. The following sums have been received for the past month: From William Emmett, $6; three dogs redeemed, $3; one license and tag, $1.10; subscription on Rockview avenue, $500; Eli Long, fines, $34; total, $544 10. The tax collector reported that the total receipts amounted to $3,645.18; the disbursements, $2,732.59; leaving a balance of $912 59.

The Water Company reported that they had placed five new hydrants in the borough, and Peter Hansen presented a bill for services rendered as marshal during the term of Chief VanHorn. This claim was referred to the committee.

Mr. Woolston, chairman of the committee on streets, stated that $226.36 had been expended on the streets during August, $4 of which had been allowed Dr. H. K. Carroll and Hiram Woodruff, of Westervelt avenue, for filling, on account of the work done on that street.

The report of Mr. Woolston's brought about quite a discussion between him and Councilman Valiant. Mr. Valiant thought that the street committee was expending too much money on the streets, and before the fiscal year was passed would be behind their appropriation. Mr. Woolston admitted that $4,000 appropriated at a previous meeting was about used up, but said that he understood at the time the appropriation was made that there were some back taxes on which the committee could fall back upon in case they fell short.

The discussion was interrupted by the Mayor, who said that Greenbrook road, which was one of the streets that had been macadamized, needed the attention given it very much; that it had been in bad condition for the past twenty-seven years, and that he considered the job of macadamizing a good one, and reasonable, too.

Owing to the absence of the borough engineer the matter of accepting Somerset place as a borough street was laid over. Mr. MacLaughlin reported that the assessor's books had been approved, and that they were going over the collector's books in which they had found many matters that needed attention.

Mr. Valiant moved that the borough be empowered to negotiate a loan of $2,000, which was carried. The meeting then adjourned.

Thomas Morgan Sells Out.

The marriage of Miss Maude Mosher, of East Fifth street, to George Homan, son of Councilman Homan, will take place at the home of the bride, September 14th, at 7 o'clock.

BURKE RODE TO WIN IN LISTER'S RACE.

While Scratch Men Quarreled as to Pace.

NINETEEN RIDERS IN IT.

BURKE WON FIRST PRIZE, ALSO TIME PRIZE.

He Rode Well From Start to the Finish—Passed the Others One After Another—Day Was Hot and the Dust Was Awful—Arrangements for the Race Were Good and Finish Close.

Out in the dust and under the broiling sun, the people went Thursday afternoon and sweltered, just to see a score of dust-covered, panting riders bend over their wheels and race along for fifteen weary miles. It took a lot of energy to go out into the heat even to witness the race, but it took lots more to participate in the race. Nevertheless there must have been nearly eight hundred people distributed along Park avenue to witness the event.

It was the last of the series of road races that Harry K. Lister has conducted. While the race Thursday afternoon did not have quite as many close finishes in it as some of the preceding ones, yet it was decidedly exciting and was conducted in a very satisfactory manner, everything passing off without a single break or slip. Although many were kept from attending the race for the reason it was held in the afternoon instead of the early evening, the hour was far more satisfactory to all concerned and the darkness did not handicap both riders and officials as at the last race.

The race was over a course of fifteen miles, starting on Park avenue, just south of Randolph road. It went to Pumptown, back to Campbell's roadhouse at Avon Park and then to Pumptown again, finishing on Park avenue at the starting point. The road was in good condition most of the way but awfully dusty. The riders, who looked warm and tired when they started, returned in a condition in which their own mothers would have hardly recognized them. Dust covered them from head to foot and formed a mask with the prespiration in their faces.

The honors of the day went to Joseph Burke, a plucky young Plainfield rider. He crossed the tape over twenty seconds ahead of any other competitor and left the scratch bunch three minutes behind. That settled their chances for the coveted time prize for Burke only started with two minutes handicap and had nearly rolled up another minute to the good when he completed the fifteen miles. He was in good condition too when he finished in comparison with many of the other riders who looked very near the verge of collapse.

There was a little delay at the start to give some of the absent ones a chance to appear and allow the heat to let up a little. As far as the heat was concerned, the delay did not do any good for the sun continued to pour down and bake or rather boil spectators, officials and racers.

There were twenty-one entries in all, Jorden Hansen, of Perth Amboy, the Irvington-Milburn boy, making a post entry. He rode from scratch. There were nineteen riders to face the starter when the race began. The men were sent away in good shape and lost no time in setting up a lively pace.

The limit men straggled out after the first three miles while the scratch riders jumped out at a fast clip. They overtook the thirty-second men and picked them up. Then that bunch overtook Harry Cuming and A. Dufresne, with a minute handicap, near Oak Tree. This bunch of seven men stuck together to the finish, pacing alternately.

Meanwhile Burke lost no time in getting after the leaders, Embleton, of Westfield, and Robinson, of Perth Amboy, were with him for a while. By the time they reached Pumptown, they had passed Charley Vandeveer, the old colored war horse who did some great riding years ago. At that time Mike Owens was in the lead.

By the time the racers reached Campbell's, Owens had dropped back to third while Burke was not far behind him. Embleton snapped the crank to his pedal and had to drop out. Robinson could not hold Burke's pace and fell back to seventh.

On the way back to Pumptown, Burke crawled by Angerbauer and Warren, of Elizabeth. Morris Sorensen, who had been with him most of the way so far, finally fell back a little way. Burke was ahead when he made the last turn at Pumptown and came down the stretch to the finish in great shape. He never lost his lead but kept on riding, slowly leaving the others behind. Had he not stuck to his pace on the ride home, he would have lost his chances for the time prize.

Sorensen had a lively brush with Warren, but the Elizabeth man was pretty well gone and he had to slow up. Sorensen went after Burke, but the lead of the latter was too great.

Burke crossed the line in good form amid the shouts of the enthusiastic spectators who forgot for the time being that it was warm, but ran about and shouted to their hearts' content.

Sorensen didn't look badly when he came in second. Then Owens and Angerbauer, who had been riding together a good share of the journey, came in for a close finish. Owens had a little spurt saved up and crossed the tape several lengths ahead. Half a minute later Warren came, nearly exhausted. He could barely sit on the saddle.

Charlie Dodd and George Apgar had a little race all by themselves. They alternated the pace for the fifteen miles and then Dodd won out by a wheel on the finish. Robinson looked decidedly tired when he finished next alone.

Two minutes and forty seconds after Burke came over the tape the victor, the scratch bunch arrived there. The seven men who comprised it had a lively little sprint to wind up with, and the audience howled with delight to see it. They had kept together pretty well all through the race and finished about a wheel's distance separating them. Fifer, the Elizabeth star, headed the bunch over the tape, his pretty purple and white racing suit looking sadly the worse for the dust. Allgair, from Somerville, came in second, with W. J. Mooney, of Rahway, third, hard on his heels. Hansen and Conquest, the Perth Amboy combination, followed. Dufresne beat Cuming in the sprint.

The first time prize was fairly won by Burke, who completed the distance in 38:56. Fifer took second time prize. His time was 39:42. He was certain that he had won first time.

The order of finish, the handicaps and the actual riding time of the riders were as follows:

Name and Address.	Handicap.	Time.
Jos. Burke, Plainfield	2 min.	38:56
Morris Sorensen, Plainfield	3 "	40:17 2-5
Chas. Dodd, Plainfield	1 "	42:06 2-5
Henry Angerbauer, Plainfield	4 "	42:07 2-5
Ed Warren, Elizabeth	4 "	42:43
Chas. Dodd, Elizabeth	1½ "	40:27 2-5
George Apgar, Plainfield	1½ "	40:28
W. C. Allgair, Perth Amboy	3 "	41:38
M. F. Fifer, Elizabeth	80	39:42
W. J. Mooney, Somerville	80 sec.	40:13 1-5
W. J. Mooney, Rahway	80	39:42 2-5
Jorden Hansen, Irvington	0	40:13 3-5
J. P. Conquest, P. Amboy	30 sec.	40:13 4-5
A. Dufresne, Elizabeth	1 min.	40:14
Harry Cuming, Plainfield	1 min.	40:34

Harry K. Lister acted as starter and clerk of the course. The judges were Thomas A. Cuming, Sydney R. Titsworth, Charles B. Morse, Chauncey F. Stout, Raymond A. McGee and Fred J. Pope. The timers were J. W. Van-Sickle, H. C. VanEmburgh and Carroll L. Runyon.

REPUBLICAN OUTING.

Arrangements have been completed for the second annual outing and dinner of the Union county Republicans to take place Tuesday, September 12th, at Neptune Heights, Avon-by-the-Sea, the beautiful place visited last year.

The guests will assemble at Republican Headquarters, Dix building, Elizabeth, at 9:15 o'clock, and special train over the Central Railroad will take them to the seaside. Drake's Band will furnish the music. The tickets, including dinner, cane, badge, etc., are sold at $2.50, and can be obtained of Charles N. Codding, chairman, Westfield, or any of the following committee:

Rahway—Charles H. Reed, H. B. Rollinson, S. Rusling Ryno.

Westfield—C. H. Denman, Chester M. Smith, Luther M. Whittaker.

Fanwood—Geo. Kyte, John Robison.

Springfield—J. Martin Roll.

Roselle—James W. Hope, Henry Krouse.

Union—Dennis Long.

Summit—Francis S. Phraner, J. W. Cliff.

New Providence—John F. Wahl.

Morristown Horse Show.

The second annual open-air horse show at Morristown is fixed for October 6th, 7th and 8th. It will be held at the Driving Park under the auspices of the Morristown Field Club. The indications are that the show will be the event of the season in Morris county and excel the success of last year's equine exhibition there. The arrangements will be on a grand scale and include several innovations. Many improvements are to be made to the show grounds. There will be an elliptical show ring with arena boxes and promenade on one side and a row of packing spaces for four-in-hands and other traps on the other side or infield.

Came Back Looking Healthier.

Sydney R. Titsworth, of West Fifth street, and Nathan E. Lewis, of West Eighth street, have returned from Watch Hill after spending a month, and were accompanied by Howard Lewis, of Alfred University. At Watch Hill the three were guests at the summer cottage of Mrs. George H. Babcock. They had a handsome sloop yacht on which they spent most of their time. They took a number of their friends out for a sail on the Atlantic and made a great record for themselves at fishing. They are all three very darkly tanned. They have many wild sea tales to relate to their friends in Plainfield about their experiences while sailing on that part of the Atlantic near Watch Hill.

ABRAM ALBERTSON, OF THE 71ST REGIMENT, NOW IN BED.

He Went Through the Hard Cuban Campaign and Came Home in Apparently Good Health—Parents at His Side.

Having gone safely through the arduous campaign at Santiago, and escaping illness and death in the trenches at San Juan Hill, Abram Albertson, a non-commissioned officer in Captain Rafferty's famous Company F, Seventy first Regiment, N. Y. V., who is visiting his uncle, C. C. Cokefair, of Crescent avenue, has at last succumbed and lies at his relative's home waiting away with fever.

Albertson came north from Cuba apparently in perfect health, marched up Broadway with his regiment and took part in the immense ovation accorded the heroes; then came here to visit his relatives, with whom a great portion of his life has been spent, before proceeding to his home in Bangor, Pa. Instead of going home, his parents have been sent for, and are now watching by the bedside of their son, who is coming about in delirium.

Wednesday last Albertson felt ill. He didn't suppose it was anything serious, but went to Dr. Hedges, a few doors below where he is staying, to get some medicine. The doctor, as soon as he looked at his patient, saw that he was much worse than he supposed, and insisted upon helping him home and putting him to bed, where he is treating him for typhoid fever, although the symptoms are not fully developed yet.

Albertson's mother and father were sent for at once, and came here Thursday on an early train.

Mr. Albertson was seen by a reporter Friday morning, and expressed surprise that his son should have passed through all the dangers of the campaign only to be attacked when everyone thought he was safe. Mr Albertson is very glad that his son is safe in Plainfield, and not cooped up in one of the crowded hospitals at Camp Wikoff. As his son marched up Broadway a few days ago, Mr. Albertson, Senior, never saw him looking better, and while in front of Santiago the young officer nursed four comrades who were stricken with the fever.

Young Albertson is not allowed to see any one, but he has many friends here who are anxious to do all they can for him.

APPEAL FOR WORTHY OBJECT.

Managers of Fresh Air Camp Have Children to Do Good to.

The Press has been asked to print this appeal to the people of this city in behalf of the Fresh Air Camp: Will not the charitably-disposed people of our town help us in the support of the Fresh Air Camp? Some have responded to our appeals, and have donated liberally. But this summer has given us more sick children to care for than ever before, often many more cases being reported to us by the physicians than we can accommodate. For the sum of $3 six or seven little ones can be given a whole day in the pure, cold mountain air under the nurses' watchful care, and in many cases it has brought renewed health and strength to the little ones whose lives were despaired of.

We have no funds with which to continue the work, but the need is so great that we feel we must persevere and trust to the generosity and charity of the people of Plainfield to help us in this matter. Any contributions to the work may be sent to the treasurer, Mrs. W. A. Coddington, 409 East Second street.

All Ate Watermelon.

Daniel Manning, of Clinton avenue, gave a melon party Thursday, which was attended by about 40 people, young and old, from South Plainfield, New Market and this city. Mr. Manning's immense patch of water and musk melons was placed at the disposal of his guests, and the melons disappeared very fast.

Mr. Manning's melons have a reputation for sweetness which was conclusively proven last night. They had been placed on ice, and the way they disappeared showed that the guests enjoyed them. The latter part of the evening was spent in dancing on the plazza to music furnished by John Bouroughs, and it was not until morning that the party disbanded.

Good Work Done.

The regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. was held last Thursday at the building, ten directors being present, Vice-president Lenox in the chair. The meeting opened with Scripture reading and prayer. Several reports were received. The attendance at men's meetings has been larger than any previous August since the building was opened. Five men were directed to where they secured work, and six have been directed to boarding or lodging houses.

Wanted to be a Hero.

The story of a man who gave his name as William Johnson, and who told a story of being driven to Cranford in a coach and robbed Thursday, is not believed by the police. They think that the man invented the story.

KEAN GIVES A BOND TO BUILD THE TROLLEY

A Definite Step Taken Thursday in the Great Project.

SECURING THE CONSENTS

FREEHOLDERS WILL TRY TO PLACATE CRANFORD OBJECTIONISTS.

County Road Committee Instructed to Draw Up a Set of Regulations Governing the Equipment and Operation of the Trolley Road—Trouble With Plainfield Councilmen Not Referred to.

Every day seems to surely bring the proposed county boulevard and trolley line from Elizabeth to Plainfield nearer to a reality. A definite step nearer was taken Thursday afternoon at the meeting of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders, held in Elizabeth, when the Elizabeth City Horse Railway Company presented its bond for the faithful performance of its part of the contract in making the trolley line and operating it. Then, too, the Freeholders began active measures to secure possession of the necessary property to allow the widening of the county road through Elizabeth and the township of Union.

It was a regular meeting of the Board of Freeholders Thursday afternoon and there was an unusual amount of interest attached to the session because of the expected action on matters connected with the boulevard and the trolley line. In consequence there was a number of interested citizens gathered in the meeting room about the courthouse, for both friends and foes of the plan were anxious to learn what steps would be taken.

It was generally known that the agents of John Kean's company, which purchased the franchise, have been at work ever since the franchise was granted securing consents of the property-owners to the plan to build the trolley line. A report of the progress of this work was expected by the interested ones and they were not disappointed.

The representatives of the Elizabeth City Horse Railway Company were on hand and presented the bond of the company, properly approved by Judge VanSyckel, according to the provisions of the county trolley law.

Accompanying the bond was a communication from the company. They stated that they had secured almost all the necessary consents in the city of Elizabeth and the township of Union, which goes as far along the route of the proposed line as Cranford. The Freeholders were asked to begin at once the widening of Westfield avenue from Elizabeth to Cranford according to the plan so that the Kean company could begin laying their tracks. It was stated informally that the company would have all the consents inside of a week and would then be ready to start work. No attempt has yet been made to go through Cranford, but it is confidentially asserted that the company will not have the serious difficulty which has been predicted by some.

After listening to the communication of the corporation, the Freeholders passed a resolution instructing the county road committee to employ some one to deal with the property-owners along the line between Elizabeth and Cranford and see what were the best terms for which the needed property could be acquired. While nothing was said about who the appointee will be, it seems probable that an Elizabeth man will be named.

The Freeholders also instructed the county road committee to draw up an agreement and set of regulations governing the equipment and operation of the trolley road by the traction company. The committee will prepare a draft of the regulations which will be reported back to the Freeholders at the next meeting which occurs September 15th.

Then there were some routine matters attended to by the Board but that ended the business of importance. The trouble between the Board and the Plainfield Common Council was not even referred to in any fashion.

Nominating Committee Chosen.

The monthly business meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist Christian Endeavor Society was held Thursday at the home of Miss Cornelia Rockefellow, of Park avenue. There was a large attendance, and a very profitable evening was spent. Refreshments were served by the young hostess before the members departed. A nominating committee, composed of D. M. Runyon, Miss Laura E. Runyon and Arthur Heath, was appointed and these three will meet and select officers and committees to be voted for at the business meeting to be held the first Thursday in October. Arrangements were also made for the tenth anniversary of the society, which is to be celebrated on November 23d.

Woman Signs the Pledge.

At the meeting of the Reform Club last week there were four signers to the pledge, one of them being a woman.

THATCHER NOT THERE.

MINSTREL MAN DIDN'T PRESIDE OVER THE CLAMBAKE HE ARRANGED.

The Bake Itself Was All Right, But Those Who Went to "The Elms" Were Disappointed in Not Seeing the Host.

George Thatcher's clambake without the presence of that famous minstrel was strikingly like an attempt to give Shakespeare's "Hamlet" with "Hamlet" left out. The clambake was held Thursday. As far as the bake itself was concerned, there was nothing that could be found fault with but most of the guests went there to see Thatcher and with the expectation that he would have something particularly pleasing for their entertainment. In that they were greviously disappointed. There was no music, no speeches and they had to be content with the savory dishes and each others company.

"The Elms," Thatcher's roadhouse on South avenue and Terrill road, was the scene of the bake. The night was a perfect one except for the warmth which rather prejudiced the guests against anything hot to eat. Elaborate preparations had been made for the bake and a great stock of good things laid in.

Thatcher has a date in Washington for two weeks, beginning Monday night, to appear in one of the theatres there. He expected to be present at the bake and was preparing for a big time. He left last Monday and went to Washington, where he is now.

The bake was an excellent one, and the guests who did come found a sumptuous meal awaiting them. They were loud in their praise of it, but the absence of the host disappointed everyone. There was no music except the sound of the knives and forks and clinking of the glasses. The guests numbered about a hundred.

After spending most of the evening sitting around the lawn, most of the guests departed. The order at "The Elms" was very good.

SCRATCHED BY A MAUSER.

A Member of the Famous Seventy-First Visiting This City.

Harry McGee, a private in Co. L., Seventy-first Regiment, New York Volunteers, is visiting at the home of Mrs. Bock, 207 Somerset street. McGee took part in the battle of San Juan Hill and received a slight wound from a Mauser bullet. It was a mere scratch, and no harm has resulted from it.

He and about fifteen other soldiers were sent north to Camp Wikoff on the steamer Grand Duchess. After reaching camp McGee had a slight attack of fever from which he has fully recovered. He says that the physicians refused to tell him the nature of his complaint, except that it was a fever. He is resting for awhile and expects to spend his sixty days furlough in quiet.

Before enlisting McGee was a clerk in a shoe store in New York.

TOO WARM TO DECIDE.

Judge DeMeza Reserves a Decision in a Case for a Week.

It was rather difficult to make the two stories hang together, especially on such a hot day as Friday and the Judge decided that he wanted to think it over. Jacob Sachar, who had been arrested on the charge of reckless driving, told his little tale. He had been walking his horse, he said, on the right of the road when George Grollmisch drove his carriage along the left side of Richmond street and ran into him. Now Grollmisch and his array of witnesses claimed that Sacher led his horse on a gallop and ran into Grollmisch who they said was on the right of the road. Nearly a dozen witnesses were sworn.

The Judge reserved his decision in the case for a week.

A Bicycle Party.

An informal bicycle party was given last Thursday by Mrs. J. C. Peck, of Myrtle avenue, in honor of her guest, Miss Foxcroft, of Cambridge, Mass. Among those who were present were the Misses Mary Thompson, Persis Snodgrass, Gertrude Snodgrass, Elsie Horne, Elsie Martin and Alice Barlow; and Everett J. Peck. Arthur Peck, W. K. Dwight, Raymond A. McGee, Charles Dupee and Rhey T. Snodgrass. After a spin out Park avenue to Metuchen they returned to the home of Mr. Peck, where light refreshments were served.

New By-Laws Proposed.

At a meeting of the Saengar Turn Verein Society held last week, the joint-committee from the Turn Verein and the Shooting Club reported upon the consolidation of the two branches. A system of by-laws was introduced and accepted by the Turn Verein, and if they are adopted by the other branch the two societies will be united.

Seeks to Recover Money Loaned.

Attorney J. P. D. Kirch has brought suit in Justice Mattison's court for William H. Ruckman against Annie C. Nelson, a stepdaughter. Ruckman indorsed a note for his relative, and seeks to recover the amount of the note.

MUSIC FOR THE MASSES.

SECOND OPEN-AIR BAND CONCERT WAS VERY POPULAR.

Fully Fifteen Hundred Gathered Around the City Hotel to Hear the Playing of the Queen City Band, Which was Good.

One thing is evident. The open-air band concerts have found favor with the people of Plainfield. There must have been over 1,500 people who gathered August 31st in the neighborhood of the City Hotel, at the corner of Park avenue and East Second street, to listen to the second concert given by the Queen City Band from the balcony of the hotel. And the night itself was simply grand, although a trifle warmer than might have been wished.

The concert was set for 8 o'clock, but half an hour before that time the procession in that direction began to move. Most of the people came on foot and wandered up and down along the neighboring streets listening to the music and incidentally chatting with their friends. Some came on wheels and ensconced themselves along the curb.

Patrolmen Totten and Cash were on duty at the scene of the concert and it took their united efforts to keep even a little passageway open for such pedestrians as wished to be on the move. The sidewalks were lined three or four deep for half a block in every direction, while near the corners the crowd overflowed the sidewalks and extended out into the roadway.

There were some of the listeners who had driven in from the outskirts and taken up a position of vantage where they might see the crowd as well as listen to the selections by the band.

The band occupied the balcony as on the occasion of the first concert. The balcony was hung with a number of extra electric lights to enable the musicians to see their music. The programme, as published in The Press, was followed out. The popular selections found the most favor, of course, and some of the enthusiastic ones hummed the familiar airs as the band played them.

The rendition of the programme was good. Practice has done much for the band and they made an excellent showing, well pleasing the crowd with their various selections. Sometimes the audience applauded, but the members of the Queen City Band were afterwards complimented very generally on the excellence of their music. The crowd was well pleased and that was all that was necessary.

Lost Two Fingers.

Alvah Carey, son of T. J. Carey, of the borough, met with an accident in a box factory in New York, Thursday which has deprived him of two fingers of his left hand. Carey is employed as stock clerk in the factory, and in a fit of absent mindedness placed his hand too near the saw, with the above result. He was removed to a hospital where his hand was dressed.

Repairs in the Gym.

The gymnasium at the Y. M. C. A. is closed this month undergoing repairs. The formal opening will occur about October 1st, when the gym will have been overhauled and painted, the swimming tank painted and all the apparatus cleaned and put in first-class shape.

Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded from North Plainfield in the Somerset county clerk's office: Edwin J. Howe et ux., to Joseph P. Taylor, $3,500; W. H. H. Wyckoff, sheriff, to John C. Smith, $5.

Help for the Hair is what a great many men and women are looking for; help against approaching baldness; help against whitening locks; help to restore the lost gloss to the hair; help against fading tresses; help for the scalp attacked by dandruff. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR offers just such help. It restores gray or faded hair to its original color, gives it length, thickness and gloss, and removes dandruff.

"My hair was rough and broken and began to fall out. The use of one bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR both checked the falling out and restored my hair smooth, glossy and in splendid condition. It is the finest of dressings."—MRS. F. L. SMITH, Silver Creek, Miss.

"Some years ago my hair began to fall out and I became quite bald. By advice I tried and very soon my hair ceased to fall out and a new and vigorous growth made its appearance. My hair is now abundant and glossy."—THOS. DUNN, Rockville, Wis.

POLITICIANS WILL MEET AT THE SHORE.

Clambake of Union County Republicans at Neptune Heights.

PLAINFIELDERS WILL GO.

WILL PROVE AN OPPORTUNE TIME FOR CAMPAIGN TALK.

Many a Boom for Office Will be Launched by Aspiring Politicians—A Large Delegation Will Attend From This City—Date of the Clambake is September 13th—A Big Time Expected.

Down by the shores of the broad Atlantic there is to be a great gathering of the clans. Every Republican of prominence in Union county who can so arrange his business as to allow him to be absent for a day, is going down to the seashore on this occasion. The annual clambake of the Union county Republicans is the attraction, Neptune Heights, near Avon-by-the-Sea, is the place.

The Jersey politician likes other things besides the political plums and his share in the distribution of the party spoils. He is particularly fond of a good time, especially when some savory preparation is included in the entertainment. The clambake, with its varied delights and good things, appeals very strongly to the politician from Jersey, and such affairs have been favorite gathering places for the brains and sinew of the different political combinations. Every year the Republicans of this county gather by the sea, digest clams and discuss the political situation.

Coming as it does at the close of the summer, and at the very start of the campaign preceding the State election, the clambake has a greater significance than is apparent at first view. It is the first time that the workers in the G. O. P. from all over Union county meet and have a chance to discuss the coming campaign. Many a successful boom has been launched into public notice at this outing at the opening of the campaign. This year the general uncertainty of the political situation in the State has made some of her worthy sons rather anxious to confer with their associates to see just where they stand and what is going to be done.

Of course, Plainfield will be right worthily represented at the clambake, which, by the way, is to be held September 13th. She will send a large delegation down, for Plainfield is out for her share of the spoils and she wants to have her various little booms receive the spring on this county at the first opportune moment.

It is less than a month off to the State convention and the primaries are soon to be called. They will precede the convention by about a week. A meeting of the city executive committee of the G. O. P. is slated for this evening when the date for the primaries will be set and other political matters talked over.

DOWN WITH YELLOW FEVER.

After Faithful Administering to Others, Daniel C. Main is Stricken Himself.

After weeks of good and faithful labor for and among the sick soldiers at Santiago, and after having had the malarial fever, Daniel C. Main, of Shafter's ambulance train, now has the yellow fever. He will have good care outside the fever hospital, and is very hopeful of recovery; for all cases that have come under his observation have, with few exceptions, been very light.

Personal Friend of the Dutch Minister

The Dutch of New York and vicinity were in evidence at the Everitt House, New York, Wednesday evening, when Baron de Weckelin, Dutch Minister to the United States, gave a big reception in honor of the birthday and ascent to the throne of the young Queen of Holland. Among the guests was Councilman John VanHerwerden, of South avenue, who is a personal friend of the leading representative of Holland in this country.

Factories Consolidate.

The machinery of the Parker, Wishart & Gall Company has arrived at the factory of the Aluminum Press and Plate Company and will soon be established. The factory of the former company in Connecticut has been abandoned and the business done there will be consolidated under an arrangement with the Aluminum Press and Plate Company.

Petit Jurors.

Sheriff Wyckoff drew the petit jurors for the September term of court on August 30. This will be the last jury that Sheriff Wyckoff will draw. The following are from North Plainfield: George N. Stewart, Jacob R. Doty, John W. Coddington, Edward A. Embry, David D. Smalley.

The Tax Rate.

The tax rate in Plainfield this year is $2.42 on the $100, divided as follows: County, .52; State schools, .28; fire, .20; library, .04; city and city lights, .60; poor, .05; free school and bond tax, .62; principal on sewer bonds, .05; interest on sewer obligation, .06.

THEATRICAL.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Plainfielders Can Witness.

Hoyt's "A Bunch of Keys" will hold the stage at Music Hall Thursday night. "A Bunch of Keys" is one of the best musical skits ever presented to the public. It has an amusing story, is full of wit and music and Manager Bothner each season selects the cleverest comedians and prettiest bunch of girls that the Rialto can furnish. It is just the kind of show to drive away dull care.

* * * * *

The musical farce comedy, "A High Born Lady," by Herbert Hall Winslow, will be presented by Clifford and Huth with a strong supporting company at Stillman Music Hall, Saturday night, September 10th. The humor of this piece, which was written especially for the stars, is healthy, catching and continuous. The situations show an unusual amount of constructive genius in the playwright and are ludicrous in the extreme. The company are admirably adapted to their different assignments and the able leadership of Clifford & Huth make the performance go with a vim and dash that is irresistable.

EXEMPT FIREMEN'S GOOD TIME.

Attended the Firemen's Parade at Bayonne Monday.

Twenty-eight of Plainfield's exempt firemen went to Bayonne Monday, and took part in the monster parade. They were in charge of Chief Doane. At the banquet, which was presided over by past Chief Christie, of Bayonne, speeches were made by Chief Doane, V. W. Nash and Alex. Titsworth. A comical recitation was given by Jack Carney.

The Plainfield people were looked after by William Kerbey and Alexander Gee, members of the committee of arrangements, and who formerly lived here.

James Searing was overcome by the heat just after the march, and had to be doctored with ice and cold water. He recovered very fast, however, and was able to come home with the company.

No. 2 hose cart, drawn by the grey team, was in line, and so were the members of No. 2 Company.

Third Assistant Chief Jennings was presented with a handsome plant that is native in Cuba. The donor was Mr. Riley, who is counted one of the good fellows of Bayonne The plant will grace the chief's office in the fire department headquarters. Anyone desiring to see it will be welcome to the office.

Russell E. Johnson Married.

The marriage of Miss Mabel Young, of Newark, to Russell E. Johnson, son of A. W. Johnson, of Duer street, is announced. The ceremony was performed in New York Saturday, August 13th. The young couple are residing at the home of the bride's parents. The groom is employed in the bonded warehouse of his uncle, Charles Johnson, Front street, New York. He was formerly a compositor on the News in this city.

Grandson of W. L. Smalley Married.

Miss Helen G. Bell and William F. Cadmus, both of New York city, were married by Rev. M. Forbs, of the First Presbyterian church on Twenty-ninth street, that city, Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The groom is a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Smalley, of Cedar place, and formerly lived with them. The couple spent Sunday here with the groom's grandparents.

Died After a Long Illness.

Mrs. Elizabeth Pangborn, wife of the late Elias Pangborn, aged 60 years, 5 months and 4 days, died Tuesday at her home, 415 West Third street, from a disease of long standing. The funeral services will be held from the residence this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Stole Tools From a Carpenter.

Three lads 8 years old, living on East Third street, were arrested by Chief Grant Saturday charged with stealing $16 worth of tools belonging to a city carpenter, who was working at the corner of Berckman and Sixth streets. The tools were recovered and the boys were allowed to go.

A baby daughter has arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Smith, Jr., of Watchung avenue.

RIVERDALES LOST TO DUSKY GIANTS.

Cuban Giants Played and Talked Well.

VISITORS WON BY 8 TO 3.

RIVERDALES DEFEATED WOODBRIDGE IN THE MORNING.

Saturday Afternoon They Were Beaten By Orange A. C.—A Large Crowd Out for the Labor Day Afternoon Game — Hayes Injured — Riverdales Couldn't Bat—The Score in Detail.

One victor and two defeats were the share of the Riverdale Field Club for over the holiday. Saturday afternoon they went to Orange Oval where the Orange A. C. defeated them by a score of 13 to 4. Monday morning they carried gloom to the hearts of the Woodbridge rooters by defeating the crack Woodbridge Browns on their own grounds by a score of 11 to 4. In the afternoon, the Riverdales came to Plainfield and met the genuine Cuban Giants at the Cresent Oval, the visitors winning by a score of 8 to 3.

The game of Labor Day morning was a decided surprise to the Brown brothers of the little town of Woodbridge. Of course, their friends explained their defeat by saying that they never saw the Browns put up such a poor game. They made a hard fight, however, but the Riverdales were too much for them. Fred Smith distinguised himself in particular by making a clean hit every time he came to bat.

The score by innings was as follows:

Riverdales	3	2	2	0	4	0	1	0	0—11
Woodbridge	0	1	0	2	0	0	0	1	0— 4

Batteries, Norton and F. Smith; B. Brown and A. Brown.

By far the largest crowd that ever assembled at the Crescent Oval to witness a baseball game, was present there at the game Monday afternoon. The fame of the Cuban Giants had preceded them and the people turned out remarkably well considering how distressingly warm it was. The Giants came up to expectations. They played well together, battled like veterans with skill and force, and talked and cut up enough shines to keep the crowd in a roar of laughter most of the time. They were expected to entertain the crowd with something out of the usual run and that was accomplished. The coaching of the dusky players was worth going miles to hear. They yelled, they howled and sounded like a section of pandemonium cut loose. Then they capered about, and performed all sorts of strange antics both on the diamond and off.

George Miller, the big short stop, was a whole circus in himself. He was really funny and his mock politeness to the umpire and to Harry Westervelt when the latter was pitching was ludicrous in the extreme. Jackson, the centre fielder and captain, was the only one of the great original Giants but the entire team had followed in the steps of its predecessors with success.

There was something the matter with the Riverdales. They lacked the snap and vigor of a week ago. They had a hard team to fight and a hot day in which to do it. They made a game attempt to win but it was not to be. Romig was not in uniform and Norton, the great Minneapolis infielder from the Western League, took his place at third. Romig acted very satisfactorily as umpire.

The fun opened at the very start Jackson sent a hot fly to Fred Smith and went out. Then Brown batted safely and reached third on a passed ball. Miller was given his base on balls, and stole second. Then both scored on the pretty double by Peno, Sampson and the other Miller ended the inning with two more outs. The Riverdales went out in one, two, three order.

In the second inning, there were two out and McWinters on first, when Jackson knocked a three-bagger clear over Will Smith's head in centre field. Brown followed with another long hit between centre and left that gave him two bases, McWinters and Jackson having scored.

Fred Smith was hit by a pitched ball when he came up first to bat for the Riverdales. He stole second. Then Hayes made a pretty hit. The coachers called Smith to come home, and as a result he was caught at the plate while Hayes scattered round to second. Will Smith caught the ball on the leg and limped to first. Hardy went out on a fly to left. Then Wood came in with a timely hit on which Hayes scored two bases and Will Smith reached third, coming home after the catcher lost the ball thrown to catch Hayes. Westervelt ended the inning.

In the beginning of the third inning, Hayes came to grief. An error by Westervelt, a hit and two stolen bases gave the Giants one run and Watkins on third. Westervelt misunderstood Hayes' signal and sent the wrong curve. The ball struck on Hayes' right thumb, splitting it open for its entire length and breaking the bone. Watkins scored. Hayes was hurried to the dressing room, where Dr. Zeglio dressed the wound. Then Fred Smith went behind the bat, Hardy going to second and Bert Timpson taking Hardy's place at left.

Westervelt and Hayes had already struck out one man that inning and Westervelt and Will Smith put out the other two in the same manner. Smith caught well, his only bad play being a wild throw to second. Miller tried to rattle him, but Fred was not that kind.

The Cuban Giants scored one more run in the fourth inning on Smith's wild throw, an error by Hardy and a base on balls. That ended their fun until the ninth when a dropped fly by Will Smith and a clean hit sent one of their runners around the circuit of the bases.

Despite their best efforts, the Riverdales failed to score until the eighth. Their batting was not timely and the colored men found their flies and grounders easy. Then Fred Smith reached first on a grounder too warm for Miller to hold very long. He stole second and went to third on a sacrifice by his brother. Miller's error of Wood's grounder allowed Smith to score.

The individual scores were as follows:

DIPHTHERIA IN THE BOROUGH.

Two Cases Said to Have Been Located—The Houses Quarantined.

The Borough Board of Health at present is experiencing some trouble through two cases of diptheria that had developed within a short time in the northeastern part of the borough, but within a few days two more cases were discovered. It seems as though an effort was made to keep the knowledge of the cases quiet and away from the board. The cases were located, however, and another physician was sent to the house to investigate. A diagnosis was made and two cases of diptheria were found. The result was submitted to State authorities and they also decided that diptheria was evident. The houses have been quarantined by the borough authorities.

Cut His Hand With an Ice Pick.

C. A. W. Fox, the green-keeper of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds, met with a painful accident Monday afternoon at the clubhouse. He was using an ice pick and cut a large piece of ice, when the sharp instrument slipped and struck his left hand. The teeth entered the flesh for a considerable depth and caused Mr. Fox much pain. He went to the home of Dr. Hedges and had the wound attended to, and although he does not now the use of the hand it will only be a few days before the injury will be well.

Couldn't Survive the Operation.

William Roberts, aged 80 years, a life-long resident of Martinsville, where he followed the life of a farmer, died at the hospital last Sunday evening as the result of an operation performed for a disease of long standing. Mr. Roberts was at the hospital only a week and the physicians in charge deemed it wise to perform the operation, and thus take the opportunity of saving his life. The body has been taken to Martinsville for interment. Two daughters survive the deceased.

Taken to the Hospital.

Rev. H. H. F. Schnellendreussler, of Milton place, who has been suffering with gastritis and hiccoughs, was this morning taken to Muhlenberg Hospital for treatment. The hiccoughs have almost ceased and only occur occasionally. Other complications have set in which require close attention and good nursing, which he will receive at the hospital.

Cake of Ice Dropped on His Foot.

John Krisey, an employe of Hetfield & Gallup, ice dealers, met with a slight accident last Saturday afternoon while at work at the ice houses on West Front street. A large cake of ice dropped on his foot, causing him much pain and trouble in walking. He has, however, partially recovered from the effects of the accident and is again able to work.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabule, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for them?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS
RIPANS

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $3 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters who specially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly afflicted to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

A new style packet containing five RIPANS TABULES has just been put into a paper carton, the whole forming a convenient and handy form in which to purchase the family medicine. Ten of these cartons (FIFTY TABULES) will be sent to any address on receipt of FORTY CENTS, by the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for FIVE CENTS. Ripans Tabules may be had of druggists generally. There are 1,200 druggists in the United States and Canada who sell Ripans Tabules. Ripans Tabules are sold by druggists everywhere in the United States and Canada, and by some druggists in every quarter of the globe. One gives relief.

"PEACE JUBILEE" AT CRESCENT OVAL NOT MUCH OF A SUCCESS.

A Couple of Fairly Exciting Bicycle Races—Chasing the Greased Pig, However, was a Very Funny Sight.

A couple of hundred people braved the heat of Saturday afternoon and ventured out to the Cresscent Oval to attend the "Peace Jubilee" of the Dewey Bicycle Club.

There were four colored men who turned out for the foot race. According to the programme, it was a 200-yard dash, but it was thought that a third of a mile run would give the spectators more fun for their money and it did. George Peterson won. Rudolph Cannett was second.

Then two colored men and three white riders came out for the five mile bicycle race. The finish was an exciting one. Ray Poole winning from Nick Fifer, of Elizabeth, by a length. Sorensen, third. The time was 14:39 2 5.

There were eight startera in the two mile, and the weaker riders were given a lead.

Fifer won out from Poole by six inches in a rousing finish. Sorensen was third. The time was 5:31 4-5. Local L. A. W. Consul T. A. Cuming acted as referee of the bicycle races. The judges were Sergeant Kiely, Chauncey F. Stout and Charles E. Morse. Raymond A. McGee acted as timer. Harry K. Lister was starter.

Nobody would climb the greased pole on which the lard lay in great chunks so the pig was brought out and after much delay greased and turned loose. The porker ran between the legs of the spectators who crowded around, upsetting them and causing all kinds of excitement. Finally John Scott caught it by the hind leg. That was counted not fair and after much disputing, the squealing porker was turned loose again. Another exciting race was ended when George Peterson fell on it and hugged the porker to his breast, grease and all. Another heat resulted in a second capture for Peterson who again clasped the pig to his bosom. It was then declared his property and he bore it in triumph off the field.

800 WENT TO BOYNTON BEACH.

Two Big Train Loads of Excursionists Went With the Grocers.

Two big trains carried 800 people to Boynton Beach Monday morning on the excursion of the Grocers' Association. The day was a delightful one at the shore, although rather warm. There were a large number of visitors at that well-known resort and the day passed very pleasantly.

The Grocers' Association gave a five-mile handicap road race in the afternoon under the direction of Harry K. Lister. The other officials were Wm. Waters, Frank Schuck and V. William Nash, Jr. Ed Duck, 2 minutes, won. Michael Burke, 1 min., was ahead, when he fell near the finish. He mounted, however, and came in second. F. Glaser, 30 seconds, of Elizabeth, was third, and Joseph Burke, scratch, fourth. He won the time prize, making the distance in 12:28. Three other riders finished. They were all well bunched

GALA DAY FOR GERMANS.

VOLKS-FEST A PLEASURABLE AFFAIR AT MOUNTAINSIDE GROVE.

The Day Given Up to the Enjoyment of Games of the Fatherland—Dancing also a Feature—The Prize Winners.

Monday was a gala day for the Germans. They gathered together at Mountainside Grove in the afternoon and evening and held one of their old-time entertainments, a Volks-fest, a true festival of the people.

Dancing was a prominent feature, and began early in the afternoon, continuing until the party dispersed late at night.

Games and athletic sports were interspersed, such as vogel stechen for the ladies, target shooting for the men, sack and egg races for the girls, running races, high and broad jumps. In this way there was some amusement for everyone there.

The grove is a delightful place to spend an afternoon and evening in. Refreshments were for sale at the festival and all passed a pleasant day.

The games drew a great deal of attention, and were joined in heartily by all the grown folks as well as the children. The sack race was won by A. Bremmer, who received as his prize a handsome sweater. Miss May Jan won the egg race, and Miss Bessie Young the top schlagen both prizes were pretty fans. Miss Vogel won the Vogel stecher and Henry Rummel the target shoting. Miss Vogel's prize was a pocketbook, and Rummell received a beer mug.

The committee in charge consisted of M. Menzenbach, W. Gardner, H. Rummel, Charles Myers, Joseph Howard, Alfred Lutman, C. Peterson and C. Carlson.

YEP SORENSEN HURT.

After Finishing in a Road Race He Was Thrown and Badly Injured.

The great twenty-five-mile road race of the North Hudson County Cyclers was held on the Hudson County boulevard Monday morning. The decisions of the officials were generally unsatisfactory. Peter Simmons, of this city, is credited with finishing tenth, while he and his friends say he finished fourth. Yep Sorensen crossed the line right behind him, but was not given a place. Ray Poole started with the 45-second bunch and kept with the scratch men until he fell. During the twenty-five miles, he fell three times but managed to finish fifteenth.

After Sorensen finished, a rider fell in front of him and he was thrown striking his stomach on the shoulder of a bystander. He was carried unconscious into the clubhouse where several physicians worked over him. He was revived and was taken home by rail in the afternoon. Today he is not able to work.

Their First Dance.

For the first time in the ten years of their organization, the Catholic Benevolent League gave a dance last Monday. It was also the first dance of the season, in T. A. B. Hall, and was well attended. The committee in charge consisted of Andrew Knowland, Henry Lutz, Edward Kelly, Patrick Deiver, Hugh McDonald, John Sullivan, William Burgiss and Thomas Larey. Professor O'Reilly furnished the music.

REMEMBER THE MAINE? CERTAINLY HE WILL.

Alfred Johnson, Survivor of Ill-fated Ship, is in Town.

MISS CLUM'S SWEETHEART.

STEALING A SMOKE IS THE ONLY THING THAT SAVED HIS LIFE.

He was in Forecastle of the Maine When the Vessel was Blown Up in Havana Harbor—Afterwards a Gunner's-Captain on the Marblehead—He is a Civilian Now, But Will Enlist Again Soon.

Back from scenes of war and carnage, from the fever stricken coasts of Cuba, and from a horrible experience in Havana harbor the night of February 12th, 1898, comes Alfred Johnson, first gunner's-captain on the Marblehead, and formerly able seaman of the ill-fated battleship Maine. Although Johnson is not a Plainfield boy, and is hardly known here out side of a small circle of friends, the fact that he is acquainted with Miss Bertha Clum, of LaGrande avenue, and, as rumor has it, intends soon to make her Mrs. Johnson, the people here look upon him as their own.

Johnson was seen Tuesday by a reporter, and consented to tell some of his experiences the night of the 12th of February, when so many gallant American sailors went down to a watery grave. Johnson has just been discharged from the service, having completed his time and spent twelve years on men-of-war. He left his vessel, the Marblehead, in Boston, and is now free to follow whatever occupation he chooses.

But as with all of Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors Johnson wouldn't be content with any other life, and intends going to Washington soon to see about getting a commission and joining the navy again.

On the night of the terrible catastrophe Johnson says he was "stealing a smoke" in his hammock in the forecastle. To this slight violation of the rules Johnson owes his life, he says, for while every one else around him was wrapped in slumber, he was wide awake, had his senses about him, and was ready to cope with whatever danger came up.

The first intimation Johnson had of the explosion was a great noise, and simultaneously he felt himself going down deep into the sea. He was in a trap, with no way to escape, except through some opening that might be left. When the part of the vessel which he was on settled on the bottom, Johnson gathered his energies together, and crawling out, found a small hole through which he crawled and coming up to the top of the water, filled his lungs with deep draughts of air.

Johnson found that he hadn't escaped unhurt. A sharp pain in his left foot, and an ache under his ribs told him that he had been injured in the wreck. Fortunately a small boat from a Spanish man-of-war had been sent out to pick up any stragglers, and Johnson was one of those picked up. He was rowed to the battleship and later taken to Havana where his injuries, which were not serious, were attended to. He was the only one in the forecastle saved.

Johnson entered the navy when seventeen years of age. He was on the Kearsage when she was wrecked off Central America several years ago, and spent eight days on a reef, 320 miles from land, waiting for provisions and help. When the Maine was first commissioned Johnson went aboard of her and, like all good sailors, fairly loved his ship.

The first shot he fired, as gunner, was at Cienfuegos. Johnson is staying for the present at W. H. Clum's, and is being greeted everywhere he goes. He is a modest young man, but appreciates the feeling everywhere expressed. And he is one of those who will long "Remember the Maine."

Came Highly Endorsed.

Dr. and Mrs. A. F. VanHorn, of West Fifth street, were received into the membership of the Congregational church last Sunday. The Doctor's letter, on which he was received, was accompanied by a resolution passed by the session of the church in Titusville, speaking in the highest terms of his character as a man and of the efficient service he had rendered as an officer in that church.

Clothes for Uncle Sam's Men.

Schepflin, Shultz & Company's clothing factory on West Front street is running full force on a contract of 15,000 blouses for the Army Department. The blouses are made of the best material. The firm had the chance of securing a contract to manufacture 50,000 flannel shirts for the Government, but was unable to secure experienced shirt-makers to do the work.

BADGER BOYS WORRIED.

MUSTERING OUT PROCESS IS COMING IN A SLOW MANNER.

Governor Voorhees Sought Out to Hurry up Their Discharge—The Men May be Compelled to Serve a Whole Year.

Commander Washington Irving, of the Battalion of the East, New Jersey Naval Reserves, who is a lieutenant on the auxiliary cruiser Badger, passed through Hoboken late Monday night en route for Boston to rejoin his ship. His mission in coming home on furlough was to call on Governor Voorhees and enlist him in an endeavor to have the Navy Department order the reserves mustered out.

"The Governor was very kind," the lieutenant said to a friend in Hoboken, "and promised to do all he could for us. He said he would write to Secretary Long, and would also try to interest Vice-President Hobart in the matter. I hope they will be successful.

"Officers and men alike on the Badger are anxious to get back to civilian life. The Badger is at the Boston Navy Yard. We would like to be mustered out here in Hoboken," the lieutenant added.

Word reached Hoboken Tuesday that Gov. Voorhees has written to Secretary Long urging that the reserves be mustered out.

The Governor received a reply that no order to muster out the New Jersey Reserves had yet been issued. Since then reports have been abroad that the order for the muster out had been or would shortly be given.

Hoboken, Sept. 14.—A petty officer on furlough from the Badger visited the United States ship Portsmouth here yesterday and explained the case of the delay in mustering out the crew. He said that the enlistment papers were wrong, having been made out for a year and not "for a year unless sooner discharged." He was reticent as to who was to blame for the blunder.

It was stated on the Portsmouth yesterday that even if such a mistake has been made, the men will be discharged, but that an error of the kind would doubtless cause considerable delay. No one could tell when the men will be let come home.

RETURN BROWNED AND BURNED.

Jolly Tars of the Yacht Teal Come Back Looking Very Ruddy.

The cruise of the yacht Teal is over. Late Monday evening Walter B. Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, George A. Horne, of Willow avenue, and Charles B. Morse, of Franklin place, returned from Bay Head, where the Teal went out of commission that afternoon. The party returned well-browned and burned as a result of their life on the water. The cruise proved a very successful one despite sundry exciting adventures.

Tuesday they, with a party of friends, chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Morse, of Franklin place, were the guests of Frank W. Edwards, of Bayonne, on his steam yacht Irene. They enjoyed a sail down New York Bay and paid a visit to the battleship Indiana, besides viewing the other warships now at anchor in the harbor.

SMALL FORCE ON STREET WORK.

Appropriation for Repairs and Improvement is Getting Low.

Only a small force of men are working now on the streets as the heavy work is all done. There is still some money left and work is progressing slowly. A gang is relaying the crosswalk at Westervelt avenue and East Front street, and also putting down the new walk there ordered by the Council.

The property owners along Park avenue are still agitating an asphalt pavement and a storm sewer for that street, and the matter will probably come up at a Council meeting in the near future.

No Decision Reached.

A meeting of the Independent Scheutzen Corps was held Monday evening to decide whether the members should consolidate with the Gesang and Turn Verein. No decision was reached, however, as some of the members opposed the scheme. Another meeting will be held next Monday evening to settle the matter.

Services in English.

Rev. Frederick C. Graef, of Elizabeth, conducted services in the English tongue in the German Lutheran church on Craig place Monday night. In a few weeks a meeting will probably be called to decide whether to organize another Lutheran church or not.

A Cheap Trip.

The Christian Endeavorers have decided to reduce their price for the round trip to Asbury Park, to attend the convention the last of this month, from $5.50 to $5. This will include board and all other expenses.

JURY COULDN'T AGREE.

Case of Thorn Against Miodovnik Will be Tried Over Again.

The contract case of A. B. Thorn, the plumber, against David Miodovnik, the West Front street barber, for the collection of a bill of $89, was resumed Tuesday afternoon in Justice Nash's court. All the evidence was given in the case Monday, and there was nothing for the lawyers to do but to sum up. The case was given to the jury, and after considering the evidence they couldn't agree.

Counselor W. K. McClure, for the defendant, consumed one hour. The jury was out for two hours, when Justice Nash discharged them. At first they stood 8 to 4 in favor of the plaintiff, but toward the last shifted and when they were discharged were 8 to 4 for the defendant. The case will be re-tried next Tuesday.

The jurymen were J. V. D. Dilks, Hezekiah Hand, Drew Mattis, Noah W. Pike, R. Mattis, J. B. Fowler, John Sullivan, C. Woods, W. W. Coriell, H. Mallinson and Thad Doane, Jr.

PAID HIS DUES JUST IN TIME.

E. E. Marshall Heirs Will Receive $2,000 Insurance on His Life.

Among the resources of Mrs. E. E. Marshall, whose husband died in Buffalo, as told in another column, is a claim for $2,000 in the A. O. U. W. Mrs. Marshall had a narrow escape from losing this, and had it not been for Justice Nash, would probably not be entitled to a cent insurance in the lodge.

Mr. Marshall joined Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., five years ago. The rules of the lodge are very strict, and if a member is in arrears and does not pay his dues promptly, he is suspended. On August 8th Mr. Nash, who is recorder in the lodge, received orders to send Mr. Marshall's name to Camden for suspension, as he was ten days in arrears. Instead of doing that, the Justice jumped on his wheel, rode around to see Mr. Marshall, and urged him to pay up his dues and still keep his name good on the books. Mr. Marshall did this, and to-day his widow has a good life insurance.

Addressed the Soldier Boys

F. H. Martin, of West Front street, addressed a soldier boys at Pompton Lakes Sunday. Mr. Martin speaks well of the boys, many of whom are from this city. He says they are healthy, well fed and well housed, have plenty to eat, but suffer a little from cold at night because of the sudden appearance of the cool spell and the lack of blankets. The boys are anxious to get home again, but Mr. Martin was told by a staff officer that it was probable that the Pompton Lake volunteers would be sent out to do garrison duty somewhere at Porto Rico or somewhere in Cuba, and would not be mustered out at all.

Relics of the War.

James McMillan, of 190 South Second street, went to New York last Saturday to see his son, who is a marine on the Gloucester that is now anchored off Tompkinsville. Mr. McMillan's son gave him a revolver, a nine-inch shell and a Spanish handkerchief covered with blood, all of which were taken off the Vizcaya after the fight at Santiago.

Rough Rider is Home.

George Moncton, formerly of Plainfield, but late of Roosevelt's Rough Riders, who was wounded in Cuba, is now at the home of his mother in Newark. He came home on the steamship Obdam, one of the transports, and has been honorably discharged. His wounded arm is about well, but a wound in the leg still troubles him.

To Present a Flag.

Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., is making arrangements to present the Borough Public High School with an American flag. The one now in use by the school was presented by the above Council, but it is now worn out. The presentation will take place at an early date.

Secured a Non-Suit.

In the contract case of W. H. Ruckman against Mrs. Nelson, which was tried before Justice Matthison Monday afternoon, the defendant secured a non-suit. She was represented by Codington & Swackhamer, while the plaintiff was represented by J. P. D. Kirch.

Debating Society to Organize.

The Plainfield Law Debating Society will organize for the coming year Wednesday evening, Sept. 28th, at 7:45 o'clock. All wishing to become members of this society can obtain blanks of Rufus Larew, Edward Baker or V. W. Nash, Jr.

An Approaching Wedding.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Miss Alice Louise Needham, daughter of former-Mayor H. E. Needham, of North Plainfield, to James Herbert Case, Wednesday afternoon, September 28th.

THE BIG G. O. P. ITES DID NOT ATTEND.

The Union County Republicans Met Tuesday.

ANNUAL OUTING HELD THEN

TWO HUNDRED WORKERS GATHERED AT NEPTUNE HEIGHTS.

Plainfield Sent a Small Delegation Headed By Her Assemblyman—Mayor Fisk and Sheriff Kirk Didn't Go—The Governor Kept Away—William N. Runyon Was a Great Favorite.

Avon-by-the-Sea, September 14.—Down at Neptune Heights, close by, there was a gathering yesterday afternoon of the Republicans of Union county. The second annual outing it was called. How the most remarkable thing about the affair was the entire absence of the leaders of the G. O. P. Plainfield sent a small delegation from which many of the leading workers in that city were absent.

While the outing last year was considered a grand and glorious success, the affair this time fell rather flat. Politics played no part at all in the day's happenings for, when it was learned that all the big men were to be away, the politicians went in to enjoy the pleasures of the shore without much regard for the future of the Republican party in Union county. And when the news of the sudden death of Former Judge McCormick came it threw a gloom over the gathering that the efforts of Chairman Chas. Codding and the rest of the committee could not shake off. The guests gathering in little knots and talked it over while politics were forgotten.

The bake itself was a good one and Neptune Heights had all its usual attractions. There were some two hundred staunch Republicans out. Then there were some twenty telegrams from various noted folk, including one from Governor Voorhees. The Governor expected to come until the last moment when his duties at Sea Girt were found to be too great to allow him to go. Assemblymen Roger Murray, of Plainfield, George Squire and Robert G. Houston, of Elizabeth, where in hand but John Kean, Congressman Fowler, Mayor Fisk, and Sheriff Kirk, of Plainfield, were missing. The State bench was not represented.

Probably one of the most popular men at the outing was Councilman William N. Runyon, of Plainfield. Early in the day, there was a demand that Runyon should sing and sing he did. He entertained them for part of the morning before the bake began and then afterwards there were many calls for Runyon and his songs. He had a long list of the popular melodies but the crowd was not satisfied until he had sung them all several times.

Among the other Plainfield politicians who turned out for the outing were Under Sheriff Kirkner, Ames Moffett, Judge William Newcorn, J. W. Murray, Jr., George J. Tobin, William H. Drayton, Alex Mallison and a delegation of ten from the leaders among the colored voters.

Warden Dodd, of the county jail, was there with a goodly delegation from Elizabeth. Rahway carried off the honors for the largest delegation of prominent workers. They came headed by Mayor Holmes.

Fanwood was represented by Former Sheriff Kyte. Nathaniel Gardner and Editor Pearsall came down from Westfield.

The only political work of the day was the opening of the boom of Freeholder Farrell for Sheriff by the Rahway delegation.

Rev. Mr. Gardner to Take a Wife

Rev. and Mrs. Chamberlayne Phelps, of Perch River, N. Y., have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Charlotte May Phelps, to Rev. George Willis Gardner, pastor of Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield. The ceremony will take place Thursday evening, September 22d, at 9 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents.

Attending Biennial Conclave.

Monday evening about twenty members of Stone Square Lodge, No. 10, F. and A. M., left this city for New Haven, Conn., to attend the biennial conclave of the order.

No Connections Now.

The 9:58 a. m. and 2:07 p. m. trains to New York do not now make connections at Elizabethport for the Long Branch Railroad.

—Cumberland county farmers are alarmed over a disease that is epidemic among the hogs. The malady appears suddenly and in a few hours will destroy an entire pen.

BURGLARS CAUGHT AT WORK.

Dunellen Man Arrived Home Just in Time to Prevent Looting His House.

Dunellen, N. J., Sept. 14.—Early yesterday morning burglars forced an entrance to Edwin Teel's house just off of North avenue, but were discovered by Mr. Teel and frightened away before they ransacked the house. The only things missing are Mr. Teel's briarwood pipe and case, and a bag of tobacco.

Mr. Teel is a conductor on the Central Railroad and never gets home until some time after midnight. His run is a late one, and he leaves his train at Somerville then takes the chances of getting a train back. Tuesday morning he was lucky and reached home earlier than usual, shortly after 1 o'clock.

As he came up the street Mr. Teel noticed a bright light burning in his kitchen. Mrs. Teel always leaves a small lamp lighted but this lamp seemed to be turned up very high. Mr. Teel thought it must be his wife who had come down stairs on an errand, and as he opened the front door called to her.

Instead of receiving an answer, Mr. Teel heard some one rush out of a window. Then Mr. Teel knew that burglars were inside.

He hurriedly searched through the house, but could find no trace of any one, neither was anything disturbed except the pipe and tobacco. It is thought that the burglars had just got in, and were getting their bearings before starting in to work.

BUSINESS RIVALS FIGHT.

And Now They Air Their Troubles in a Justice's Court.

Two Hebrew peddlers are in trouble. One is named Barney Eifenstein, the other Michael Cronly. The first lives on Harmony street, the other on West Third street.

The trouble occurred Monday and led to the arrest of Cronly. Both men carry similar lines of goods and there is considerable rivalry between them. Monday Eifenstein went to a house on West Third street to collect a bill. Cronley was there, too, and the men began to quarrel. At last Cronly grew so angry, Eifenstein says, that he kicked the latter several times, driving Eifenstein away from the house.

Eifenstein then came down town and made a complaint before Justice Mosher, a warrant was drawn and Constable Bockafellow set out on a search for Cronly. He was arrested Tuesday, taken before Justice Mosher, and his hearing set down for tomorrow at 9 o'clock.

BURGLARY AT RAHWAY.

Thieves Broke Into Freeholder Farrell's Store and Carried Away Edibles.

Rahway, September 14.—The store belonging to Freeholder John Farrell in this city was entered by thieves last evening and robbed. The burglars helped themselves to a quanity of cigars and tobacco, appropriated several hams that hung in the back room. They also broke open the money drawer and took a quantity of change.

The thieves gained entrance through the front door which was forced open. There was no clue to the identity of the burglars.

Surprised on Her Return.

It was a very happy affair that was held at the home of Overseer of the Poor Christian Hansen, of West Second street, Tuesday. Mrs. Hansen has only recently returned from a visit with relatives in Canada and a surprise party was arranged in her honor. The surprise was a complete one. There were a number of guests present who dropped in without warning and spent the evening in a very enjoyable manner. Games and dancing occupied most of the evening.

Back From a Summer Cruise.

F. H. Ball and family, of Myrtle avenue, have returned from their cruise in Long Island Sound in the house boat, Sommerheim. They have had three months of cruising, and have put the Sommerheim in winter quarters at Patchogue.

Minute Adornment Scorched.

While assisting at the fire on West Fifth street, Tuesday morning, Roundsman Flynn had his hands and moustache badly scorched. He was trying to close the shutters on the adjoining house when the flames got in their fine work.

His Talk Was Too Loud.

John Carey was arrested Tuesday on Park avenue by Patrolman Totzen for being drunk. His loud talk was disturbing the neighborhood and so the officer took him in. He was fined $3 yesterday morning.

—Gospel services will be conducted by the Christian and Missionary Alliance in the rooms of the W. C. T. U., East Front street, this evening at 7:45 o'clock.

PASTOR WELCOMED HOME

REV. C. E. HERRING GIVEN A PLEASANT RECEPTION.

The Affair in the Sunday-school Room—A Great Facial Change by Absence of Beard—Informal Programme Rendered.

The members and friends of the First Presbyterian church turned out in full force last Tuesday to give their pastor, Rev. Charles E. Herring, a right royal reception in honor of his return from foreign lands, where he spent his summer vacation. During the entire evening the Sunday-school room of the church was crowded with people who welcomed the pastor heartily.

The rooms were tastily decorated with flowers and plants of various kinds, and altogether the scene was a very attractive one. A large table was arranged in one corner of the large room from which refreshments was served by those in charge.

E. M. Cave, who is always equal to any occasion, was called upon to make an address of welcome to the pastor, and in doing so he spoke the sentiments of everyone present. In reply the pastor thanked his parishioners for the kind manner in which they had extended their feelings of appreciation, and he hoped that the work during the coming fall and winter would be zealously carried on. In the near future the members hope to hear more of his trip through Ireland, which he took on his wheel.

One thing very noticeable about the appearance of the pastor is the absence of his beard. The removal of this adornment makes him look much younger, and he is as brown as a berry, the result of traveling under the rays of the sun in foreign climes.

The latter part of the evening was devoted to an informal programme which was furnished by Miss Petrie, Miss Blanche Fellows and Miss Mary Luckey, and consisted of recitations, piano and vocal solos. The committee in charge of the reception consisted of Mrs. Bisley, Miss Remsen and Miss Blanche Fellows, and those who served refreshments were Miss Mamie Dunham, Miss Marion Englehardt, Miss Hammond, Miss Florence Martin, Miss Belle Williams, Miss Boice, Miss Cave, Miss Emma, Miss Mary Line and Miss Margaret Abbott.

LINCOLN'S FIRST FIRE

Flames Gutted the Interior of a Factory Storehouse this Morning.

Lincoln, September 14.—Lincoln had its first experience with a fire this morning when one of the storehouses of the Franklin Paint and Graphite Company was found to be on fire. The alarm was sounded by the factory whistle and in a few minutes the Lincoln Hose Company was at the scene of the conflagration. Hose was laid from one of the hydrants of the Watchung Water Company and a stream of great pressure turned on to the flames.

The fire gutted the interior of the structure, but the efficient work of the firemen prevented a spread of the flames to the other buildings in the vicinity.

BICYCLE RIDER'S LEG BROKEN.

Philip Neider's Wheel Slipped as He Was Crossing Street Railway Tracks.

Philip Neider, a young lad, living at Fanwood, and a student at Leal's School, fell off his wheel in front of Randolph's drug store yesterday while crossing the street railway tracks and fractured his left leg. He was taken into the drug store and Dr. Probasco was called. He learned that the leg was fractured, and made arrangements to send the boy home. The leg will be put in plaster of paris at once, and it will be sometime before the use of the leg is regained.

Wilbur J. Chamberlin Safe.

O. E. Chamberlin, of Madison avenue, has heard that his son, Wilbur J. Chamberlin, the New York Sun correspondent who was wrecked near Cuba last Thursday while on board The Sun press boat, is safe. He and the crew are in quarantine at Key West, and Mr. Chamberlin expects to be home in two weeks. No further details have been received, and how he and the crew got to Key West is not known.

No Word About E. E. Marshall's Funeral.

As yet no word has been received in Plainfield regarding the funeral services and interment of the late Edgar E. Marshall, who died so suddenly at Niagara Falls Monday evening last. It has been reported that the body will be taken to Brookiyn, the home of relatives, where the services will be held, and that interment will be in the family plot at Hempstead, L. I., but this cannot be verified as true.

—Mrs. K. H. Marsh has resumed her business for the fall and winter season.

WHY, OH WHY DON'T HE SEND THE KEYS!

Sons of Veterans Anxious to Hear From Bert Thatcher.

SECRET WORK LOCKED UP.

NUMEROUS LETTERS HAVE NOT BEEN HEEDED BY ABSENT MAN.

John Hand Camp Worried Over the Situation, Because No One Knows How the Goat Should be Ridden by New Members—Thatcher's Resignation as Captain is Also Wanted by Camp.

The officers and members of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, are just at present wrestling with a difficult problem, and just how they are going to come out is a question.

Several months ago E. S. Thatcher, captain of the camp, left the city and took up his residence in Chicago, or at least he told his friends that he was going to that city. He did not have a definite idea that he would remain in the "Windy City," and therefore did not resign his position in the camp, although he was urged to do so. As time went on no word was received from him in reply to several letters that was written. He took with him certain keys for boxes that contain the private work of the camp, and the officers have been unable to use this private work. One of the officers wrote to Captain Thatcher and on the envelope he placed his address so that if the letter did not reach the party to whom it was addressed it would be returned to the writer. The letter did not come back, and it was taken for granted that Mr. Thatcher must have received the letter.

As Mr. Thatcher was captain of the camp, and still holds the position, no one has been elected to fill his place. During his absence the position has been occupied by First Lieutenant George Bedford, and during the latter's absence by Second Lieutenant Raymond McVoy. Mr. Bedford is employed at the Walter Scott Press Works, and is at present in Chicago working for his employer. He knows the circumstances concerning the camp's troubles and will make an effort to find Captain Thatcher and secure from him such things in his possession belonging to the camp. The members are wholly unable to tell why Captain Thatcher has acted in the way he has.

A few days ago the officers communicated with the divison officers and laid the facts of the case before them. They are in hopes that Captain Thatcher may be deposed and that he may be compelled to return to the camp its belongings, so that they can elect a member to the head office and continue with the work.

If nothing is heard very soon from Mr. Thatcher the members will have the office declared vacant, and the State authorities will be asked for a proper dispensation to elect another member to the chair. There is no doubt but what Mr. Thatcher will be compelled to return the camp's property and give an account of himself, and he may also be suspended from the order for gross negligence. The local members certainly feel incensed at his actions and are now determined that the trouble shall be quickly settled satisfactorily to all concerned.

TO DECIDE ABOUT A BRIDGE.

Special Committee Appointed by Somerset Freeholders to Adjust the Matter.

Somerville, September 14.—At the meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders, held at the Court House yesterday, a committee, consisting of Director William Logan, Augustus Mobus and Andrew Lutkins, was appointed to meet with a committee from the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders, of which Freeman Randolph is the chairman, for the purpose of deciding about a bridge over Union avenue at Bound Brook. The committee will meet next week Tuesday at Bound Brook. This is the bridge that the Brunswick Traction Company is anxious to have built, so that they can run their tracks through from Dunellen to Bound Brook, and the chances are that it will be built.

To Install a New Heating Apparatus

Officials of the Central Railroad Company were in Plainfield yesterday making arrangements to install a new heating apparatus in the North Avenue station. The work of replacing a damaged chimney on the station was also started yesterday.

Chaplain Jones to Talk.

This evening Chaplain Jones, of the U. S. S. battleship Texas, will tell of his experiences at Santiago, at the Casino. Mr. Jones is a fine speaker and has wonderful descriptive talent.

THE DANGER OF BEAUTY.

I never read the papers without feeling at content
That both my eyes are twisted and my nose is slightly bent;
I'm glad my mouth is out of line and that my teeth are few,
And if I had a "wealth of hair," I don't know what I'd do.

A "tiny foot" or "lily hand" would fill me with dismay,
And if I had a slender waist I'd sicken in a day;
For I have noticed from the first, as strange as it may seem,
The girl who gets the worst of it is "lovely as a dream."

The papers never tell about a woman being shot,
Or mangled by a trolley car, or married to a dot,
Or forced, at point of pistol, her last fifty cents to lose,
But that they say are "limpid" and her boots are number twos.

So I can live in sweet content, without the slightest fear
That any ill or calamity will ever hover near—
And when I see my misfit face, it's some relief to know
That I'll outlive the tea cries by a hundred years or so!

A QUEER ENCOUNTER.

BY LOYD WILLIAMS.

A heavy shower of rain had left me stranded in the ancient and sleepy city of Elchester. The country roads, bad enough at the best of times, were so sloppy as to put bicycling out of the question. I knew nobody in the town, and so there I was, the one place of interest—the cathedral—I went there.

In doing this I believed I was spending an idle hour. As a matter of fact, I was unconsciously fulfilling the object for which I was probably brought into the world.

The building appeared to be empty, and I amused myself reading the tablets that recorded the lives of worthy people who existed generations ago. I found that the cathedral sheltered the bones of many people named Clutton. This was interesting, for my own name happens to be Clutton, and, though I have never troubled myself about family "trees," I knew that we came from the West of England. In other words, the knights and dames who lay in Elchester Cathedral were in all probability my ancestors. I wished that they had had the foresight to leave me some of their property.

Wandering through the cloisters, I came across a living picture of much greater interest and beauty than the images of stone and iron lying around me.

It was a young lady who was sketching a corner of the building, and making a frantic attempt to do justice to the wonderful arches and quaint windows.

In order to get a peep at her face, I made a pretense of examining a monument close at hand. It was erected to the memory of "Sir Francis Clutton, 1153-1201." His legs were crossed at the knees, which signified he had fought in three Crusades; and had it not been that some barbarous visitor had broken off the gentleman's nose, he would have made a most imposing figure.

I took the liberty of standing for a moment by her side, to see her work. "If you will excuse my saying so," I ventured, "you have drawn that arch wrong. It is out of perspective."

"I know it is," she answered, with a little moue. "But I can't get it right. Are you an artist?"

"Not exactly," I said. "But I know something of architectural drawing."

"I wish you would show me how to get the wretched thing in so that it doesn't seem to be standing on one leg!"

"With pleasure."

I took her place on the campstool, and on another piece of paper made a rough drawing of the corner which had puzzled her.

"What a number of people of the name of Clutton are buried here!" I said, by way of opening the conversation.

"Oh, yes; they used to be a great family in days gone by," she said. "Henry VIII, took them away, when he was reforming the Church. The Cluttons didn't change their religion fast enough. Edgar Clutton was the last of them. But he deserved to be punished," she added. "He did a very shabby thing."

"What was that?" I inquired.

"He was bethrothed to his cousin, Dorothy Clarence, and jilted her."

"And what became of Mistress Dorothy Clarence?"

"She went into a convent. They say she died of a broken heart, and soon afterwards Sir Edgar was executed for high treason."

"Rather a severe punishment?" I suggested.

"Not at all," she said warmly. "He was a mean wretch to behave as he did! Since those days a Clutton has never owned an acre of land in Devonshire. And they will never get back to their position of landowners unless—"

She stopped.

"Unless what?" I asked.

"Well, there is a ridiculous old legend, which has been handed down; but I don't suppose it will ever come true. It runs—

"'My lord shall come to his own again

When a Clutton squire wed a Clarence dame.'"

"So the theory is that when a Clutton marries a Clarence, and so repairs the wickedness of Sir Edgar, then prosperity will return?"

"Yes; but I am afraid that will never happen now," she said, with a little sigh. "Nobody knows what has become of the Cluttons; and the Clarences are nearly extinct."

"It appears to me," I said, "that you are superstitious about the country legends."

"I am afraid I am," she said, laughing, "because so many have come true. But this one never will."

"Why not?"

"Because," she said, "I happen to be the last of the Clarences. I was named Dorothy, after the lady who died of a broken heart."

"Are you a Miss Clarence?" I asked, struck as a coincidence.

"But I am afraid I can't help those unfortunate Cluttons," she went on, "because I don't know one."

At this, I am afraid, I winked at the broken-nosed monument of Sir Francis.

"Besides," she continued, "even if I did, I couldn't give them back their property, because I haven't any money."

By this time my rough drawing was finished, and she was kind enough to say it was very clever.

"May I keep it?" she asked. "I should like to paste it in my scrapbook."

"By all means. Would you like me to sign my name?"

"Yes, please, and put the date."

I did as she told me, signing myself "Richard Clutton."

When she saw what I had written she went pale with astonishment.

"Are you really descended from those old monuments?" she said.

"Not from the monuments," I answered. "But I believe I am descended from that unfeeling brute who broke Miss Dorothy Clarence's heart."

Then she turned scarlet at some thought which struck her, and looked uncomfortable; but I could not resist the opportunity of teasing her.

"There is no doubt that you will have to marry me," I said, "and so restore the Cluttons to their former glory."

"I don't see that," she said. "I—I don't believe in those old legends."

"I thought you said you did."

"Yes. I believe in some of them, but not this one. Besides, I am not going to marry anyone. I have decided to be an old maid. I like old maids."

"So do I. But I like young maids better. I am afraid, Miss Clarence, you can't escape. It's a question of destiny. You and I will have to fall in love with another; so we must make the best of it."

By this time she had quite recovered her equanimity, and was prepared to treat the matter as a joke.

"It seems rather hard lines that I should be obliged to fall in love with you," she said, with a mischievous gleam in her eyes. "I am afraid you are not my ideal."

"Perhaps not," I admitted. "But then, Dorothy, people never marry their ideals."

"I beg your pardon?" she said, raising her eyebrows with dignified surprise.

"People don't marry their ideals," I repeated.

"People don't usually address strangers by their Christian name," she replied severely.

"Certainly not. But perhaps you forget that we are not strangers; we are cousins. You can't seriously expect me to address my own cousin as Miss Clarence."

"Many thanks for your help with the sketch. It is time for me to go."

She packed up her drawing materials; but I noticed she did not offer to return my sketch, in spite of her indignation—she packed it away in her portfolio. However, that may have been an accident.

But I was not going to let her escape so easily.

"You will let me see you home, at any rate?" I said.

"I think not," she answered; "I live a long way off."

"So much the better; we can discuss family legends and other things."

"Besides, I am well known. If I am seen walking through the streets of Elchester with a stranger everybody will want to know who he is."

"You will, of course, explain that my name is Clutton," I remarked, "and they will grasp the situation at once."

She bit her lips with vexation.

"Come," I said, "don't let us worry about destiny or anything else. I will walk with you as far as your house. You must in mercy permit that, for I don't know a soul in the town. Then if you find an additional cousin such a nuisance, we will say good-bye for ever and a day. Will that do?"

"Yes," she said, rather doubtfully.

On our way through the town she pointed out the house where at one time a branch of the family used to live. It is now converted into a hairdressing establishment—a somewhat inglorious falling-off.

That evening Mr. Clarence called at the hotel where I was staying, and begged to make the acquaintance of a member of the family. I submitted gracefully, and we discussed the family tree and the family history until two o'clock in the morning.

I think few men have had a more difficult courtship than mine, for Miss Dorothy fought against the guidance of destiny with all her might. But I succeeded.

Curiously enough, the rest of the legend came true, for a distant relation left her a moderate fortune. The terms of her will ran: "I leave the sum to my kinswoman Dorothy Clutton, that the ancient prophecy may be fulfilled, and I beg that she will employ it as far as practicable in repurchasing the Clutton property."

And all this arose from a chance encounter in an old cathedral on a wet afternoon!

A HAPPY TELEGRAM.

Jane was going to be married. The contract was all ready to be signed that very evening, and the notary with her fiancee were to come down from town by the same train in time for dinner (Jane's father lived in the country); but as the happy groom-elect was never known to be on time in any of his appointments, Jane's papa had privately sent off a telegraphic dispatch half an hour ago, saying to the young man: "Do not come too late," so now all was in readiness.

The eventful night had come, the guests for the ceremony of signing the contract had arrived, and all was prepared. The little bride-to-be began to feel nervous as the hour drew near for Jean's arrival. Wheels on the drive! She flew to the door. The notary alone had come by the six o'clock train—no Jean. Twenty times at least she had gone to the end of the long terrace to catch a glimpse of his approach, but nothing met her view.

"Bah," said her father, "do not fidget, so, my child, he will come by the eight o'clock; he is very charming, this lover of yours, but he is always late."

"Oh, papa."

"Yes, yes, always behind time."

At eight o'clock they sent again to the station, but no Jean was there. Dinner was served without him. Jane trying bravely to be cheerful with her guests, but as the hours passed and Jean's lover appeared, she could bear it no longer. She left the room and ran to the end of the terrace, where she could weep in solitude, but a young cousin—a fine-looking fellow—had followed her and said gently,—

"You weep, Jane."

Jane sobbed out,—

"Oh, think what an affront—how can I face all these people?"

"Do you love him so much?"

"No, not so much now; but I was happy in being married; all my schoolmates at the convent are married already."

Jacques smiled.

"Never mind, said he, "we'll find another husband for you."

"You think that so easy? Papa was a long time selecting Jean."

"But suppose I know of another; eh, little cousin?"

Jane answered joyously,—

"Ah, then I should quickly give Jean his dismissal; but, oh dear, when I think that all the arrangements are made, that to-morrow the wedding guests will be here—I feel as if I should die with shame, I wish I could."

"Foolish girl, there is no need for that; if you take my advice there will be no excuses to make to the guests; the bridegroom of whom I speak will ask nothing better than to marry you at once, for he loves you; he has loved you for years; but he did not dare to tell you his love, because he believed you loved the other, and if you marry him to-morrow, he will be the happiest of men." Struggling with emotion, he ceased for a moment, then said softly,—

"Little cousin."

"Jacques."

"Well?"

"Well, I do not regret this Jean. I will not give him another thought. Bring your friend here."

Jacques took her hand.

"Have you not divined that it is I who love you, who adore you, who has loved you for years; I know I am not a sentimental fellow like the other, but my heart is yours alone."

Jane thought for a moment, then said quietly,—

"Jacques, I believe it is you I have loved after all, without knowing it, for as you spoke just now my heart beat with joy. But come, let us go to papa—the notary is here; there is nothing to do but change the name in the contract, and to-morrow we will be married. You will leave directly after the wedding breakfast, and when the other comes he will find me gone."

They laughed together like children, and ran to explain matters to her father, who was not quite so ready to catch the meaning.

"Why, you stupid fellow, did you never speak before?"

"Because Jane was rich and I poor."

"But now—"

"Now, I, too, am rich. A distant relative has left me all his fortune of two hundred thousand francs, which enables me to ask the hand of Jane without being regarded as a fortune hunter."

The father speedily became reconciled to the change of bridegrooms, saying,—

"All is prepared; the priest will be here to-morrow, and the marriage will take place after all—and when the other comes, how furious he will be! But he will be as he always is—too late."

* * * * * *

The happy couple had just driven away from the house next morning, when a note was brought to the old gentleman, with which was inclosed a telegraphic blank. It was his own dispatch.

He read the letter accompanying it and rubbed his hands.

"No wonder he is furious, poor fellow! I sent him a message thus: 'Do not come too late,' and the operator made it read thus: 'Do not come; too late.'"—Argonaut.

Mrs. Petter—Did you see that? Dixon seized that rocking chair and was into it before his wife had a chance to reach it. And on his wedding trip, too!

Mr. Petter—That's just it. There's where Dixon is smart. Nobody will suspect that he is on his wedding tour don't you see? And, besides, he gets the chair.

"Out of health?"

"No; some very big word."

"Outrageous?" suggested Miss Dubarie, somewhat discomfitted.

"No — not that — outlandish! and you're going to die and leave me all your money and then we are to travel in Europe. But papa says he don't see but what you're going to hold on forever. What is it you are holding on to, Miss Dubarie?"

"Hem!" said Miss Dubarie. "So your mamma's kind enough to consider me a friend, is she?"

"Mamma's going to invite you to visit us," went on the unwisely communicative Eudocia, "when the Fitz-Roy Fortesques are gone. She says she don't want them to be shocked with your Noah's-Ark ways. I had a Noah's Ark once," added the enfant terrible, "with a dog in it and Shem, Ham and Japhet."

"I dare say," said Miss Dubarie, checking a strong inclination to laugh, although she felt herself growing purple in the face with indignation. "I think I won't wait any longer, Eudocia; good-by."

And Miss Dubarie shook the dust of the Secor Brooks mansion off her feet.

"A pretty hypocrite's nest I should have got into there!" she said, half aloud, as she entered the vehicle she had been wise enough to bid wait. "Janet Heath, with all her faults, was at least frank and truthful enough. Drive to twenty-seven Bachelor Square, coachman!"

"Twenty-seven Bachelor Square was a tall, brown-stone building, full of studios, officers and sets of chambers, and Miss Dubarie was well-nigh out of breath before she reached a door at the very top, on which a card, neatly tacked, bore the inscription, "Herbert Smythe, Artist."

She beat a brisk tatoo on the panels with the handle of her sun umbrella and a voice answered,—

"Come in."

But to her amazement, the occupant of the apartment, instead of a young artist in a black velvet painting-robe, was a grim female, sitting very upright on a gothic chair, with tattered gloves and a bonnet beat on the side.

"Is Mr. Smythe in?" asked Miss Dubarie.

"No," answered the stony female; "he ain't. But if you're wise you'll sit down, like me, and wait until he does come in. I s'pose you've come after your bill?"

"Have yo?" asked Miss Dubarie, taking the first part of the hint, by depositing herself on a sofa.

"Yes—for the seventh time. He owes everybody—Smythe does. I'm his laundress, but you can ask the landlord and the wine merchant, and the tailor and the hatter, and—"

Then," curtly observed Miss Dubarie, "I should think you were all great fools for trusting him."

"So we be," said the woman, grimly; "and I ain't a denyin' of that, but you see he's kept us on the string all along with stories of his rich cousin, but he always made her will in his favor, and is goin' to leave him no end of money."

"Oh!" said Miss Dubarie, rubbing her nose vehemently with the end of the sun-umbrella handle.

"He says," went on the unconscious traitoress, "that she's as old as Methuselah, and can't live but a few days, anyhow; but I, for one, don't believe a word of it. But you ain't again' he you?"

"Yes," said Miss Dubarie, rising. "Please to give him this card when he comes in and tell him, if you like, the little conversation we have had."

And she was nearly down-stairs before the coolness, sitting on a pair of silver-bowed spectacles, had read the two words inscribed upon the card:—

"Miss Dubarie."

The heiress was very silent during her drive back to the hotel. Perhaps she was engaged in rendering the funeral rites on her dear departed relation! All that she said to herself was contained in one sentence,—

"I don't like being made a fool of," she mentally enunciated, "and I believe I've come very near it."

Janet Heath sat by the fire in the next evening's twilight, musing, perchance, half in sadness, half in shy pleasure, when the door clicked on its latch and in walked Miss Dubarie.

Janet started to her feet with a slight cry.

"Don't be alarmed," said Miss Dubarie, stroking the soft, brown hair with a kindly, reassuring touch. "I've come back to you, Janet Heath; for I believe, in spite of everything, you are the truest friend I've got, and that you love me, after all!"

"Indeed, indeed, Miss Dubarie, I do!" sobbed Janet, with her old foolish trick of truth.

"And so," said Miss Dubarie, "you can marry that Harry Dart of yours, and he can come here to live, and we'll all be a happy family together. Untie your bonnet-strings, Janet—they've got somehow into a knot—and make me a cup of tea. These railroads are enough to shake one into a jelly!"

So Miss Dubarie settled back into the old groove again, and when the letter from New York came she sent them back unopened, and when Mr. Herbert Smythe and the Secor Brooks family arrived in propria personae she obstinately refused to see them.

"What's the bothered?" said Miss Dubarie; "Janet's my heiress, and there's an end to the matter."

And the relatives discovered that they might as well attempt to move the Rock of Gibraltar as to alter Miss Dubarie's resolve!—New York News.

A Russian chemist has discovered a most powerful anaesthetic, several thousand times more powerful than chloroform. Experiments are being made at St. Petersburg to see if it cannot be enclosed in bombs, which would have the extraordinary effect of anaesthetising instead of wounding the enemy.

A FAITHFUL LOVE.

When pretty Hester Warren married Ezra Banks, who was twenty years older than she, and a shy, silent man out of touch with village life, everybody said that she made a mistake that she would soon regret. Yet, though village eyes kept keenest watch upon them, village prophecy was for once at fault. Hester's girlish beauty changed into comfortable middle-aged comeliness, and Ezra grew stiff and rheumatic, yet their devotion to each other was unchanged; indeed, after Nannie, their only child, married and left home, it seemed as if the pages of life had blown back for them and they were once more lovers, and the world was for them alone.

That was before Ezra had typhoid fever. Through his long illness his wife nursed him tenderly, but he came from it a broken-down old man, with his ears forever ringing with the common sounds to which his life had been set. He was slow in realizing this, but one day as he lay watching his wife and doctor, the knowledge broke harshly upon him. He could see his wife's lips move as she smoothed the bed with her soft, wrinkled hand, but he could hear no word. Then he turned his dull eyes, with a pitiful look of pain darkening them, toward the doctor. He, too, was speaking, but the deaf ears could catch no sound. His weak, peevish voice jarred suddenly upon their talk.

"Can't ye speak so's I can hear ye, stid o' mumbling so?"

His wife started and then cast a quick, imploring look at the doctor. She leaned down over the bed; her face was in the shadow and her husband could not see her eyes.

"Do you hear me now, dear?"

The words reached him faintly, and from a distance. He struggled with the sounds a minute or two before they resolved themselves into words.

"Of course I hear ye," he said fretfully, "only why don't ye speak up? I ain't so sick, be I?"

The words were a little clearer now, though still far off.

"You have been very sick, but are getting better fast. It has to be quiet for you, you know, dear, but you will soon be up, now."

The old man shut his eyes wearily; the effort had been a heavy one for him. His wife turned to the doctor, her eyes shining through her tears.

"I can make him hear," she cried, "I knew I could. I didn't believe Ezra could get where he couldn't hear me. And he needn't ever know now."

The doctor looked at her and said nothing. He was a young man, and it seemed to him pitiful in him.

But he had not understood the old man's strong constitution. In a few weeks he was about again, as well as ever, apparently, save for the sealed ears. His wife chattered to him in her old fashion, and kept out of sight the meekness she took for her strained voice; she cautioned the neighbors who came to see him, and thought that he did not know. But she was mistaken; there were other sounds—many of them—that had been woven into a life of nearly seventy years, and in place of these there was great vacant stillness; and he knew all.

One afternoon she found him sitting in the big wooden chair in the kitchen, studying his old twisted hands. He gave her a tremulous smile as she came in.

"I'm most broken up, Hester," he said.

"Don't!" she cried. "don't Ezra!—I can't bear it! We're both getting older, but that's all 'tis."

He shook his head sadly.

"No, 'tain't, Hester—I've been a-seeing it for a long time. You're young yet—you can see and hear just as you uster, but—I'm an old man, Hester. You've been a good girl, and we've had a happy life together, but I didn't calculate on growing old like this. I've got to thinking about it lately, and sometimes I think folks was right and it hadn't orter been."

The woman listened and a great pain seemed to beat up in her throat and choke her voice. She leaned over and put her hands on his knees.

"Ezra," she cried, and the appeal in her voice carried it with clear distinctness to him, "Ezra, have I ever said or done a thing to make you feel so?"

He looked up, startled.

"God knows you haven't, Hester," he said, earnestly.

"And, Ezra, if anything should happen to me—if I should be sick or helpless, would you love me less? Would you?"

A change came over the old man; it seemed for an instant that the face of his youth looked back at her.

"If it wasn't for your suffering, Hester, I wish you could see," he said almost passionately.

It was a few weeks after this that Mrs. Banks was severe cold. She was in bed for several days, and Hannah had her husband and child to care for, and her mother would not let her stay long.

"They'll be needing you—I can get along now," she said.

"I guess they can get along without me a little while longer," answered Nannie.

"What say?"

Nannie looked alarmed; she raised her voice and spoke with careful emphasis.

"I guess—they can get along—without me a little while," she repeated. Her mother nodded.

"I said it had been quite a while," she said. "I'm glad you're going, Nannie, though we shall miss you so."

Nannie's face filled with a pitiful tenderness. Her mother looked up suddenly and noticed, and a strange expression came into her eyes. She spoke with curious eagerness.

"Nannie," she said, "tell me true—don't I hear as I used to?"

Nannie's face flushed. With a sudden impulsive gesture she threw her arms about her mother, sobbing bitterly. But in her mother's eyes the strange expression grew into a glad light.

"Don't feel so, Nannie," she said. "I—I guess I'm almost glad. I'm going to tell your father now."

Nannie went home the next day sorely against her will. She told her husband that it almost broke her heart to think of them so; if it wasn't for little Nannie she would go back there and stay, but she couldn't take the child—it might hurt her throat seriously to have to be about to them. She was troubled, too, for the child had a delicate throat and she dared not take her often to see the old folks—and they would miss her so!

But it was not so hard; her mother spoke of it herself and said that she and father had talked it over, and they knew it would be best not to have the child there often. And Nannie mustn't worry—they could get along all right as long as they could hear each other. Indeed, it seemed as if the bond of suffering drew them closer together. It was beautiful to see the old man's care for his wife and his tenderness in speaking to her. The neighbors who had pitied at first talked often of it; they said they never saw two deaf people take such comfort in each other. Often on summer days the two high-pitched voices would be heard, and the people passing would smile at each other and sometimes linger a little.

"'Tis kind o' social to hear them," they said.

So the winter passed and the summer, and then quite suddenly, one night when the earth was lying hushed and silent under a soft fall of snow, the old man passed from the silence of his life into the greater silence that is beyond the reach of human voice.

The neighbors for miles around came to the funeral, and there was no talk of grave, decorous whispers, broken strangely when any one spoke to the wife. She was pale and silent; only once did she speak of anything that she wanted done, and then she called Nannie hesitatingly.

"You don't want him to speak so's I can hear. It—it wouldn't seem proper, somehow. It won't make any difference to Ezra now, and I"—she faltered a moment, and tender light came into the faded blue eyes—"I guess he can't say anything about my husband that I don't know a hundred times better than him."

"I'll tell him, mother," said Nannie gently.

Then a strange funeral—the neighbors spoke of it afterwards. The first figure that sat down to the words of tender calming spoken by the minister seemed to lend an element of mystery to the scene, and the contrast between the darkened room and the brilliant, sparkling world outside, flashed upon their eyes like a miracle.

They spoke of it on the way home and said that Ezra had been a good husband to her, and no one would fill his place.

"Nannie means all right," Mrs. Tarbox said, smoothing her black dress, "but she hasn't time to be set down and make a work of entertaining her mother."

"'Tis so," answered Mrs. Slocum, "and Hester'll miss entertaining Ezra, too. 'Tain't as though she wasn't afflicted, either-way. She's young and spry enough yet, but it seems most as if it's no use."

And Mrs. Banks, all unconscious of the talk, was being driven over to Nannie's. She was so quiet that her daughter did not disturb her.

"I don't know as I knew what to say to her, though she is my mother," she whispered to her husband.

They helped her tenderly into the house and Nannie put her into the easiest chair. From the next room a baby voice broke in upon them.

"Mamma, can I see dran'ma? Nannie wants to see dran'ma!"

Nannie was hurrying to the door when a voice stopped her.

"Let me have Nannie, please—it's so long since I have!"

Nannie stopped at the door, a great wonder in her eyes.

"Why mother!" she exclaimed.

Her mother looked up at her with a tremulous smile.

"Yes, I know. I meant to tell you before, but I couldn't, somehows. I've heard all the time; I was only deaf a day or two from cold. I thought I really was at first, and then I kept it up, because it comforted—him—somehow. He'd felt he was old and broken down, you know, but when I did, too, he felt better and cheered right up. There was only one thing—I did want the baby so! And it seemed as if 'twould break my heart when she did come not to answer her, and to have her strain her little voice to make me hear!"

"And you kept it up all these months?" said Nannie, in a hushed tone.

Her mother looked up; she was holding little Nannie with her eager trembling hands, and it almost seemed as if the golden baby head reflected a wonderful light upon her tired face.

"I guess when you've loved a man more than thirty years, that isn't much to do," she said.—Pacific Rural Press.

For a short distance a lion or a tiger can outrun a man, and can equal the speed of a fast horse, but they lose their wind at the end of half a mile at the most. They have little endurance, and are remarkably weak in lung power. Their strength is the kind which is capable of a terrific effort for a short time only.

ATHLETES' NEW HOME

SOME OF THE DETAILS OF ITS PECULIAR CONSTRUCTION.

One of the Most Costly and Beautiful Club Houses in the World—Over a Million Dollars Required to Complete and Furnish It.

At Fifty-ninth street and Sixth avenue, New York City, there is being erected one of the most costly and beautiful club houses in the world—the new home of the New York Athletic Club. It has been the aim of this club, one of the wealthiest in the world, to make the building an ideal home for club men; and its promoters have studied the something over one million dollars, the sum required to complete and furnish the house, has been expended in order to provide our wealthy club men with luxurious quarters for their physical and mental entertainment.

The building is eight stories in height, with a frontage on Central Park of 120 feet, by 100 feet on Sixth avenue, and has a depth of 200 feet, with a front on Fifty-eight street 26 feet wide. The tiers of the cornices is 140 feet above the sidewalk. The first story is of light red-stone, with little ornamentation, except over the main entrance, where the carving of the panels is elaborate. The terra cotta work is of a warm buff color, richly ornamented; and the thin Pompeian brick have a Salmon tone, with black mottlings. The roof is of red Spanish tiles. The coloring of the outside is in harmonious contrast with the green of the park and the cold brown of the adjacent buildings.

Of course the principal room in a structure of this nature is the gymnasium. It is situated on the fourth floor, and occupies the entire park front. Its immense floor space of 118 feet long by 56 feet wide, is free from all obstruction, save two pillars on the west side. Opening off the gymnasium are a boxing room, a wrestling room, a director's room, offices, etc. A movable stage has been provided, so that the gymnasium can be utilized for giving exhibitions. The gallery, which is really on the fifth floor, contains a running track, sixteen laps to the mile and seven feet wide. Near this track are located the fencing, measuring and lounging rooms. The distance from the floor of the gymnasium to its ceiling is 30 feet.

One of the most interesting rooms in the house is the main lounging and smoking room, situated in the center of the second floor and occupying 38 by 48 feet. The walls of the room is decorated with club trophies, pictures, weapons, relics and various implements of the sport and the chase. This is the appropriate place for sportsmen to come together to recount past adventures and triumphs and to meditate upon these yet to come.

The main entrance hall is 38 feet wide and extends through the center of the building. Mosaic tilings and fancy marbles furnish the decorations. The library is entered from this hall, and is rendered as quiet and secluded as possible. On this floor are situated a reception room, offices, telephone rooms and a serving room. The Fifty-eight street entrance has a runway for bicycles, with accommodations for 75 wheels, and an ample repair shop and cleaning room. This entrance opens into a large reception hall 40 by 18 feet.

A commodious Turkish bath, with separate plunge, is located in the basement. In order to do away with the annoyance of steam, etc., all the hot water and steam rooms have been placed under the sidewalk of Fifty-ninth street. Here also are located a special shower-room, linen, slab, massage, chiropodist, sleeping and attendants' rooms; also the gymnasium, which is 25 by 75 feet, and finished in white marble. Above the natatorium is a promenade gallery, which can be entered from the main hall, and between this gallery and the level of the bath room an intermediate gallery.

The boilers, engines, dynamos, storerooms and an ice-making plant have been placed in the sub-basement.

Twenty-seven large sleeping rooms and ten handsome parlors occupy the third floor. Locker, shower and massage rooms, together with the instructors' rooms are on the sixth floor. Here also are the billiard room, with thirteen tables, a spacious parlor, where the art exhibitions will be held, and the Board of Governors' room, cafe and chess room. The main dining hall, 116 feet long by 40 feet wide, is situated on the seventh floor, and faces Central Park. There is also a breakfast and supper room on this floor.

WHAT WOMEN LIKE TO WEAR.

An Evening Gown Proves Restful after a Tiresome Day of Shopping.

There is much to be said in favor of the evening gown, be it simple or elaborate, and in it many a woman has found the long sought fountain of eternal youth. The evening gown influences character; not only the character of her who wears it, but also that of mankind. Nothing else rests a woman, after a day spent in doing things either for the sake of duty or pleasure, like donning a dress entirely different from that which she doffs.

Is it small wonder, then, that the really smart woman forms the habit of wearing an evening gown 365 evenings in a year, whether she is going to an elaborate dinner, a magnificent reception or ball, or whether she intends to spend a quiet evening in her own quiet home?

Silk muslin, mousseline de soie, crepe de chine, and silk veiling make very smart evening gowns, and are the materials used by those who seek grace and simplicity rather than magnificence.

As to color, yellow and pink continue to be much in favor, but white in thick and thin goods holds the supremacy for evening wear.

The newest evening gowns are made very long, long enough to have a decided demi-train in the back, although it is not rounded to a point after the fashion of the old demi-train. The skirt is also cut to hang on the floor from one to three inches on the sides and in front. Of course every skirt is flounced in one way or another, the attached flounce being the most popular style.

It is often said that woman can never strike a happy medium, that she is either at one extreme or the other. This certainly applies to her sleeves in the evening gown of the day. She either wears absolutely no sleeves at all or else makes them so long that they almost hide the tips of her fingers.

Taffeta silk has taken a new lease of the affections of femininity for evening wear, and certainly no other material combines prettiness, daintiness and durability more successfully. Many of the taffeta skirts are made without lining, but in this case are worn over a very elaborate silk petticoat fitted and made after the fashion of a dress skirt.

Crepe de chine is not a new material, but it lends itself to great variety, so far as drapery and embellishments go, and is as good for midwinter as midsummer wear.

"Nope."

How Arab Babies Are Treated.

If a little Arab baby could talk, it would certainly tell its interviewer that a baby's life is not a happy life, and, as far as its experience went, it would certainly be telling the truth.

The higher the rank of the baby, the more necessary is it in the eyes of its parents and guardians that it should be reared in the manner prescribed by ancient custom. When a royal baby makes its appearance on the scenes, it is first washed and perfumed, and then a bandage is placed around its body. Then the little creature is laid on its back and its arms and legs are straightened, and its whole body is swathed from the shoulders downwards.

In this position it is kept for no less than forty days, but the bandage is removed twice daily that it may be bathed. This process is supposed to render the child straight for life, and assuredly there ought to be some advantages in it, for it is a period of misery to the hapless infant.

If the baby be a girl, holes, usually six in number, are pricked in her ears on the seventh day after her birth, and when she reaches the age of two months, heavy gold rings are attached to them, which she wears through life, except during periods of mourning.

On the fortieth day a most important ceremony takes place—the shaving of the baby's head. The disposal of the first hair is a very weighty matter, and it is of the utmost importance that it should not be burnt or thrown away, but buried, cast into the sea, or concealed in some crevice of a wall.

The fortieth day marks the child's entrance into society. Till that time it must be seen by no one but its parents, a few very intimate friends of the family, and the slaves on duty. Now it may be seen by all the world. Several charms are attached to it to preserve it from the "evil eye," and those are worn for a longer period by girl than boy babies. The favorite charm is a gold or silver locket worn suspended from the neck.

Every Arab baby is strongly perfumed from the time of its birth. Its clothing, and all articles of toilet are covered at night with jasmine, fumigated with amber and musk, and then sprinkled with attar of roses before being used.

Some Matrimonial Facts.

Widowers are more inclined to marry than bachelors. Widows are more inclined to marry than spinsters. Both facts are eloquent in favor of the comparative advantages of matrimony. For one bachelor that marries between the ages of fifty and fifty-five, seven widowers re-marry between these ages. These are marriages out of equal numbers of each class; the actual number of bachelors married will be greater only in proportion as they exceed by seven to one the actual number of widowers living at these ages.

Under the same conditions, for every spinster married between thirty and sixty-five two widows are re-married. Inasmuch as the total number of spinsters exceeds that of widows, and the figures given refer to marriages out of equal numbers, this disparity is not so noticeable; its existence, however, is beyond dispute.

Similarly, out of an equal number of widowers and bachelors, between twenty-five and thirty years of age, thirty widowers re-marry for every thirteen bachelors who enter the bonds of Hymen for the first time.

The Sweep in Switzerland.

In Switzerland the chimney-sweep is an official personage. He is the employe of the commune, receiving a fixed salary. He is also, as many tourists have acknowledged, one of the few sons of the Helvetian Republic who on Sundays and week-days sport a tall silk hat. On his official tour he takes it off blandly, and informs the householder that he is "empowered by the State to inspect his flues." In the canton of Grisons recently the post and title of "communal chimney-sweep" was opened to competition. The salary was £22 a year, and the candidates were numerous. But the strange thing was that they were mostly schoolmasters from Italy, a painful sign of the times in that unrestful land.

Thunder and Lightning.

It is believed that lightning is visible at a distance of 150 miles, but opinions still differ as to how far away thunder can be heard. A French astronomer has made observations on the subject, and says that it is impossible for thunder to be heard at a greater distance than ten miles. An English meteorologist has counted up to 120 seconds between the flash and the thunder, which would give a distance of twenty-seven miles.

Wash Cloth Bags.

Wash-cloth bags hang on the towel posts of the English washstands that are now often seen in city as well as country bedrooms, the dislike for plumbing in sleeping-rooms being wide-spread. These bags are a little smaller than the ordinary collar and cuff bags, otherwise are like them, being made of white or blue art denim and ornamented with some large design of embroidery. They gather neatly and separately and hold for laundering the wash-cloths used each day.

An Immense Plough.

The largest plough in the world, perhaps, is owned by Richard Gird, of San Bernardino County, California. This immense sod-turner stands 15 feet high, and weighs 26,000 pounds. It runs by steam, is provided with twelve 12-inch plough-shares, and is capable of ploughing fifty acres of land per day. It consumes from one to one and a half tons of coal per day, and usually travels at the rate of four miles an hour.

A Girl's Ideal.

A girl never marries her ideal. One reason is, that she seldom finds him, and when she does, she doesn't like him. Another reason is, the material man is so dreadfully unlike the one of her imagination.

A girl is an inconsistent creature, any way. As sure as she fashions the idol of her mind's eye as a great, fierce, black-moustached, brigandish-looking individual, the end will be a promise to love and obey some meek, freckled, red-haired person who cannot forget his affection for chocolate carmels and football scrimmages.

Most dreadful is the fate of the little woman who admires the jolly man who can laugh at paper-weight biscuit and boiled potatoes, for she invariably falls head over heels in love with some solemn stately man, whose very photograph makes her dumb with silent awe.

Robes de Luxe.

Among the robes de luxe for autumn wear will be those of very rich but exceedingly flexible and lustrous watered silk in black, made in princesse form with elaborate trimmings on the front from shoulder to skirt hem. The garnitures vary for those of different ages, size, and height. Very elegant jet pieces in quaint, beautiful designs combined on the most expensive gowns with black guipure lace, decorate some of the dresses that are cut low in the neck, the space being filled in with a guimpe of jetted net over white or colored satin or of cream silk laid in fine tucks. Even for elderly women some of these princesse gowns have a little rounded yoke of lace with neckband of mauve, plum-colored, dahlia, or black velvet, almost covered by the lace pleatings, which fall over the collar.

GOWN OF BLACK SILK WITH WHITE AP PLIQUED VEST AND REVERS.

The Newest Tailor-Made.

The tailor-made gowns designed for autumn wear have the combined effect of being both mannish and feminine in appearance. The severe cut-away coat promises to be very popular, but with it somewhat relieved by the soft fixings about the neck, which are now generally adopted in place of the high standing collar.

A lovely model of wool poplin has the skirt cut very tight fitting at the top but flaring at the base. The cut-away coat is trimmed around the edges with embroidered satin and is worn over a vest of satin. White chiffon forms the stock collar and ruffle, while the belt is of black velvet caught with a handsome buckle.

The Useful Blouse Waist.

The separate blouse waist grows more in popularity every season and it is hard to say when this convenient and indispensable article of attire will ever be given up. All sorts of materials are employed for their manufacture and they are made suitable for every occasion.

A lovely model is of rose colored taffeta, embroidered in white and trimmed with bands of guipure insertion. The corsage is cut square in the neck and is worn over a guimp of white crepe de chine. The sleeves, of taffeta, are close fitting and are finished at the wrist with a pointed cuff.

To Prevent Globes from Breaking.

The breaking of glass globes is very frequent, as all housekeepers know. Their durability may be greatly increased if they are tempered beforehand. This is done by putting them in a large pan, and covering them with cold water. The pan is then set on the range until the water boils. When that occurs it is removed from the fire, and the globes are allowed to remain in the water until it is perfectly cold. This is a very common treatment for lamp-chimneys, and is equally efficient in the case of glass globes.

An Italian sculptor has designed a sculpturing machine for duplicating statuary and carvings, in which several pieces of rough marble are set in pivots in a frame, and the carving tools for all are operated by the artist as he works on one of the pieces.

The origin of the custom of widows wearing caps is extremely ancient. It may be traced back to the Egyptian and Grecian practice of shaving off the hair in periods of mourning. But as without hair their was a danger of catching cold, the men wore wigs upon their heads, and the women caps.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

The up-to-date young woman returning from a sojourn at mountain or seaside is surrounded with as many boxes and bags as would have been considered enough to accommodate the wardrobe of an entire family in the days of our grandmother. But times have changed since then and among the bachelor girls accessories her bags and boxes are no small expense and there is always something new to buy.

Even suppose her to be provided with two or three general and hat trunks, there is her "dress-suit" case, for short trips; her bicycle trunk, her dressing-case bag, her case for mandolin or guitar, whichever it is; her valise for her mascot—all pets are mascots these martial days—and, the latest, her trunk for her bathtub! It is the thing to carry an individual "bath" now upon many such trips as one makes in the summer.

Hat trunks are made in two sizes—of about 20 inches square, to hold five, which is as many head coverings as an ordinary woman needs for a season, and the other about twice as large.

Inside, four little mounds are secured to the sides and bottom of the trunk. They are of woven wire, and those of better grade are covered with canton flannel. Packing four hats by this plan is done as simple as plunging eight hatpins into them, indeed, that is really all it is. The crown of each fits over one of the four mounds on the sides or bottom of the trunk, and two pins stuck through each hat and around preserve the hats against the worst the baggage-smashers can do. A small tray in the top is for the fifth. It is especially meant for a sailor style, being only a few inches deep.

Nearly all enamel trunks are canvas-covered, except those made for army officers. The last are small, black, iron-bound boxes, with an unusual number of red silk-lined places for hats.

A new sort, intended for the European traveler, is covered with olive green canvas, the slats secured and ornamented with nickel rivet heads thickly as a dog's collar or a leather stole has been done to make the trunk light in weight, to give the European railroads as little to gain as possible. The newest trunks for general use are made each with a special compartment in the top tray for shirtwaists. It holds several of these useful articles folded closely.

With the advent of cool weather the tailor made girl puts in her appearance, and a very charming creature she is, as lovely in fact as the fluffy and airy maiden who held full sway during the summer months at seaside and mountain, attired in filmy garments designed to please the eye and captivate the heart of the summer young man.

The make-up or the fin de siecle tailor made girl does not consist solely of a handsome gown of faultless fit, by any means. She must be, what every woman desires to be, crowned from the top of her pretty head to the tip of her well made boot. This means abundance of time spent on the toilet; brushing and arranging the hair in a becoming manner, keeping the skin in a good condition, lots of pearly whiteness and the nails well manicured. Then the hat must harmonize with the rest of her costume, while the veil to be worn must be selected with the greatest care and always neatly folded after wearing, as nothing tends to spoil a pretty costume like a tawdry or homely veil.

Gloves and shoes are of the greatest importance, and a rip in the glove or a shoe minus a button imparts a decidedly slovenly appearance to an otherwise dressy toilet. All these minor details takes time and thought, but a woman is well repaid for the extra trouble when attired for an afternoon walk or drive.

The chief change noticeable in the tailor made gowns for early fall wear, is the touch of feminity which is apparent in all the models, the complete mannish appearance having completely disappeared, and fancy collars, plastrons, revers and trimmings having usurped the stiff collars and shirt fronts, thus making these garments far more attractive than the severely plain modes of former seasons. This change is especially pleasing to the fairer sex, who highly disapproved of the wholesale adoption by the summer girl of the articles of attire which they rightfully consider their especial property.

Beige cloth is the material employed for another chic tailor made costume. The skirt made with a straight front gore, has a circular flounce extending from the gore around the sides and back. The cut-a-way coat, made with long swallow tail basques at the back is tartan lined and opens in the front over a vest of black taffeta, fastening with small jewelled buttons. The collar and revers are of satin, trimmed with stitched bands, these bands also forming the garniture on skirt and coat. A stock of white mousseline de soie is finished in front with a jaunty bow of plaid silk.

Stuffed Tomatoes.

Tomatoes stuffed with fish are a variation of baked tomatoes that is recommended. Canned salmon may be used or any kind of cold boiled fish. A sauce such as is prepared for any fish is made of butter, flour, and milk, paprika and grating of nutmeg being an addition. To this boiled sauce, before it is stirred with the salmon, add the powdered yolks of two eggs, boiled very hard, and the pulp of the tomato. The tomato shells are then separated with this mixture, the top covered with a little buttered cracker crumbs, and the whole baked, with frequent bastings, until browned.

Gray Poplin Calling Gown.

A pretty afternoon gown suitable for driving or calling is built of soft gray poplin with the skirt opening in front over a stipulated under dress of turquoise blue taffeta, and trimmed with two bands of lace insertion.

The bodice is made with a draped effect, caught in gracefully on the left side with a dull gold buckle, and bordered with insertion. The lower part of the sleeves are composed of guipure lace, while the upper portion of gray poplin is shirred down the center to give a full effect. A dainty little capots of grey satin straw, adorned with pale pink roses and black quills tops off this dainty costume.

New Disease Among Cyclists.

A new disease has broken out among cyclists, and is causing considerable trouble and perplexity to those medical men who, insufficiently acquainted with "biking" habits, have not yet hit upon its cause. It is known as "cyclist's fever," and its principal symptom is insomnia. The patient wakes frequently to find himself in a profuse perspiration, his heart beating violently, and the muscles of his body rigid.

The cause of this is that the keen emulation between cyclists has led to most of them disdaining food while on a run. They never think of refreshment till it is over. Then they have no appetite for it, and go to bed with the result described above.

The extraordinary thing is that men do not feel the strain so long as they are actually working. It is only when they have ceased that the collapse comes. Slight refreshment partaken on the way is, according to a high medical authority, sufficient to prevent this.

A Good Reminder.

The average housekeeper finds that her memory is shortest when it comes to the daily planning of meals. Her frequent cry that she cannot think of anything to order never seems to be suggestive to her of its own remedy. She has evolved a plan to order every day the round of family living, and if when the process is over she would arrange in a little book kept for the purpose the chief dishes that have appeared on the table during the twenty-four hours she will find that she quickly accumulates a valuable memorabilia. Instead of cataloguing these dishes under Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, it is simpler to classify them breakfast, luncheon, dinner; substantials and deserts. A housekeeper who has practised this plan since the beginning of the year has over and over again been amazed to discover how the useful simple dishes escape her memory without it.

Smart Fall Gown.

One of the prettiest gowns designed for late summer wear is built of rose colored drap d'ete, with garniture of white silk and black satin. The skirt is the fashionable sheath-like model, trimmed around the foot with soft folds of black satin caught here and there with cut steel buckles.

The corsage is finished at the top with square tabs of white silk and is worn over a full guimp of silk. The sleeves are decidedly close fitting. Black satin composes the crush stock, the cuffs and the wide ceinture about the waist, while wide black satin streamers fall to the end of the skirt in the back.

Organdie pillows have been made up this summer over silesia of the tint of the prevailing flower. The slip covers are, of course, made separately and are easily laundered. The room occupied by the daughter of the household in a pretty suburban home is dressed in organdie for the warm weather, the pattern selected being a white ground with cool-looking green flowering sprays straying over it. A bed-spread and valance, the trimmings of the dressing-table, curtains, and even the cover for the divan, are made of the organdie. Five or six pillows similarly covered are piled on the divan, the effect being extremely dainty and beautiful.

The Marriageable Age in Different Lands.

The "marriageable age" varies greatly. In Austria a "man" and "woman" of fourteen are supposed to be capable of conducting a home of their own. In Germany the man must be at least eighteen years of age. In France and Belgium the man must be sixteen and the woman fifteen. In Spain the intended husband must have passed his fourteenth year and the woman her twelfth. The law in Hungary for Roman Catholics is that the man must be fourteen years old and the woman twelve; for Protestants the man must be eighteen and the woman fifteen.

In Greece the man must have been at least fourteen summers and the woman twelve. In Russia and Saxon they are more sensible, and a youth must refrain from matrimony till he can count fourteen years, and a woman until she can count sixteen. In Switzerland men from the age of fourteen and women from the age of twelve are allowed to marry. The Turkish law provides that any youth and maid who can walk properly and can understand the necessary religious service are allowed to be united for life.

Heavily Taxed Islands.

In the Philippine Islands all males over twenty-one years of age must pay a poll-tax that equals about $20 of our money, and the women must pay $15. A man must pay a license to sell cocoanuts from his own trees or indigo of his own raising. Every article of furniture that he could call a servant is taxed. The curtain never goes up at the theatre unless £2 is paid to the Government, and for every act of slaughtering his own animals, clipping his own sheep, or felling his own trees the Philippine farmer must pay a fee to the Government. There is exacted Government tribute for getting married and for being buried, and at every step and turn of his life the tax-collector holds out his hand to him, and it is not a demand that can be refused. No wonder Spain wishes to keep a possession that yields such a return; no wonder also that the last sixty years have developed seventeen rebellions in the Philippines.

Iced Chocolate.

Iced chocolate is pronounced one of the most nourishing of summer drinks, as it is one of the most refreshing. The chocolate is made in the usual way, two teaspoonfuls to a pint of boiling water. It is cooked in a double boiler, and when cold a cup of cream is added. The process of beating the chocolate with a Dover beater is to be recommended for the serving of cold chocolate. It is more digestible as well as more palatable after this treatment. It is then served in tall glasses, partly filled with chopped ice. Iced tea and iced coffee are excellent stimulants for hot weather, if one feels the need of such. They perform the service of stimulating without heating as spirituous liquors do.

Made Them Lively.

Standing in front of his uncompleted building, a contractor uneasily watched the laborers as they slowly performed their work. The men who carried in the bricks and tiling from the street were especially annoying to him. They moved about at a sleepy and turtle-like pace, and did not appear to be worried in the least when their slowness was the cause of delay on the inside work.

While he was watching them in disgust an Italian with a barrel-organ halted directly across the way and began grinding out a lively march. He had been playing for several minutes before the contractor observed the marvelous effect of the music on the men who were carrying the bricks. They came out of the building like circus horses in a grand entree, hurriedly piled their loads on the carts and marched back into the building at double quick, stepping high.

The builder went across the street and give the Italian a shilling, in return for which he played lively tunes for a half-hour. During that half-hour the laborers did a half-day's work. Next day the contractor ran across another Italian and sent him over to the corner to play. And the labourers never discovered what a shabby trick had been played upon them.

In the Course of One's Life.

Without knowing anything about it, we breathe into our lungs an extraordinary collection of things during the course of a lifetime. Going daily to work most people will, at one time or another, inhale the following:

Fine particles of silica lifted from the road by the wind; minute atoms of chalk, lime, clay, soot; particles of dead and decaying animals; hairs, fibres of straw and hay, stable manure (the chief constituents of town dust); fragments of wood as sawdust and fine chips; fibres of linen and cotton; feathers; the dust from volcanoes, which is so fine that it travels round the globe; portions of food, moth-cells, seeds of vegetables, pollen, and many volatile substances of flowers; and salt, which comes from the ocean, and is found in the air of every spot on the earth.

Then there are the millions of microbes, dangerous and harmless. In the outer country air there are only two or three of these to a gallon; but eighty-five have been found in a four-roomed house, and 580 to the gallon in a one-roomed house. They are of infinite variety, and among the dangerous ones are those from which we get consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, influenza, small-pox, typhus fever, measles, scarlatina, diphtheria, and erysipelas.

To Clean a Bicycle Chain.

A bicycle often runs badly because the chain needs cleaning. The best way to clean it is the following:—Repaprika and grating of nutmeg being an addition. To this boiled sauce, before it is stirred with the salmon, add the powdered yolks of two eggs, boiled very hard, and the pulp of the tomato. The tomato shells are then separated with this mixture, the top covered with a little buttered cracker crumbs, and the whole baked, with frequent bastings, until browned.

TURNS WHITE WHEN SNOW FLIES.

Nature Lends the Ermine a Color for Protection.

Its beautiful fur is not the only peculiar thing about the little animal called the ermine. It is a full fledged hypnotist. Trappers and travellers relate many interesting tales of the power the ermine has of attracting other animals. It has a strong fascination over rabbits in particular. The rabbit seems to realise this instinctively, but once the ermine catches his eye he begins to whirl rapidly around and round in a circle, the ever narrowing circle, the ermine meanwhile turning as on a pivot and holding him and drawing him as with an invisible chain.

To see the ermine in the summer time you would never think it the same animal that furnishes such rich, beautiful fur for my lady's collar and the judge's robe. During the warm months it is brown, and not an especially beautiful shade of brown at that, but when winter comes, then witness the transformation! The ermine sports around in a coat of white, the only bit of color it deigns to retain being a dash of black on the tip of its tail. In making furs from the skin of the ermine, these black tips are made to accentuate the whiteness by arranging them through the fur in a becoming and artistic pattern.

Plants and Air.

Flowerless plants, in bedrooms, far from being hurtful, are beneficial, inasmuch as they exhale a certain amount of ozone and vapour, which maintain a healthy dampness in the air, and besides that are destructive of the microbes which promote consumptive tendencies in human beings. It is only flowers, and not plants which bear them, that do the damage. Ferns are innocuous; roses and sunflowers are pernicious, while they are in bloom; indeed, flowering plants, as well as ripening fruit, should never be allowed in a room where any one is sleeping.

For worms, which destroy house plants, place a number of sulphur matches in the flower-pots, with their heads downwards; it is an excellent remedy.

Fresh air is a great disinfecting agent in nature, tending constantly to dilute and remove all pernicious emanations from whatever source; and in proportion as we confine or restrain it, do we foster and propagate disease.

Surgical Wit.

Al Boardman of Minneapolis was in Sioux City recently. He told a new story illustrating the serious rivalry between his town and St. Paul:

An Irishman from St. Paul got hurt over at Minneapolis and was taken to one of the hospitals. His injuries were painful but not dangerous. However, he felt sure that he would not survive, and he constantly wailed to his surgeon:

"Och, docthor, do somethin' for me quick. I'm dyin'. I know I am. I'll never see St. Paul alive."

"See St. Paul alive?" blurted out the surgeon. "You'll die long ago before anybody ever sees St. Paul alive."

And it made that Irishman so mad he wanted to thrash the doctor, and nobody heard any more wailing from him, but he got out of the hospital as the earliest possible day.

The Real Meaning.

Little Harry—Papa, what does "Cuba libre" mean any way?

Papa—It means "Give us the offices or something equally as good."—Cleveland Leader.

Not Entirely Pitting.

First Member Musical Committee—Does the new soprano's voice fill the church?

Second Member—Hardly. The usher will tell me there are always vacant seats in the gallery.—Detroit Journal.

The Missionary's Secret.

The Scoffer—Why do you missionaries spend so much money to train the heathen to wearing clothes? Are dresses and bonnets a necessary part of religion?

The Missionary—No; but nothing makes a woman come to church regularly so well as knowing that the other women will be there in new bonnets.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

One Good Result.

"The war has developed John's memory wonderfully."

"In what way?"

"He can sing four lines of 'The Star Spangled Banner' almost correctly."—Cleveland Leader.

YEARS AND YEARS.

Harry—I don't see why our engagement is broken. Your father said postponed.

Virginia—Yes, until you arrived at years of discretion; and you know what that means, Harry!

Democrats Favor Donnelly.

According to a Trenton correspondent the Democratic situation is simmering down toward the nomination of General Donnelly. It is true that Mayor Seymour, of Newark, has a large following, but at the same time it is reported that he is not favored by some of the influential leaders of his party. The Mayor, himself, it is said, is not a candidate at all Should he persist in his determination not to enter the list there is scarcely a doubt that his friends would submit gracefully to the nomination of General Donnelly.

As a loyal Democrat the latter, no doubt, would command the united support of his party if any man could, and it is believed that he would poll a large portion of the Grand Army and militia vote of the State, with which element he is exceedingly popular. A prominent Trenton Democrat says that General Donnelly would carry Mercer county by over 1,000 majority, so popular is he with all classes of the people. As he is not a rich man by any means he could not be expected to open a barrel for campaign purposes. Senator Smith and his friends would see to that feature of the campaign. Should General Donnelly be nominated and then carry Mercer county, that would mean the election of a Democratic Senator where the Republicans would otherwise have a walkover with their candidate.

Allan McDermott believes that General Donnelly can be elected Governor with a short and sharp campaign, and he is very seldom astray in his prediction. In the past he prophesied Democratic defeats, as well as victories, and he generally hit the mark. Should neither Donnelly nor Seymour prove to be a favorite in the Democratic convention then perhaps the lightning might strike Judge Howard Carrow, of Camden. He has many friends throughout the State who would like to see him Governor, and his nomination, no doubt, would arouse the dormant Democracy of South Jersey.

The Republican Dilemma.

J. Willard Morgan, a prominent South Jersey Republican leader, who resides in Camden, has the following to say about the candidacy of Congressman Pitney for Governor:

"When the convention meets I expect to see Pitney nominated by acclamation after the first ballot. While not a word can be said against the candidacy of Mr. Voorhees, the chief stumbling-block to his candidacy is the fact that every Republican party cannot afford to lose a Senator from Union county. Mr. Voorhees cannot be Governor and Senator both, and he cannot resign as Senator without causing to be a Acting Governor. In other words, Mr. Voorhees is confronted by a serious dilemma, and as a matter of politics I consider it the wisest plan to nominate Congressman Pitney for Governor. Mr. Pitney will make equally as strong, if not stronger a candidate for Governor than Mr. Voorhees, and then there will be no question about the vacancy for Senator from Union county. This year Now Jersey Republicans want both the Governorship and the United States Senatorship, and the way to get them is to nominate Mr. Pitney for the Governorship. I am for Mr. Pitney personally, and as a matter of politics and all my efforts will be directed toward securing his nomination."

Mr. Voorhees' Attitude.

Acting-Governor Voorhees was seen recently at his home in Elizabeth by a reporter and asked if there was any truth in a report that he intended withdrawing as a candidate for the nomination for Governor. Mr. Voorhees replied as follows:

"I have said that I could not with dignity or propriety at this time declare myself as a candidate for the office. If it is the wish of the Republican party, as expressed by it in the selection of delegates to the convention, that I should be the nominee, I will feel justified in accepting the nomination. I feel, however, that the proprieties require that I should not take any steps to bring about my nomination, but that I should honestly, faithfully and diligently discharge the duties pertaining to my office, especially at this time, leaving to the people of the State the selection of their choice for Governor."

Gently Hear, Kindly Judge.

The Dunellen Call is a little paper but there is no prevent it having good broadside editorials once in a while, and here is one of them:

"I'd give him Hall Columbia if I owned a newspaper," we often hear from individuals who fancy they can get even with somebody for a slight, and seem to think that such is the province of a newspaper. Others again hear or know of some affair in which certain citizens have been engaged not greatly to their credit from the standpoint of certain other individuals, or it may be the joker who is always bringing to light the little escapades which are common to the community, but which seldom concern anybody outside of the participants. We enjoy a neatly turned joke as well as many others, but to parade the minor shortcomings of our neighbors we do not think is good taste either as an individual or a journalist, believing that while the acts of our neighbors or associates are not always to be commended, it is better "Gently to hear, kindly to judge."

The Case of Mike Watson.

The Newark Evening News makes the following comments on the great and only Michael Watson and his dealings with this city:

Plainfield has a novel and perplexing municipal problem on hand in which various ethical considerations are so involved as to complicated that an entirely satisfactory solution seems impossible. Some of the well-known citizens is one Michael Watson, who has attained notoriety because of his repeated violations of the city ordinances. Among these is that of liquor. Watson held the laws in contempt and paid his frequent fines with cheerfulness and promptness. Some time ago the authorities, particularly those of penally prosecuting Mr. Watson, entered into negotiations with him to see if some compromise could not be arrived at which would save him a law-abiding citizen. According to the Plainfield Press, Mr. Watson was promised that in consideration of his ceasing to sell illegally and giving the city a bond to insure its good behavior he would have a license from the Common Council. Mr. Watson carried out his part of the agreement. He closed up his place, gave the required bond, and, with the exception of one case of a man who knows that he has done a laudable act, waited for the city to fulfil its part of the compact. But he waited in vain. With Mr. Watson's bond in the hands of the city he had that gentleman on the hip and it procrastinated. One Council meeting after another passed, but still there was no license for Mr. Watson, and when he asked for an explanation he found a decided inclination on the part of the members of Council to repudiate the city's share of the compact. Here is a case of a man who is doing him to a strict accountability. Now Mr. Watson wants his bond back, and his bondsman, who is doubtless well acquainted with the peculiarities of his principal, is most anxious to be released from his obligation. From a legal point of view it is doubtful if Mr. Watson can make out a case, but from a moral point of view, in the opinion of a man who has a bargain, he has all the better of it. But Plainfield will scarcely suffer if the agreement be repudiated.

High Board Fences.

The man that first made use of the high board fence to shut off himself and family from a neighbor whom he could not bear the sight of was the promulgator of an idea that has had many patrons since, but for all that it is a foolish way of venting one's spite. The practice may be aptly described as "biting off one's nose to spite the face," since the fence builder generally suffers the same amount of inconvenience and discomfort that the fence brings to the one who has engaged his or her enmity.

Within the last few days residents *of the borough have seen a neighbor*hood quarrel culminate in a determination to build a high board fence which would effectively separate the disputants. But fortunately for the tranquility of the neighborhood where the insurrection raged the work on the fence has been halted. Presumably the builder has taken a different view of life and its trials—a happier one, probably. To finish the fence would be but to give passive personal satisfaction to himself, though, of course, when a man vows to engage in such an undertaking his mind is in such a frame that he scarcely stops to consider consequences except to demonstrate in some striking manner his dislike for another.

It seems, however, that the original intention of the builder has been toned down and the work on the fence has been stopped. It is a cause for congratulation. High board fences are ever an eyesore to a neighborhood, especially when viewed in the knowledge that they have been built in spite.

Union for Its Favorite Son.

In a conversation with Governor Voorhees, a day or two ago, the writer asked him if Union county would be solid for him. He laughingly replied that he saw no danger there at all, because he felt confident that the votes of all of its forty-two delegates would be cast for him. He was asked why he did not do some hustling throughout the State, as there was a fear, as expressed by his friends, that he was losing ground. To this he replied that he would be unjustified in him as the Acting-Governor of the State to go around and solicit support. He was satisfied to leave his candidacy in the hands of the people, in whom he had unbounded confidence, and he had no apprehension as to the result. "However," added he, "if I fail to get the nomination I will not feel hurt. I will lose no sleep should I be defeated. My record as Acting-Governor and as State Senator are such that I am sure it is worthy of endorsement. In the conscientious discharge of my duties I may have given offense to some people, but I could not help it. I feel that I have done my best according to my ability. My conscience is clear and, as I said before, if I do not get the nomination I will not worry myself over the disappointment."

Population, 20,000.

By a system of computing which has proved to be very reliable in the past, the canvassers for the new city directory estimate that Plainfield—city and borough—now has over 20,000 population. The combined census of city and borough taken three years ago showed a population of about 18,000. To those who have watched the progress and growth of the city this estimate seems very conservative. It is highly gratifying to know that in three years the town has increased 2,000 in population.

The Senatorial Situation.

In an editorial The Elizabeth Journal yesterday reviewed the Senatorial situation from the Republican point of view, and casting an eagle eye over the broad expanse of Union county stirred up enough candidates to fill the office for a generation. The Journal is the authority for the statement that Mayor Fisk, of Plainfield, is not anxious to succeed Senator Voorhees, though his friends hope that he will change his mind and make a hustle for the nomination.

Westfield looms up with the gentleman of the pure white smile—the Hon. Charles N. Codding—while Springfield trots out the august personage of J. Martin Roll, he of trolley fame in the State Legislature, Cranford looks to James H. Ferguson as the man to carry the Union county banner in the upper house of the State Legislature. Strange as it may seem, Rahway hasn't got a candidate as yet, but Rahway was always a little behind the times at the start and may yet spring one of her favorite sons.

And Elizabeth! Last, but not least, by any means. Did anyone ever hear of an office to be filled that was not aspired for by some Elizabeth statesman? If there was ever such an instance it was before the present political set was born. What The Journal says with regard to Elizabeth personifies the modest feelings of Elizabeth:

The situation seems to necessitate a call of the roll of popular, capable and available men in Elizab th. Judge Cross has already been referred to, and no man could be selected who enjoys the confidence and respect of the people to a greater degree. Former Mayor Rankin has been spoken of as a possible candidate. Frank Berges has been suggested. Hon. Wm. H. Corbin would make one of the ablest Senators this county has ever had. C. Addison Swift would be a very capable official and there are many others who would do credit to Union county, though they are not prominently named in this connecti n.

The other towns are yet to be heard from.

Death of Judge McCormick.

The death of former Judge McCormick by the act of his own hand casts a pall not only over Elizabeth but as well throughout Union county, because he was a citizen of distinction and worth. The details of his untimely end are harrowing, indeed.

Holding a place high in the esteem of his acquaintances, fresh from a long and creditable service on the bench, supplied with a competence sufficient to ensure him the comforts of the world for a life time, and surrounded by a happy family, his rash act is one of those inscrutable things which we of the world are unable to solve. But the fact is that he has halted. Presumably the builder has taken a different view of life and its trials—a happier one, probably. To finish the fence would be but to give passive personal satisfaction to himself, though, of course, when a man vows to engage in such an undertaking his mind is in such a frame that he scarcely stops to consider consequences except to demonstrate in some striking manner his dislike for another.

Judge McCormick was regarded as an upright judge, and was fearless in his administration of justice in criminal cases, passing sentences during his term on many noted criminals.

Judge McCormick was a courteous gentleman, and of fine personal appearance. He had very many friends socially, and was frequently called to preside at banquets of Irish organizations and at celebrations of a patriotic character.

The Cretan Turmoil.

The outbreak in Crete is in perfect logic with the whole situation. That it has not occurred before is a marvel. That such eruptions will keep recurring until Crete is either a separate principality under a ruler of its own or annexed to the Hellenic kingdom is a conviction of all unprejudiced observers familiar with the history of southeastern Europe. From time immemorial the Cretans have been a turbulent and indomitable race. As much as they have suffered at the hands of the Turk, their miseries have been less than those of other Mohammedan dependencies. They have retaliated with strokes of savage vengeance and inspired a wholesome fear. The heritage of hate between Musulman and Christian is incurable. Nothing more absurd than the arrangement of the powers, which agreed to govern Crete at arm's length by military rule without any unity of authority, can be conceived. The intense dissatisfaction of both factions was inflamed to the highest pitch. The immediate cause of the outbreak was one of many likely to occur. The Turk, jealous of any concession even to the Christian, the Christian boiling with rage at the least favor to the Turk, a hundred time ripened questions lying loose in Cretan life like dynamite ready for explosion, a race temperament which is in itself a smoldering firebrand—what can be anticipated at any time but the emeute.

Europe could scarcely have been expected at the close of the Greco-Turkish war to have turned over Crete to the defeated country. But it was perfectly possible to have erected a principality with perhaps Prince George at its head. This plan was debated and rejected. A similar solution has worked well in Bulgaria. There today Christian and Modern live peaceably side by side. Why should it not serve in Crete, that mother of Greek civilization now reduced to a semibarbaric status? As Crete is today it is a threatening volcano, smoking when not in eruption.

Schiller's patent of nobility has been recently found among the archives of the Wurttemberg government, whereupon the Frankfurter Zeitung waxes ironical and suggests that it is time for Germans to recognize the true nobility of Goethe and Schiller in their works, not in the comic prefix "von."

Carping.

The most disagreeable animal of the human species is the perpetual faultfinder. Whether he be the snarling literary critic, according to Lord Beaconsfield's definition, the man who has failed as an author, or the political Thersites forever searching for flaws in public policies and admitting no good but in his own microscopic perspective, or the social Jeremiah bewailing the taint and rottenness in the customs and tendencies of the period, or the peevish grumbler who is blind to all but the unpleasant sides of common things, it is the same spirit in different forms. But it is in the latter named phase that it becomes a nuisance. The characteristic is largely a matter of temperament, whether in a Nordau or a Lombroso, dignified by talent, or in the club's cynic, who mumbles petty epigrams to the mingled amusement and disgust of his fellows, or in the unhappy person forever finding fault with his circumstances and sitting himself up as a victim of fate. If he does not spoil life for himself for the carper often taught by his sleeve ly to spoil pleasure for others. The iconoclast by profession disdains to leave the agreeable illusions of others untouched. To do him justice, he is quite as ant to air his own skeleton as to rob ans neighbor's cupboard, and the effect is fully as repellent. Illusions are a very healthy part of life, after all, and quite logical in the working of the mental constitution. Without them existence would lack salt, and the habitual carper, pooh-pooh, truth teller, exercises as evil a function as when he displays his unmitigated perversities. This "bete noir" is in evidence everywhere and should be avoided as we avoid certain small unmentionable quadrupeds.

Peace Jubilation.

New York has been preparing for a grand national peace jubilee which should adequately express the sentiments of the people at the end of the war and their joy at the results of it. Chicago is also busying her eager patriotism with plans for a similar festival. From other cities and sections we hear of the same purpose to give official seal to the nation's happiness. This is admirable in motive and symbolic. It is the one thing which has made caste tolerable. Without it the nation would have ceased to have a royal family and nobility. It is the rigid preservation of the superstition of the "sangre azul," or blue blood, which more than anything else has ruined Spain. In the one case caste has embraced democracy and sucked its healthiest juices. In the other it has withered in barren impo*tence and withered the nation with it.*

An interesting matter not mentined in the protocol has been laid before the American members to be submitted to the joint high commission which has been sitting at Quebec to settle Anglo-American differences. This relates to a monument to be erected to the memory of Major Richard Montgomery, who fell on the Plains of Abraham in the American attack on Quebec in the Revolutionary war. Several attempts have been made at different times to get this accomplished, but the Quebec municipal council concluded that it would be scarcely consistent to memorialize the name of one who fell in an assault on British power, indeed in the attempt to capture Quebec itself. Yet a notable American some 20 years ago did a thing similar in scope and spirit. There was more magnanimity in Cyrus Field than in the Quebec officials. Mr. Field erected at Tappan, N. Y., a monument to the name and misfortune of Major Andre on the spot where the latter was made the victim of military justice. This was in spite of Andre's association with a treason which Americans detest so bitterly as one of the darkest blots on their history. It makes no difference that a memorial in the land of might defaced and overthrew the monument. Mr. Field's act was approved by Americans as a piece of generous and kindly appreciation, pity for the fate of a noble spirit involved in the toils of a colleague who committed a colossal crime. There could be no finer test of the rapprochement between Great Britain and the United States if, under the recommendation of Lord Herschell and his associates, the Quebec municipality authorizes this erection of a Montgomery memorial.

One of the humors of the day comes from a large and prosperous western city. During the Centennial fair of 1876 the Spanish commissioner presented the public library of the town with a pair of the first Toledo blades. During the recent war they were taken from the wall which they ornamented and hid away in a dark closet. The flash of Spanish steel did not alarm our soldiers nearly as much.

The growing interest in forestry is indicated in the recent appointments of professors to newly created departments in half a dozen of our big colleges and universities. By the time we have pretty much devastated our forest resources the people will have learned that restoration is more profitable than ruin.

Happiness is like a watch. It never marks the time but when you interrogate it, and the less complicated it is the more easily it is kept running.

The Decay of Caste.

An English contemporary deplores the breaking down of caste privileges and prejudices and finds in the consequences an omen of England's political and social decline.

"We have seen what fate has overtaken France in her rage for so called equality and the rule of the people on a grandiose scale. There is no clearly defined line drawn between the leisured classes and Jean and Jacques of the village commune, and the nation has known no real rest or peace since the 'Man of Sedan' was driven into the hands of his arch enemy—kinder to the royal captive than the raging mob which had once been imperialists of a pronounced type. Now, in one respect we have taken a leaf out of the French system of morals and ethics, and a page has been turned which is not perhaps too readily replaced. The governing or leisured classes are evading their responsibilities, and the masses are gradually usurping their places."

Since when has England begun this cable to perdition? Surely her tremendous power as a nation augmented to imperial and worldwide dominion really began with the expansion of her commercial and manufacturing interests. It is the development of these, among men of all ranks of the social cosmos to places of financial greatness which has broken down the barriers of caste. In other words, caste in England, or what is called so, for at least a hundred years has ceased to have adaman*tine walls. Any one can now break* through or leap over the partition who has the means and talents. It is this perpetual commingling of the old blood with the new, the re-enforcement of decayed families with the lusty vigor of the yeomanry and the middle classes, which have permitted the survival of so called caste to be a force in modern English life. The same influences work now which have been molding a great people for a century or more, only perhaps with more organic force and directness. The tool to the hand which can use it, place to talent which dares to aspire and seize, that is the slogan of modern English life, as it is of American. This flexibility of rank gradation, now submerging the old, now uplifting the new, has been the salvation of England. It is the one thing which has made caste tolerable. Without it the nation would have ceased to have a royal family and nobility. It is the rigid preservation of the superstition of the "sangre azul," or blue blood, which more than anything else has ruined Spain. In the one case caste has embraced democracy and sucked its healthiest juices. In the other it has withered in barren impo*tence and withered the nation with it.*

EXCESS CHECKS ABOLISHED

Central and Lehigh Patrons May Now Buy Tickets on Train Without Extra Charge.

Conductors on the Jersey Central and Lehigh Valley railroads have been instructed to issue no more excess checks for the ten cents extra that was formerly charged passengers who boarded trains without previously purchasing tickets at the ticket office.

The excess checks were redeemable at any station on their respective roads. According to the new war revenue law these excess tickets had to be stamped, and all that was paid for the stamp was therefore virtually given away by the company, for very few persons failed to redeem the checks at the nearest station.

The check system was found to be defective anyway, so far as insuring the honesty of conductors was concerned, for it was the experience of conductors that few passengers took close enough notice of the checks to interpret the meaning of the punch marks, and if a conductor wished to be dishonest he could punch a check several stations short of the passenger's destination and pocket the difference.

RIGHT TO KEEP HOGS.

A Much-Mooted Question in Raritan Carried to Vice-Chancellor's Court.

The right to keep hogs in the township of Raritan was argued before Vice-Chancellor Reed. The township was the plaintiff and Charles A. Hensler the defendant.

The township wanted a retaining order to prevent Hensler from excepting the hogs, it being alleged that they were a nuisance. Hensler was ordered to move the hogs, by a notice from the local Board of Health. His defense is that the hog ordinance of the borough of the township and the notice were inconsistent, there being no authority for the notice under the ordinance.

He claims that the ordinance merely sets forth a general condemnation of keeping hogs within the township. Counsel for the plaintiff argued that the notice was drawn up under the authority of the State law, which empowers the Boards of Health to abate nuisances.

BOWLING GREEN CHIRP.

THE PLEASURES OF A SCOTTISH GAME TOLD IN SONG.

The Ode Rendered to Christian Schepflin's Green—Written by H. B. Willis, of New Brunswick—It was Ladies' Day.

C. Schepflin's bowling green pre sented a gay appearance Saturday. The Middlesex Bowling Green Club held their semi-annual ladies' day, and one of the pleasantest afternoons in the history of the club was spent. The green was in fine condition, and the playing spirited and close.

Saturday was ladies' day and everybody gave place to them. No matches were played, but the green was resigned to the members of the fair sex who bowled for two prizes put up by Squire Lucky, a set of half-a-dozen silver teaspoons and half-a-dozen orange knives. Mrs. Alex. Pitttit, of New Brunswick, won the match with Mrs. George A. Veihman, of New Brunswick, second. Mrs. Pittitt, being first, was given the first choice. Squire Lucky made the presentation and presented the prizes with a few appropriate words.

After the bowling the members of the club and their guests, the ladies, gathered around the orchestra and sang a song, the words to which were composed by H. B. Willis, of New Brunswick, and dedicated to Mr. Schepflin. This song was sung to the tune "We Won't Go Home Until Morning." The song was called "The Middlesex Bowling Green Chirp," and the words are as follows:

Of all the games to me, sir,
There is none like the bowling green, sir;
Where the blows can all be seen, sir.
On a Saturday afternoon.

Our boys can sight the Jack, sir,
Our skips can give it a whack, sir;
They've always had the knack, sir.
On a Saturday afternoon.

When the game is half-way spent, sir,
The boys all rush for the tent, sir;
Where spirits never repent, sir.
On a Saturday afternoon.

We love to see the green, sir,
Charmed with our bowling queens, sir;
Our hearts will enjoy these scenes, sir.
On a Saturday afternoon.

We'll join our hearts and hands, sir,
And loudly praise the man, sir;
Who has treated us so grand, sir.
On Saturday afternoon.

CHORUS.

On a Saturday afternoon.
We can't get there too soon;
Oh, here's to the bowling green, sir,
The king of games now seen, sir.
On Schepflin's beautiful lea, sir.
On a Saturday afternoon.

Under the tent refreshments were served and the affair was made a pleasant one socially.

A Delicate Operation.

Another successful operation performed Monday by Plainfield's eminent surgeon, Dr. Eodicott, gives additional evidence as to his skill. The patient was Alfred Tabbert, aged twelve years, of 914 West Eighth street, who was a terrible sufferer from a pelvic abscess. The boy's life was almost given up and his condition was critical. The only thing left to do was an operation. This was performed and was very successful. The boy is now getting well and will recover.

—While the Front street trolley tracks are being repaired the street is in a miserable condition for wheeling. Large and small stones are left all over the roadway and it is rather difficult to ride a wheel with comfort.

RIVERDALES LOST TO THE OLD-TIME RIVALS

New York Athletic Club Team Defeated Them by One Score.

BUT ONE EARNED RUN MADE

RIVERDALE'S PITCHER DID NOT RECEIVE THE SUPPORT HE NEEDED.

Five Errors Credited to the Home Team—A Few Disputes With the Umpire, One of Which Boded Serious Trouble With the Progress of the Game—Little Heavy Batting Witnessed.

Those who went to the Crescent Oval last Saturday afternoon to witness the baseball game between the Riverdale team and the New York Athletic Club team enjoyed a rich treat, for one of the best contests of the season was played. These teams met only a short time ago when the Riverdale's were the winners by the score of 6 to 5, but yesterday the ome team was obliged to suffer defeat by a score of 3 to 2. Both teams played a good clean game, and save for a few disputes with the umpire, the contest was one of genuine pleasure.

The only earned run was made by the home team, while the visitors secured all of their runs on errors, five of which were made by the Riverdales. The visitors scored a run in the second inning, another in the third and a third run in the ninth In all they secured five hits off of Norton, the home pitcher. The latter pitched a superb game, and had he been properly supported throughout, the game would have gone to the home team.

Up to the last inning it was anybody's game, and it seemed to be more of a pitcher's battle. In the ninth inning the visitors scored a run and it looked as though they were not entitled to it. The home team claimed that Sackman, the runner, was touched, but the umpire thought differently and the run was counted.

In the seventh inning the visitors began to get ruffled and Dunne, their pitcher, was on the point of throwing up the game. The umpire, he claimed, was unjust and would not give him a strike. At this point Manager Haley, of the Riverdales, was induced to umpire, and the game went along with less trouble.

Timpson, of the home team, was the only man that was struck out, while Dunne, the catcher for the visitors, struck out once, and Murphy, their first baseman, went out twice on strikes.

There was not any heavy batting, but all flies were well taken care of in the field. Reinacker, of the home team, and Afield, of the visitors, each made a wild throw that cost a run, but outside of these two errors the other breaks were trivial.

Lederer, of this city, filled the position at second base with credit. He made several brilliant plays, as did also Smith, the catcher for the Riverdales. The visitors were a jolly lot of gentlemanly players and another game in this city with them would be enjoyed. Below will be found the score in detail:

THE BUGGY OVERTURNED

WALLACE VAIL WAS IMPRISONED UNDER THE VEHICLE.

An Unknown Bicyclist Ran Into Him and the Horse and the Bicycle Became Tangled Up—Horse Overturned the Buggy.

Former Postmaster Wallace Vail, of Clinton avenue, narrowly escaped serious injury last Saturday afternoon while he was driving home in company with his friend, Ira Hulburt, the West Front street contractor.

The horse, a spirited one, was going along leisurely, and just as they were going by Liberty street on Front street, a cyclist whose name could not be learned, turned from Liberty into Front street at a scorching pace. He either lost control of his wheel or else was so close to the horse and carriage that he was unable to clear them.

The rider and his wheel went under the horse, but the rider got out of the tangle before the animal began to kick. The animal's feet became fastened in the spokes of the wheel and he kicked vigorously. At the same time the heavy buggy, in which was seated the two men, was turned over. Mr. Hulburt managed to escape, but Mr. Vail was not so lucky. He was imprisoned and for a few minutes it looked as though he would not get out alive.

It was Mr. Hulburt's presence of mind that saved him, for he at once rushed for the horse and in a few minutes pacified the animal. The wheel was taken out and was found to be a total wreck. The buggy was turned right side up and Mr. Vail was assisted to his feet. He escaped with a few slight bruises and sprains, and the horse was not injured to any extent.

The wheelman got his wheel as quickly as possible and got away. He will not give his name, and seemed to be satisfied to make his escape. The buggy was not damaged and the two men were able to continue their journey homeward.

ROMANCE OF LOVE AND MAGIC.

Interesting Sequel to "Boy Wonder's" Visit to New Brunswick.

A romance of love and magic comes from New Brunswick, in which the "Boy Wonder," who spent several weeks at the Revere House in this city last winter curing the lame, the halt and the blind, is one of the participants, the other one being Miss Florence E. Brosee, of New Brunswick. In private life the "Boy Wonder" is known as Charles A. Dwinell.

After leaving Plainfield last winter he visited New Brunswick and duplicated the success that he had here in attractifig and securing the confidence of those whom he treated.

Chance led to an acquaintance with Miss Brosee, who is a young woman of refinement and comeliness, and it was whispered after a time that they were to be married in the fall. About three weeks ago, however, it occurred to the young couple that there was absolutely no good reason for delaying the wedding, and one fine morning found them on their way to Brooklyn, where they were married by Rev. R. Stanley Povey, rector of the Orange Street Episcopal church. This was August 21st. The witnesses were two intimate friends.

TROLLEY WIRE PARTED.

Traffic Slightly Delayed at the North Avenue Switch this Morning.

Owing to a break in the trolley wire at the North avenue switch Monday, travel on the street railway was interrupted for a short time. The break was sudden, and occurred at 8 o'clock just as the cars were leaving the switch. The end of the wire became unfastened and fell. As soon as it came in contact with the ground the circuit was cut off, and the broken end had to be hauled by a rope to a tie post and kept clear of the ground.

When this was done the power was turned on again, and the cars began to move. Only one track over the switch could be used during the time the wire was being repaired, but that was the only inconvenience experienced.

worth of amusement and instruction for 50 cents. It costs us the larger figure; you the smaller. We get enough of the half dollars yearly to enable us to spend the fifty thousand for your entertainment. That's business.

One of the reasons for the extraordinary success of the Great Interstate Fair is its broad business foundation. It's largely a question of honesty, as any successful business involves. We have always played fair, and the people know it. When we say that we shall give as good, if not better, exhibition this year, we know we are believed.

Come and bring the children.

The dates: September 26 to 30. The place: Trenton.

Secured Position as Manager.

Harry S. Hall, of East Fifth street, has secured a position as manager of I. Stoutenburg's ladies' tailoring establishment in Brooklyn, and began on his new duties Monday. Mr. Hall will soon take up his residence in Brooklyn.

RAY POOLE WON THE FIVE-MILE HANDICAP.

The Only Plainfielder to Get a Place in Saturday's Races.

GOOD ATTENDANCE THERE

TRACK WAS IN POOR SHAPE BUT GOOD TIME WAS MADE.

Harry Cuming Run in Hard Luck and Was Put in a Pocket by the Others—A Railway Rider Disqualified for Fouling Another Contestant —Poole Showed Great Reserve Power.

The amateur race meet held on the Crescent Oval last Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the Riverdale Field Club was a success. A good attendance of people was attracted to the grounds. It was a little after 2 o'clock when the races started. They were run off in good time and everyone enjoyed them. Despite the fact that the track is in a wretched condition, fairly good time was made. In the first race three was a limit of 2:55 placed on the riders in the first heat, and the second heat a limit of 2:46 was placed on them. This had a good effect, for the time made was 2:42. There was little loafing. In the next race, two-mile scratch, a time limit of 6 minutes was used in the first heat and 5:40 in the second heat. There was no time limit in the five-mile race.

The last race—the five-mile handicap—proved to be the most interesting, for Ray Poole, of this city, was the winner. He had a good-sized handicap, but then he is a new rider. He rode a fine race, and showed that he is a stayer. On the wind up he displayed a reserve of staying power and finished in excellent form.

Harry Cuming was the only other Plainfielder entered. He showed up well, but there seemed to be a lack of courage on his part. In several instances he was crowded outside, and on one occasion when he got inside the other riders placed him in a pocket and this worked disastrously for him.

In the last race Frank Boland, of Rahway, came in third, but was disqualified for fouling another rider, and the place was given to John King, of Newark.

Altogether the races furnished excellent sport and all were well pleased. The result of the races held in detail follows below, together with the list of those who rode:

ONE-MILE OPEN.

First prize—Silver watch; 2d prize—solid gold stick pin; 3d prize—gold link cuff buttons.

Winner—Milton R. Brown, Passaic. Second, Nick Pfiffer, Elizabeth. Third, John Allgair, Jr., Somerville. Time, 2:42; limit, 2:55.

TWO-MILE SCRATCH.

First prize—Silver pitcher; 2d prize, kodak; third prize, metal saddle.

Winner—Thomas Firth, Newark. Second, Milton R. Brown, Passaic. Third, Edward Warren, Kearney. Time—4:31; limit, 5:40.

FIVE-MILE HANDICAP.

First prize—Gold watch; 2d prize, set silver spoons; 3d prize, racing suit.

Winner—Raymond Poole, Plainfield. Second, Arthur Ross, Harrison. Third, John King, Newark. Time—12:40.

Those who rode in the first race, one-mile open, were John Allgair, Jr., Somerville; Milton R. Brown, Passaic; John King, Newark; Edward Warren, Kearney; Stanley Baldwin, Bloomfield; Thomas Firth, Newark; Nick Pfiffer, Elizabeth; Arthur Ross, Harrison; Harry Cuming, Plainfield; Charles S. Tate, New York.

In the last race, the five-mile handicap, the riders and their handicaps were Milton R. DON'T LIKE ICE CREAM.

A Curious Taste is That Held by a Native of Morocco.

Rev. Charles Mohammed, of Tangier, Morocco, made an interesting address Sunday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. men's meeting. He related many interesting facts concerning the customs in his native land and also told what is being done for Christianity in that country. He told how glad his people are to hear about Christ and rid themselves of the many false doctrines which they have held for many years. The address was listened to with great interest by a large number of people present.

Monday Mr. Mohammed left for Newark, where he will remain for a few days. He will sail for home September 28th, going by the way of London. He says that he prefers the excessive warm weather in his country to the kind experienced in this country. While on his trip here he indulged in a plate of ice cream for the first time, but he says that he does not like it. He has a preference for something warm, instead of something cold. He is much pleased with this country and with the people and with the hospitable manner of those whom he has met.

TIED SCORES TWICE.

John D. Kirch and A. I. Smalley Still Undecided Who is Best Marksman.

John D. Kirch and A. I. Smalley, both of the borough, have been rival sportsmen for some time. Both are good marksmen and play havoc with the birds when at the traps. This rivalry resulted in a match, which was shot Saturday, for fifty birds a side, and after two trials, the first time with fifty, the second with ten birds, the match was declared a draw.

The shoot began at 2 o'clock, and the men shot until too dark to see the birds. It took place on Johnson's farm, and was witnessed by a large number of sportsmen who were attracted by the prospect of good sport.

The birds were sprung five at a time until the fifty had been disposed of, then it was found that both men had killed forty-three. It was decided to shoot off the tie with ten birds apiece, but here they tied again, each getting six out of the ten. The tie will be shot off as soon as possible. Meanwhile the merits of the two trap shooters are being generally discussed.

A GREAT NAVAL COURTESY.

A Plainfield Couple on Board the Oregon While the Boat Was in Motion.

An uncommon courtesy to civilians was shown last Saturday afternoon at the Brooklyn Navy Yard to C. Maynard Evans, of East Front street, and Miss Margaret Vermeule, of Watchung avenue. The magnificent Oregon was being taken from dry dock and through Mr. Evans' acquaintance with Secretary Long and Admiral Bunce, permission was secured to board the Oregon and remain on board while she was being towed to a distant part of the yard.

Later in the afternoon another naval friend of Mr. Evans remarked that it was almost an unheard of thing for a civilian to be on board a war ship in motion, even if she was being towed by a tug. Surely it was an experience always to be remembered by the participants.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

A FAMINE OF ICE NOW THREATENS THE TOWN.

Supply of Hot Weather Commodity is Rapidly Giving Out.

PRICES ON THE INCREASE.

DEALERS REFUSE TO DELIVER LESS THAN FIFTY POUNDS AT A TIME.

Plainfield is Supplied by the Big Dealers at Lake Hopatcong and Mt Pocono, But Their Reserve is Nearly Gone and Maine Dealers are the Only One to be Appealed to, But They May be Too Far Away for Use

Where is Plainfield going to get her ice supply during the balance of the hot season and during the fall and early winter? This is the question that is interesting the ice dealers as well as the individual consumer. The question is hard to answer, for the supply is almost exhausted, and even the wholesale sellers are at a loss where to turn for more.

This is one of the most unique problems that has ever faced the ice consuming public. Very seldom is the crop itself exhausted, although sometimes its scarcity compels the dealers to demand an enormous price for it. But now not only is the price going up, but the supply itself rapidly diminishing.

A Press reporter has interviewed several leading ice dealers recently, and learns that this almost unprecedented thing, a dwindling away of the reserve, has actually happened. Ice dealers have not foreseen this, that is many of them have not, and that they will soon be unable to procure any is something they have not bargained for or taken into consideration.

Prior to September 1st ice was 10 and 20 cents a hundred weight. On the first of the month the price rose to 20 and 25 cents, the first sum being charged to large buyers, the second to private families. Another raise was threatened, but the sudden break in the temperature and the falling off of the demand has so far kept it back.

Although the ice dealers in this city generally keep the prices alike, they are in no association that compels one man to do just as the others do, so some of them have agreed not to place any ice in a house unless the order is for fifty pounds at least. All the dealers do not do this, but those who have have caused their patrons considerable uneasiness. Fifty pounds of ice a day is more than many people use, indeed, many of the refrigerators will not hold so large a piece, and they are compelled to purchase twice as much at a time as they can use, just to have it at all.

It is stated the other day that there was plenty of ice, but that the large dealers at Lake Hopatcong and Mt. Pocono, where most of the Plainfield ice comes from, were holding back for a better market. This is said by others, who have tried to buy at any price, not to be true; that the wholesale dealers are out of a supply as well as the smaller dealers. The only place, they say, where there is ice is in Maine and the cost of handling it, because of the loss and waste during transportation, makes it impracticable to send there for it.

The famine not only affects Plainfield, but other cities all around where the local dealers were not careful of their stock and sold it out too rapidly. One dealer in Bound Brook has not supplied his customers for four or five days. The customers found fault because he raised the price, so he grew disgusted, put his wagons in the barn, and told them to get ice if the could.

The customers soon came to his terms and begged him to resume business. The dealer was willing enough to do so, but during his few days' inactivity the dealer from whom he had been buying had sold out, so the Bound Brook man was placed in a dilemma.

He came here and begged one of the dealers, who, by the way, has enough ice on hand to supply his own customers for some time yet, to let him have some. But this dealer had refused to sell to Plainfield dealers, so could not accommodate his Bound Brook friend. Where he will get it is not known, unless he sends to Maine and takes the loss of transportation, etc.

The hot weather being nearly over, the demand will not be so great from now on, but a great many people take ice all through the fall and winter, and these will be the sufferers.

The Hygeia Ice Company expected to begin the manufacture of ice by Sept. 1st, but have not done so. Even if they had it is said they could not begin to supply Plainfield, unless they had all winter to lay in a stock and then begin with warehouses full. These are the facts as they appear to the dealers, many of them having sold their supply as fast as they could, not taking into consideration that ice was growing scarcer.

CRAZED PATIENT GOT OUT THROUGH CELLAR.

William Koehler Escaped From the Brookside Retreat.

SEEN BY WOMEN PICNICERS.

MADE AEBEE LINE FOR MOUNTAINS AND STILL AT LARGE.

Mrs. William Wilson Saw Him Escape From the Institution—After She Came Home She Notified the Institution of the Fact—Keepers Scoured the Woods and Mountains Without Finding Him.

Friday afternoon about 4 o'clock Mrs. William A. Wilson, wife of Chief Marshal Wilson, of Duer street, together with some friends, was enjoying a picnic on the mountains near the end of the Somerset street trolley line. The party was having a good time, when suddenly Mrs. Wilson noticed a man running toward her at a rapid gait. She also noticed that the man had come from the Brookside Retreat, and she at once thought that he had escaped. She, as well as the others in the party, were frightened and they hid themselves in a small building close by. As the man came nearer they could see that the expression on his face was one usually to be found on an insane person. His eyes bulged out, and as he struck the incline he did not slacken his pace, but seemed to run even faster.

As soon as the man passed on up the mountains Mrs. Wilson hastened home and telephoned to Brookside Retreat and inquired as to whether one of their patients had escaped. They made an investigation and soon discovered that William Koehler, whose home is in Jersey City, was missing. This was nearly an hour after the escape.

Dr. Cooley, proprietor of the retreat, was at once notified and he started his men out in search for the missing patient, but up to the present time he has not been found.

The story of his escape is somewhat similar to the escapes of others. He was out on the lawn in charge of one of the nurses, and nothing out of the ordinary was noticed. In the course of the conversation Koehler remarked that he wanted to go in the house. The nurse allowed him to go, but as he did not return right away nothing strange was thought of it. It was supposed that he had decided to stay in the house. This was the last thought of the man until the attention of the authorities was called to him by Mr. Wilson.

Wm Koehler is about 35 years of age. He was, it is said, employed by Mr. Hinman, of New York, as a salesman and expert window dresser. Several months ago he experienced a general breakdown in health and his mind became affected considerably. He was obliged to give up his business and was finally placed in Brookside Retreat. It is said that his case is a hopeless one and that he can never get well.

When he escaped from the retreat Friday he was well dressed in a suit of blue cloth. He wore a check bicycle cap and a pair of russet shoes. He has a heavy sandy moustache and is a handsome-looking person.

It is said that he stopped at the home of a family on the mountains and inquired for something to eat, and then proceeded on his journey. Dr. Cooley has the greatest confidence that the man will be caught and thinks that he has not wandered far away.

A Sudden Death.

Richard Stafford, aged forty-seven years, seven months and eleven days, died very suddenly Saturday at his home, 24 Grandview avenue, in the borough. He had been quite ill for a year past, but the end was not thought to be so near. He and his family formerly resided in England, but for several years past they have lived in the borough. A widow, one daughter and two sons survive him. The funeral services was held from his late residence Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

PITNEY SENTIMENT EXISTS IN THIS CITY.

Voorhees, It Is Said, Is Not as Strong as Was Thought.

THE PLAINFIELD SUPPORT.

AMONG CERTAIN PARTY MEN PITNEY MAY GET A SHARE OF IT.

During the Last Ten Days a Marked Change of Opinion Has Come Over Some of the Republican Politicians—One Leader Thinks That He is a Better Man for Governor than Voorhees

Will Plainfield give all of its support to Foster Voorhees or part of it to Mahlon Pitney for the Governorship? This is a question that is not settled in the minds of everybody in this city. It is a fact that cannot be disputed that Acting-Governor Voorhees has not the support in this vicinity that is generally supposed by the G. O. P. leaders.

During the past few days a change in opinion regarding the candidate for Governor has taken place in this city. The influence of Mr. Pitney's boom has been felt in this locality and the Voorhees' boom is a little on the wane.

When a party leader was asked Friday if Plainfield would be unanimously for Voorhees, it was with some hesitation that the reply was given. The G. O. P. leader remarked that Voorhees would fill the bill, if elected, but, he continued, "Pitney is a brighter man and a person with greater capabilities. He is certainly a strong candidate and every day he is gaining friends. I have been surprised to learn that Pitney's boom is being so generally felt in Plainfield. There are many strong points about him that heartily commend him to the people.

"The apparent inactivity of Mr. Voorhees has cost him a number of friends and votes that he is not likely to regain. Another thing that will be sure to act against him is the overwhelming support that is sure to be given Pitney from the northern part of the State, while the voters in the southern part may combine, leaving those in the central part to fight the cause for Mr. Voorhees alone. At any rate it is not going to be a walkover for Mr. Voorhees, for Mr. Pitney will surely make a great race for the honors.

"It would be natural to suppose that Plainfield would contribute her support toward Mr. Voorhees as he is a Union county resident, but it is not altogether unlikely that the people of this city will extend their support to Mr. Pitney."

A YOUTHFUL HOSTESS.

Little Miss Ryno Celebrated Her Third Birthday Very Pleasantly.

Twenty-two bright little tots from five months to five years of age, assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Corra Ryno, Coddington avenue, Friday afternoon, between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock, and joined in the happy occasion of celebrating the third birthday anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Ryno's daughter, Emma Hazel.

The young hostess, assisted by her parents, entertained the guests and everyone enjoyed themselves to their heart's content. The little ones preferred the spacious lawn to the house and all had a jolly time in romping about on the green. During the afternoon refreshments were served on the lawn and this was an enjoyable feature. The young celebrant received a number of pretty and useful presents from her friends, and she will always remember the occasion with pleasure.

GRIST OF CITY COURT

A NUMBER OF SMALL CASES FOR JUDGE DEMEZA TO DECIDE.

Quarreling Neighbors, Jealous Hackmen and Various Other Offenders Were in Court for Justice or Punishment.

Quarreling neighbors and jealous hackmen were in evidence in the City Court Saturday, and furnished the City Judge with grist enough to turn out of his legal mill. The usual Saturday morning crowd was on hand ready to laugh at the smallest excuse, or to sympathize with the prisoners as opportunity offered.

Two hackmen, Peter Seader and Richard Day, first occupied the court's attention. Seader claimed that Day swore at him one afternoon recently, and without any provocation whatever. This Day denied, and said the charge was made through jealousy, and that Seader "was too mean to eat." The City Judge told both parties that they ought to have a gentle application of the rod made to them, as they were acting childishly over nothing, and decided to think it over. W. G. DeMeza represented Day.

Michael Honan and his wife, and Katherine Cahill, of South Second street, were arraigned on complaint of Officers Meyers and Totten on charge of being drunk and disorderly a week ago Friday night. All three protested their innocence, and so the case went to trial. Honan plays the flute, and on the morning in question sat out on the piazza of his home and dispersed melody from a pair of strong lungs through the notes of a popular air.

The music had a strange effect on his wife and Mrs. Cahill, for soon their feet began to keep time to the music, and later to dance. This exertion proved too much for all three, so excursions were made to a neighboring saloon. Before long they had drunk a little too much, and were in that condition where they didn't care what they did, so when Officer Myers made his appearance he and Totten were assailed with a volley of epithets more forcible than polite. Myers and Totten stood it a while. During their watch Myers says he saw Mrs. Honan "split" Mrs. Cahill's husband with a broom stick, and later says that Mrs. Cahill and her husband had a free fight in an upper room.

Complaints were made against all except Cahill who took no part in the row except to get beaten. At the conclusion of the trial Mrs. Honan was adjudged guilty, but sentence was suspended in her case; her husband was fined $5 which he paid; and Mrs. Cahill was given 30 days in jail.

Two or three cases were laid over for a week. Charles Saueracher, who is charged by Mike Doyle with using bad language, will come up for trial this week. Frank Vail charges Mike McCarthy with using bad language. Vail was not in court Saturday to press the charge, so that, too, was laid over for a week.

William G. DeMeza, as counsel for William Hickey, wanted to withdraw a complaint made by him against Mrs. Clelmor, of West Third street, charging her with using profane language. The court refused the request, and set the case down for this week.

FUNERAL OF GEORGE ECKHARDT.

Victim of Explosion of Camden Chemical Works Laid at Rest.

The funeral services of the late Geo. Eckhardt, who was killed so suddenly while at work in a chemical factory at Camden a few days ago, were held Friday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock from the home of his aunt, Mrs. Clare, 87 Jackson avenue. There was a large attendance of friends and relatives.

The services were in charge of Messrs. Parker, Lolzeaux and Jennings, members of the Plymouth Brethren, so called. Each one spoke at some length regarding the life of the deceased, and pointed the present to Christ, who would comfort and console. The remarks altogether were full of interest and sympathy. At the close Mr. Loizeaux offered a fervent prayer.

An opportunity was given to view the remains and all were impressed with the lifelike appearance. There was a pretty floral display, including a wreath and star combined, from the fellow-workmen of the deceased. There were other smaller tributes.

Interment was in the North Plainfield cemetery and those who served as bearers were Wm. S. Lolzeaux, Wm. R. Rushmore, Ivan Hardingham, Theo. Cuming, Fred Lolzeaux, Sydney T. Ferrin and Joseph Hawkins, who assisted.

To Begin Work Again.

The Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company will begin work at once on their new ice-house at Washingtonville, which was blown down by the wind Wednesday afternoon. The company will tear out the debris, and begin anew the work of construction. They will take charge of the work themselves and have it done by days' work.

Primaries for Congressional Delegates.

The Republican primaries to elect delegates to attend the Congressional convention will be held Monday evening, September 19th. The convention will be held September 20th.

MORE TIME TO DECIDE IN G. O. P. CAUCUSES.

Plans to Have Polls Remain Open Two or Three Hours.

NOT ALL IN HARMONY NOW.

PRESENT REPUBLICAN MACHINE MAY BE RELEGATED TO REAR.

A Well-known Politician Expresses His Views on the Subject, and Says the People are Getting Tired of the Way Things are Running—He Would Like to See the City Judgeship Salary Increased.

The question as to whether a political clique is to govern Plainfield, or whether the people at large are to act in that capacity, now seems to be the problem that is soon to be solved.

For some time past there has been efforts made to change the complexion of the city executive committee of the Republican party, and in some respects the interested ones have succeeded. The time has now arrived when a strong effort is to be made to reclaim lost ground, and at the meeting of the city executive committee to be held next Saturday evening something is likely to drop that will be heard all over the city.

One of the new plans on foot is to have the committee decide that at the coming city primaries the polls shall remain open for at least two or three hours, so as to give all of the people in each ward a chance to cast their ballot.

Heretofore it has been the custom to present a previously prepared ticket, and shut it all in the same breath, and the rule, as many know, has been to run the primaries with lightning rapidity. This sort of thing has disgusted more than one voter in the city, and in fact many have remained away from the polls on this account.

A newspaper representative interviewed one of Plainfield's most prominent and trustworthy Republicans recently and from him much of a political nature was learned. The party man stated, without any hesitation, that something would have to be done this year or else the Republican party would suffer great losses. Regarding the present City Council, he said: "It seems as though that body has not made a single move during their term but what they have stepped on someone's toes. They have acted directly in opposition to the majority of the people, and if they suffer a reaction they will have no one to blame but themselves. They have enforced the Martin Act and many other acts that have worked a hardship on the poor people, and not only on the poor people, but on those in moderate circumstances who could scarcely afford the expenses demanded."

"What do you think of the City Judgeship?" was asked.

"Well, regarding that office, I think it would only be fair to increase the salary to $1,000 a year. A lawyer with a good practice has no desire to take the office and lose time that might bring him in a much greater sum of money.

"I am sure of one thing," continued the politician, "that there is a dark spot on the moon for someone unless a change takes place. The opposition is working very strong and are not losing any time. The thing for the party to do is to set itself right with the people and thus win back their confidence for the future. This will success be the result at the next election."

Regarding the Councilmanic and Mayoralty honors the party man had little to say other than that a great change could be looked for at the next election.

Off for a Western Trip.

Charles H. Schermerhorn, manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company's office in this city, accompanied by his wife, left Saturday on the New York Central Railroad for Omaha, Neb., where they will attend the eighteenth annual reunion of the U. S. Military Telegraph Corps and the Old-Time Telegraphers Association. Mr. Schermerhorn takes the trip through the courtesy of the Western Union Company, who recognize in him one of their best employes. R. H. Gorrell will take his place in the local office while he is absent.

Question About Heating and Ventilating.

The foundation for the new borough public school is now laid, but there is a temporary delay in the work owing to the fact that the Board of Education has not decided about the heating and ventilation of the building. Members of the Board have been visiting other schools and have been getting pointers on heating and ventilation. The plans call for steam heat but there seems to be a difference of opinion as to whether that system is advisable.

New Hotel at Pluckamin.

James Brown, Jr., has commenced the erection of a hotel on the site of the old one in Pluckamin. It will be 42x66 feet in dimensions, will contain 22 rooms, will be fitted up with hot and cold water and electric lights and will cost about $6,000.

HOW BEST TO TEACH IN SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Thirty-Fourth Annual Convention of Middlesex Association.

IN SESSION AT NEW MARKET

MANY INSTRUCTIVE PAPERS READ BY EXPERIENCED WORKERS.

An All-Day Session Was Held, and Was Attended By Teachers From All Over the County—Dunellen Presbyterian Church Wanted to Withdraw to Affiliate Elsewhere, But Was Opposed.

The 34th annual convention of the Middlesex County Sunday-school Association was held in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, New Market, Sept. 8th. There were 3 sessions, morning, afternoon and evening, and the edifice was crowded at all three.

It was a gathering of Sunday-school workers from all over the county, and the sessions were devoted to addresses by prominent Sunday-school workers from other places as well as Middlesex county, also discussions and conferences. The entire day was devoted to the convention, and all who attended felt well repaid.

The morning session opened at 10 o'clock with devotional services and a greeting to the assembled delegates by Rev. E. Peterson, pastor of the church here. The response was made by Rev. Thomas S. Long, of Dayton, president of the association. A conference, conducted by Rev. E. M. Ferguson, came next. The subject of this conference was "Grading in Sunday-schools." This was followed by another, "The Sunday-school Library," by Rev. C. E. Taylor, of Cranbury.

At the afternoon session Rev. E. M. Ferguson, general secretary of the State Association, gave his report, and the report of the county secretary and treasurer was read by H. B. Zimmerman, of New Brunswick. An address on the secret of effective teaching was given by Rev. Linn E. Wheeler, of New Brunswick.

The Primary Hour, under the direction of the New Brunswick Primary Union, was led by Miss Blendina Smock. The lesson was taught by Mrs. J. N. Harris, and some of the ways of meeting the responsibilities of superintendents and teachers were told of by Mrs. D. E. Stelle. The principal address of the evening was delivered by Dr. Robert R. Doherty, of New York.

A collation was served by the ladies at the close of the morning and afternoon sessions.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, B. S. Letson, of Bolton; vice-presidents, Rev. Melville E. Snyder, Rev. Frank Fletcher and Rev. C. F. Taylor; corresponding secretary and treasurer, H. B. Zimmerman; recording secretary, Charles P. Stevenson; members of the executive committee, Charles Naffey, D. W. DeForest, L. T. Titsworth, F. A. Brown, J. F. Fulton and W. C. Crosby; superintendent of primary work, Mrs. F. H. Skillman; member of State executive committee, G. W. Barnes; township secretaries, Cranbury, Howard Butcher; East Brunswick, E. B. Drake; Madison, Charles D. Brown; Monroe, Edward Livezey; Perth Amboy, J. J. Deitche; Piscataway, H. V. Dunham; Raritan, Charles A. Whitlock; New Brunswick, Rev. Joseph Horner, Dr. J. N. Harris and Charles P. Stevenson; North Brunswick, Thomas A. Letson; Sayreville, C. W. Fisher; South Amboy, George C. Taylor; South Brunswick, R. M. Cole; Woodbridge, T. Henry Morris; delegates to the forteenth State convention to be held in Paterson, November 15th, Rev. Frank Fletcher, Rev. Thomas S. Long, Rev. Alen S. VanDyke, Samuel G. Garretson, William C. Acken, Frank A. Brown, Mrs. J. M. Harris, Mrs. Ella Stilts, Mrs. J. B. Smith and Mrs. E. W. Vail.

A lively discussion arose during the afternoon session caused by the Dunellen Presbyterian church desiring to withdraw from the Middlesex Union, and join the Union County Union. The convention opposed this, and finally the matter was put on the table. The convention adjourned to meet next year at Highland Park.

Craig A. March Retained.

Craig A. March has been retained by Constable Pangborn to fight his opponents in the celebrated piano case that is now figuring so prominently in the borough. The piano, it is claimed, is owned by Richard Menzel, and he is contesting the right of the creditors of Dr. Wards to sell the instrument for debt. Lawyer W. S. Angleman represents Mr. Menzel, while Murphy & Blatz represent the creditors.

The Case Adjourned.

The case of Mrs. Laura W. Farley against Isaac N. Fields, as guardian, for board for Charles R. Outen, which was to have come up before Justice Nash Friday afternoon, was adjourned to September 21st. Judge Cowenhoven, of New Brunswick, represents the plaintiff and Senator Reed the defendant.

HIGH BOARD FENCE, MONUMENT OF SPITE.

C. W. Krausse Shuts Off the View of His Nearest Neighbor.

RESULT OF A FAMILY FEUD.

CHARLES C. CAMPBELL THE OTHER FACTOR IN THE DISTURBANCE.

Quarrel Started With the Women and the Husbands Finally Became Involved in It—Campbell Says He Doesn't Care, But His Landlady, Mrs. Reick, is Very Much Concerned.

The residents of Vine street and vicinity are much interested in a fifteen-foot board fence that C. W. Krausse is erecting between his house and that occupied by Charles C. Campbell, the two dwellings being but a few feet apart. The monster fence is a monument of spite to a neighborhood quarrel, which has raged with more or less intensity for sometime past between the Krausses and the Campbells.

Just how the disturbance between the two families started is not known, but it originated in a trival way and was of a moderate nature between the wives of the two men at the start. Acrimonious remarks, direct and indirect, were passed between the women and finally a few days ago the husbands became involved in the quarrel. Since then the feeling between the two families has been very bitter.

The top of the fence reaches to the second story of each house and runs from the back to the front of the lot. It shuts off Campbell's view of Vine street from the east. But Krausse suffers equally with Campbell in this respect, because he will be unable to see any further than the western line of his own property.

Campbell is a tenant of Mrs. Louise Reick, and intimates that Krausse can build fences sky high and it wont make any difference to him. He doesn't expect to stay in town very long, anyway, so he can stand it if Krausse can. There is one person that this great concern is to the high board fence, however, and that is Mrs. Reick. The fence is a terrible eyesore to her when she thinks of her home without a tenant and people coming to look over the advantages with the prospect of renting it, and then viewing the high fence. She has consulted a lawyer in order to secure redress.

Krausse, however, has built the fence wholly on his property and has no fear of interference with his plans.

A SCORCHER INJURED.

WHEEL STRUCK A RUT AND RIDER BROKE HIS COLLAR BONE.

They Were Riding at a Twenty-Mile-an-Hour Clip Near Fanwood When Pat. Culhane, Pacemaker, Was Thrown.

The second serious accident as a result of bicycle scorching to occur in this vicinity within a week happened at Fanwood Friday afternoon, when three Rahway wheelmen were spinning along at a twenty-mile clip, and one of them, striking a rut in the roadway, was thrown from his wheel and besides breaking his collar bone, cracked another small bone in the shoulder and sustained other painful bruises and cuts.

Robert Graham, Frank Ludlow and Patrick Culhane were the scorchers. Culhane was setting the pace as the party neared the Fanwood hill. When near Sheelien Brothers grocery store he attempted to pull out to let Ludlow take the pace, and in doing so his wheel settled into a rut in the road. The bicycle lurched to one side and Culhane went flying through the air ten feet high and landed headforemost twenty feet away. He was knocked insensible.

Graham and Ludlow narrowly missed hitting the prostrate body. As soon as they could dismount they hurried back and picked up their insensible companion. He was carried into the grocery store and Dr. Westcott called. The doctor worked over the injured man for several minutes and succeeded in restoring him to consciousness. After attending to the fracture and the wounds the doctor had the man removed to the Central Railroad station, where he was put on board a train and sent home. It will be several weeks before he will be able to ride a bicycle again.

Improvements at Mt. Olive.

The Mt. Olive church members are thoroughly aroused to the interest of beautifying the house of worship. The frescoe work is completed, and in a few days the entire auditorium will be a room of beauty. The color of the walls are cream and pink, the woodwork light walnut and the pews dark walnut. The seats will be handsomely cushioned.

Lost His Hat Anyway.

As the special train carrying the Illinois soldiers home was passing Picton Station Friday, one of the men put his head out of the window and was struck by the mail catcher. His hat was knocked off and rolled into the ditch. Whether the man was seriously injured is not known.

POLITICIANS' DAY AT WAVERLY FAIR.

The Gubernatorial Aspirants Were All on Hand.

PITNEY SEEMS TO PLEASE.

ACTING-GOVERNOR VOORHEES HAS A TALK WITH SEWELL.

The Only Conspicuous Absentees Were Vice-President Hobart and Attorney-General Griggs—Enthusiastic Reception for Voorhees—Democrats There in Abundance—Daly Is Still in the Race.

Thursday was "Governor's Day" at Waverly, and, as usual, there was a great gathering of politicians from all parts of the State. It was the first occasion the men who manipulate party affairs have had to get together and "size up" the Gubernatorial situation. In consequence there was a great display of boons, a deal of handshaking and promises to support, some of which will be kept. Large pumpkins, tall corn and even the horse racing were secondary in public interest to the gathering under canvas on "Politicians' Hill." There the Gubernatorial candidates reported their friends and the public looked on with gaping curiosity. The only conspicuous absentees among the Republican leaders were Vice-President Hobart and Attorney-General Griggs.

Judge J. Franklin Fort, who had not returned from Lake Champlain, dinging his Gubernatorial boomlet with him, had a hearty handclasp from his South Jersey friends. His Essex county rival, Franklin Murphy, chairman of the State committee, was also on hand to look after his own political fences.

State Comptroller Hancock, County Clerk Barker Gummere, Alexander C. Ford and Former Assemblyman W. J. Wilber, were among the Mercer County politicians, who kept their eyes on the political weather vane. State Roads Commissioner Budd, former Senator Parry and Former Assemblyman Wildes reported that Burlington county was not yet ready to declare itself on the Gubernatorial situation. Congressman Pitney's friends from North Jersey declared at he was gaining strength daily roughout the State and they are confident that he would be the nominee.

Acting-Governor Voorhees' adherents were able to counteract the Pitney sentiment somewhat by giving the logical candidate" an enthusiastic ception when he climbed up the hill out 2 o'clock. United States Senator Sewell had arrived a short time fore and was holding an informal ception. Acting-Governor Voorhees on sought General Sewell and they d a short but earnest talk. Later oorhees' friends circulated the report that Senator Sewell had assured Acting-Governor of his support. was also reported that, in order to ve the complications that threaten arise from his nomination for vernor, Voorhees would resign as nator in time to have his successor cted in November, and would turn er the acting-governorship to aker Watkins, of the House of Asably, who is next in the line of succion. It is not true that Attorney-neral Grey has been asked to give opinion as to the Acting-Governor's ht to hold the office after presenting resignation as Senator.

Although the Republican politicians re most in evidence there were veral Democratic Gubernatorial obabilities in the throng. The stlemanly and urbane quartermas-general of the State, R. A. Donly, had cordial greetings for his s of friends. He was assured of pport from South Jersey by State mmitteeman Harry R. Paul. Former Congressman Johnston Cornish, o is nursing a Gubernatorial bee up North Jersey, was on hand. Least t not least of the would-be Governs, to arrive was Senator William y, of Hudson.

"Your Uncle William is still in the e," he said, "and he believes he ll win."

Major General Joseph W. Plume, o has just returned from Camp ver, greeted his military and polial acquaintances. There is no ellhood that his name will be ntioned in the Democratic Guberatorial convention now that he has ned from the army without having been fortunate enough to get into ffice at the front.

While the Gubernatorial booms were shing John Kean, the popular canate for United States Senator, to head Senator Smith, was able to et all the rivals with a smile and a rty handclasp. Kean still has no ial for the Senatorship and he will ard the Republican party valuable in the election of the legislative didates.

The launching of the Pitney boom l confab at Waverly yesterday will idly crystalize the Gubernatorial ation. Essex united, would hold balance of power in the convention, but if there is a three-cornered fight in Essex, as now seems probable, it is hard to tell how the delegation will stand. The Voorhees men claim that the Acting-Governor cannot now be beaten for the nomination without seriously jeopardizing the party's chances at the polls. They try to make light of the Senatorial complication and deny that his popularity has diminished. But, withal, they are casting anxious glances toward South Jersey.

LEGAL FIGHT FOR THE FIXTURES.

Plainfield Beef Company Trying to Secure Them to Settle Their Claim.

Another step in the proceedings instituted some time ago by the Plainfield Beef Company against John A. Murphy, a butcher keeping a shop on South Second street, was taken Thursday before Judge Lewis Watter in the District Court at Elizabeth. The goods in Constable W. R. Mattox's hands had been replevied by John F. Jackson, of New York, and this matter occupied the attention of the Judge a part of the day. Judge Atwater finally reserved his decision for one week.

Murphy owed the Plainfield Beef Company a bill. The company sued him, got judgment, and execution was issued. Constable Mattox levied on the goods, but on the day of sale Jackson, who keeps a butchers' supply store in New York, sent a notice on to the constable to the effect that the goods belonged to him.

Jackson's story was that he fitted out Murphy's store with fixtures to the amount of $194. Murphy paid $50 down and gave four months' notes for the balance, the property to remain in Jackson's name. Jackson says that before the execution had been issued Murphy came to him and told him to take back the fixtures, as he couldn't pay for them. Jackson sent his men around to take away the goods. Mattox had just made the levy and retained possession of them.

Instead of trying the right of property in a justice court, Jackson replevied the goods. Jackson was represented by Frank P. McDermott, of Jersey City, and Murphy & Blatz, as counsel for the Beef Company, looked after the interests of the constable. As there is nothing on record to show that any business transactions passed between Murphy and Jackson, Judge Atwater said that the whole case hinged on whether the delivery of the fixtures to Jackson by Murphy, before the execution had been issued, was an actual delivery or not.

Park Avenue Asphalt.

If possible the City Council will endeavor to have Park avenue asphalted this year. To do this there is much that has to be done. The laws affecting such work have to be examined, and those petitioning to have the street asphalted will have to signify their desire to pay their proportionate share for the work. It is the desire of the Council to do the work if possible.

A PATH OF WRECKS IN STORM'S WAKE.

Elements of the Air Combine to End the Heated Spell in a Very Spiteful and Disastrous Manner.

The Storm Was But of Short Duration, But While it Lasted it Was of Terrific Force and Did a Vast Amount of Damage Throughout This Section—Frail Objects Were Sent Flying in All Directions—Lights Put Out and Streets Blocked—Persons Shocked.

The fierce heat of the past ten days broke in a spiteful manner Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when the forces of wind, rain, electricity and hail combined for fifteen minutes to make one of the most terrific storms witnessed in this section in many a day.

The sky clouded up quickly and a few heavy gusts of wind preceded the rainfall, which seemed to come as if from a cloudburst. The wind was soon blowing a gale somewhere about sixty miles an hour. The force of the wind was powerful enough to separate the tiny rain drops into still smaller particles of mist, which was whirled and eddied around corners and across streets in sheets that at times looked like driven snow. Sharp lightning and terrific peals of thunder gave a spectacular effect to the storm and frightened many timid people. For a few seconds hail fell with stinging force in some sections of the city.

The wind twisted and tore frail objects from their fastenings and sent them flying in all directions, while more substantial articles were also demolished.

The small streams that have run almost dry during the hot spell of weather were quickly turned into turbulent streams, and the rolly water swept the banks of the channel of everything that was not securely fastened. Street gutters were turned into little rivers and emptied their contents into the sewers until they became clogged or else filled the declivities under the railroad bridges to such a depth that travel was obliged to be suspended for the time being.

The loss to farmers in this vicinity was quite heavy, as all standing crops of fruit and grain were more or less damaged by the wind and rain.

On West Second street, in front of Trinity Reformed church, an unused gaslight post together with the glass globe and frame was completely wrecked.

A young shade tree in front of Mrs. Mary L. Force's property, corner of Watchung avenue and East Second street, was broken off near the ground. On Third place, in front of Mrs. R. M. Stover's residence, a tree was taken up by the roots and laid across the street, and the entire top was taken off a tree on Second place. A tree standing in front of the home of Rev. J. W. Richardson was split in half, as was also another tree in the rear of the Park Avenue Baptist church. On Park avenue a number of trees went down in the storm. Near Cedar brook a large tree blocked Park avenue for a long time and people were obliged to go across lots. A tree in front of H. D. Haven's house, on the same avenue, was split in half, and another tree in front of Mr. Finch's house was treated likewise. A shade tree in front of Dr. Taylor's home on Park avenue was completely ruined. At the corner of Sixth street and Central avenue, and on East Sixth street, between Park avenue and Sycamore avenue, trees were destroyed.

One place that shows the effect of the storm is the city park. While no trees were blown over nearly everyone of them was stripped of their branches and leaves. The park, so far as trees go, is a total wreck, and it looks as though a cyclone had struck it.

A very disastrous result of the storm occurred at the home of Mahlon Vail on Park avenue. His large barn was struck by lightning, and was not only destroyed and its contents, but a horse and cow were also killed. Mr. Vail in trying to save some of his property narrowly escaped being killed.

At South Plainfield a new house in course of construction was blown down and completely wrecked. Another new house was wrecked on Spooner avenue which was owned by Herman Hansen. The storm played with it like a toy and left most of it like kindling wood.

A result of the storm was the injuries received by Wesley Brokaw and his sister, Miss Brokaw, of West Front street. They were talking over a telephone to each other when a heavy flash of lightning affected the wire. Miss Brokaw's right arm received a shock and it was sometime before she had use of it. Her right ear was burned, as was also the right ear of Mr. Brokaw. The injuries are not considered serious.

In the vicinity of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church the storm played great havoc with trees and wires. The streets in that locality were strewn and in some cases blocked with debris. It kept the city employes busy clearing away the obstructions and making travel possible.

On Franklin place several electric light wires were dangling in the street and several narrow escapes from shock were reported.

All during the evening the Plainfield electric light station was besieged with callers, both in person and by telephone, who either had no light in their homes or on their street. The employes of the light company were kept busy all night getting their wires straightened out.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company suffered great loss both in this city and vicinity. There were nearly 150 telephones out of order, and those who could use their 'phones kept the operators at "Central" busy answering all sorts of questions.

The cupola on the western corner of the First Baptist church was blown down, and fell with a crash during the height of the storm. In its fall it carried off a quantity of slate, and broke away the cornic from the roof over the side door. The cupola was about ten feet high, and was broken so in the fall that it cannot be placed in position again.

Lightning struck the weather vane on J. Fred MacDonald's grocery store on East Front street. A flag was flying from the pole and this the bolt cut off from the pole by the halyards, and the flag blown down and lodged in the trolley wires on Watchung avenue.

The western end of Rheaume's lumber shed was blown away completely. A great opening was left, exposing the interior to view. The lumber contained inside the shed, and the flying pieces of planks, which were ripped off, went in all directions.

At Dunellen and Grant Market the storm did considerable damage, tearing up trees by the roots, breaking off branches, and strewing debris all around the yards and streets. The Larabee house, on the road between Dunellen and New Market, came near being destroyed by a gigantic tree which was blown over along side of it. In its fall the tree just missed the house, but one of its branches ripped away a good-sized piece of the gutter. A tree standing in front of James Wilson's house was struck by lightning. A colored family by the name of Lisbon, living next door, say that their house was badly shaken by the shock. An immense pine tree in Adam Dealaman's yard fell in the terrific wind. Some of the roots just grazed the windows, but did no damage. The aspect of the village today is much changed. Limbs of trees are lying all around, the streets are untidy and covered with masses of mud and stones, and every here and there is a fine tree, either in some one's yard or just outside in the street, lying prostrate. It will take several days to clear up the debris.

A large tree was blown down on the corner of Watchung avenue and East Sixth street, and blocks the road. Another one fell between Sycamore street and Park avenue on East Sixth street.

A piece of hard luck befell the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company. Their large ice house at Washingtonville, which was in the course of erection, was blown down and is a total wreck. The loss is estimated at $1,500. The building was 75x150 feet and the roof had not yet been put on. When the wind struck the house part of it was carried out into the roadway, narrowly missing Mrs. DeHass, who was driving past. Part of the building was left standing, but that part is so twisted and blown out of shape that everything will have to be taken down and rebuilt again.

On Craig place, near the Thorn building a large tree was uprooted and blown over, and on Elwood place, in front of Mr. VanMiddlesworth's home, another large tree was blown over and nothing but the trunk was left standing. At the corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue a tree was blown over on J. Fred MacDonald's home. Other trees were uprooted on Liberty street and West Front street, doing more or less damage. On Liberty street a mattress was carried out of a room and traveled for a considerable distance.

Another result of the storm was the wrecking of J. F. McIntyre's windmill on North avenue. This huge piece of machinery was tossed about like a piece of kindling wood and totally wrecked. Across the avenue the wind completely demolished a large brick chimney on the North Avenue railroad station, but fortunately no one was injured.

A large sign was torn from in front of F. W. Dunn's grocery store on North avenue and carried into the street. Other signs about town also suffered considerably from the storm.

Under the Park avenue railroad bridge the water was high, as usual, and traveling was impeded. In many other parts of the city high water stopped travel for a time.

During the heavy blow panes of glass were broken in the trolley cars, passengers became frightened and screamed, while there was little chance of escape from a severe drenching from the rain.

Both the city and borough fire alarms were blown, but this was due to a break in the wires.

Another result on North avenue was the carrying of a large American flag from Dan Robert's livery stable by the wind through North avenue to the railroad station

William Sebring, of LaGrande avenue, has just spent about $100 on his lawn this spring, grading it, seeding it and setting out shade trees. Yesterday afternoon the wind blew over one of four fine young trees which Mr. Sebring had set out in front of his place, destroying the beauty of his lawn. Mr. Sebring will have the tree replaced.

One of the delivery horses of Neuman Brothers stepped on a live electric wire lying in the roadway at the corner of Madison avenue and Sixth street shortly after the storm and was knocked down. The injuries were not serious, however.

A young woman, a relative of DeWitt Frazee, of South avenue, and employed in the clothing factory on West Front street, became frightened during the storm and was taken with convulsions. She was taken care of by her friends and after the storm removed to her home in the ambulance, where she is doing well. Dr. Pittis was called and in attendance.

A French woman living in the West End, was seized with fright while walking along Clinton avenue near Green brook, during the storm and she was taken into the house of A. J. Brunson. It was thought that the woman was struck by lightning, but an examination did not disclose such a fact. The woman suffered greatly from convulsions. She was later taken to the hospital in the ambulance and seems to be doing well. No serious results are apprehended in either of the above cases.

What Happened in the Borough.

A large tree at the corner of Mercer and Sycamore avenues was uprooted and it fell across the electric light and fire-alarm wires, causing the fire-alarm bell to ring frequently and putting off the electric lights for the night. The borough was in total darkness and it was with difficulty that people managed to get around.

At the corner of Duer street and Linden avenue another tree was wrecked and blocked the street for sometime. It was taken away before midnight. On Duer street near Linden avenue a tree was blown over and and it fell against the house formerly occupied by H. Zimmerman.

On Harrison street two houses were struck by lightning. David K. Allen's house was struck first and nearly all of the slate was torn from the roof, and many panes of glass broken. From there the electric fluid skipped across the street and struck Special Marshal Begley's house. Here the front windows were wrecked, the chimney demolished and other damage of a smaller nature resulted. Fortunately the occupants of the houses were not injured. The loss on both dwellings is fully covered by insurance held by E. M. French & Co.

In front of Mark Lees' home on Chatham street a large tree was snapped off and the largest part of it lays on the house, preventing exit or egress. In the yard adjoining the rectory of St. Joseph's church on Jackson avenue a tree was split in half, and at various places along Watchung avenue limbs of trees are scattered. In Chatham street, on the house occupied by Mrs. Zeiss the chimney was wrecked completely.

On the west side of the borough there was considerable damage, consisting of wrecked trees chiefly, and the destruction to telephone, electric light and fire-alarm wires was quite general. In front of the Park Club the electric light pole was uprooted and the fire-alarm box thereon disconnected from the system. Wires in that vicinity are completely out of service.

All through Washington Park the streets are littered with limbs of trees and in some cases lawns were almost ruined by the falling debris. Workmen have been kept busy all day cleaning up streets and lawns about the borough.

A result of the storm is to be seen in the rear of William Campbell's house on Duer street, where four large trees were torn up. So far as can be learned no buildings were disturbed in the borough to any extent.

Two hours after the storm the fire-alarm system was placed in running order by Electrician Stahl, and the only box out of use is the one on Washington avenue. Just as soon as the electric light company erects a pole this box will be connected.

Chief Marshal Wilson was kept busy after the storm in looking after many matters that needed his attention.

A report was current that E. Z. Allen, a resident on the mountains back of the borough, was struck by lightning and killed. This report was not confirmed.

CONSTABLES AT ODDS.

A LIVELY TIME OVER THE OWNERSHIP OF A PIANO.

Constable VanHorn Succeeded in Getting it Out of Constable Pangborn's Control—A Complicated Legal Tangle Now Ensues.

When Constable J. W. VanHorn sold the mahogany baby grand piano, attached by the creditors of Andrew D. Warde, the erstwhile proprietor of the late New Jersey Military Academy, on September 6th, at the residence of William N. Pangorn, to W. R. Brokaw, the highest bidder at the auction, he little knew what difficulty he would encounter when he attempted to deliver the goods.

After the sale Brokaw sent piano movers to get the piano, and gave them an order for the delivery of it, signed by Constable VanHorn. Mrs. Pangborn did not know anything about the matter and would not allow the piano to be removed from her residence. When VanHorn sought Pangborn to explain the matter to his wife, Pangborn also refused to allow the piano to be removed wishout a written order from the lawyers who represented the plaintiffs against Warde. When this was obtained, he still refused to deliver the piano until the amount of a claim of Woodhull & Martin was paid to him. This was also obtained for him by VanHorn. When Pangborn, to his surprise, demanded that storage be paid to him for the care of the piano. VanHorn claims that he had allowed the piano to be placed in Pangborn's home with the agreement that there should be no charge for storage. After a wordy wrangle the money was paid to Pangborn, and VanHorn started at the house in company with the dray and removed the piano. After the piano had been delivered to Brokaw, Pangborn received a notice from W. S. Angleman, claiming the piano as the property of Richard Menzel. He hastened to intercept the removal of the piano, but the notice came too late.

This piano was originally sold by Menzel to Warde on the instalment plan and was not paid for. May 3, 1898, the piano was attached, and has been held by the creditors of A. D. Warde since that time. The claimant of the piano has done nothing in the matter other than to serve notice on the constable claiming the goods. The sale, originally set for August 24th, was adjourned until September 6th in order to give the claimant the opportunity of proving his claim, but as nothing was done the constable was obliged to sell.

When Ague Shakes You

you can shake the Ague by using AYER'S AGUE CURE. It is the one certain and infallible cure for that depleting disease. It has been tried in many countries and under various conditions, and has never been known to fail. An old veteran writes:—

"You may be interested to know my experience many years ago with Ayer's Ague Cure. The year before the war I was in Kansas. Some twenty of us were engaged in farming, and suddenly all were taken with fever and ague. We tried almost everything without getting any help, till at last I sent to the city and procured a bottle of Ayer's Ague Cure. I recovered at once. The others followed my example, and they, too, recovered. Every one in camp took the remedy and was cured by it. I went all through the war, have lived in thirteen different states of the Union, and have never had the ague since."

LOST, STRAYED OR STOLEN—A LICENSE.

Mike Watson Thinks the City Officials Deceived Him

ODD MUNICIPAL PROBLEM.

HE WILL ASK TO HAVE HIS BOND CANCELLED BY THE CITY.

Watson Closed Up His Grant Avenue Place and Agreed to Keep it Orderly With the Understanding That He Was to be Granted a License—License Failed to Materialize.

The familiar and well known Michael Watson, who has figured so many times in the City Court as a violator of the ordinance regulating the sale of liquor, is just now figuring with the city officials in a little different role.

It seems that Watson was promised a liquor license if he would close up his place on Grant avenue and would not dispense liquors until he received his license. For the faithful performance of all the agreements he gave a bond to the city. It was understood, however, that he was to receive a license from the Council, but there now seems to be a hitch somewhere. The matter for sometime has been in the hands of the city officials, but nothing has been done. Watson fully expected that he would receive his license Tuesday, September 6th, but no action was taken in the matter.

Watson is now beginning to get tired of his bargain, and his bondsman has a desire of being released from the bond which Watson furnished.

It is said that Watson promised not to sell any liquors in the Grant avenue place, but he has since established a place near what is known as "Guinea Egg," and is conducting it himself. This place is located near the city limits in the vicinity of Clinton avenue.

It was through friends that he was persuaded to close up his Grant avenue place and give a bond not to sell liquor, and they assured him that he would receive a license in due time. Their idea in getting him to act thusly was so that they could show to the Council that he was a man of his word and would respect the city ordinances. The result seems to be far from satisfactory and the outcome will be watched with considerable interest by those who know of the circumstances. It is known, however, that there are certain Councilmen who will not vote to give Watson a license, simply because he stands as a violator of the law, and some even contend that the Council cannot grant him a license on that account.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At the regular meeting of Division No 4, A. O. H., held Thursday, Sept. 8, 1898, the following resolutions were presented by the committee and unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to take from our midst our beloved friend and brother, Thomas Lappin, and

WHEREAS, In the death of Thomas Lappin Division No. 4, A. O. H., has lost one of its most active members, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of Division No. 4, A. O. H., while bowing to the Divine will, express our deep sorrow at his death in the prime of manhood, and be it further

Resolved, That we tender to his devoted wife our heartfelt sympathy in her sad bereavement, and that a copy be sent to the Plainfield Daily Press and Courier-News for publication, and that they be spread in full on the minutes of our society.

Wants Pay for the Candy.

Candy is not very costly, but when one peddles it and buys quite a quantity at a time it mounts up to quite a bill. Edward Wolff is the peddler, and Julius J. Stahl, of Somerset street, a candy manufacturer, has been supplying him with sweets since December, 1893. The total amount claimed for the candy up to date is $18.56. Wolff has bought more candy than this off Stahl, but has paid cash for it. This $18.56 Wolff refused to pay, so Stahl brought suit in Justice Mosher's court. Wolff didn't put in any defense, so Thursday judgment was rendered against him.

Night-Blooming Cereus.

The front piazza at the home of Mrs. A. J. Winckler, Park place, was the scene of the unfolding of four beautiful flowers upon a night-blooming cereus plant last Thursday. The wife of ex-Collector H. N. Spencer, of Somerset street, also had many callers who enjoyed a similar sight at her home.

Blossomed Three Years Continuously.

A beautiful night-blooming cereus was greatly admired Thursday at the home of Miss Julia Philpitt, West Front street. This plant has bloomed in the daytime for the past three years, which is considered to be a rare occurrence.

Street Improvements to be Considered

At the special meeting, which will be held probably Thursday evening, September 22d, several matters of importance will be considered if they can be arranged in time. One of the principal matters is the macadamizing of streets.

JUDGE M'CORMICK COMMITS SUICIDE.

Found With a Bullet Hole in His Head Tuesday Noon.

CEMETERY FOR DEATH SPOT

ELIZABETH STARTLED WITH SUDDEN AND SAD NEWS.

No Reason is Assigned for the Voluntary Act of Taking His Life, as He Seemed to Be in an Apparently Happy Frame of Mind—He Had Been in Comparative Retirement Since He Left the Judgeship.

Former Judge T. F. McCormick committed suicide Tuesday morning in an insolated part of St. Mary's cemetery on Washington avenue, Elizabeth. When the deed was discovered the body of the Judge was prostrate on the ground, the right hand tightly clutching a revolver with one chamber empty. The act of killing himself showed itself to have been a deliberate attempt on the part of the victim to end his existence.

The lifeless body was found by a man by the name of Kernan, a gardener, who was passing through the cemetery about the noon hour. He recognized the remains as those of the former judge. The city authorities were hurriedly notified. The remains were removed to the city morgue where the coroner will hold an inquest into the death.

Judge McCormick arose Tuesday a. m. in an apparent happy frame of mind and left his home on Westfield avenue at the usual time. Between 10 and 11 o'clock he was seen going towards St. Mary's cemetery. Some time after that a pistol shot was heard by residents in that neighborhood, but as such a sound is not an infrequent thing in the vicinity nothing suspicious was thought of it.

Since his retirement from the bench of the Union county court, the first of the year, Judge McCormick has been living in comparative retirement. He resumed his practice of law, and was gradually gaining the business which had dropped away while he occupied a seat on the bench. He seemed to be prosperous and satisfied with his lot in life. No act or mood of his ever indicated that his mind thought of suicide.

The news of the suicide spread rapidly over the city and caused a profound sense of bereavement among all classes of citizens.

Judge McCormick was born in Elizabeth in 1844 and worked himself up from a poor boy to one of the leading citizens of the State. He leaves a widow and eight children.

NEW ENDEAVOR LIFE.

Committees Named in the Trinity Reformed Church Society.

The business meeting of the Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church Tuesday gave evidence of a new life to the society. Two young men present were received as members by a rising vote of those present and a report of the lookout committee was read by the chairman that had a very helpful tone to it. Remarks and prayers were made by several and a genuine desire for greater earnestness in the work of the Master seemed to pervade all present.

Before adjournment President Martin appointed a nominating committee to nominate officers for the ensuing year as follows: Miss E. C. Benedict, Messrs. F. E. Smith, A. K. Willett, H. E. Gayle and Miss Mabel Woodruff. At the same time he appointed a committee on "Anniversary Day," which occurs in the week of October 3d to 8th, as follows: Miss Mabel Wilson, Mrs. F. C. Adams, Mrs. J. M. Tier, and Messrs. Henry Seader and Edgar Sheppard.

Night Blooming Cereus.

Last Saturday evening a large crowd was attracted to Armstrong's pharmacy, corner of North and Park avenues to witness a beautiful night blooming cereus. The plant bore 13 flowers and was indeed a pretty sight. The plant is owned by Mrs. Craft, of 333 Kensington avenue, and she was desirous that as many as possible should see it while in bloom. She therefore had it placed in Mr. Armstrong's window.

Important Witness Absent.

Adam Fritz, of Somerset street, brought suit in Justice Smalley's court against Morris Compton for $41 due for rent of a house on Fritz avenue. The case was to have been tried Monday, but upon an affidavit filed by the defendant's lawyer that an important witness was out of the State, the case was adjourned for 30 days. Murphy & Blatz represent Fritz and William G. DeMeza the defendant.

ON A PLEASURE TRIP, DIED FAR FROM HOME

E. E. Marshall Succumbs To Operation for Appendicitis.

A PARTICULARLY SAD DEATH

HAD GONE TO NIAGARA FALLS TO ENJOY A LITTLE RECREATION.

Left Plainfield a Week Ago Last Saturday and on His Arrival at the Falls was Compelled to Enter a Hospital to Submit to an Operation—Has Been Hovering Between Life and Death.

The death of Edgar E. Marshall, of Plainfield, occurred Monday evening at 9:15 o'clock at the Memorial Hospital, Niagara Falls, the result of an operation performed a few days ago for appendicitis by Dr. W. B. Campbell, assisted by the hospital staff.

The sad news of Mr. Marshall's death reached this city early Tuesday by telegram and was delivered to Mrs. Coombs, mother of Mrs. Marshall, who resides on Fairview avenue, in the borough. It soon spread all over the city and was a great shock to the many friends and acquaintances of Mr. Marshall, who did not know fully of his serious illness.

The circumstances attending Mr. Marshall's death are of a particularly sad nature. For sometime past he had not been feeling in the best of health, but he thought little of it. A week ago last Saturday morning he was at his place of business on North avenue, and felt especially bad. He left the store, telling Miss Graves that if anybody inquired for him to tell them that he had gone home ill. He then went to the North Avenue station and purchased two tickets for Niagara Falls, after which he went home. When he entered the house he took the tickets from his pocket and showed them to his wife.

It had always been Mrs. Marshall's desire to go to Niagara Falls, and she was delighted with the prospect of the trip. During the remainder of the day Mr. Marshall continued to feel ill. That evening he and his wife left the city. The trip to the Falls was rather tedious.

When they arrived at Niagara Falls Mr. Marshall was feeling so much worse that it was deemed best to call a physician. The physician pronounced Mr. Marshall a victim of appendicitis, and stated that unless an operation was performed he would not live six hours. He also told Mrs. Marshall that her husband's heart was exceedingly weak and that there were chances of his not surviving from the operation.

However, it was decided to have the operation and Mr. Marshall was taken to Memorial Hospital at once and arrangements were made for the operation.

Mr. Marshall stood the operation fairly well, but from that time his recovery seemed to be doubtful. He had two sinking spells, and the third spell which he had last evening proved fatal.

Manager Charles W. Runyon, of the local telephone company, an intimate friend of the family, telephoned several times to Niagara Falls Monday and in the evening, but no word of encouragement was received. Monday afternoon a report was current that Mr. Marshall was dead, but this was untrue. Monday evening Mr. Runyon called Dr. Campbell by telephone, and learned that there was no change. Soon afterward Mr. Marshall died.

From the start Mrs. Marshall has remained with her husband and did not leave his bedside once. It is said that Mr. Marshall's fathers and sisters from St. Louis were with him during his last hours.

Mr. Marshall was a resident of Plainfield for seven years. He first came here in the employ of Van Solver, dealer in wall papers, on North avenue, and he worked for him until he bought the business. He occupied a store in the Mulford building. He was popular among a large host of friends. Two years ago he built a house for himself on Fairview avenue, and only recently he had started another new house on Verdon avenue, which he proposed to rent.

About six years ago he was married to Miss Leah Coombs, of Brooklyn, who was at that time a resident of this city.

Mr. Marshall was a native of St. Louis. He was energetic, and ambitious and was held in high esteem by both his business associates and his social friends.

Private Kaubalo Invited to Talk.

Private Fred Kaubale of Co., D, Seventy-first Reg. N. G., N. Y., who spoke at the Y. M. C. A. Hall Sunday afternoon, August 7th, has been invited to be present and address the Young People's Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church next Monday evening by the temperance and good citizenship committee of the society, and it is hoped that he will be able to be present.

KNOTTY PROBLEM FOR VOORHEES TO SOLVE.

Resignation as Senator Makes a Complex Situation.

LAWS SEEM TO CONFLICT.

SUGGESTED THAT HE WITHHOLD RESIGNATION TILL JANUARY.

Then If He is Elected Governor He Could Resign in Time so That a Senator From Union County Could be Chosen to Vote for the United States Senator, Which Will be Important.

The friends of Acting-Governor Voorhees are still wrestling with the knotty problem produced by his proposed resignation as Senator from Union county. The deeper they go into the matter, however, the more complex it becomes, and there seems to be no daylight ahead.

Doubt was expressed as to the right of the Governor to order an election to fill "an anticipated vacancy," such as his resignation might be construed to imply, and his answer was that the resignation would not be "anticipated," but actual, because he would accept it as final whether elected Governor or not. That being the case, it was assumed that the problem was solved until paragraph 1, section 4, article 4, of the State Constitution, was consulted, and another snag was encountered. The paragraph in question reads as follows:

"Each House shall direct writs of election for supplying vacancies, occasioned by death, resignation or otherwise; but if vacancies occur during the recess of the Legislature the writs may be issued by the Governor, under such regulations as may be provided by law."

It was under the authority vested by this paragraph that Acting-Governor Voorhees intended to issue the writ of election for his own successor as Senator, but it appears he would have no right to do so if his resignation were to take effect on the third Monday in January next, when his term as Acting-Governor expires.

Paragraph 3, section 1, article 4 of the Constitution designates the second Tuesday in January as the time for the opening of the legislative year and the day on which both Houses shall meet. For that reason the Legislature is in session on the third Monday in January, and any vacancy occurring in either House on that date would have to be filled by a writ of election issued by the House in which the vacancy occurred. It would, therefore, be impossible to hold an election in Union county next November to fill a vacancy that will not occur until after the one hundred and twenty-third session of the Legislature is convened.

On the other hand, Acting-Governor Voorhees could tender and accept his resignation, to take effect prior to the second Tuesday in January, when the Legislature convenes. In that event he could issue a writ of election for a Senator from Union county to be chosen next November. But even there, peculiar complications would arise.

The Constitution provides that in the event of a vacancy in the office of Governor the duties shall be peformed by the President of the Senate, and in the event of the death, resignation or removal of the latter, upon the Speaker of the House. Hence, if Acting-Governor Voorhees should tender his resignation at any time prior to the second Tuesday in January, Assemblyman Watkins, Speaker of the House, would become Acting-Governor. As an Assemblyman is elected for one year only Mr. Watkins' term as Assemblyman, Speaker of the House and Acting-Governor would expire on the second Tuesday in January, even were he re-elected next November.

That would mean, first, that the Legislature would have to convene without receiving an annual message from the Governor, or person administering the government, and that the State would have no Chief Executive from the second Tuesday in January until the third Tuesday in January unless the Senate elected a new President in the meantime.

As a way out of the apparent dilemma it has been suggested that Acting-Governor Voorhees withhold his resignation as State Sepator until the next Legislature convenes, when, if elected Governor, he might present his resignation and his successor might be elected before a joint meeting was called to elect a United States Senator. The latter is accepted as the most logical solution of the problem and it will probably be carried into effect unless Attorney-General Grey advises otherwise.

Court on Sunday Morning.

City Judge DeMeza held court Sunday morning for the accommodation of one prisoner, Wm. Boantree, who gave his residence as Dunellen. Roantree was picked up by Officer Cash, who found him drunk Saturday night. Upon his promise to keep sober the Judge suspended sentence on him.

SCENE IN A PORTUGAL WINERY,

In the mountains, at the Quinto do Sexio, Portugal, a famous Port Wine district where the custom of treading the grapes for Port Wine is still in vogue. From ten to a dozen men or women for each gang in turn continue the treading, day and night, during the four or five weeks vintage. Some of the treading vats are large enough for three separate rows of ten men each, who with their white breeches well tucked up, their arms on each other's shoulders, raise and tread their feet alternately, with song and shouts to keep the lazier ones up to the work, and a band with string instruments enlivens the hours.

Speer, of New Jersey, Uses Rollers instead of Feet.

It is from this district the vines were imported over forty years ago that now fill the vineyards of the Speer Wine Co., at Passaic.

At Passaic the same kind of grapes are crushed between large rollers of rubber, revolved by steam. This is the only place in this conntry where the real genuine Port Wine is made from the Oporto grape—and they are grown right in SPEER'S VINEYARDS.

These vineyards extend over ½ of a mile along one of the Main avenues of Passaic, and comprise fifty six acres. The soil being rich in iron makes the wine most valuable for Medical use.

SPEER'S WINES

Are well known to be of the highest character, the oldest and most refined Wines in America, equal if not superior to any wines in the world. They consist of Port, Sherry, Burgundy, Claret, Sauterne Wines, and ★★★ Climax Brandy. Mr. Speer has some Wine in his cellars that he made over thirty eight years ago. All of Speer's Wines and Brandy are very old, rich, well rounded, soft and delicate. Every family should have a bottle or two of each variety of Speer's Wines and Brandy always in the home, for sickness or family use.

The Union to Hold a Fair in Their Rooms From November 7th to 10th—Memorial Service Held in Honor of Members who Have Died During the Last Year—Letters Read From Members.

The annual meeting of the local W. C. T. U. was continued Monday afternoon with a good attendance and the consideration of many interesting subjects. The first business transacted was the election of the vice-presidents of the union. Those selected are as follows: Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Mrs. Crahoone, Miss C. R. Yates; First Baptist church, Miss Anna Bolce, Mrs. Reuben Knox; First Presbyterian church, Mrs. E. V. Shotwell, Mrs. Ramsey Blair; Park Avenue Baptist church, Mrs. David Smalley; Congregational church, Mrs. LaBoyteaux; First M. E. church, Mrs. S. Jackson, Mrs. McNaughton; Grace M. E. church, Mrs. Voehl, Mrs. Powell; Warren chapel, Miss Mair, Miss Claypool; Unitarian church, Mrs. S. B. Krom; Trinity Reformed church, Mrs. Parse; Mt. Olive Baptist church, Miss Georgie Wilson, Miss Mary Cline; Seventh-day Baptist church, Mrs. Amanda Maxson Mrs. George Babcock; Friends, Mrs. John Diedrick.

This was followed with a pleasing vocal solo by Miss Kathryn Glen, accompanied on the piano by Miss Lillian Glen. The young women received a vote of thanks from the members for their efforts.

At this time Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, county superintendent, conducted the memorial service and she spoke very tenderly and sympathetically of those who have passed away during the past year. The names of Mrs. Silas Yerkes, Mrs. Anne Dickenson, Mrs. Beekman, Mrs. Lugar, as active members, and R. K. Case, as an honorary member, and the daughter of Mrs. John Titsworth, were all affectionately spoken of.

The next part on the programme was the experience meeting, at which time the members each gave a dollar and told how they earned the money. Each member was supposed to tell in rhyme how the dollar was earned, but the president was about the only one who presented a verse in rhyme. It was as follows: "Two heads I gave a good shampoo, to earn a dollar for the W. C. T. U."

One member, whose nurse girl had left her, made her dollar by taking care of her baby, while another member made her money by using her tongue. Still another earned the dollar by ironing shirt waists, and another saved a dollar by depriving herself of gloves. One woman found $2 and received 50 cents reward. She added 50 cents more and gave it to the union. In all, $23 was received from the members for the treasury.

Mrs. John McNaughton was called upon to give an account of her visit to the Waverly Fair last week, and she gave an excellent talk concerning the union's work at that place, where they had a building on the fair grounds. She said that after being informed regarding the army canteens she was not surprised to learn that so many soldiers have been ill.

An innovation was at this time accorded Mrs. Penfield, one of the union's oldest members, who entered the room. She made a few remarks and stated that she was soon to commence the work of making one hundred silk work bags, for which she was going to charge $1. She was then going to give the $100 toward paying off the indebtedness on The Temple in Chicago

Mrs. Tomlinson made a few remarks concerning The Temple and said that the action of the National executive committee in giving up the building would not be settled until the National convention to be held next November. She together with a number of other New Jersey women were still hoping that The Temple would not be given up as New Jersey had already given a large amount and would continue to do so.

It was announced by the president, Mrs. Parse, that a fair will be held in the rooms commencing on the evening of November 7th and continue until the evening of November 10th, also that the Union county convention will be held at Westfield one week from tomorrow.

For the benefit of those who were not present at the morning session, Mrs. Parse read her annual report again at this time, and an interesting letter was read by Miss Mair from Mrs. George Musgrave, who together with her husband are now on their way to Alaska. She related a great deal of interest concerning their experiences and of the country through which they had traveled.

The members by a unanimous vote decided to change the date for holding the annual meeting from the second Monday in September to the second Wednesday in the same month. After a prayer was offered by Mrs. Penfield the meeting adjourned.

Wrecked at Sea.

Friends and relatives of Wilbur Chamberlain, who formerly lived in this city, and who has been reporting the progress of the Spanish-American war from Cuban waters, for the New York Sun, were alarmed Sunday morning to hear that the press boat of which he was in command sailing from Porto Rico to Havana, was wrecked September 8th. The brief cablegram only stated that the vessel was lost, but that the captain and crew were saved. No further particulars have been learned, and the whereabouts of the correspondent and the crew are unknown.

Contract for Heating Apparatus.

The Borough Board of Education held a meeting Monday and gave out the heating and ventilating contract for the new public school to the Wolfe Heating and Ventilating Company, of Boston. The contract price is between $1,800 and $1,900. The system to be used is hot air and is considered to be just the thing for the building of the proposed size. For a week past work on the building was temporarily stopped, owing to the failure of the Board to award this last contract, but work was again resumed Tuesday.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help this whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked: "Do you have much call for these?" He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the liberal character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is secured. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them especially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and find many a saving of $2 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules cures me now, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two ladies who objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to this the elder lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending Ripans Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some person similarly afflicted to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

MANY RIDERS WILL COMPETE AT OVAL.

Bright Prospects for Riverdale Field Club Meet.

TO BE HELD SATURDAY.

RAY DAWSON, A NATIONAL CHAMPION, WILL COMPETE.

His Rival from Passaic, Brown, Will be Here—Alex Hamilton Crisp, of Trenton, and Jack Jaspar, from Bayonne—Many Local Riders Entered—There Will be Nearly Sixty in All.

Even the most sanguine of the good wishers of the race meet of the Riverdale Field Club, which is to be held at the Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon, were surprised at the great support given the meet by the racing men of this section. Although Plainfield has not been heard from in racing circles for two years, the riders have all shown a willingness to return and give the Plainfield people a glimpse of good racing.

The list of entries received by Harry K. Lister is very encouraging to the promoters of the meet. The entries closed Tuesday with nearly sixty men entered, many of whom will ride in several events. Among the prominent riders entered is Ray Dawson, of the New York Athletic Club, who has won national championship honors during the last two years. His present great rival, Brown, the well-known Passaic racing man, has also promised to ride in Plainfield. Hamilton Crisp, Trenton's crack a-jack, will be present with several of his clubmates.

Jack Jaspar, the expert young rider from Bayonne, will line up on the tape in three events. There are also a number of racers from Jersey City, Newark and various parts of Hudson county. Quite a delegation will ride from the Pierce Cycle Club, of New York, beside others from the great metropolis. Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Rahway, Westfield and Perth Amboy have all sent their best to compete.

The local contingent of riders will be well represented. The two Burke brothers will compete. Ray Poole, who has done such great riding this fall, will be in several of the events. Peter Simmons is also thinking of riding. The suspension on Eugene Richter is up and he will ride in the one-mile open and the one-mile handicap. There are many other riders from Plainfield and other places who are likely to make a good showing when on the track.

ACCEPTED MOUNTAIN AVENUE.

Somerset Freeholders Approve of Macadamizing and Make Last Payment.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met in the borough Tuesday and finally accepted Mountain avenue. They also made the last payment for the work and the road is now free and clear from debt. The members seemed to be highly pleased with the avenue and they feel as though the county has a road of which they can be proud. There was no other business transacted.

To Enter a Larger Field.

The many friends of Miss Julia Shinn, who for sometime has had charge of the home department work of the First Baptist church and Sunday-school, will regret to learn that she will soon resign her position. She has decided to go to Boston, and she will enter a larger field for missionary work. During Miss Shinn's stay in this city she has done a noble work and her departure will be regretted exceedingly.

An Attachment for $24.19.

Justice Nash Tuesday issued a writ of attachment for James Arnold, borough clerk, against the household goods of Mr. Dallas, of Watchung avenue, who was about to move to Philadelphia. Constable Amos Moffett served the writ and detained the goods in a freight car just before they were started for their destination. The claim was for a grocery bill of $4.19.

Who Is the Poisoner?

Another valuable dog has been poisoned in the West End. It was owned by Mr. Bush, and he, together with the other residents who have lost dogs in a similar manner, are feeling very indignant over the wholesale slaughter of their canines.

Reception to a Jolly Tar.

Last evening the members of the Plainfield Catholic Club tendered a reception at their clubhouse to Dennis Keefe, an honorary member who is a sailor on the Battleship Detroit.

Formal Opening at the Park.

The Park clubhouse will be formally opened Saturday night by a dance. There will be some bowling on the alleys, and refreshments will be served.

BADGER BOYS' DIRTY JOB

COALING THE SHIP BEFORE THEY LEAVE TO BE DISCHARGED.

The Naval Reserves, However, Hope That This Will be Their Last Duty—Surgeon Simpson Ordered Detached.

Boston, Sept. 21.—The auxiliary cruiser Badger, manned by the New Jersey Naval Reserves, will not leave here for Philadelphia for several days. The Badger has been ordered to "coal ship" before sailing. This cheerful occupation was begun early yesterday morning, when the Badger hauled up alongside the big English collier Massepequa, and the work of tumbling in the hugh buckets of anthracite was started. As about 150 tons are to be taken on board, the Jerseymen will not get away from here much before next Monday or Tuesday. They think, however, that this is the last task that Uncle Sam will require from them, and they are doing it cheerfully because they believe discharge from the service awaits them at Philadelphia.

Among the orders issued yesterday by the Navy Department are the following:

Detached from the Badger and ordered home, Lieutenants E. M. Peters, W. Irving and L. Blount; Ensigns C. F. Long, C. H. Vreeland, T. Goldingay, W. P. O'Rourke, D. A. Dugan and A. N. Kemble; Passed Assistant Engineers D. Ritchie and B. Hart, Jr.; Assistant Engineers H. H. Anderson and J. Quilty; Passed Assistant Paymaster A. H. Colby; Passed Assistant Surgeon M. S. Simpson.

HEAVY GAME LAW FINES

HERMAN PASCH AND SON CARRIED GUNS LAST SUNDAY.

Game Warden Sebring Notified and He Caused Their Arrest—Justice Matthews Imposed a Fine of $20 on Each.

Charles Sebring, game warden, appeared before Justice Matthews, of the borough, Tuesday afternoon and had warrants issued for the arrest of Herman Pasch and his son, William C. Pasch, of 84 Harrison street, Prideville, charging them with violating the game laws in hunting Sunday. As a result both violators of the law were fined $20 each and the costs of the court, which amounted to about $6.

It appears that last Sunday Pasch and son started out on a hunting trip over the mountains. During the day shots were heard by Louis Spriggs, of Howard street. The latter had seen the father and son go out with the guns and felt sure that they were doing the shooting. Later in the day he saw them return home and this strengthened his belief that they had been hunting.

In view of these facts Spriggs informed Game Warden Sebring of what he had seen and the latter had the warrants issued as stated.

When the father and son were arraigned they at first entered a plea of not guilty, but later when informed that the carrying of a gun Sunday made them violators of the game law, they changed their plea to guilty.

The law provides a penalty of $20 for a person seen carrying a gun Sunday and the Justice was obliged to sentence the violators accordingly. One third of the amount of the fine goes to the informer, while the balance is turned over to the game warden, he in turn to pay a certain amount to the State and retain his fee therefrom.

NEW BICYCLE CLUB.

Colored Riders Organize the American Wheelmen's Club.

Tuesday at the home of Charles Barbour, West Fourth street, a number of colored bicycle enthusiasts met and organized what will be known as the American Wheelmen's Club. The new club starts with a membership of about sixteen and the following officers were elected: President, Joseph Boldin; secretary, Lewis Coles; captain, William Crawley; lieutenant, William Burden; treasurer, Joseph Saunders; assistant secretary, Harry Binn. The next meeting will be held in two weeks to receive new members.

Will Have a Rally.

There was a meeting of the officers and teachers of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church at the parsonage on Central avenue Monday evening. Most of the evening was spent in discussing plans for the coming winter. It was decided to hold a rally-day service on the afternoon of Sunday, October 2d, when the time for holding the Sunday-school will be changed from morning until afternoon.

Private John Hibbitts, formerly of this city, but late a soldier in Uncle Sam's Army, is visiting his father in this city.

DEATH OF AN OLD DIVINE

REV. H. F. F. SCHNELLENDRUESSLER PASSES AWAY IN H'S 80TH YEAR.

Was Subject to a Violent Attack of Hiccoughs Which Developed Into a Complication of Diseases—Sketch of His Life.

Rev. Herman F. F. Schnellendruessler, an elderly divine, died last Tuesday in Muhlenberg Hospital where he was taken two weeks ago suffering from a complication of diseases. The funeral will be held from Trinity Reformed church Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will be in Hillside.

Rev. Mr. Schnellendruessler was a familiar figure on Plainfield streets, and was well-known among the German community. Twenty years ago he moved to this city from Coontown, back of the mountains, and took the pastoral of the German Reformed church, which was then located on East Fifth street. He had charge of that church until he retired from the ministry eight years ago.

The deceased was born in Prussia in 1818, and would have been eighty years old next month. He secured an education in one of the German colleges, and when thirty years of age came to America. He went directly to New Brunswick and entered the Theological Seminary there.

His ordination occurred in 1855 in Albany, where his first charge was located. He then went to Jeffersonville, Sullivan county, then to Coontown and lastly to Plainfield. All his pastorates were profitable ones, from a spiritual standpoint, and he was well liked everywhere. On his retirement from active life he united with the Trinity Reformed church and attended quite regularly until last summer when he was taken ill.

His illness began with hiccoughs in July and gradually settled into a complication of diseases. Until two weeks ago he was kept at his home, 1257 Million place, but his daughter, who kept house for him, feeling that her father needed more constant care than she was able to give him, had him taken to the hospital.

Rev. Mr. Schnellendruessler has no near relatives living, except his two children, Augustus Frese Schnellendruessler, who is in the clothing business, and who was in Cincinnati when they last heard from him, and Alice Amelia, his daughter, who has been her father's housekeeper since his wife died, two years ago.

While pastor of the German Reformed church here, Rev. Mr. Schnellendruessler taught a German class at the High School, and had several private pupils. He has done nothing of this kind, however, for the last seven years.

The deceased married Miss Alice Camp, of New Brunswick, immediately after his graduation from the seminary there. He was generous and openhearted to a fault, and was always willing to share what he had with someone else. Whenever a charitable institution was in need of assistance, Rev. Mr. Schnellendruessler was ready to help.

His loss will be felt keenly by the members of his household, especially the daughter, who is left without any near relatives except her brother, who is far away.

During the Civil War Dr. Schnellendruessler was chaplain of a volunteer regiment, serving in that capacity throughout the war. Up to the time of his death he drew a small pension awarded to him by the Government for disability.

MAPLEWOOD FOR EPILEPTICS.

Old Farm of Voorhees Family, Near Blawenburg, Selected as a Home.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 21.—The board appointed by Governor Voorhees to establish a village for epileptics has bought a part of the property needed for the purpose. It has obtained the Maplewood Farm, a tract of about 175 acres of land near Blawenburg, Somerset county, about two miles to the east of Skillman station, on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, and about six miles from Princeton.

The land belonged to the estate of David C. Voorhees. There are three dwelling houses, with barns and outbuildings on the property. One of the dwellings, the Voorhees home, is a fine old country house, large and admirably adapted for the purpose of the institution. The other houses are small. An option has been obtained on additional land adjoining Maplewood Farm.

The board of managers consists of Rev. James M. Buckley, LL.D., president, Morristown; Professor S. John Garrison, M. A., secretary, Vineland; Dr. Thomas J. Smith, treasurer, Bridgeton; Dr. John H. Ewing, Flemington; Dr. John W. Ward, Trenton, and Dr. William S. Combs, Passhold.

TROLLEY WILL RUN IN DUNELLEN FRIDAY.

Brunswick Company Will Keep Their Agreement.

TRACKS BEING CLEARED.

LINCOLN COUNCILWOMEN TO DRIVE A SILVER SPIKE.

It is Not Publicly Known What Arrangement the Trolley Company Have Made About Transfers But the Franchise Ensures a Five-Cent Fare Between Dunellen and Any Part of Plainfield.

Dunellen, N. J., Sept. 21.—Alvah Gray, who is one of the contractors superintending the work being done on the street railway here, received a notice yesterday to clear and clean the car tracks so that cars can be running on them. The time when the work is to be finished is tonight, and Mr. Gray will put a force of men to work cleaning the tracks some time today. The work will consume half a day.

This looks like business. As told in last night's Press the time which the New Brunswick Traction Company were given to complete the road and have it running expires Friday, and now it looks as though the company intend to live up to their agreement, and have the road in running order by then.

The entire road from Bound Brook to Dunellen is not fully completed. The bridge across the Raritan river is not finished and some parts of the track beyond Lincoln are not all laid. But a finished track extends to Beechwood Heights, and there is no reason why cars should not run from there here. This is evidently what the company intends to do.

It is said that the Electric Light Company in Plainfield has not sufficient power to enable the Plainfield Street Railway Company to run cars from Plainfield to Bound Brook, so it is supposed that the New Brunswick Traction Company will secure enough power from Bound Brook to operate their line from Lincoln to Dunellen. What arrangements the company have made with the Plainfield company in regard to issuing transfers from the Plainfield division to this city and vice versa is not known, but when the franchise was granted the New Brunswick Traction Company it was stipulated that a five-cent fare should carry a passenger from any point in Dunellen to any point in Plainfield or Netherwood.

The trolley magnates drove over yesterday and inspected the route. A few days ago Superintendent Adelman, of Plainfield, was in town taking observations.

The running of trolley cars through Lincoln will be made the occasion of a celebration by the people of that section. A silver spike will be driven in one of the ties in front of the Lincoln statue by Miss Emma Egel, president of the Lincoln Common Council.

RAILROAD COMPANIES FIGHT.

Central Resorts to Remarkable Efforts to Outwit the Lehigh.

Perth Amboy, Sept. 21—A large force of men in the employ of the Central Railroad of New Jersey has been engaged since Saturday in building tracks in the yard of the Raritan Cooper Works. The object is to prevent the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company from building a spur into the works. The Central officials discovered that the Lehigh Company expected to lay its track Saturday night, crossing the tracks of the Raritan North Shore Railroad, a branch of the Central. Without crossing those tracks, the Lehigh road could not enter the yard. Since Saturday night four tracks have been built by the Central workmen, all of them spurs from the Raritan North Shore. To make sure that the Lehigh Company cannot cross them at will, these tracks have been laid on different grades. One is two feet below the North Shore, and another is three feet above it. One of the others resembles a toboggan track, the grade varying three feet in fifty. Cars standing on it are tilted to so many angles that they look like a wreck. The Central officials say that they will combat with force any attempt on the part of the Lehigh Company to enter the Cooper Works property.

Borough Democratic Primaries.

Next Friday evening at 8 o'clock, in the basement of the Borough Public School, the Democratic primary will be held to elect delegates to attend the Democratic Gubernatorial convention to be held at Trenton, Wednesday, September 28th. The other primaries throughout the county will be held Saturday afternoon next.

SUING FOR AN OLD DEBT

WOULD BE OUTLAWED IF DEFENDANT HADN'T BEEN OUT OF THE STATE.

John Schorb Wants Alexander Kane to Pay a $9.50 Bill for Clothes That Were Bought Nearly Ten Years Ago.

A tailor with an unpaid tailor's bill, the man who ran up the bill, and six men trying to solve the problem whether the tailor was entitled to the money or not, made an interesting scene in Justice Mosher's court Tuesday afternoon. John Schorb was the tailor and Alexander Kane, the contractor, the man who owed the bill.

It wasn't a very large bill, and has been running since April 16th, 1889. According to the statute of limitations the bill was outlawed three years ago, but it was shown that Kane has been out of the State part of the time since 1889, and while the defendant was absent the statute ceases to run, it is still not outlawed.

The dealings between Schorb and Kane extended over several weeks. On April 16th, 1889, Kane ordered a suit made which was to cost him $8. He paid $6 on account leaving $2 still due. Later Kane ordered a $6 suit for his brother, which ran the bill up to $8. Then Kane had a light overcoat, for which Schorb charged him $1.50. This made $9.50. Then Kane gave Schorb a quantity of lead pipe for which the tailor consented to deduct 50 cents from off the bill, leaving a balace of $9.

Counselor W. K. McClure was Schorb's lawyer, and City Judge De Meza appeared for Kane. The jurymen were Charles W. Johnson, W. A. Spencer, Theodore F. VanHorn, Henry W. Fraleigh, I. C. Schutt and William Marsh. After deliberating for a few moments the jury brought in a verdict of no cause for action.

COULDN'T STOP THE TRAIN.

Narrow Escape of Passengers at Westfield Station Yesterday.

Westfield, Sept. 21.—A number of passengers on the Central railroad had narrow escapes from either serious injury or death yesterday afternoon at 1:27 o'clock while the eastbound passenger train due at that time was standing at the station. An east-bound heavy freight train was approaching the station as the passenger stopped. The engineer on the freight reversed the throttle on his engine and whistled for down brakes, but the train was such a heavy one and was running down grade that it was impossible to stop. Seeing the imminent danger of the people getting on an off the train he blew his whistle frantically and warned them of the approach of the freight train. The passengers scrambled out of the way in a hurry.

The baggage-master had drawn a truck-load of trunks up alongside the baggage car of the train, and was unable to get the trunks out of the way soon enough. The ponderous freight engine struck them and sent them flying in all directions. The trunks were broken open and a choice assortment of wearing apparel was shown up. No further damage was done, however.

LOST ONE OF HIS FEET.

Sad Accident That Befell a Pole at South Plainfield.

South Plainfield, Sept. 21—A young Pole, a resident of Bound Brook, met with painful accident at the Central railroad station, while attempting to board a Lehigh Valley Railroad train to return home. He was accompanied by a friend, who is also a Pole, and the latter ran ahead to secure the tickets. While the tickets were being purchased the other Pole attempted to jump on the train. As he did so his feet slipped and one car wheel ran over a foot, taking it completely off.

A Watermelon Party.

Last Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Randolph, of West Eighth street, a watermelon party was given. An evening of sociability was a source of pleasure to all. During the evening refreshments were served, and watermelons in abundance. Included among the guests were Miss Nellie Rockfellow, Miss Fannie Demarest, Miss Libby Joseph, Miss Frankie Demarest, the Misses Giles, Miss Marx, Richard Randolph, Judson Giles, John Auten, Harry Gwynette and Walter Manning.

A Free Demonstration.

Next Monday evening at the Camera Club rooms Mr. Marlin, of New York, will give a free demodstration of the use of Velox paper which is used in photographic printing. It is the desire of the Camera Club that those who are interested in camera work will attend this demonstration, as it will be something of great interest to all.

James Cristie, of Richfield Park, N. J., is visiting H. R. Palmer, of East Second street.

CONTRACTORS ARE MAD.

BOUND BROOK BANK GAVE CONTRACT TO OUT-OF-TOWN FIRM.

A New Bank Building to be Put Up, but the Local Firm Won't Build It—Now They Want to Start a New Bank.

Bound Brook, Sept. 20.—During the past few weeks there has been quite a stir in financial circles, and it is possible that before many months Bound Brook may be supporting two banks. The trouble has arisen over the action taken by the officials of the First National Bank. A short time ago it was decided by them to build a new bank building, and they advertised for bids according to prepared plans and specifications. The contractors of the town were given an opportunity to bid, and they did so. After the bids had been received the officials gave the contract to build the bank to Sargeant Brothers, of Somerville.

In view of this action the contractors and many business men of this place feel quite indignant. They claim that the bank officials ask them to deposit their money in the bank and to help to support it and when the bank people have any work they want done they go outside of the town for men to do the work.

An informal meeting of contractors and business men has been held for the purpose of taking steps to build another new bank. They claim that the First National Bank is not capable of doing all the business for the town and surrounding country, and that another bank is needed. The outcome will be watched with considerable interest.

GOT THEIR MONEY BACK.

DENNIS KEEFE RECEIVED A PRESENT ONLY TO RETURN IT.

A Purse of $55 in Gold Presented to Naval Hero, and He Then Gave it Back to Start a Woman's Auxiliary Society.

The members of the T. A. B. Society tendered a reception in their hall last evening to their fellow-member Dennis Keefe, of the battleship Detroit. During the evening President Patrick Beville presented Mr. Keefe with a purse of $55 in gold. This purse was made up a long time ago by the members for the purpose of giving it to Mr. Keefe, but their opportunity did not appear until last evening.

The members were very much surprised after Mr. Keefe had received and thanked them for the money to see him present the money to the society for the purpose of starting a ladies' auxiliary in connection with the society, thereby forming an association that will tend to bring in more members.

The balance of the evening was devoted to dancing, music for which was furnished by Eugene O'Reilly. During the reception a sumptuous repast was served by members of the society.

Last evening the Plainfield Catholic Club gave Mr. Keefe a reception in the clubhouse.

Switch Tower Destroyed.

South Plainfield, Sept. 21.—Yesterday afternoon the large switch tower on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at this place was about totally destroyed by fire. The tower was set on fire by sparks from a passing locomotive, and the employes not having any quantity of water were helpless in their efforts to save the burning structure. The mechanical part of the tower was not disabled and the train service was not interfered with in any way.

Received New Brunswick Visitors.

Court Pride of New Jersey, No. 49, I. O. F., held a regular meeting last Tuesday and received a visit from Court New Brunswick. Some of the visitors took part in initiating several candidates, after which a bountiful repast was served by the home court. Brother Daly, of New Brunswick, accompanied by Brother Kreger, of this city, furnished the music for the occasion, and at a late hour the visitors returned home well pleased with their trip.

Bound Brook's Tax Rate.

Bound Brook, Sept. 21—The tax rate for the coming year at Bound Brook was fixed last evening at a meeting of the Council at $1.80. This is an increase of five cents over last year, which is caused by the advance in the county rate.

Property Sold for Taxes.

Tuesday afternoon Collector Geo. F. Brown, of the borough, sold eighteen pieces of borough property for taxes, and as usual the borough purchased them for a term of years.

County Superintendent of Schools J. A. Metz, of Somerset county, was guest of Plainfield friends yesterday.

WILL NOMINATE VOORHEES TODAY

Republican Convention to be Held at Trenton.

GATHERING OF POLITICIANS.

MANY MINOR PLUMS TO BE FOUGHT FOR AT CAUCUSES.

Convention to Meet at Noon—Then Temporary Organization—Adjournment to 2 o'Clock—Voorhees Will Be Nominated by Acclamation—Other Work Which Will Come Before Delegates.

Trenton, September 21 — Already the corridors are beginning to assume unwonted activity and the familiar faces that usually appear at convention time are to be noticed here and there in the favorite haunts of the Republican leaders. Tomorrow the Gubernatorial convention of the Republican party in Jersey is to be held at Taylor's Opera House.

The convention will open at noon and the temporary organization will be effected and committees appointed. Then the convention will adjourn for two hours while the credentials are examined, the platform prepared and other committee business attended to. The afternoon session will convene after the recess in the neighborhood of 2 o'clock. The committees will report and the formality of adopting the platform passed through with. Then nominations will be called. The counties will respond one after another with no nomination to offer until Union county is reached. One of her most flowery speakers, exactly who it will be is not yet known, will then rise and present the name of Foster M. Voorhees. There will be a short speech and plenty of cheering. Then the nomination will be seconded and probably carried by acclamation. After that the convention will conclude its business and the session will end. It will probably be short.

While it is a foregone conclusion as to what the result of the convention will be, still there are a number of minor political plums worth securing and for which the wire-pulling has already begun. The canvassers of the different county delegations which will be held tomorrow morning, will really attract more attention than the convention itself. Then the members to the State committee will be chosen as well as the members to the various convention committees. Then there are sundry booms that will be opened for Congressional and State Legislative offices.

Trenton will be a lively place tomorrow night before the delegates return to their respective homes. There is not a Republican in the ranks of that party but that is absolutely sure that Voorhees will be elected if once nominated. So when the thing is really done there will be a great rejoicing.

WHITE RIBBON CONVENTION.

Annual Meeting of W. C. T. U. Workers From Union County Today.

Westfield, Sept. 21—The fourteenth annual convention of the Union County Woman's Christian Temperance Union was opened in the W. C. T. U. hall in this place this morning. The morning session began at 9:45 o'clock with devotional exercises led by Mrs. M. F. Francis. An address of welcome was made by Miss Emma L. Starr which was responded to by Mrs. E. S. Baker. The president's address, by Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of Plainfield, and the reports of the secretary, Mrs. D. D. Irving, and the treasurer, Mrs. L. H. Noe, followed.

The annual election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of Plainfield; recording secretary, Mrs. A. H. Mosher, of Westfield; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. R. Krom, of Plainfield; treasurer, Mrs. L. H. Noe, of Elizabeth.

The morning session closed with a Bible reading by Mrs. Emma Bourne, State president, after which a box lunch was served. The convention will continue this afternoon and evening.

JUSTICE SPERRY DEAD.

Old Township Official Passed Away at His Daughter's Home.

Anson S. Sperry, one of the oldest justices of the peace in Somerset county, died at the home of his son-in-law, Edmund P. Stevens, of 65 Grandview avenue, yesterday, after a long illness. He was born in New York State seventy-eight years ago, and has been a resident of the borough for nearly a decade. He had many friends throughout North Plainfield township with whom he was very popular.

Miss Ella Hand, of Elmwood place, is somewhat improved from a recent illness.

GEN. JOE WHEELER.

FRESH HONORS FOR THE MAN WHO SOUGHT TO RESCUE DAVIS.

A Unique Character in History—From a Leader in the Rebel Cause He Retires to His Farm, Later to be Called to Represent His People at Washington.

A correspondent of the Washington Capital writes: General Wheeler is one of the few men who have come out of this war without anything but glory in their records. His life has been a somewhat curious mixture of the most dashing and picturesque adventure and the most uninteresting of drudgery. A West Point lieutenant just entering upon his military career at the beginning of the civil war, he unhesitatingly devoted his heart and his hand to the fortunes of the Confederacy and became the most daring and successful cavalry leader of the South, possibly of the whole country. Wheeler's exploits during those four years were told with glee by the Confederates and with a mixtue of admiration and gnashing of teeth by the Union officers whom he circumvented. When Lee surrendered and Jefferson Davis was a prisoner, Wheeler, loyal as ever to the cause for which he had fought for four long years, risked his life and freedom in an attempt to rescue Davis. It failed, and when the turmoil of war had a little subsided and the knights of the Lost Cause gathered themselves together to face the future, Wheeler, practical, plucky, and uncomplaining as ever, was to be found grubbing a living out of his farm in Alabama. They wanted him to be professor of philosophy in the Louisiana State Seminary, but he declined that offer and kept on practicing law and agriculture with equanimity and success.

The Forty-seventh Congress saw him in the House, and after that nothing except a war would have dislodged him from his seat. Whenever there has been any development which looked like war he has always been the first to tender his services to the government. For the last thirty years he has had what one might call a standing determination to continue his military career when there was a chance. It is my belief that if we had an administration foolish and obstinate enough to refuse him a commission he would have shouldered a rifle and gone to the front as a private, and he would have taken a good deal of the fight wearing shoulder straps. He is not the kind of man to be ignored.

The stories which have clustered about Wheeler's career in this war would make an interesting book all by themselves. He not only climbed a tree to reconnoiter the enemy's camp —and it wasn't a cactus or a cocoanut palm, as some of the enterprising artists tried to make us believe—but it is reported that he climbed the tree under which the capitulation was signed at Santiago, and sent a leaf thereof to each of his constituents. I am inclined to doubt this yarn. Of course it is a picturesque thing to think of—the slender, active little general sitting in the crotch of a limb busily picking leaves enough to fill barrels, and leaving the tree as bare as a barber's pole, but it is my belief that if there really was a barrelful of leaves picked off that tree Wheeler sent some small Cuban boy up to do it. He never does an odd thing for the sake of being odd. It is certain, however, that he did send a good many of his friends leaves from "that there tree," and that they prize them highly.

Wheeler's behavior at Santiago has furnished the subject for almost the only real war poem which has appeared during the war. You have all read it. It is called "Wheeler at Santiago," and is to be found, I fancy, in Sweden. The poem has been copied all over the United States, and the story of that day has been told everywhere, but I am going to tell it over again. Wheeler, not being any more acclimated than the rest of the army, was, like his men, attacked by the fever of the country, and was not able to lift his head for several days. He was carried here and there and directed operations from his cot. But when the time came to attack Santiago he was up with all that was not thought best to inform him just when the attack would take place. But he heard the roar of guns from afar and he was not to be let or hindered. He told them to put him into an ambulance and take him to the front, and there is more power in the little major general's say so, even when he is helpless with fever, than there is in the distant roaring of a big six-foot bully. They put him into that ambulance and started for the front. On the way they met the litters with the wounded, and the newspaper correspondents bear witness as to the miserable inadequacy with which these unfortunates were provided for. Wheeler was out of that ambulance and in the saddle in about a minute and a half, and though almost any man in his army could have picked him up and carried him, nobody ventured to oppose his determination to go to the front. And then he rode to the front, and the sight of him put new life into the whole army. Gordon tells it in words which thrill one like the sound of drum and fife.

There is nothing in the whole history of warfare more dramatic than that incident. It will live as long as there is an American to be thrilled by the sight of the starry flag. It will be a bond of union forever between North and South—that day at Santiago. From Bachias bay to Puget sound, from Bangeley lake and the Adirondacks to Key West, and then again from Manila and Honolulu around the world to Porto Rico. Wherever Americans live and die under the flag, nobody will refuse to cheer the name of Joseph Wheeler.

The Tailor Made Gown.

The new tailor made gowns are very feminine in appearance. The extreme mannish effect has almost completely disappeared and only the style and neatness of cut remain to mark the old departure.

A smart gown of dark green cloth has the skirt made perfectly plain with the seams stitched. The jacket is a natty affair opening at the top over a yoke of finely tucked green taffeta and turning back with two small revers.

The lower part of the jacket is tight fitting and meets in the center, ornamented at the top with fancy cut steel buttons. The sleeves are close fitting.

How to Test the Oven.

There are many methods of ascertaining the temperature of the oven without a thermometer, and the following, which was always resorted to by a very celebrated French cook, is certainly a reliable one. Put half a sheet of white kitchen paper on the shelf of the oven on which the cake is to be placed, and shut the door. If at the end of five minutes the paper is charred, the heat is too great. Cool the oven by leaving the door a little way open for a minute or so, and then test again with another sheet of paper. If it is dark brown after being in for five minutes, the oven is right for baking small pastries and thin cakes. The temperature a few degrees below this—tested by a piece of paper turning a light brown—will be suitable for baking ordinary pound-cakes, pie-crusts, &c. When the paper turns only a dark yellow the heat is suitable for pastry, sponge-cake mixtures, and meringues.

Colored Statues.

Tinted statues are among the latest things in the French artistic world. This is not, however, nearly as original as it appears at first sight, for excavations in the Acropolis at Athens have proved the fact that the Greeks employed color in the treatment of marble, just as it has always been known that they used gold for the adornment of the statues of the Olympian deities.

The modern French practice is, therefore, unquestionably a return to the ideas of the pastmasters of the highest form of art. It does not, however, by any means commend itself to a great number of modern sculptors, who regard the purity of the white color of the marble as essential to the production of the effect intended by the artist, and though here and there specimens may be found in our galleries, the custom is unlikely to have a very extended practice.

A Ridiculous Fashion.

The ridiculous fashion of making the edge of the dress skirt on the front and sides an inch or two longer than the height of the wearer grows apace. The train at the back is worrying, but it is quite possible to lift it with grace and keep it from the dust. It is not so easy to dispose of undue length in front. To avoid an embarrassing stumble every now and then, a certain very upright mode of gait is imperative—well enough in a school, but rather prim and stiff in a physical-culture promenade, for the perpendicular has to be overdone in a manner which in no way tends to grace of movement.

Cremation in Norway.

The Norwegian Parliament has passed a law dealing with cremation. According to this Act, every person over fifteen years of age can be cremated after death, if he or she has made a declaration in the presence of two witnesses. For those under fifteen a declaration on the part of the parents is necessary. The police, the medical registrar, and the doctors in attendance on the deceased have also to furnish written testimony as to the cause of death before a body can be incinerated.

Corn Gems.

It is, perhaps, not generally known that gems may be made from fresh sweet corn as well as from Graham flour or corn meal. To the grated pulp of about three ears of corn, a cup of milk, two eggs, well beaten, a little salt, and a cup and a half of flour may be added. The mixture is baked in gem-pans for half an hour.

The greatest distance that a shot has been fired is a trifle over 15 miles, which was the range of Krupp's well-known monster 130-ton steel gun, firing a shot which weighs over a ton and a quarter.

THE OVERSKIRT REVIVED.

Close Fitting Bodices Liable to Supersede the Blouse Effect.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun.)

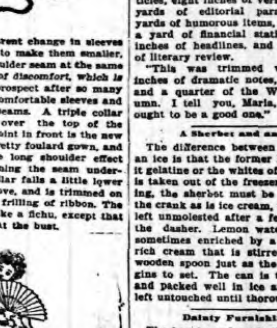
The overskirt has again appeared in both pointed and rounded shape, and now and then a short, round apron, all laid in upturned plaits, as it was made years ago.

Old fashions are revived again and again, but never without some pretty changes, which make them seem quite new; so the modern overskirt will be built, no doubt, on more artistic lines than anything we have ever had before.

The most attractive models so far are the close fitting apron shapes, longer in front than at the back, where they fasten with hooks concealed by tiny bows of velvet ribbon with a fancy buckle in the center. Then there is the long apron, reaching almost to the hem of the skirt in front and back, and winding up shorter at the side. The peplum overdress falls in two points at either side, and like the others, fits very closely around the hips.

The possible chance that the blouse bodice is to be superseded by the tight fitting coat waist is something to be regretted; but as the blouse effects are so popular it is not probable that they will be given up very willingly or promptly. Yet there is every prospect that the close fitting coat-shaped bodice will be one of the distinguishing features of our winter gowns.

The only apparent change in sleeves is the tendency to make them smaller, lowering the shoulder seam at the same time to a point of discomfort, which is not a pleasing prospect after so many years of loose, comfortable sleeves and short shoulder seams. A triple collar widening out over the top of the sleeves from a point in front is the new feature of one pretty foulard gown, and it produces the long shoulder effect without lengthening the seam underneath. Each collar falls a little lower than the one above, and is trimmed on the edge with a frilling of ribbon. The effect is not unlike a fichu, except that the collar ends at the bust.



There are some slight differences in the skirts which have appeared lately that may turn the tide which has already set in toward more scant effects. This new model is clinging enough around the hips, but the deep circular flounce is wider than ever at the bottom, where it is scalloped. A fan like flare is the effect which seems to be desired, and to accomplish this a knee deep flounce of accordeon plaited silk is sometimes added underneath the foundation skirt, so that at the bottom there is the appearance of three instead of the usual two skirts.

Attractive Calling Gown.

A pretty little gown is composed of grey crepon, embroidered with a dainty leaf design. The skirt has the upper fitted portion cut in scallops and encircled with three little plain grey frills, headed with a cording. The attached flounce is made perfectly plain.

The full bodice is mounted on a plain yoke of the material, which is covered with a fancy shaped collar and small epaulets, trimmed with three ruffles, corresponding with those on the skirt. The sleeves are close fitting, with a frill at the wrist. A satin sash tieing in a graceful bow in the center of the back finishes the waist.

What It Meant to Hubby.

"What do you think of it?" asked the wife of the newspaper man who is paid by the column.

The scribbler sighed and shook his head doubtfully.

"I presume," he said, "that it is quite the correct thing as gowns go, but it looks to me as if it must have cost a lot."

"Well, of course gowns like this one are not to be had for nothing," she admitted, "and this is just the nicest one I ever had; but considering the workmanship and material, it was really very reasonable."

"How much?" he inquired, and she handed him the bill.

An hour later he was still deep in a mass of figures, and she began to get curious.

"What are you doing?" she asked.

"I am trying to find out what entered into the construction of that remarkable piece," he answered.

"Well, you'll never find out that way," she asserted. "Why don't you ask me? I could tell you. It took eight yards of finest——"

He motioned to her to stop.

"You couldn't do this problem in eighteen years," he said. "Now, just listen, and I will tell you what was needed to make that gown. It took, first, a third of a yard of leading editorial, a yard and a half of special articles, eight inches of verse, a full two yards of editorial paragraphs, six yards of humorous items, an eighth of a yard of financial statistics, eleven inches of headlines, and half a yard of literary review.

"This was trimmed with sixteen inches of dramatic notes, and a yard and a quarter of the Woman's Column. I tell you, Maria, that gown ought to be a good one."

A Sherbet and an Ice.

The difference between sherbet and an ice is that the former has added to it gelatine or the whites of eggs after it is taken out of the freezer. In freezing, the sherbet must be stirred with the crank as is ice cream, the ice being left unmolested after a few rounds of the dasher. Lemon water-ice is now sometimes colored by a half-pint of rich cream that is stirred in with a wooden spoon just as the mixture begins to set. The can is then covered and packed well in ice and salt, and left untouched until thoroughly frozen.

Dainty Furnishings.

The beauty and perfection to which furnishings for the country house have been carried have produced their own reward. From china to window draperies, the inexpensive fittings intended for summer use have achieved a popularity that has given them longer life. It is common now for these pretty effects to be found above stairs at least, and in the family sitting-room in city homes.

A Military Entertainment.

A recent entertainment by the war-relief committee took the form of a military encampment. The hall was hung with flags and military insignia, and the stalls were tents named for the various heroes of the present war, Camp McKinley leading, with Dewey, Sampson, Schley, Shafter, and others duly represented. The attendants wore military costumes, music of a patriotic character was furnished, and a general martial atmosphere secured.

Satin Wall Papers.

The choice of satin papers is permissible in rooms where few pictures hang upon the walls. Where the reverse is true, plain, dull-finish papers should be used. A polished surface makes a poor background for a picture; the reflections of light prove distracting, but the same printed with some light pattern is ornamental in itself.

A BEFLOUNCED ERA IN FASHIONS.

Alpaca Obtains Favor for Autumn Gowns.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun.)

The flounce movement is making itself more strongly felt than ever. As can be readily seen by the first model. This gown is made of black and white checked alpaca, so soft and clinging as to resemble veiling closely. The skirt is cut in three-tier fashion, and the bodice turned back from a white vest of tucked taffeta, with white cloth revers heavily braided with black. It closes near the waist with link buttons of turquoise cabochons, and a stock tie of soft turquoise lends a touch of color at the neck. The newest alpacas are not to be despised, and are becoming much employed for between-seasons dresses. That of a buff tone, very like tussore, is popular, and so is the smoke blue and pale green shot with white.

But to return for a moment to the fad for flounces. It is sincerely to be hoped that it will abate somewhat before winter really sets in, or else we may look forward to being dragged down under a great weight of flounces long before Christmas time. Common sense will surely prevail, and women will not consent to groan under the burden of flounced cloth as well as flounced fur. The latter we are sure to wear, for furriers say that the deeply flounced capes in seal or sable are to be more used than any other style. These are both graceful and charming, but if skirts are not left plain, the weight of winter clothing will be more than the average woman can stand.

Princess gowns are much in evidence, and then again they are not, for they are so modified in various ways, and decorated in styles so novel, as to be scarcely recognizable.

Some of the new princess gowns are fastened from the neck to the hem with small round silver or gold buttons.

Parisians have revived the fashion of wearing coats of a different color from the skirt. There is a decided suggestion of the picturesque about the second model, and it is easy to realize the charm of the narrow, sweeping triple skirt of dark blue cloth, with its elongated coat of fawn cloth cut away from the front and sloping toward the back. The only trimming employed on skirt or coat is a double machine stitching. Attention to such trifles as the lace cravat at the neck will bestow upon even this costume added superiority.

Silk, satin and lace coats are not new, but they gain in popularity as the season advances and are constantly being modified and made more beautiful. Those of lace are worn with skirts of every description, from the thinnest of silk mousseline de soie to the thickest wool stuff. All sorts of lace are used, but with the wool skirts the heavy designs only are considered smart.

A Dainty Frock.

A very attractive toilette for afternoon, is made of flowered foulard. The gored skirt is trimmed at the foot with three narrow ruffles of the material, cut on the bias, the top flounce forming a narrow heading.

With this is worn a bodice which is made with a tucked yoke of white silk, with a fichu like arrangement over each shoulder, trimmed with narrow ruffles and finished with two bows of black velvet ribbon. The sleeves are tight fitting trimmed with groups of three tucks from top to bottom, and finished at the wrist with a frill. A black velvet belt is drawn around the waist and tied in a short bow in back.

Worth Knowing.

Nauseous medicines nowadays possess none of the terorrs that many of us remember when "powders" were given in jam and castor-oil in hot milk, as pharmacists have invented no end of ways of giving the nastiest drugs without any flavour at all.

Castor-oil, cod-liver oil, quinine, and things of that disagreeable kind are made up in little flexible capsules, which slip down the throat like a strawberry.

These capsules are also made in two parts; so that anyone can buy them empty, and put the powder or other drug in himself, sealing them, and then swallowing them without knowing that the drug has a taste.

Then there is the round wafer-paper, in which can be enclosed any kind of bolus, pill, or powder, and which, when moistened, can be swallowed with ease.

Even the grape and strawberry have been turned to account; and there is no more pleasant way of taking a bad-flavored drug than by scooping out the middle of the fruit and putting in the drug.

Pills are now made much smaller than they used to be, and the various coatings render them quite tasteless and easy to swallow.

Finally, when none of these devices can be used, the physician can fall back on gymnastic aid, which, temporarily paralyses the sense of taste, and allows one to swallow anything, however bad.

In taking a pill, by the way, most people get into exactly the position they should avoid. They throw back their head, opening the passage to the lungs and closing the way to the stomach. The right thing to do is to look at the toes.

Giant Loaves.

The biggest loaves in the world are those baked in France and Italy. In France they are made in the shape of very long rolls, five feet, and in many cases even six feet each.

The bread of Paris is distributed almost exclusively by women, who go to the various bake-houses at 5:30 a. m. and spend about an hour polishing up the loaves.

After the loaves are thoroughly cleaned of dust and grit the "bread porter" proceeds on the round of her customers. Those who live in apartments or flats find their loaves leaning against the concierge, restaurant-keepers, and those having street entrances to their premises, find their supply of the staff of life propped up against the front door.

The wages earned by these bread carriers varies from a couple of shillings to half-a-crown a day, and their day's work is completed by ten o'clock in the morning.

Handsome Fall Models.

A handsome model for an autumn tailor gown is made of pale heliotrope cloth in a bourette weave, figured with tufts of white camel's-hair. The jacket of heliotrope cloth turns back with revers of olive-green velvet, showing a blouse vest of white cloth braided in green and gold, with narrow belt to match. The skirt is open up each side to the waist, revealing panels of white cloth with cloth straps crossing them piped with velvet and almost covered with the green and gold braidwork.

The Children's Hour.

Mothers should never be too much occupied with their social or household duties to help their little ones with their daily tasks or lessons. A mother's first duty is to her children, and she should devote at least one hour of each day to them if she wishes to secure their confidence and retain her hold on their affections.

A SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

FORMER PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S BENEFACTION.

School Formed Where Ambitious Poor Boys Will be Given the Instruction They Crave. Its Originator and Head Was of This Class.

A deserving charity, and one which is worthy of the heartiest and most substantial support, is the farm school for boys about to be established on former President Cleveland's farm, three miles from Princeton, N. J. The school, which is really still in the embryonic stage, has already received undue and immature publicity, owing to the mention of Mr. Cleveland's name in connection with it, and it has even been exploited by the yellow journals, in their usual sensational manner, as the "Grover Cleveland Farm School."

It is necessary to mention this at the beginning in order that a clear understanding of the aims and scope of the institution may be gained. There is no intention on the part of those directly interested in it to name the school after Mr. Cleveland. That would be distasteful to him, and, inasmuch as he is the first and greatest benefactor, his wishes will be respected.

EX-PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.

Nor is the school designed as a home for the surplus juvenile population of the city slums. It aims to take boys, not indiscriminately, but after careful inquiry as to their circumstances, and make useful and self-respecting men of them. It aims to educate them with class book and trade. It aims through the medium of a healthy country life, to foster ambitions which another and more restricted atmosphere might stifle.

In short, this novel institution aims to make good men of boys who already have a desire to be good men, but who are lacking in opportunity, and sometimes in incentive. The boy who merely wants a home, and displays no further interest in his future, will not be tolerated.

The originator of this movement is a young man, who knows of his own experience all the struggles and heartburnings of the ambitious boy who wants to make something of himself. The great passion of his life is a consuming sympathy for such boys. For years he has schemed and planned and racked his brain to find the best means of going about the work on a solid basis. And at last, through the generosity of Mr. Cleveland and several other philanthropic gentlemen, he sees daylight ahead.

This young man is John Henry Vroom. His early boyhood was spent in Camden, N. J. At the tender age of thirteen he was obliged to leave school and found employment as a cash boy in one of Philadelphia's big department stores. The knowledge that he was earning his own living, or at least contributing to his own support, did not altogether take away the sting born of the knowledge that his studies must be neglected.

He was a studious little chap, and soon became known as "the boy with the book," on street cars, in the ferryboats plying between Philadelphia and his home in Camden.

Often would the little cash boy gaze bitterly at the fashionable women in silks and satins and think how much they could do for a boy who was eager to educate himself, if they only would. He told himself then that if when he grew to be a man he was in a position to do so he would devote his life to just such boys as he figured himself out to be.

And now the ambition of the little cash boy is about to be realized. All that is needed to insure its complete fulfillment is the aid of a few more men like Mr. Cleveland, who has not only placed his farm at the disposal of Mr. Vroom, but who has already spent the sum of $2,000 upon it way of improvements.

MISS BERWICK'S LUCK

BY PAUL CARSON.

Miss Berwick was small and retiring, while the city was big and aggressive. The two did not get on well together. Miss Berwick sewed for a living and lived in a little hall bedroom up four flights of stairs, in company with a tiny oil stove and diminutive folding bed.

She was in mortal dread of both of these articles, fearing that one would blow up or the other fold up unexpectedly and kill her unawares.

Miss Berwick had a cousin, Mrs. Green, her only relative and friend in the unfriendly city. This cousin invited Miss Berwick to a Sunday dinner, an invitation which was gladly accepted, for, having on Saturday night paid a week's room rent in advance, there was only a dollar left it. Miss Berwick's shabby pocket-book, and a good square meal was not to be lightly declined.

Mrs. Green lived in the suburbs, several blocks from a car line, and trudging that distance, and the hot sun, the little woman found herself looking backward to the hard winter during which she had barely existed.

"I don't see how I can ever live through another," she thought.

Mrs. Green occupied one of those aggravating houses whose front door opens directly into the front room—"the parlor," Mrs. Green called it—and there Miss Berwick was cordially welcomed by the Greens big and little. She took off her bonnet and laid it with her pocket-book and gloves on a stand near the door, and went on to dinner, which was ready in the adjoining room. Mrs. Green carefully closed the parlor door to keep out the heat, and no one remembered to lock the front door. They sat at the table a long time, but upon their return to the cooler parlor Miss Berwick at once noticed that something had happened. The purse still lay where it had been placed, but how changed! Instead of being a flat, poverty-stricken pocket-book, its normal condition, it was partly open, and its fat sides were nearly bursting with greenbacks.

"Look here!" Miss Berwick gasped.

Mrs. Green looked.

"Henry," she called sharply, "come here!"

Mr. Green, dropping his pipe, came in hastily from the porch.

"Where did that money come from?" demanded Miss Berwick.

"Where?" echoed Mrs. Green.

"It's a miracle!" said Miss Berwick.

"Miracles are not so easily explained," rejoined the practical Mr. Green, calmly.

"Explain this, then," said his wife.

"That is easy. Is the street door locked?"

It was ajar.

"And look here," cried Mrs. Green, "here's my 'Evangeline' with the leaf torn out," pulling it up from the floor; and sure enough, some one had hastily torn a fly leaf from the front of "Evangeline," and being in a hurry had left the book on the floor where it fell.

"Let's count it," suggested Miss Berwick, and the astonishment they found fifteen hundred dollars.

"I'm going to turn it over to the police at once," she declared.

"That's right," assented Mr. Green. "I'll go down with you."

"And so will I," said his wife, feeling that her cousin would need a woman's sympathy when giving up fifteen hundred dollars, even if it did belong to some one else.

An hour later a man and two women, one of the latter excited and the other looking scared, appeared before the chief of police with fifteen hundred dollars and an astounding story as to where and how it came to be found. The money, however, locked it up with "Evangeline," which Mrs. Green had brought along as a possible clue.

The chief said,

"The owner will doubtless notify the department of his loss or else the morning papers will advertise it."

The chief of police retained the money and the copy of "Evangeline," and then the morgue—that great revealer of secrets—unravelled the mystery.

One day the body of a well-dressed woman was taken from the river. On her hand was a wedding ring. In an oil-silk bag attached to a chain around her neck and worn inside her clothing was a diamond ring, twenty-five dollars in money, and a note written on a piece of paper whose jagged edges were afterward found to fit exactly in the place where the fly leaf was torn from Mrs. Green's "Evangeline." The note read:

"I am a childless widow, without a relative. They say I am insane. It may be- I am going to drown myself in the river. Send all my effects while I write this. Better death than a madhouse. I had fifteen hundred dollars, which was left of my husband's life insurance. I saw a door ajar and went in and put the money in a pocket-book. It looked as if its owners were poor. I give the money to the owner of the pocket-book."

That was all, no date, no name, and there was no mark on the clothing, which was evidently of foreign make. The woman looked like a French woman. They buried her decently, Mr. and Mrs. Green and Miss Berwick following her to the grave.

Months elapsed, and all hope of learning anything more being abandoned, the money and ring were turned over to Miss Berwick, who gave the ring to Mrs. Green.

Then, before another winter gripped the city in its cold arms, Miss Berwick fled to the quiet country town of her girlhood, where, having established a little milliner store, she led the rest of her life in harmony with her environment.

PADDY PLAYED WELL AND LONG.

Shuts Out the Other Stars and Gives the Entire Concert.

I dare say you have heard of Paderewski's love for his own particular piano and his absorption therein. He gave proof of his passion in rather a realistic fashion one evening, when Albert Alfred Harmsworth, the proprietor of the London Daily Mail and thirty odd other papers, gave an "at home" in his beautiful house in Berkeley square, to which all London west of Bond street seemed to try and work admission.

There was a long list of artists who had been engaged at "enormous expense," as the bills say, and among these were Paderewski, Melba, Plancon, Johannes Wolff, Kames, etc., all of whom came with their checks already in their pockets. Paderewski for five hundred pounds in advance and brought his own piano; Melba received three hundred pounds, for which she was to sing three songs, and the others had sums varying from one hundred to two hundred and fifty pounds, according to their importance. Early in the evening there was a tremendous crush, particularly in the neighborhood of the dining room. Nothing seemed to serve to thin the crowd. The music was advertised to begin at 11:30, but owing to the frightful crush, the host decided to turn on the musicians an hour earlier.

So they approached M. Paderewski and asked him if he would begin the concert. Certainly he would, and there was an immediate rush for the drawing room. For fifteen minutes the pianist held the audience spellbound with his wonderful music. He played anything and everything and seemed absolutely lost in the chords and rhapsodies of his instrument. Half an hour more and Paderewski was still playing. The audience began to thin out and seek the neighborhood of the supper room again. Harmsworth commenced to wring his hands in despair, and Melba, who was standing by, with her music in her hand, began to sing, began to scowl and look glum. No one dared stop Paderewski. Half past 11 and he was still playing. Twelve o'clock, and the great master was fairly revelling in a whirlwind of music, while Melba, with her music in her hand, Wolff, with his fiddle under his arm, and Plancon, with a frown on his face, stood behind the young Napoleon of journalism and cursed between their teeth. Paderewski was having a grand time of it.

Finally, at half past 12, after two hours of fun (for him), he stopped, gave a grand flourish of his right arm, ran his fingers through his hair, and walked out of the room with a most contented look on his face. He did not know that he had kept anyone waiting. He had forgotten his very existence, while Melba and the others fumed and fretted their tempers away. There were exactly eighteen people in the room when Paderewski came and only song of the evening, and then swept out of the house in a tower of indignation. The others did not get a look-in at all.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

HOW FAR ONE NEWSPAPER WENT.

Price People in Alaska Paid for News of Dewey's Victory.

"Papa" Cobb, the old Harvard athlete, who returned from Dawson on the Roanoke with a big bag of gold, told the following story about patriotism for the Stars and Stripes at Dawson:

"One day a man showed up in camp with a single copy of a newspaper containing the first account of Dewey's victory at Manila. This single paper was the first intimation we had of the glorious news our navy had been doing, and it was sought after more eagerly than gold.

"An enterprising Yankee purchased it for $10, and then hired Tammany hall for the evening. He charged $9 cents admission to packed hall. He read the paper to the crowd and after every sentence there was a warwhoop. It made the walls of the building tremble. The success of the venture was so pronounced that he rented the hall for the next night and cleaned another $1,000 vest. He made $400 off that one newspaper and sold it to a miner who was going into the diggings for $50."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Music as Aid to the Sick.

The theory that music is a sedative to the nerves is no new one, and has been fairly well tested. Mr. Gladstone during the many weeks of acute neuralgia which bothered to the last phase of his fatal illness found great relief in music. Mr. Herbert Spencer is said to have had recourse to music for the relief of nervous disturbance; and the empress of Austria is reported to have been cured of neuralgia by certain strains of sound repeated at frequent intervals. Many other illustrious sufferers have had their pain charmed away by the same sweet medicine. The "music cure" had considerable vogue some time ago in Germany, and a specialist hospital for its systematic application was established in Munich.

WISE PAPA.

Small Boy—Pop, dey say dat de fish is biting today.

Big Father—Wal, you stick ter your work and dey won't bite you.

A LUCKY ACCIDENT.

How Sir Henry Bessemer Discovered His Famous Process.

It is refreshing, in considering the notable achievements of great inventors, to happen upon an occasional instance where fortune has not only smiled on, but has well rewarded genius. It is far too often the case that discovered and inventor close their life in poverty and distress and leave to others the harvest of substantial benefits which in justice should have been his. Sir Henry Bessemer was a marked exception to this class. While seeking a cheaper method of making steel, he discovered a process for its manufacture that has revolutionized the iron and steel working industry of the entire world. Up till the time when his experiments were crowned with success, the making of steel was a very slow, and, consequently, a very laborious process, and steel had a comparatively restricted application in the industrial arts.

In a measure the discovery of Bessemer's process was accidental. To begin with, he had no knowledge of chemistry and metallurgy when he first set about his investigation to turn iron into steel. But he visited many places where iron was wrought and kept his eyes open. He saw that in the slow process of "puddling" the particles of molten metal were gradually brought into contact with the air and that this seemed to, in time, produce a fair quantity of steel. Had he known anything about the work at work during puddling, Bessemer steel undoubtedly would have been made some years sooner than it was. But he only saw the mechanical part of the operation. He knew that it was a question of getting a vent in which he could test his new idea. It was so constructed that a blast of cold air was forced into the bottom so that it would pass through the heated iron in the upper part of the retort. The day for the test arrived, and Henry Bessemer was naturally not the least excited of the group that gathered around the new contrivance. When the pig iron was melted the blast of air was turned on to prevent the metal filling the holes through which the air entered. Then the metal was poured in through the charging hole by an attendant stoker. A tremendous commotion immediately took place within the vessel. The molten iron," to quote one present, "bounded from side to side; a violent ebullition was heard going on inside, while a vehement violet flame, accompanied by corresponding sparks, burst from the throat of the cupola, from which the slang was also thrown in large foam like masses. A cast iron plate of the kind used to cover holes in the pavement, that had been suspended over the mouth of the vessel, dissolved to a gleaming mist, together with half a dozen yards of the chain by which it hung."

It is not surprising that such an unusual sight should have frightened not only the men, but the daring experimenter. Bessemer thought he saw in this terrific demonstration of two prime elements the complete failure of his plans. He wanted to shut off the fire before the charge of iron was spoiled or the furnace burned, but the stopcock regulating the supply was so close to the retort that no one dare go near it. This proved fortunate, for soon the commotion within the retort subsided, the fury of decarbonization had expended itself, and the product was run off. The result was not quite satisfactory. The product was, for the most part, burnt iron, but Bessemer saw enough in the experiment to encourage him in making a second trial, and the product from this proved to be malleable iron.

By further experiment it was found that by interrupting the process before the decarbonization of the iron was complete the product was pure, unalloyed steel, which, when tried, proved to be of very good quality. Here was a discovery of immense importance. If malleable iron and steel could be produced from pig iron by a process so rapid and simple, it could not fail before long to effect an entire revolution in the iron trade. And such it actually did many years before Bessemer closed his long and successful career.—Chicago Post.

The Art of Reading the Hands.

The left hand is passive and the right hand is active, a palmist tells us. Therefore you can tell a person's left hand with excellent lines, and then examine the right and find there are none of them there, you may be sure that that person had talent and ability, but neglected to use it. And on the fatal illness found great relief in music. Mr. Herbert Spencer is said to have had recourse to music for the relief of nervous disturbance; and the empress of Austria is reported to have been cured of neuralgia by certain strains of sound repeated at frequent intervals. Many other illustrious sufferers have had their pain charmed away by the same sweet medicine. The "music cure" had considerable vogue some time ago in Germany, and a special hospital for its systematic application was established in Munich.

GIVEN AWAY.

HE:
"I dont' like anybody dressed
That I'm a bride.
Too much't try to hold my hand—
Be dignified.
And try to look at ease and calm,
The way I do,
As if our going of alone
Were nothing new.
And when I ask you things, just growl!
'Oh, I don't know!'
Why does that horrid man back there
Grin at me so?
Could he have guessed?—or does he just Think I look nice?"

HE:
"Of course, he does—but dear, your hat
Is white with rice."

THE WILD STALLION.

"About as bad as I was ever scared," said the Montana cattle man, who was one of the number seated in the smoking room of a sleeper on a westbound train out of Chicago the other night, "was a year ago, up in the Musselshell river country, in Montana. But then the story is rather tame, and you wouldn't probably care to hear it."

"Go ahead!" came almost simultaneously from the balance of the group.

"I have been on the range for several years," he began, "and have more than once boasted that it was useless for a man to hang a six shooter at his side and jug it around with him, as most of the cowboys do when either riding the range or driving cross country in a buckboard, but I want to register myself right here as being in favor of a six-pistol for a companion, when on the range, from this time on."

"On account of the Indians and wild animals, I presume," interrupted the young chap at the end of the settlement.

"No, sir, not on account of the Indians, as the only Indians in that part of the country are the Crows, who get off their reservation occasionally, and a few straggling Crees, who have come across the Canadian line to dispose of some of their ornamental work in buffalo or cow horns, and these are harmless. But as to the wild animals, yes.

"It was necessary for me to make a buckboard trip up into the Judith Basin at the time of which I speak, and I started from Miles City with a tough span of cayuses that could take us sixty days just like a tap—I say 'us,' 'cause I had a big Irishman with me that I was taking out to the 'H X' ranch, as cook for the outfit.

"We made the team hit the trail from the start, and along toward the afternoon we passed Musselshell Crossing.

"Between Musselshell Crossing and Round Up a considerable distance can be saved by taking a cut through the Bull Mountains, though the road is a good deal rougher than it is by following the river, so we concluded we'd take the mountain road.

"We'd got over the worst of the road and up on the bench land, where we could spin along at a lively clip, when we noticed a bunch of horses in the road ahead of us. We didn't pay any attention to this, as it is quite a common thing to see a bunch of horses in that locality in the winter, when there is no snow, as the feed is good there.

"As we drove up, the animals moved away from the trail on either side. We had just got past the band when I heard the most horrible shriek that it has been my lot to hear, and on looking around a sight met my eyes that gave me a case of the 'buck ague' and caused the sweat to start from every pore. Coming straight for us, on the dead run, was a big, fine looking, jet black stallion, with his ears back, and his nostrils extended in a fierce rage.

"I urged on the cayuses, but the stallion gained on us at every jump. We had no gun to defend ourselves with, and I felt sure that was the last thought running through my mind was that my accident policy had been made good for another quarter the day before, and my family were sure of at least five thousand dollars as the case then stood.

"The stallion was almost within reach of us when I threw the lines to my companion. It was useless to try to urge the cayuses to greater speed. I grasped the whip by the small end, laid the butt on the dash-board and when the stallion got within reach I stood up, laid my whole strength on the effort, and brought the butt end around with full force and caught Mr. Stallion across the nose. The blow staggered him for a second or so, but recovering himself he gave another yell of rage and came at us again.

"I braced myself for another trial. When he again got so close that we could feel his hot breath on the nozzle on our backs, I repeated the blow, and this time caught him between the eyes with such force that I broke the whip; but the blow, thank God! must have blinded him, for he stood still for a few minutes with his front teeth wide apart, then began to aimlessly wander around as a blind horse would.

"We got out of there as soon as we could, and I borrowed a rifle at the next ranch. I ain't taking any chances from blind horses, and I'm none too good to lug a pistol with me now when on the range."

"What would the stallion have done if he had overhauled you?" queried the young fellow.

"We wouldn't have lasted as long as a snowball in Hades if he could have once got his teeth on us. I saw one man bit and stamped to death by a stallion, and you can excuse me from a fate of that kind. Well, it's about time to roll in."

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

The defining line between gowns designed for children and those intended for grown up folks is hardly perceptible nowadays. Women wear larger models of frocks worn by the small girls, with full, round waists and guimpe effects, while on the other hand the wee maid as young as seven has her skirt cut in the latest fashion, with all the frills and furbelows employed on the gowns worn by her mamma, while the separate skirt and waist of the grown up lady is worthy the children who feel quite grown up when decked out in this conventional costume.

The blouse bodice is the most popular model for youthful garments and proves the most practical as well as becoming waist in that it allows perfect freedom of movement to the growing child. These waists are usually made with an emplacement set in to form the yoke or are worn with guimpes of every material in vogue. Girls ten to sixteen, prefer the separate skirt and little Eton jacket mode of costume, which may be worn with a variety of blouses or shirtwaists. These useful suits are especially appropriate for the school girl, for while the journey to and from the schoolhouse is often cold and chilly, the class room on the contrary, is apt to be close and overheated, and that being the case the jacket may be removed and the pretty little blouse disclosed to view. Plain materials, such as serge, broadcloth, cashmere and poplins are employed for these frocks, and are relieved by trimmings of bright plaid or some contrasting color.

The soft wool and silk and wool fabrics will be largely employed this fall for church and party wear, while lace, velvet and silk will furnish the trimmings and dainty accessories to these frocks. Tucking, shirring and cording will also play an important part in the decoration of the up-to-date girl's frock, and the finished gown completed is often quite as elaborate as her uebutante sister's.

A stylish frock for a miss of thirteen is of Cuban red drap d'ete lined throughout with dark red taffeta. The skirt, cut with an attached flounce of a rather odd design, is finished about the either side of the front gore, and is connected with two straps and buttons. The corsage, a low necked bolero, almost meets down the center and is adorned with tiny black buttons, as is also the potatoish strap which extends from either side of the side seam. Black velvet is employed for the collar and belt, while the dainty little guimpe or underblouse is made of soft red and white India silk.

A pretty dress suitable for dressy occasions is daintily carried out in flowered challie on a cream ground, combined with plain challie and finely pleated silk mull. The full flounce of the flowered material has a band of the tucked cream at the edge, with a little ruche, and is attached to a closely fitted round yoke of the plain goods. The full blouse bodice is adorned with a pleated collar edged with a full ruffle, arranged in Echu fashion, which merges with the flaring cuffs. The waist slightly to the left side where it forms a narrow ruffle. The yoke, stock collar and sleeves are of flowered challie, while the centure is of crushed yellow satin, fastening in the front with a dull gold buckle. The hat is the latest design in headgear, being a three-cornered affair turned back directly from the face and adorned with black wings and ribbon.

The pelisse or box style of garment appears to be the favored model in coats designed for young children. A natty model for a miss of seven or eight is made of smooth faced green broadcloth, lined with satin and trimmed with stitching and buttons. The skirt portion of the coat is simulated by a stitched flounce extending around the sides and back, leaving the double-breasted front perfectly plain to the top where it is finished with turned back notched revers of white cloth, heavily stitched. A small shaped cape accompanies this coat, and a scarf of white mull about the neck gives a dainty finish.

Linen Mesh Underwear.

It looks as if the next fad to which we must all bow down will be the linen mesh underwear. We have had wool of various thicknesses, silk web of as much as to go literally through the wedding-ring to the fluffy sort that was actually thick enough to measure; we have had silk, heavy and light, and all weights and qualities of cotton, and as a novelty there is naturally left only linen to be tried, and the fact that the advocates of the new underwear claim for it coolness in summer and warmth in winter, and hygienic comfort at all times.

The most magnificent work of architecture is the Taj Mahal, in Agra, Hindustan. It is octagonal in form, of pure white marble, inlaid with every sort of precious stone. The work took 22,000 men twenty years to complete, and though there were free gifts and the labor was free, the cost was $16,000,000.

The new sailor hats of pearl white and soft cream-white French felt are very appropriate and stylish accompaniments to the tailor costumes of white serge, camel's hair, mohair, and other handsome wools.

"OIL WIZARD" WAS RIGHT.

Laughed at for His Discoveries Twenty Years Ago, He Triumphs Now.

Jacob Long, the famous "Oil Wizard" of Indiana, has come into prominence again through locating, by his peculiar method, some extensive oil country recently, and his predictions have been in almost every instance phenomenally successful. Twenty years ago, when Long was in his prime he was called the "water witch." Whenever a sawmill or residence was to be built he was called on to ascertain if the place was provided with water. Long was enabled to detect the presence of water by means of a forked stick which he carried close to the ground. He held a prong in each hand so that the third prong pointed upward. He claimed that as he passed over the water the prong would invariably point downward. Scientific people laughed at his method, but his judgment proved to be so good that no one thought of putting down a well unless Long was consulted.

Some years ago while Long was searching for water, his stick began to perform very curious antics by turning inward and outward. The phenomena puzzled Long at first, but in the natural course of events the time has come for him to step down after investigation he announced that large reservoirs of oil and gas lay under this land. The theory seemed so absurd that he was laughed at, and his sanity was questioned. Failing to convince his neighbors, he left home and tried to accumulate enough money to purchase a part of the land. In this he has been unsuccessful.

A short time ago he heard that oil had been struck in a locality where he had located it twenty years ago. He has returned to his old home and his predictions since then have been so accurate that he is again beginning to enjoy local fame.—New York World.

TURKEY FOOT A MASCOT.

Done in Gold, Silver and Ribbons It Brings Luck.

The rabbits foot is not in the race any longer as a charm. What has caused the downfall of bunnie's hind foot as a protection against all evil and an assurance of perpetual good luck for its happy possessor is rather a puzzling question and one which the fair sex and the advocates of the new fad would find it hard to explain.

Well, the rabbit having enjoyed so great and so long a run of popularity, and out, he has done so, and his place has been taken by one of the kings of the farmyard—the lordly turkey.

Fashion decrees that in order to be lucky one must wear in some manner or possess in some shape or other a turkey's claw.

The most popular style at present is the natural claw, properly treated by a taxidermist, its shank covered by a silver or gold cap, set with an amethyst, ruby, opal or some rare green stone, which resembles an emerald. The tip of the nail is covered with gold or silver cap, with a fine chain to match the cap from the shank to what one might call the wrist of the claw, and a pretty ribbon bow with long ends tied just below the shank.

These new mascots are so arranged that they can be hung up as ornaments or used as paper weights or table ornaments. In one case a foot has been prettily befeathered, which was intended for a cabinet. As dress ornaments they are, so far, but little used, though the writer was told they were being fashioned into clasps for fastening the capes at the neck.—New York Herald.

At Close Quarters.

A darky was suing a railroad company for damages—caused by the killing of his cow. There was a strong suspicion that he had purposely driven the cow on the track.

"Did you not drive the animal in front of the engine?" asked the lawyer for the road.

"No, suh, I didn't!"

"You do swear you didn't?"

"Yes, suh, ten times over!"

He won the case, but as he pocketed the check for his money some one overheard him say:

"Dat was a narrow escape I had, I tell you; but I tol' him de truth. I wuzn't no 'count drivin' de cow in front er de engine, but my brother-in-law—he de one done it! I mighty glad dat lawyer stop when he did, kase he wus right in de fambly!"—Atlanta Constitution.

About the Face on Silver Dollars.

A leading authority on American curios thus gives the history of the face on the American silver dollar: "Miss Anna W. Williams is the name of the lady whose profile is stamped upon the Bland silver dollar. When the designer, Morgan, came to this country from England, in 1876, he was selected to make a design for a new dollar. He settled in Philadelphia, with the direct aim of eventually obtaining a position to work, being desirous to present as the principal figure a representative head of an American beauty, finally selecting Miss Williams, who was living at the time with her aunt at 1021 Spring Garden street. She was unconscious of the ultimate use of the sketch she gave sittings for, and not until two years afterward was the secret disclosed."—St. Globe-Democrat.

JERRY'S REVENGE.

"You're getting out in time for the war, Jerry," said the Warden with a smile, as he gave No. 979 his hand at parting.

No. 979 smiled grimly in return. With his little bundle of clothing in hand and $10 in his pocket he walked out of the prison that had been his home for six years.

For Jerry Carroll was a man without hope. The iron had burned in his soul. In all the world there was no one he could call friend.

"De war," he muttered. "How do you could I enlist? Dey'd soon find out I'd worn stripes. War!"

His face grew black and sinister. He cursed as he walked toward the railroad station and made a desperate vow in his hard heart.

Henceforth his hand should be against every man. The world should be his foe. As he had suffered from society, so he would requite society sevenfold.

That night he prowled along the Bowery, whose many lights glittered like wicked eyes.

He drank again and again.

A cutler's window fascinated him with its display of shining knives.

He thrust his pallid, evil face and dishonorably shaven head close to the window and soon selected his weapon.

He went into the store and presently came out with the knife hidden beneath his coat.

That knife he meant for the man whose testimony had sent him to prison.

He would find him. Find him? He shook his clinched fist at the darkness as he staggered on.

Next day he wandered here and there through the wretched streets of the east side, looking in every man's face. The one thought lurking in the mind of the unhappy man was that of murder.

Over and over he pictured how he should come upon him, how spring upon him like a wild beast, how bury that knife in his heart.

Suddenly a shriek of childish fury roused him from his fit of abstraction.

He gazed stupidly upon a wretched, dirty little boy, who, sitting upon a wretched, dirty doorstep, dug his fists in his eyes and wailed aloud.

"Wot de devil alle de kid?" asked the Inhuman Jerry, pausing short.

"Me flag," howled the child; "me flag. Me Stars and Stripes."

"Your wot? Well, I'm danged. Makin'all this blomin' row about a flag?"

"A lady giv' me a flag an' we was playin' killin' Spaniards, an' Mickey Dun an' Tony de Dago hooked it from me an' run—dang dere eyes!" and the child gnashed his teeth with impotent rage.

Jerry's heart instantly warmed to this tiny Ishmaelite. He, too, had his grievance against society. Society had robbed him of his dearest possession.

He held out his hand.

"Come along wid me," he said. "I'll buy yosse a flag. An' fer God's sake quit that hollerin'."

The child quickly wiped away his tears and taking his new friend's hand went confidingly with him.

Jerry purchased a fair selling flags, and Jerry bought one for the boy as well as a tiny badge bearing the historic inscription: "Remember the Maine."

The boy's grimy little hands trembled with delight as he took the flag.

"Youse must go along home wid me," he stated. "I want me fadder ter see dis flag. If youse don't come dem t'ieves will take dis one and de pin, too."

Jerry liked the boy, and humored him.

"All right," he said I'll go wid youse. W'ere is it?"

"Ludlow street," said the child, strutting along with his flag. "Me fadder's pretty sick. He don't say nothin' about me mudder. He just lies wid his face ter de wall all day. But he'll look at dis flag, fer he wus dead agin dem Spaniards an' wus a-goin' ter de war 'fore he took sick."

No. 979 followed his little guide into the cold, cheerless room where the sick man lay on a miserable bed.

At sound of footsteps, he turned his face, ghastly and damp with the approach of death, toward them.

And at sight of that face, everything went out before Jerry's revenge, and he reached blindly for his knife.

"Jerry Carroll," said the dying man, raising himself on one elbow, "is that you?" I'm a-dyin', Jerry, that's wot, I am a-dyin'. It's a good job youse come. I want ter forgive youse, Jerry, afore I go. Yer forgive"—

He raised a feeble hand.

"Youse were innocent, Jerry, that I swear, Bob," turning helplessly to the child, "Bob, little Bob, listen to wot I've got ter say now. Dis here gentleman, Bob, were badly treated. Try to make up ter him, Bob, fer de trouble I've made."

He stopped suddenly. His head dropped on his breast.

He was dead.

The convict stood as one stupefied. His jaw dropped.

The knife fell from his hand and clattered down on the cold, bare floor.

Suddenly he looked at little Bob.

The frightened child was shaking his father.

"Look at me flag, dad," he was saying. "look!"

He stopped suddenly and softly whimpered—a forlorn little creature clutching his flag close to his ragged shirt.

The Ishmaelite sank into a chair. He put his arms around the desolate little figure, and, drawing the boy to his breast, burst into a passion of tears.—New York World.

Democratic State Convention!

OFFICIAL CALL.

The Democratic voters of New Jersey are requested to meet at such times and places as may be designated by their local Democratic committees, to elect delegates to a Democratic State Convention, to be held at Taylor Opera House, in the City of Trenton, on Wednesday, September 28, 1898, at 12 o'clock, noon, for the purpose of selecting a candidate for Governor.

The basis of representation in said State Convention will be one delegate for each two hundred Democratic votes cast at the Gubernatorial election of 1895, and one for each fraction of the same over 100, but each voting precinct or election district now existing shall be entitled to at least one delegate.

An examination in detail of the official election returns of the last Gubernatorial election and the vote cast thereat for the Democratic candidate, and the voting precincts existing at the last election for members of the General Assembly (1897) and the laws of 1898, each county, on the basis herein provided, is entitled to the following number of delegates to the State Convention hereby called, to wit:

Atlantic	26
Bergen	61
Burlington	40
Camden	74
Cape May	16
Cumberland	33
Essex	161
Gloucester	30
Hudson	159
Hunterdon	29
Mercer	56
Middlesex	45
Monmouth	55
Morris	42
Ocean	11
Passaic	60
Salem	18
Somerset	23
Sussex	27
Union	54
Warren	27
Total	1035
Necessary to a choice	518

Newark, Sept. 13, 1898.

E. L. PRICE,
Chairman State Democratic Com.
WM. K. DEVEREUX,
Secretary.

Elston M. French for the Assembly.

If Elston M. French concludes to become an aspirant for the Democratic nomination of Assemblyman in Somerset county, as some of the party leaders are urging him to do, he will at once bring to the approaching campaign a strong factor for the Democrats to settle on with splendid chances of winning.

In the office of Assessor of North Plainfield Mr. French has already demonstrated his aptitude for public duties, and in his rapid rise in the local business world he shows every qualification that would appeal strongly to voters to support him in the knowledge that the county would possess an active and able representative in the lower House of the Legislature if he was there. His youth, his energy and his personal popularity would contribute to give the campaign an activity that few other candidates could command.

In North Plainfield Mr. French would undoubtedly receive a very large complimentary vote from Republicans, and together with a full party vote he would roll up such a majority that it would require but a reasonable amount of support from other sections of Somerset county to ensure his election.

Mr. French would certainly make a strong candidate for the Democrats.

Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic State committee has issued the official call for the State convention to be held in Taylor's Opera House in Trenton, September 28th.

Numerous names have been mentioned in connection with the Democratic nomination for Governor—names that carry with them respect and ability—but as yet the drift of the canvass has not been towards any particular man for the honor and work of making the fight for an office that but a few years ago was conceded to the Democrats even before the votes were cast.

Under the apportionment of delegates Union county will be entitled to fifty-four delegates. Somerset county will be entitled to twenty-two representatives. The total number of delegates in the convention will be 1,035, of which 518 will be necessary to a choice.

New Brunswick Beyond Hope.

New Brunswick is getting worse and worse. A confiding Perth Amboy citizen was robbed of a clean $100 in cash in the Middlesex county courthouse the other day. It seems too bad that there is no hope for New Brunswick's reform.

A Trifle Late.

The Plainfield Common Council has come to the conclusion that street railroad franchises are worth money.—Newark News.

Better late than never.

The New Primary Rules.

The new rules adopted by the Republican city executive committee for the conduct of primaries were in force Monday for the first time. So far as they worked the result may be de*termined successful. The rules are* designed to obviate the possibility of political managers running a slate through the primary without giving all party members a fair and equal chance to express their opinion of the fitness of candidates nominated for offices. The lack of a contest, however, for any of the delegations Monday prevented an actual and fair test being given to the rules. The voting Monday was merely perfunctory on the part of loyal Republicans.

If the conditions were reversed and there was a lively fight for supremacy in party control, with the political workers resorting to their numerous and shady practices for gaining advantage, the observation of how the rules worked would have been greatly enhanced in practical value.

Inasmuch as the rules are laid out for the purpose of preventing trickery they cannot be declared a perfect success until such a time as they actually do thwart the political manipulators from scoring over the prevailing sentiment of the rank and file of the party. Of course, there may be those of an optomistic frame of mind who will say that the rules will be most likely to deter the politicians from undertaking their little schemes. Perhaps so. But we think not. When a practical Indian gets ready to do a certain thing all stiff rules in the country isn't going to scare him out of at least a trial at it.

The Summit Telephone War.

The tiffs which the officials of Summit have had with the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company over the terms on which the telephone facilities should be extended, so as to give the place a local exchange, has resulted in the telephone company completely evacuating the place. Now the nearest telephone connection with Summit is Short Hills, and we can imagine the rural denizens of the latter settlement sniffing with a superior sniff at aristocratic Summittites as they pass them by.

The telephone company officials have undoubtedly come to the conclusion that the quickest way to bring Summit people to a realization of how valuable the franchise is to the town as well as the company is to deprive the former of its advantages for awhile.

Still, Summit has its dander up, so to speak, and now that the telephone company has voluntarily abdicated the place, it is not at all unlikely that it will be a cold day when they get back there on the same footing that they were when they left.

In the meantime, the Newark Telephone Company has sent a communication to the Township Committee offering to furnish free telephones for fire and police service in the township, and to make other concessions for a franchise. The Committee has requested a representative of the Newark Telephone Company to be present at tonight's meeting of the former body.

A Deplorable Condition.

The North Plainfield township school trustees are not looking after the rising generation in a proper *manner when they fail to make pro*vision for the attendance of children in the eastern end of the township at the Scotch Plains Public School. There are perhaps a dozen children practically debarred from securing the greatest of all American gifts—an education—through living too far from the regular township school and not having the school trustees arrange for their instruction at Scotch Plains. The matter can be adjusted for $3 per pupil with the Scotch Plains officials, a sum too small to stand in the way of its acceptance by North Plainfield.

Hurrah, Cranberries Are Safe.

As a great American nation we have won a victory over Spain and accomplished a great many other things in the present year that reflects credit upon our nationality, but now let us hurrah a little bit for the Jerseyman. The cranberry crop is safe, the news comes from the boggy country of South Jersey. What would Thanksgiving be if we didn't have the good old Jersey cranberries to eat with our roast turkey.

The Trolley Franchise.

After all, if the interference of the Board of Freeholders with the city in granting the trolley franchise to the local company for its eastern extension is going to open up a way for the Common Council to demand something more substantial than was at first proposed for privilege of using the streets, then certainly all's well that ends well.

Atkinson a Candidate.

Clarence Atkinson, the Camden lawyer, has decided to allow his name to go before the Democratic State convention as a Gubernatorial candidate. His claim is based on the support of South Jersey and that he will have the solid vote of Camden, Burlington, Salem, Gloucester, Cumberland, Cape May and Atlantic counties.

Look Out for Silas.

Considering the fact that there is something like 700 delegates who will attend the Republican State convention today, the honor of sitting in the assemblage cannot be said to be a very distinctive one. There will be one man there, however, who will consider his credentials as a delegate to be a great feather in his cap. And he isn't a man who has had a dearth of celebrity in recent times either. He is none other than Silas D. Drake, irrepressible under every circumstance and boomer all the time. Most people will wonder, no doubt, how a man who has run the gamut of all sorts of sensations—from presiding at a National convention of mayors to having his testimonial and picture printed in a Paine's celery compound advertisement—could feel the slightest distinction in sharing an honor which every cross-roads politician in New Jersey can secure almost for the asking. But strange things happen every day in the year.

Mr. Drake will occupy a seat in the convention as an alternate delegate for W. W. Smalley of Bound Brook. But routine details of how he comes to be there are not essential. Throbbing details of why he wants to be there and what he proposes doing are the most important. Once upon a time, as the old story goes, Mr. Drake was engaged in booming a town between Plainfield and Elizabeth that possessed the poetic name of Lorraine. Now it happened that among the instruments which he used to attract attention to the town was a glorious Fourth of July celebration. That was in 1892, and in those days Foster Voorhees was not the important man he is today. Well, Silas likes Foster and he asked the curly-headed lawyer to deliver the oration of the day at the celebration. Voorhees consented. As everyone knows Si. Drake is not the man to stand on the dignity of the occasion, and after the present Acting-Governor had finished his patriotic peroration the redoubtable Silas ascended the platform and in an impromptu speech proposed Voorhees for Governor of New Jersey. Silas cheered his own sentiments to the echo and from that day to this the sage of Lincoln has claimed to be the great original Voorhees man of New Jersey. And knowing Silas as the man who does not hem and haw on formalities let it be known that Voorhees has been the Gubernatorial bee which has buzzed around Silas' hat all the time.

To sit in the State convention today and be able to cast a vote for Voorhees as the nominee for Governor will be the fulfillment of a cherished ambition for the Lincoln statesman. Perhaps the astute politicians, who like to have affairs arranged to a nicety, will try to stem the tide of Silas' enthusiasm in the convention, but we warn them to look out.

Silas is bound to be heard in the convention today.

Conflicting Trolley Laws.

The progress of the trolley through the rural districts of New Jersey has been watched with interest by many Plainfielders. Particularly interesting were the happenings in Piscataway township. Just at present the latest turn of events shows a conflict of township ordinances and State law which is bound to be perplexing as the judiciary of the State has not yet given any opinion in the matter.

According to the township ordinances under which the franchise to the Brunswick Traction Company was given allowing them to pass through Piscataway township, it was necessary for the trolley line to be completed and to have its cars in operation six months after the granting of the franchise. Then to-morrow and the township authorities state that the franchise will be forfeited if the cars are not running. A reputable lawyer, well posted in trolley matters, has called the attention of The Daily Press to the fact that a statute recently passed by the State Legislature gives any trolley company two years in which to complete its lines. Another law says that any trolley line then building may have until January 1st, 1900, to complete its lines. Then there are several other law applying to trolley work.

The result is a general misunderstanding and the trolley companies of the State are not sure where they are standing. The township authorities *claim that their ordinances are bind*ing for the reason that they were accepted by the trolley corporations when the franchise was granted. It seems probable, however, that the Brunswick company will make no attempt to take advantage of the State laws but start the cars running between the site of the bridge near Bound Brook and Dunellen.

Gordon Avenged.

The remarkable campaign of the Anglo-Egyptian army under Sir H. H. Kitchener, which culminated in the crushing defeat of the Mahdist forces at Omdurman, just opposite the ruins of Khartum, on the Blue Nile, is more than ordinarily significant. Here, near where the martyred Gordon fell with the English flag almost in sight, General Kitchener has finally smashed the whole fanatical dervish following. England has added another splendid soldier to the master roll of her military genius. He belongs to the superb group among which Marlborough and Wellington stand foremost. A campaign fought with more acute prevision and mathematical certainty from the first to the last step cannot be cited in recent annals except perhaps the first part of Moltke's campaign against the French. The achievement was a great one, but its political consequences are likely to be greater. The only justification of war is that it sometimes opens the way for a more certain advance of civilization. That has been done by Kitchener Pasha. The tenacious clutch of the self styled khalifa and his dervish hordes on the upper Sudan has been for many years the impassable barrier, across whose zone there was no passage north or south.

Now the march of progress is opened to the great African lakes, and the dream of that empire builder, Cecil Rhodes, has become practicable. The newly cemented friendship between Germany and England makes the advent of railway and telegraph across the eastern middle belt an assured thing, and the opposition by the Portuguese in the Zambesi region can be brushed away without trouble. The connection between South Africa and Egypt by steam and electricity has made a giant stride in the success of Kitchener Pasha, and the next score of years will probably see through travel between Cape Town and Alexandria. Political obstacles removed, the physical obstructions to be overcome are not to be compared with those conquered by the engineers of the Siberian railroad. The dramatic feature of the great victory at Omdurman flows out of its association with the lamented Gordon, who fell pierced in Khartum by a dozen lances 14 years ago this month. Its true significance is that it has demolished the last absolute barrier in the march of civilization on the dark continent.

A Halcyon Sky.

Our own recent war came to a swift end, happily disappointing expectation. Great results accrued from an unprecedently small loss of life by the casualties of battle. Very soon the czar's invitation to the world's great powers to participate in a peace conference for the purpose of a large and partial disarmament astonished humanity. This proposition emanating from a source so potential for the ends of peace or war was a trumpet blast, stirring and delighting the hearts of all good men. It unfolded a new vision of possibilities, such as no lover of his kind had dared hope for. Less than a fortnight later came the news that Germany and England had entered into an alliance and had agreed on a satisfactory basis for the settlement of their commercial and colonial interests in Asia and Africa. They had found a common understanding as to their relative operations to be far more helpful than a condition of bickering and distrust. Almost simultaneously it was reported that the warcloud in the Chinese imbroglio as between England and Russia had dissipated before the power of an agreement as to their mutual claims. Each agreed to respect the other's sphere of influence and to forbear kindling the flames of discord by illegitimate and cunning intrigue.

Whether or not these prove to be in practice a full realization of the hopes provoked by these auspicious phases of diplomacy, one thing is reasonably assured. England, Germany and Russia, the three European powers of commanding influence, will studiously refrain from any action which will disturb the hopes of peace. Italy and Austria, though not parties to any indicated negotiation, for their conditions do not involve it, are known to be in warm sympathy with the prospect of a world at peace. And France, however fretted by irritation at the defeat of hopes which war alone could gratify, is powerless alone. There is promise of a halcyon sky and once more Milton's divine lyric on the Christian nativity may be true:

> No war nor battle sound
> Was heard the earth around.
> The idle spear and shield were high uphung;
> The hooked chariot stood
> Unstained with human blood,
> And kings sat still with awful eye,
> As if they surely knew their sovereign lord was by.

The phrase of Spanish hospitality in welcoming the visitor is, "All that I have is yours." This is probably what General Macias in the name of Spain said to General Brooke coming in the name of the United States. It had ceased to be hyperbole.

A young man is rich in all the future which he dreams. The old man is poor in all the past which he regrets. There are many millionaires who would exchange some of their millions for a cup of forgetfulness.

The most dangerous vices are virtues, which have put themselves into perverse and inharmonious relation to life.

Medical Incapables.

The number of so called medical institutions which give degrees in this country is so great that measures have been instituted from time to time to reduce even those which have legitimate title under our laws. Of these "fake" organizations which sell the mask of wisdom and competence, under which impostors sometimes ply the privileges of quitting with the life of human beings, we do not now speak. These raise their heads for a year or two in abundance in certain localities and then we cease to hear much of their nefarious trade. They are pretty generally severely punished once they emerge from their hiding places.

But there is a keenly recognized professional evil in the redundancy of persons wearing the title of M. D. who have secured the appendage under conditions which do not violate the law. The graduate of some insignificant college may possibly become by natural aptitude and practice as skillful a leech as the graduate of the best. But there can be no doubt that there is a certain brevet of value in a degree received from a great institution. Independently of any other fact it gives reasonable assurance of excellence, and deservedly so. It is now proposed in England to make the statement of the source of the degree a necessary part of the title, im*posing a heavy fine on the use of* M. D. or D. D. without this explanation. It makes less difference concerning the other titles, but in the medical tag it would seem to be a matter of importance beyond the common. The parliamentary bill to which reference is made renders it compulsory to add an explanation to the title, so that the reader may at once declare its authority. It leaves the onus of making discrimination to the public. It does not entirely eradicate a danger, but it goes far in the right direction. It will not prevent trickery of the ignorant and the credulous, but no legislation would ever do that.

Under the American system of charter laws, whereby authority is derived from the state and not from the United States, the conditions to be obviated are far more intractable. Just such a state of affairs as is to bound to recur. But the well known medical universities, which give a reasonable proportion of professional acquirement, are known to people of ordinary intelligence. For instance, a degree from the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, the Pennsylvania College of Medicine or the Rush Medical college of Chicago carries at once with it a brevet of distinction which implies a certain degree of competence. It would help to remove a state of uncertainty now existing and in many cases guide a choice of medical advice. If it would not altogether prick a bubble, it would go far to reduce the number which have a living chance of keeping afloat. The difficulty in America would be to secure such a wide concurrence of state legislation as would make the law of general good.

In spite of the dominance of steam as the motive power of ships, the sailing vessel is still an important factor in commerce. This has come about through the value of labor saving inventions which enable one man to do the effective work of two. Some of the crews in these big ships, which reach occasionally 4,000 tons burden, are not numerous enough to form more than two watches, yet they are not as helpless in nasty weather as the bigger crews of an early period. They are fitted with a great multiplicity of skillful devices, the more important among these being automatic mechanisms for reefing and unfurling sails, reefing, lowering the anchor, steering, handling the canvas and sheet ropes in all exigencies likely to befall, and loading and unloading cargoes. For the most part hulls of steel and of great beauty of model, many of these ocean carriers look like exaggerated yachts. They sail with extraordinary speed and offer even more comfort to the crews than the steamships. The largest will spread 10,000 yards of canvas to a fair breeze. The day of the sailing ship is not yet numbered.

It is said that some of the New York merchants who promised clerks who enlisted their positions when the war should be over now resent their pledges. The ground taken is that they meant the time to mean the actual fighting, not the detention in northern camps waiting for discharge. Do these patriotic traffickers of their own honor expect their old clerks to desert?

A writer in The United Service Magazine states that the United States has spent more than $10,000,000,000 in war during the national existence. This generous statistician has probably reckoned it at compound interest, as representing what might have been saved. But then the country would not have existed at all.

There was a certain republican simplicity amid all the splendor of Queen Wilhemina's coronation which gave impomp an added dignity. Salt as well as sugar went to the making of the ceremonial.

Habitual gravity of demeanor is a stratagem to conceal poverty of mind. The most highly gifted natures are streaked with gayety as quarts with gold.

CAPTURED AN EAGLE.

GREAT AMERICAN BIRD IS NOW HELD BY GEORGE BELCHER.

Caught It Near Cedar Brook and Road Ending Last Sunday—The Eagle Flew at Carriage and Resisted Capture.

George Belcher, of Watchung avenue, has in his possession a good-sized eagle, which from all appearances is a young bird. Last Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Belcher went out carriage driving and while in the vicinity of Cedar Brook and Road Ending, Mr. Belcher saw the bird perched upon the fence.

As the sight of the people the eagle flew at the carriage. Mr. Belcher made an attempt to catch the bird, but found it quite difficult. Two strangers happened along at the time and they assisted Mr. Belcher to tie the bird's feet so that he could handle him. The strangers were severely clawed and scratched by the eagle while they were assisting.

The eagle is a beauty and from the tips of the wings measures about five feet. Mr. Belcher has no cage large enough to keep the bird in, but temporarily fixed a place the best he could. He does not know what to do with the eagle.

Labor Men to Meet

A mass meeting of the moulders and machinists will be held in Reform Hall, this evening at 8 o'clock to be addressed by W. Perrine, of the Moulders' Union, and G. G. Cameron, of the International Association of Machinists, the object being the organization of these trades in Plainfield. A representative of the Socialistic Trade and Labor Alliance will be present in behalf of his party.

To Lead the Singing.

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Congregational church, held Sunday morning, it was decided to retain the services of Horace J. Martin as precentor for another year.

BIBLES WENT LAST.

HEROIC DEVOTIONS SHOWN BY SOLDIERS ON SAN JUAN HILL.

Did Not Part With Their Bibles Till the Last Thing—John C. Whiting Relates His Experiences With Soldiers.

John C. Whiting, of New York, formerly of this city, spoke Sunday to the Congregational Christian Endeavor Society, of which he was at one time a member, concerning life at the army camps, where he has been serving as a Y. M. C. A. secretary during the summer. He spoke of the love shown by the men for "Uncle Sam," and of the absence of the spirit of revenge, especially among the men who had seen actual service. He told of the brave attempts of men who were only fit to be in the hospital to keep from showing how ill they were, and related some pathetic stories of individual cases of illness and death. There was a bright side to many of these cases, the men, having during their illness, become earnest Christians, through the influence of the workers among them.

Mr. Whiting spoke especially of the openness of the soldiers to Christian influences, and told how it was well known that thousands of men had been seen night after night in camp reading their Bibles and testaments; and that after the battle of San Juan Hill the smaller accoutrements of the men were found nearest the bottom of the hill, shown that they had been thrown away first, then their rations, and nearest to the top, not thrown away until the last moment, when it became absolutely necessary, the Bibles and testaments issued to them by the Christian Association. At the close of Mr. Whiting's talk, the society voted to send a generous appropriation from the treasury to aid a young man whom Mr. Whiting had spoken of, who had his family to support, and who is now slowly recovering from the fever, constantly incurring expense instead of being able to care for others.

TOM TIMBO'S HARD LUCK

SOME MISCREANT RODE OFF ON HIS BICYCLE SUNDAY.

Stolen in Broad Daylight While Standing in Front of His Store—A Short Time Ago His Old Wheel Was Wrecked.

Tommy Timbo is having rather hard luck with his bicycles at present. It was only a little while ago that a farmer ran into his old one and totally wrecked it. Sunday, some unknown miscreant calmly walked off with the new wheel and now Tommy is mourning its loss without any particular prospect of ever seeing it again.

Sunday afternoon, the wheel was left standing in front of Timbo's store on North avenue. There was a crowd of young men about the entrance, most of whom were well known to the proprietor. It was about 1 o'clock when Tommy went to look for his wheel to find it gone. At first it was thought that somebody was playing a joke but the Wheel didn't turn up and it soon became evident that the wheel was gone to stay. The remarkable fact was that although there was a crowd about the store all the time, nobody could remember having seen anyone take the wheel.

The theft was reported to the police but there is little chance that they will discover the thief. The wheel was an Eclipse No. 49180.

Solos by William Holmes.

William Holmes, of Front street, has returned to the choir at the First Baptist church, and last Sunday he sang two solos very acceptably. B. T. Barnes has also returned to the choir in his usual position as basso.

IN THE GOLDEN AGE OF LIFE THEY ARE LIVING.

A Notable Celebration of a Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary.

HONOR AND SUCCESS IN LIFE

MR. AND MRS. JESSE MILTON EMERSON WERE THE CELEBRANTS.

The Event Made An Occasion for a Pleasant Gathering of Friends at Their Home, Inter-Haven, in North Plainfield—House Decorated in Golden Hues —A Special Poem Was Also Written.

Fifty years ago last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Milton Emerson, of Inter-Haven, North Plainfield, were united in marriage and the golden anniversary of that event was auspiciously celebrated Monday afternoon and evening from 3 to 10 o'clock at their beautiful and historic home at the foot of Watchung mountain, where this happy couple live a life of retirement and quietude.

The home was lavishly decorated in an appropriate manner through the use of golden rod, fruits and vegetables of a golden hue. In the parlor the decorations were perhaps the most unique. In one corner, where the bride and groom received their guests, there was arranged golden rod, full ears of corn on the stalk, pumpkins, tomatoes and other vegetables, all representing the golden season.

In the dining room the decorations were just as attractive and were greatly admired for their natural beauty and artistic arrangement. The table was laden with fruits of all kinds and here, during the stated hours, guests were served with refreshments.

The bride was gowned in white brocade silk, trimmed with gold and real lace, and wore a cap also of real lace. She and her husband made a youthful appearance. They both looked hale and hearty. Mr. Emerson has been feeble, but he is now quite well for one of his age. Both were showered with congratulations by their many relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson were assisted in receiving by Miss Florence Emerson, their granddaughter, and Mrs. Edward R. Emerson, their daughter-in-law, both of New York. Miss Emerson wore a gown of white organdie, while Mrs. Emerson was gowned in a dove-color silk dress trimmed with Nile's green velvet.

There was a large number of relatives and friends present from New York, Brooklyn and many distant points. A unique feature of the invitations issued by the bride and groom was the pictures of themselves as they appeared fifty years ago, and also pictures as they appear today. These were sent to all parts of the United States and to many points in foreign lands where they have warm friends.

The residence occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Emerson is known as "The House of a Thousand Years," and is very old. A great many improvements have been made and a more ideal spot could not have been chosen for them to spend their latter days.

During the celebration a meritorious poem, written by W. S. Messmer, of San Antonio, Texas, a personal friend of the bride and groom, was read. It was written for this special occasion. The poem is as follows:

"LINES ON A GOLDEN WEDDING."

While other days and years shall fade,
In this, and in far distant lands,
Bring gifts of gold and golden words
As dear memorials of that day,
That fifty years have slipped away.
Swift as the flight of summer birds,
I bring my simple gift of Thyme
And wrap my incense in this rhyme.

May coming years as past years be,
And even more abundantly,
With all life's good be fully filled;
May perfect love and perfect peace,
In those dear hearts still find increase
Who have the law of love fulfilled;
Their lamp of love a glowing sun,
Till latest sands of life are run.

Across the intervening miles
Their hands I grasp, see tears and smiles
Commingled in each smiling face,
On this their golden wedding day;
And in my heart of hearts I pray,
That all love's tenderness and grace,
Which crowns this golden day with peace,
May to life's latest hour increase.

On this glad day, may each glad hour
Bring back with resurrection pow'r,
The gladness of that other day,
That day just fifty years ago,
When in life's ruddy morning glow,
Love's sun beamed on that wedding day.
A day forever sanctified
Thro' years which love has glorified.

May all its memories live, re-born,
On this their golden anniversary morn
To crown each hour with pure delight;
While such time-softened, mellow rays
As blend in soft September's haze,
Flood all the world with golden light,
And make this golden wedding day
A golden memory for aye.

The gifts received by the bride and groom were mostly all gold and very costly. One gift consisted of a large pitcher mounted and two cups, all solid gold, which came from the Brotherhood Wine Company, of New York. The names of the directors of the company were engraved on the pitcher, also the names and dates "1848-1898."

Mr. Emerson was born at Methuen, Mass., and Mrs. Emerson, at Amherst, N. H. They were married September 18, 1848, by Mrs. Emerson's father, Rev. Ira Pearson, who for seventy years was active in the Baptist ministry. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Emerson located at New Orleans, where Mr. Emerson had business interests. Soon afterward they returned to New York city, where they resided until four years ago. During his early years Mr. Emerson conducted a publishing business at 38 Park Row, New York. He is the author of "New York to the Orient" and "European Glimpses and Glances," both of which relate the personal experiences which the author and his wife had while traveling abroad. Another work is entitled "Stimulants," and treats of the uses and abuses of such. After Mr. Emerson left the publishing business he founded the Brotherhood Wine Company, of New York, and he has been president of the company ever since. Two sons, J. M. Emerson, Jr., and Edward R. Emerson, both of New York, are associated in the business.

PRESENTED WITH A CANE

A PLEASANT AND COMPLETE SURPRISE FOR S. A. GINNA.

Bethel Chapel Sunday-School Honor Their Superintendent With the Gift of a Gold-Headed Cane, Suitably Inscribed.

A pleasant and complete surprise was given to Former Councilman Stephen A. Ginna, of Watchung avenue, Sunday afternoon. Mr. Ginna is superintendent of the Sunday-school at Bethel chapel and his many friends who attend the Sunday-school and church presented the superintendent with a handsome gold-headed cane bearing the inscription "To S. A. Ginna, from the Sunday school of Bethel chapel."

The presentation was made by Alfred W. Duxbury, assistant superintendent of the school, and the whole affair was such a surprise to Mr Ginna that he was at a loss for words to respond to the presentation speech. He did, however, regain his composure and in a neat speech most heartily thanked all those who contributed towards the handsome and substantial gift.

The presentation was planned two months ago and since that time those in charge have been steadily, but quietly working to complete the plans which were carried out with perfection. The cane was purchased of Asa Collier, the Park avenue jeweler, and the cane is of the finest material.

Mr. Ginna appreciates very much the expression of good will and kindly feeling evidenced and will ever hold in remembrance the presentation.

CHRISTIAN WOMAN DEAD.

Mrs. Mary Morgan Succumbs to an Illness of Five Years' Duration.

The death Mrs. Mary Morgan, wife of Frank Morgan, of Somerset street, occurred Saturday last after an illness lasting about five years. Mrs. Morgan was the daughter of David Stelle, of Piscataway township, and has been a resident of this city for sometime. Her husband is in the wholesale cutlery business in New York.

The funeral services were held from the house last Tuesday at 2 o'clock and later at the Park Avenue Baptist church. Rev. Dr. Richardson, pastor, officiated. Interment was in the family mausoleum in New York Bay Cemetery, at Greenville, Tuesday afternoon. The deceased was for many years a member of the Baptist church at Bayonne City, and was a faithful Christian.

HOWELL DIVISION ELECTS.

Sons of Temperance Choose Their Officers for the Ensuing Year.

At the meeting of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, Monday, the following officers were elected: Worthy Patriarch, Mrs. Sarah Lake; Worthy Associate, Mrs. Emma Angleman; recording secretary, Benjamin Hand; assistant recording secretary, Miss May Thompson; financial secretary, Mrs. Emma Cox; treasurer, Mrs. Sarah Mattox, chaplain, Mrs. Anesta Corwin; conductor, Mrs. Sarah Koyer; assistant conductor, Mrs. Jennie Bush; inside sentinel, Mrs. Sarah Lincoln; outside sentinel, Wm. E. Koyer.

Two candidates, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cox, were initiated.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free.

REPUBLICANS HOLD THEIR PRIMARIES.

Everything Went Off Quietly in the Four Wards.

A SMALL VOTE WAS CAST.

THE NEW REGULATIONS WERE USED FOR THE FIRST TIME.

The Only Point of Contest Was For the Honor of Attending the State Convention, But Even This Did Not Arouse Much Interest—Fourth Ward Colored Voters Did Not Try for a Delegate.

The Republican primaries to elect delegates to the Gubernatorial convention at Trenton to-day, were held in this city last Monday. As it was universally understood that Foster M. Voorhees was the only man now in line for the nomination, there were a general decline in interest in the primaries. It was a sure thing anyhow and it didn't make any difference who the delegates were as far as the result was concerned. The only point of contest was that there were a few Republicans who were anxious to attend the convention at which Voorhees was to be nominated.

It was expected that the colored voters of the Fourth ward were going to make a fight for representation at the convention, but they didn't. The primary was as quiet as could be wished. In the Second and Third wards there was no contest, and everything went smoothly. In the First ward the contest was not particularly exciting.

FIRST WARD.

At the First ward primary there was no excitement. Everything went off smoothly. Ninety-three ballots were cast, which is a good turnout for that ward. Six candidates were nominated as follows: W. R. Codington, J. Fred MacDonald, J. B. Coward, Alexander Mallinson, James F. Buckle and David C. Smalley. The first two, Messrs. Codington and MacDonald, declined, leaving the field to Buckle, Smalley, Mallinson and Coward. Of these Messrs. Buckle and Smalley were elected delegates.

The polls were declared closed at 9 o'clock exactly, and the counting of the ballots was finished by 9:20 o'clock. The registry board consisted of G. Thorn, George W. Moore and Harry MacDonald.

The business session of the primary was called to order at 8 o'clock by W. R. Codington. Mr. Codington was then made chairman. J. B. Coward and William Addis were nominated for clerk. Mr. Addis declined in favor of Mr. Coward, who was unanimously elected.

The only items of business to transact were to authorize the delegates who should be elected to fill their own vacancies and to authorize the officers of the primary to sign the credentials of the delegates, which was done.

The vote cast was as follows: Buckle, 77; Smalley, 63; Coward, 25; Mallinson, 20. George Hallock received 1 vote.

SECOND WARD.

The quietness at the Republican primary in the Second ward last Monday was absolutely awe inspiring. For two long weary hours the primary officers sat there in the Bryant School building waiting for the G. O. P. voters to turn up and just exactly six of them came during that period. Then for the remaining two hours the attendance was slightly better and twenty-one voters cast their ballots for the delegates to the Gubernatorial convention.

The total number of votes cast was 27, slightly more than five per cent. of the Republican vote of the ward. Nelson Runyon and W. H. Drayton received 26 votes each and A. B. Beers 1.

Henry E. Rowan was elected chairman of the primary and R. J. Jackson secretary. The delegation was empowered to fill all vacancies in its ranks. The election officers were J. Hervey Doane, judge; W. H. Drayton, clerk, and William N. Runyon, inspector.

THIRD WARD.

Nearly an eighth of the Republican voters of the Third ward wandered down to the Casino last Monday, sometime between the hours of 5 and 9, and cast their ballots for the delegates to the Republican Gubernatorial convention at Trenton. The primary was a very quiet one and nobody made any contest.

There were 49 votes cast at the primary, which were distributed as follows: Ernest R. Ackerman, 49; Roger F. Murray, 46; Wheaton S. Lowry, 2; J. Caspar Kirkner, 1. Ackerman and Murray were declared elected.

The delegation was empowered to fill all vacancies in its ranks. Roger F. Murray acted as chairman of the primary and Frank W. Runyon as secretary. F. E. Marsh was judge of election. B. Frank Corieli, inspector, and J. Caspar Kirkner, clerk.

FOURTH WARD.

In this ward everything was very quiet. The delegates nominated were Wm. A. Westphal and Daniel Galbraith. During the four hours that the polls were open there were 146 votes cast. Of this number Mr. Westphal received 140 and Mr. Galbraith 140. D. Kelger received three votes, E. E. Anthony two, Wm. Nelson one and J. A. Smith one. The voting was rather slow. During the early hours the votes did not come in very fast. The majority of the votes were cast between the hours of 6 and 9 o'clock. One noticeable feature in the primary room, which was in the basement of Reform Hall, was that very few of the workers were to be seen in the room. They remained outside and caught the voters as they arrived.

Alex. Titsworth was judge of election, James Huntington acted as clerk and Wm. Newman was inspector. At 8 o'clock a short business meeting was held. Wm. A. Newcorn was chairman and Wm. A. Westphal secretary. The only business transacted was that giving the delegates power to fill vacancies.

DELEGATES IN BOROUGH

ONLY TWENTY-FIVE VOTERS PRESENT AND LITTLE INTEREST SHOWN.

P. A. Emmons and Senator Reed Will Act as Delegates from the Borough and Robert M. Clark From Township.

The borough Republican primary, held last Monday in the basement of the Public School building, was unusually quiet. There were about twenty-five voters present and little interest was shown. A vote by ballot was not taken, and the secretary, J. K. Arnold, was instructed to cast a ballot for Charles A. Reed and P. A. Emmons from the borough, and Robert M. Clark, from the township, for delegates to attend the Gubernatorial convention being held to-day at Trenton. Of course, the delegates are Voorhees men.

L. B. Woolston was elected chairman of the primary and J. K. Arnold secretary. John H. Valiant and De-Witt C. Brokaw acted as tellers. The delegates were empowered to fill vacancies that might occur. This concluded the business of the evening and it did not take fifteen minutes to transact it.

DEATH OF MRS. POWERS.

Funeral Held From St. Mary's Church Tuesday Morning.

The death of Mrs. Michael Powers, of 725 South avenue, occurred last Sunday afternoon of heart failure, after an illness lasting for some time. Her death was a great shock to her many friends who did not know of her critical illness.

The funeral services were held Tuesday morning from the house and at 9 o'clock from St. Mary's church, and was very largely attended by relatives and friends. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery. A husband and two sons, John and Garret Powers, survive the deceased.

EXPERTS WITH GUN MEET AT BRUNSWICK.

The Reservoir Gun Club Scored a Victory.

ANOTHER SERIES PLANNED.

OTHER EXCITING MATCHES HELD DURING THE AFTERNOON.

Climax Club Has Two Wins and Dunellen and Reservoir Clubs One Each —A Large Attendance—The Next Shoot to be Held at New Brunswick —Another Series About November First.

New Brunswick, Sept. 19—There was a great gathering of trap shooters from all over the State Saturday afternoon at the grounds of the Reservoir Gun Club, of this city, when the fourth shoot of the Central New Jersey Trap-Shooters' League was held. It resulted in a win for the team from the Reservoir Club. The Climax Gun Club, of Plainfield, has now secured two wins for the trophy offered by the Peters Cartridge Company, and one victory each is the share of the Dunellen and the Reservoir Clubs.

In the drawing for the next shoot, the New Brunswick Club won and the next shoot will be held here on the afternoon of Saturday, October 1st. After the series for the Peters Cartridge Company trophy is over, a series of shoots will be arranged with live birds. This series will be started about November 1st, when good strong flying birds can be obtained.

The summaries are as follows:

BOWLING ON THE GREEN

A NEW BRUNSWICK PLAYER WON A HANDSOME PRIZE.

Another Pleasant Day for the Enthusiasts of the Scottish Game at the Home of Christian Schepflin, Dunellen.

Dunellen, September 19.—Another ideal day for bowling was Saturday, and the gentlemen of the Middlesex Bowling Club spent the afternoon on Christian Schepflin's green rolling for the gentlemen's prize given by H. Brewster Willis, of New Brunswick. The prize was a handsome silver cigar case, with cigar cutter and match holder combined. The case held two compartments separated by perforated partitions, with place for sponges to keep the cigars moist.

The prize was a beauty and well worth winning, and the members exerted their utmost skill to secure it. Twenty-two contestants competed for the prize, but the contest finally narrowed down to two brothers, Alexander W. and Robert M. Pittit, both of New Brunswick, and was won by Alexander W. Pittit by a score of 11 to 10.

The contest was a close one all the way through, and some excellent bowling was done on both sides. Both the last contestants rolled good balls, and it was impossible to pick the winner until the last ball had been rolled. Even then it was almost a tie, and the judges were required to measure the distance between the balls to decide. The winner only won by a few inches.

The game lasted until nearly 6 o'clock, and was watched by those who had been outplayed with a great deal of interest. This week there will be no bowling, but on the following Saturday another prize will be put up for the gentlemen. This will probably end the matches for this season.

FIREMAN BADLY HURT WHILE DOING DUTY.

Severely Burned by Explosion of Nitric Acid.

GEORGE FEIRING THE MAN.

HE WILL BE LAID UP AT HOME FOR SOME TIME.

Was Fighting a Fire on a Central Freight Car When the Carboy of Acid Exploded and Sent the Liquid in a Shower Over His Body—Severely Burned His Flesh and Set Fire to Clothes.

An early morning fire, unimportant in itself, became a notable one through the serious injury of one of the paid members of the Plainfield fire department. George Feiring, driver of the chemical engine, was badly burned by the explosion of a carboy of nitric acid while endeavoring to extinguish the burning fluid.

There came a call by telephone at fire headquarters Saturday at 7:15 o'clock. Second Assistant Engineer Jennings was on duty. He hurried to the freight-house, whence came the call, with the chemical engine. Chief Doane was notified and ordered No. 2 hose wagon there also. The Chief followed in his wagon.

When the Chief arrived Feiring, the driver of the chemical, was standing on a flat car on track No. 1 handling the stream from the chemical. The car was one of three loaded with carboys of nitric acid en route for the powder factory at Pompton Lakes. The cars were part of a west-bound freight train.

During the various vicissitudes of transportation, one of the large glass carboys, which contains ten gallons of the dangerous acid, was broken. The acid spread over the car setting fire to the straw and woodwork of the packing and also starting a blaze on the side of the car.

The flame had been seen by one of the men at the freight-house who telephoned to the fire headquarters for aid.

Feiring had climbed on the car and was fighting the fire with the chemical stream when a carboy right at his feet exploded with a great roar. The flaming liquid was precipitated fifteen feet in the air, falling in a shower on the defenceless fireman. Feiring wore his regular working suit and had his sleeves rolled up.

With a yell he threw the hose from him and sprang to the ground just as Chief Doane came up. The Chief heard his calls and seizing the hose, turned the stream on him. Meanwhile Feiring had slipped out of his burning clothing.

The acid had fallen in great spots on his bare arms and ate right into the flesh. Other drops of the acid fell on his face around his mouth. There was a large burn on his left cheek, near his nose and another close to his eye. On the back of his neck there was a large burn made by the flying acid. His clothing caught fire and was eaten full of holes by the acid. His underclothing was also badly eaten.

A can of soda from the chemical engine was brought and the contents spread over the injured parts. Then Feiring was bundled into the Chief's wagon and taken to headquarters where Dr. Clawson was hurriedly summoned and dressed the burns. Then William Addis, Jr., put the injured fireman in a hack and took him to his home on Harrison street.

It will be a week or more before Feiring will be able to be out again and probably longer before he can return to duty. The wounds are painful and it will be necessary to wait for them to heal up.

QUIET HOME WEDDING.

Justice Mosher Called in to Tie the Nuptial Knot.

A quiet home wedding was celebrated Sunday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock, at the home of Edward Dooly, of East Fourth street, when Randolph Montangue, of Newark, and Miss Mary Eliza Mundy, of Virginia, were united in marriage. Justice Mosher performed the ceremony.

Both parties originally came from Virginia, and are friends of Mr. Dooly's. All concerned preferred a civil marriage, so a justice of the peace was called in instead of a minister. After the wedding a reception was held at which refreshments were served, and towards night Mr. and Mrs. Montangue left for their home in Newark.

SKILLED MECHANICS IN A LABOR UNION.

Machinists and Moulders Hold a Preliminary Meeting.

HEARD A SENSIBLE TALK.

A LABOR LEADER WHO DEPLORES STRIKES AT ALL TIMES.

William Ferrine, Business Agent of the Moulders' Union, Explained the Benefits the Men Would Receive by Affiliating With the Proposed Organization—Bosses Will Be Interviewed.

There is a good prospect of the machinists and moulders of this city organizing into a local branch of the International Association of Machinists and the Iron Moulders' Union of North America.

A preliminary meeting was held last Friday in one of the lodge rooms in Washington Hall, which was addressed by Wm. Ferrine, of New York, business agent of the Moulders' Union, and George G. Cameron, of New York, organizer of the Association of Machinists, and at another meeting to be held Thursday evening further steps will be taken to complete the organization if there is a desire among the workingmen here to do so.

There are no such organizations here. The men think if there were, wages would be kept up to a fair average and hours would be uniform. Mr. Ferrine's remarks were much enjoyed. He is a workingman himself and sympathizes with the men. Holding the important position in the union that he does, he is able to speak intelligently of it. Among other things Mr. Ferrine said he didn't believe in strikes. This he had determined five years ago. Seven out of ten strikes, he said, were the fault of the men, and the same number were unnecessary. A plain, sensible talk with the bosses in many instances would procure for the men what they wanted without the strike.

Mr. Ferrine said that by tomorrow the bosses in town would know about the meeting and would be on their guard. Some time between now and Thursday Mr. Ferrine will have a talk with the foremen and bosses of the several shops and prepare the way for the future steps. There were about thirty men out last night, but a little missionary work will be done before the next meeting, and there will no doubt be a larger number present.

HARD AT WORK NOW.

MANY HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS ENROLLED THIS YEAR.

Senior Class Small—Three Post-Graduates Back—Improvement and Changes in Course and Methods—Tne Enrolled.

Three weeks have passed since the opening of the Plainfield High School, at the end of the long vacation, and the regular routine of work is going forward smoothly and without incident. The attendance this year is larger than last in the lower grades. The Senior class, however, is smaller.

There are now registered as pupils in the High School 139 young people. They are divided as follows: Senior class, including three post-graduates, 22; Junior class, 24; Third class, 34, and Fourth class, 59. The three post-graduates, who have returned this year to continue their studies, are Miss Edith Clark, Miss Gertrude Cathcart and Henry Pierce.

There is no change in the different courses over that of last year except that the commercial course is now well under way and has started its second term, taking up new subjects and advanced work. Then the modern languages have been taught one year, and the second-year class in German has been started.

In the scientific department there has been much improvement made through the introduction of new apparatus, which will give Mr. Meredith more scope in explaining the different sciences and allowing the pupils to work out some of the experiments for themselves.

The school library, which has for some time been stowed away in an obscure corner of the building, has been brought to light and placed in the new bookcases in Assembly Hall that the Board ordered last spring. They are a great improvement.

Her Twelfth Birthday.

Miss Stella Vermeule, of Jackson avenue, celebrated the twelfth anniversary of her birthday last Saturday. The young hostess gave a party to a number of her friends and the time was passed in playing games and in listening to vocal and instrumental music. During the hours of the celebration, which were from 2 until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, a repast was served. Miss Vermeule received a number of very useful presents from her friends.

Work on a New Church.

Work was started a few days ago to excavate the cellar for the Calvary Baptist church on the ground recently purchased on Central avenue. David Bowden is doing the work.

INCREASED TAX RATE DUE TO THE COUNTY.

Mayor Wilson Addresses Taxpayers of the Borough.

THE BOROUGH GOVERNMENT

IT HAS BEEN CONDUCTED AS ECONOMICALLY AS POSSIBLE.

The Actual Taxes for Municipal Government are Less Than Last Year but an Increase in the County Rate Makes the Total a Trifle Higher—A Comparison of Taxes of the Two Years.

Mayor John F. Wilson, of the borough, has issued the following public letter:

To the Taxpayers of North Plainfield:

Your Mayor and Council have made a determined effort during the past year to keep the expenses of the borough at the lowest figures possible consistent with the maintenance of that standard of public service and improvements which our citizens demand and have the right to expect.

As the result of their efforts, it was confidently expected by them that this year a reduction of the tax rate would be possible, and it is gratifying to be able to say that so far as those items of the tax which your local authorities control are concerned, a material reduction has been made, the borough rate being 81 cents this year as against 83 cents last year, and the special school rate being 58 cents this year as against 59 cents last year.

This result has been accomplished only by the most careful management of public affairs, and will doubtless meet with your cordial approval.

There has, however, been an increase in those items over which your Mayor and Council have no control whatever, namely, the county tax, which comes within the province of the Board of Freeholders, and which has increased from 49 cents last year to 53 cents this year, an increase of four points, so that in spite of three points reduction in the local rate, the total rate this year is one point higher than last, but for this your borough authorities are in no wise responsible.

It is confidently asserted that our assessments are more equitable and fair as between our citizens than ever before. Some have been increased, and some, excessively assessed heretofore, have been reduced, that each shall pay his fair share.

The following is a comparison of the tax bill of last year and of this year, and shows the rate per cent. on each one hundred dollars of assessed valuation, and the different items which go to make up the whole. The total rate last year was $2.19 and this year by reason of the increase in county rate it is $2.20. But for that increase it would be $2.16:

	County Tax	State Tax	Borough Tax	Board of Education	Special School	Total
1897	.49	.36	.83	.09	.02	$2.19
1898	.53	.36	.81	.09	.02	2.20

It will be seen that the school tax is the largest item, being over thirty-eight per cent. of the whole tax.

Every one hundred dollars paid in tax is appropriated as follows:

Public Schools	$ 38.19
County Expenses	24.09
Borough Expenses	36.72
Board of Health	.90
	$100.00

The above is submitted to the public with the belief that our citizens are entitled to know and interested in all our public affairs.

John F. Wilson,
Mayor.

Dated, September 16th, 1898.

Another Acid Fire.

The same car of carboys of nitric acid that proved so serious to George Fiering, driver of the chemical engine, caught fire again Monday afternoon at 11:30 o'clock. The car was being moved when a carboy that had evidently been already cracked, suddenly gave way and another fire started. The car was immediately pulled up to the water tower, where the engines take water, and was flooded. The flames were extinguished without any more trouble.

Germans Had a Day of Pleasure.

A number of the members of the Gesang and Turn Verein went yesterday by stage to Stirling where they enjoyed the day with the society at that place. The day was passed in singing, speech-making and in eating lots of good things provided. It was after dark when the Plainfielders returned, but they all said that they had had a good time.

Water Main Bursted.

Yesterday one of the mains of the Plainfield Water Supply Company located on West Front street, near Plainfield avenue, burst and it kept employes of the company busy during most of the day repairing the break. A considerable amount of water was wasted, but otherwise no damage resulted.

But One Contagious Case.

There is at present only one case of contagious disease in the borough, that of Allan Laing, of Craig place.

Mrs. A. D. Phillips, of Central avenue, is quite ill at her home.

EXPECTED TO BE IN OPERATION IN THE COURSE OF A WEEK.

The Westinghouse System to be Used—Capacity of the Plant Will be Twenty Tons a Day—Nothing But Filtered Water to be Used—Ammonia an Important Factor in Congealing the Water.

The art of manufacturing ice is by no means a new thing, but in the course of a week, one of the best up-to-date plants will be in operation, and the people will have an opportunity of purchasing ice that is absolutely pure and at a reasonable price that will not fluctuate with mild winters. For this plant the people of Plainfield can thank the Hygeia Ice Company, of which Harry G. Runkle is the president. Associated with him are some of the best business men in town, including DeWitt C. Ivins, James Clark, and a number of others.

The plant is located on North avenue between Richmond street and the pumping station of the Plainfield Water Supply Company. The spot is ideal in every particular, and a very modest but thoroughly complete building has been erected. The grounds are nicely graded and fine lawns will, by another year, be seen surrounding the building. The Hygeia Ice Company was organized sometime ago, and early in this year work was commenced to erect a plant. During the past summer little was thought of the plant, and very few people know what has been accomplished. After the building was erected the company made a contract with the Westinghouse, Church, Kerr Company, of New York, to furnish them with an ice-making plant, to be the very latest throughout, and the company has succeeded in accomplishing their desire, for they have secured the best in the market. The Westinghouse Company sent Axel Lofberg, one of their experienced men, to this city to superintend the construction of the plant, and recently a representative of this paper called on Mr. Lofberg. This man was found to be very obliging and willing to explain the working of the system, which will no doubt be of interest to everyone in this city.

The system is known as the Westinghouse system of freezing, otherwise known as the block system. There are two 100-horse-power boilers, one 100-horse-power compound engine, two quadruple belt driving ammonia compressers with a capacity of making twenty tons of ice per day. There is a freezing tank 6x6 feet high, 25 feet long with twenty-four coils of pipe. On each side of the coil ten tons of ice can be frozen, making ice twelve inches thick. It requires from six to seven days to make clear ice. The best of lumber has been used in making the tanks, and endless electric-welded full-weight heavy pipe has been used for the coils.

After the freezing tank is filled ammonia is expanded into freezing coils and then commences the freezing. An hydros-ammonia is used in this system and it takes up the heat from the water in the freezing tank and forms ice on the coil pipes. At the same time the compressors are taking the evaporated ammonia in freezing coils and compresses it into the condenser, and from the condenser water is obtained to sprinkle the condensing pipes. In doing this the water takes the heat from the ammonia, and the ammonia then goes from the condenser to a liquid receiver, which is used as a storage for ammonia, and is ready for use again. This ammonia will last a long time, provided there are no defects in the pipes. The pipes are under a 300-pound air pressure.

The water used for freezing is from a deep artesian well. It first goes through a primary filter and then through a regular sand-filter. The water is constantly filtered by means of a circulation pump which takes water from the freezing tank through the filter and forces it back into what is known as the "head bay." It is then circulated through every coil in the freezing tank.

The ice is harvested by means of a steam-cutter of Westinghouse patent. When the plant is under full headway ice is being made constantly. As fast as it is made it is removed and room is made for more water to freeze. There is attached to the large freezing tank a fore-cooler tank in which the water is kept and cooled before it goes into the freezing process. After the ice is harvested it is removed in cakes weighing 300 pounds by a handcrane to the two ice storage warehouses with a large capacity, or it can be shifted to the place where the ice wagons receive ice for delivery and for shipment on the cars, if necessary.

The large freezing tank is 60 feet long, 25 feet wide and 6x6 feet high. Every piece of pipe and the endless coil inside is made doubly strong, and every precaution has been taken to have the system perfectly installed.

One great advantage about the plant is that a sufficient amount of room has been left in laying it out to install a duplicate of the present system, so that the capacity can be increased to forty tons a day. By the first of next week a test of the plant will be made, and if it works satisfactory then the process of freezing will be commenced at once. There is nothing left at present to do to complete the plant but to finish up a few odds and ends, and this will take but a few days more.

GOLFERS GATHER AT THE HILLSIDE LINKS.

Many Excellent Scores Made Saturday Afternoon.

PLAY FOR THE FISK CUP.

REGULAR CLUB TEAM DEFEATED A LONG ISLAND TEAM.

A Good Representation of the Fair Sex Present on the Grounds—Play was Continued Till Darkness Set In—Former Mayor Gilbert on the Course—Visitors Next Saturday Afternoon—Detailed Score.

The enthusiasts were out in large numbers last Saturday on the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, and all day members and friends of the club were to be seen making the rounds of the course. The course was in fine condition and many excellent scores were made. In the morning there was general play, but the afternoon was devoted to play for the Mrs. Fisk cup. In addition to this contest there was a large number of players on the course who were not making scores for the cup. The number of young players out was small, most of those not in the contest were middle-aged persons and were out merely for practice and the sport of the thing.

There was also a good representation of the fair sex, some of whom played, while others enjoyed the cooling breezes to be found in the shade on the large veranda at the clubhouse.

Some of the players complained of the weather being a trifle warm, and this lowered somewhat their ambition to make low scores. In the contest for the Mrs. Fisk cup the following scores were made:

	Gross.	Han'dicap.	Net.
A. Tilney	94	13	81
Fred Wells	103	15	88
W. B. Richards	93	7	86
C. Murray	105	15	90
Fred Wells	106	14	92
W. Tilney	108	14	94
C. Wharton, Jr.	108	14	94
H. C. Tracy	127	15	112

The players remained on the course until nearly dark and it was with reluctance that they left then. A feature of the occasion was the dinner and social time which followed in the clubhouse. There were about twenty-five members who remained to dinner, and it was nearly 10 o'clock when all of the members left for home.

Among the noted players on the course last Saturday were former Mayor Alex. Gilbert, William Palmer Smith and Miss Edith Hyde. Their faces are new on the course and they apparently enjoyed the sport immensely.

Last Saturday a seven-men team from the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club went to West New Brighton, S. I., and played a match at golf with the Harbor Hill team of that place. The Hillside team was victorious by a score of 18 to 8. Below will be found the score in detail:

HILLSIDE.		HARBOR HILL.
Gleason	4	Otto Hockmerser	0
C. F. Wells	0	W. A. Hamilton	4
H. F. Wharton	4	H. Morton	0
Stockton	0	A. B. Elliott	4
Shepard	0	A. D. Walker	0
Graugard	0	F. O. Jamison	0
Morris Dumont	0	W. Lawson	0

One week from next Saturday the Harbor Hill team will come to Plainfield and play a return match on the Hillside links.

Dog Poisoners in the West End.

A valuable hound dog owned by W. O. Baldwin, of West Fourth street, was killed last Saturday afternoon by poison. Mr. Baldwin says that he would not have taken $50 for the dog. A dog owned by D. Webster Littell, of Union avenue, was also poisoned last week. Both of these owners have information which leads them to believe they know who is poisoning dogs in their neighborhood.

To Make Horseless Carriages.

Articles of incorporation were filed Saturday at Elizabeth by the organizers of the American Automobile Company with a capital of $500,000. The incorporators are Max H. Crampton and Throop Mason, of New York, and Willard M. Miner, of this city. The office of the company is located at the latter's home, 238 East Sixth street.

Quick Payment of Life Insurance.

D. W. Littell, treasurer of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, has just received a check from W. O. Rubeen, supreme secretary, for $3,000, to pay for insurance on the death of their late brother, David A. Bowman, who was a member of Plainfield. It has been eleven days since the proof claim was filed.

CITY SEES VALUE OF TROLLEY FRANCHISE.

New Conditions to be Made by the Common Council.

PAST ACTION RESCINDED.

NEW ORDINANCE FOR STREET RAILWAY RIGHT TO BE DRAFTED.

Common Council Took Important and Unexpected Action on Advice of Corporation Counsel—Plainfield Streets are Very Important to the Success of the Scheme of the Private Trolley Promoters.

The City Council held the shortest meeting on record Friday evening. It required just six minutes to transact the business of the evening. All the members were present and President Baker called the members to order at 8 o'clock. Six minutes later the meeting adjourned.

The meeting was called for the purpose of considering the trolley matter. Mr. Barrows moved that the petition of the Plainfield Street Railway Company to extend their tracks be received. It was received and read, after which Mr. Barrows stated that the corporation counsel had advised that inasmuch as the Board of Freeholders had given notice that they intend to make a fight for the control of certain city streets for the county trolley it would be better for the council to rescind all previous action on the petition of the Plainfield Street Railway Company and start over again from the beginning.

This action was concurred in by the other members of the Council and Monday evening, Oct. 3d, was set as the date when the petition of the trolley company would be received, at which time a public hearing will be given on the matter.

This concluded the business of the evening, but the action taken means far more than appears at first thought. Within the past few days certain facts have come to the knowledge of the Council that have opened their eyes. They are now confronted with the fact that the trolley company, represented by Thomas Nevius as president, has secured the franchises to construct and operate a trolley line between Elizabeth and Fanwood, and that all that is now needed to complete the line is the right of way to come into Plainfield from Fanwood. All of this is in opposition to the John Kean scheme.

In view of these facts it is understood that the Plainfield Street Railway Company stands willing to do most anything to secure the franchise connecting Fanwood and South Plains with Plainfield.

When the Council learned these facts the members began to think that they might as well get something for the franchise in return for giving the company a life-long lease for practically nothing, while John Kean had given $250,000 for the right of way from the Board of Freeholders. For this reason the ordinance has been rescined and a new start will be made. In starting over again the Council will be very careful in drafting an ordinance and will see that the city gets all that is possible within reason for the franchise they propose to give.

STOLE BIRD'S STAMPS.

It Was a Collection That He Prized Highly for Their Associations.

Last week Lewis Bird, of the borough, had a valuable collection of foreign and domestic postage stamps. Today they are gone. Bird thinks that they were stolen by a sneak thief who has been in the office of his brother, Lawyer George Bird, where the stamps were. He has notified the police, and a vigorous search will be made for the guilty one.

The collection comprises 450 stamps, many of them of considerable value. They were all gathered eight or ten years ago when Bird attended school, and he took a great deal of pride in the collection. He is unable to place a money value on the stamps, as he has never had them catalogued, but prizes them highly because of the pleasure he experienced in gathering them.

The stamps were all in an album, and were ordinarily kept at home. Bird is studying law with his brother, on East Front street, and brought the collection down town the other day to show to an acquaintance who had asked to see it. The album was left lying around on the desk or in the book-case until Friday, when Bird saw that acquaintance and invited him in to look over the stamps. Then they were gone, and patient searching failed to reveal them. Bird has no clue to the thief, and doesn't know whether they were stolen by someone who entered the room during his or his brother's absence, or whether a member of the light-fingered fraternity picked the album up and hid it under his coat in the midst of a conversation.

Foundation for a Church.

The work of laying the foundation for the new Calvary Baptist church on Central avenue, will be started in a few days.

CAN'T GO TO SCHOOL

SORRY PREDICAMENT OF CHILDREN NEAR SCOTCH PLAINS.

North Plainfield Township Failed To Renew Contract With Scotch Plains Authorities So They Were Rejected.

Through the carelessness of the Board of Education of North Plainfield township there are about ten scholars residing in the northern part of the township that have been left unprovided for so far as attending school is concerned. These scholars have during past years attended the public school at Scotch Plains through an agreement made by the school authorities and the Board of North Plainfield township.

September 12th the scholars went to the Scotch Plains school as usual and were much surprised when Superintendent John R. Morey told them that they could not attend the school until an agreement was made with the Township Board of Education.

Notwithstanding the fact that the above Board has been notified several times that the agreement to pay so much per scholar must be renewed this year, no attention has been paid to the matter, and it now looks as though the ten scholars will be deprived of schooling for some time.

The scholars live too far away to attend the North Plainfield township school, and it is only fair that arrangements be made to have them go to the Scotch Plains school. The parents of the scholars feel quite indignant regarding the matter and think that the members of the Board of Education have certainly been very careless to let the matter go by without attention. No one could expect the scholars to walk several miles to the other school when they live so near the Scotch Plains school, which is equally as good as the other school.

Superintendent Morey was very sorry to turn the scholars away but it was the only thing left for him to do. He has notified the board that they must renew the contract if the scholars were to attend the school, and hearing nothing from them, took it for granted that they did not care to renew the contract.

Unless something is done very soon it is quite likely that the parents of the scholars will take the matter in hand and bring the members of their School Board to account for negligence. Every day that is now lost means much to the scholars for they will have just that much more to make up in studies.

The Scotch Plains school officials would like to have the agreement renewed for it brings quite a sum of money into their treasury and is a help in meeting expenses of an incidental nature. They have, however, made every effort to get the North Plainfield people to act, but thus far have failed.

Members of Boards of Registry.

The following persons have been appointed members of the Somerset County Registry Boards for the borough and township: Borough, Asa D. Pope, W. W. Bowley, Edgar Schenck, John A. Goodwin, Republicans; Chas. Emmons, D. J. Carney, James E. Bailey, David Bodine, Democrats. Township, J. Worth Coddington, R. W. Vail, Republicans; Geo. Mobus, George Demler, Jr., Democrats.

Bible Class to Commence Again.

Rev. D. M. Stearns will reopen his union Bible class in the Y. M. C. A. Monday evening, October 10th. Dr. Stearns, who has been doing missionary work in South Africa all summer, sails from Liverpool for New York September 21st.

The Dipper or the Dropper?

There are cough medicines that are taken as freely as a drink of water from a dipper. They are cheap medicines. Quantity does not make up for quality. It's the quality that cures. There's one medicine that's dropped, not dipped—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. There's more power in drops of this remedy than in dippersful of cheap cough syrups and elixirs. It cures Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Colds, Coughs, and affections of the Throat and Lungs.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

is NOW HALF PRICE for the half-size bottles—50 cents.

FAMILY WOES HEARD IN A JUSTICE'S COURT.

And Incidentally a Young Law Clerk is Called Down.

WILLIE SWEENEY ACTIVE.

JUSTICE MOSHER FINDS THE YOUTH TOO DICTATORIAL.

Oscar Vaughn's Prospective Father-in-law Furnishes a Bond to Keep the Peace While Vaughn's Bondsman Wants to be Released—Papers Have Been Filed in Elizabeth and an Appeal Will be Made.

Instead of the sensational hearing that was expected to be accorded John H Stewart Friday, in Justice Mosher's court, in which the gaping public were to be satiated with the various details that go to make the domestic life of Stewart and his family unhappy, because their daughter, Hattie, clings with lover-like fidelity to Oscar Vaughn, an interesting little legal squabble occurred, in which Law Student William Sweeney received a bad "call down" from the Justice.

It was a morning of complications, and they arose on every side. Stewart was arrested yesterday on complaint of Vaughn who charged him with following him around and threatening his life. His hearing was set down for 10 o'clock this morning, when it was expected that a great deal of family history would be revealed, but instead William G DeMeza, Stewart's counsel, refused to demand a hearing, and asked that Stewart be held in bail to keep the peace, all because, he said, Sweeney represented Vaughn, and would appear in court as his counsel. Mr. DeMeza refused to enter the legal arena with a boy as his opponent.

Vaughn and Stewart paid no attention to each other in court, and Stewart did not present the bloodthirsty appearance that Vaughn's description might lead one to expect. Hattie, too, was there, and she and Oscar exchanged sly glances. The wife, who takes Vaughn's part in the trouble, and is opposed by her husband, sat by Hattie's side, but had nothing to say

Law Student Sweeney moved about among the spectators with a great deal of haughtiness. That he had won the case was very evident to him. He demanded that "His Honor make the bail bond as high as possible," and set the figure at $500. This being a matter that concerned the Justice alone he made it $100, a trifle less. Stewart, in the bond, promises to keep the peace for six months and J. Fred MacDonald went his security. Sweeney inquired whether Mr. MacDonald was a freeholder or not, but the question was overlooked.

The fun occurred after these preliminary matters had been transacted. Newton B. Smalley, of Somerset street, had a part to play. When Vaughn was arrested last April at Stewart's instigation, charging him with threatening his life, etc, Vaughn was held in $50 bonds to keep the peace. Mr. Smalley signed the bond, but this morning wanted to be released,

When Stewart's affair was finished Mr. Smalley appeared to make his request. Sweeney suspected that something was in the wind, but could not learn what it was until Mr. Smalley came in. Then he understood, and beckoning to Vaughn whispered a few words to him. Vaughn slipped out of the court room, and was part way down stairs on his way to liberty when Mr. DeMeza missed him, and realizing that the man was escaping sent Constable Rockafellow after him and he was brought back.

The failure of his plans provoked Sweeney and he attempted to dictate to the court his opinion of the proceedings. Justice Mosher ordered him to keep silent and refused to recognize him as counsel in this new complication, but Sweeney persisted in talking until he got through.

"You've no right to call me down this way," remarked the youthful aspirant.

"Well, I do call you down," was Justice Mosher's reply. "I am Judge here and things must go as I say." Upon this Sweeney wilted.

Upon a request from Lawyer DeMeza, the constable stood guard over Vaugh to keep him in court. Sweeney jumped up from his chair, rushed down to the other end of the room, and with forefinger raised and eyes flashing fire, told Vaughn that if Rockafellow laid hand on him to make a complaint of assault and battery. This caused a general laugh.

But the complications were not over with yet. Upon consulting his books Justice Mosher found that he had sent the bond to Prosecutor English, at Elizabeth, and that therefore he could not release Mr. Smalley. This was a phase of the matter that Smalley had not considered. He stated as his reasons for wanting to be released from the bond, that Vaughn cut up so many "capers" he was afraid the court would come upon him for the money.

A heated discussion then took place between Lawyer McClure, who was appealed to by Sweeney, who by this time had got into hot water, and DeMeza. Justice Mosher refused to have anything to do with the matter as he claimed not to have jurisdiction, so there is nothing for Smalley to do except to take Vaughn to Elizabeth and deliver him to the court, at the same time asking to be released from the bond.

Now there appears to be nothing in the way of Vaughn's marriage to Hattie November 23d. Stewart and his wife are at odds over the approaching nuptials, but they have secured papers of separation, and are living apart. Hattie and Vaughn, the cause of all the trouble and misery, are happy in each other, and in two short months will tread the path to Hymen's altar.

The argument between Lawyers McClure and DeMeza waxed warmer and warmer Mr. McClure insisted that Justice Mosher had no jurisdiction in the matter, and that he had no power to release Smalley. Finally, Mr. McClure said he was tired of the controversy, and went Vaughn's bond himself.

CUPID IN PRESS OFFICE.

CHAUNCEY F. STOUT UNDER THE MATRIMONIAL HALO NOW.

The Little God of Love Gradually Taking Away the Bachelors of The Press Staff—Miss Leona Hoffman the Happy Bride.

In every regulated newspaper office it is imperative to have a bachelor on the staff who is fancy free to perform diplomatic duties with irate members of the fair sex when they call, but if Cupid pursues the young men in The Daily Press office with the same amount of fervor for the next year that he has in the past, it is feared that there won't be anything but bachelors left to conciliate indignant women subscribers with a cold shoulder.

September 14 at 6 o'clock Chauncey Fields Stout, the energetic manager of the circulation department of The Daily Press, received the matrimonial halo. The happy bride was Miss Leona Bertha Hoffman, daughter of Mrs. Jennie A. Hoffman, of 29 Park place. The nuptials were celebrated quietly at the Methodist parsonage in Somerville, Rev. J. R. Bryan officiating. The young couple were accompanied by two friends. The announcement of the marriage came as a great surprise next morning, but the numerous congratulations for a bright and prosperous future evidenced their popularity.

Mr. and Mrs. Stout will take up their residence at 29 Park place.

The groom is one of the most valuable employes of The Daily Press office, possessing business qualifications and personal popularity that augurs for his success in life. While the bride is a winning little woman whose pleasant ways make her a favorite with all acquaintances.

GREETED WITH A SHOT GUN.

A Brave Man is Rev. George Hauser When Burglars Are Around.

If there are any burglars or thieves who anticipate making a raid on the home of Rev. George Hauser, of Duer street, they had better decide to stay away, for this minister is prepared to meet all comers. Last Thursday at a late hour Mr. Hauser was awakened from his slumbers by someone who was evidently trying to get in the house. Immediately he went to the window with his shot gun, which he keeps loaded, and saw someone leaving his yard on the run. It was too dark to distinguish who the party was, but Mr. Hauser discharged his gun, not with intent to kill, but for the purpose of frightening.

The report had a good effect, for the man never did stop running. Soon afterward Marshal Schenck appeared on the scene in answer to the report of the gun, and after learning the trouble he, together with Mr. Hauser, made a thorough investigation. Nothing was found missing, but there were evidences that someone had tried to get into the house.

INSPECTION AND DRILL.

Cyprus Commandery Preparing To Make a Spectacular Appearance.

The members of the Cyprus Commandery, Knights Templar, are planning for a grand inspection and drill to which their friends are to be invited. These colored Knights have been drilling hard for some time, and now the company is in excellent form. The fine showing they made at New Haven has decided the members in favor of the plan which will give them a townsfolk a chance to see what they can do. It is now proposed to hold the inspection and drill at the Crescent Rink some evening about the first of October. Invitations will be issued and distributed among their friends and families of the members. While the date has not yet been fixed, it is quite certain that the affair will be held.

Viewed E. E. Marshall's Remains.

A committee from Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., composed of Vincent W. Nash, Charles Ulrich and Henry Nischwitz, went to Jersey City Thursday to view the body of E. E. Marshall, which was lying in the Erie depot. This was done so that Mrs. Marshall could get her insurance.

AUTUMNAL WEDDING A BRILLIANT AFFAIR.

Truell-Johnston Nuptials Celebrated September 14th.

1,000 GUESTS PRESENT.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED.

Ceremony Performed by Rev. A. E. Main, and Was Very Simple and Pretty—Beautiful Musical Programme Rendered—Bride Looked Handsome in White Satin—Reception Held Afterwards.

A social event of the autumnal season was the marriage Sept. 14th of Miss Violet Thatcher Truell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Truell, of 326 Central avenue, to Robert Taylor Johnston, superintendent of the Campbell Printing Press Works, with offices in New York.

The wedding took place in the Seventh-Day Baptist church on Central avenue, at 8 o'clock, in the presence of about one thousand guests, including Plainfield's best society people, together with many prominent guests from out of town. Rev. Dr. A. E. Main, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony, which was admired for its simplicity and beauty.

The church decorations were unique and beautiful in many respects. On the platform there was arranged palms, corn plants and hydrangeas, while broad bands of white and pink satin ribbons were displayed to great advantage. In the main part of the church on either side of the various aisles there were arranged hydrangeas, tied with ribbons at the end of each seat next to the aisle. The effect of this arrangement was pleasing.

Long before the appointed hour the guests began to arrive, and while they were being escorted to seats by Edward Fancher and Samuel Hollingsworth, of Fanwood; Harry McGee and William Burdick, of this city, who were ushers, the following musical programme was perfectly rendered on the organ by Arthur L. Titsworth:

March of the Priests, from Athalia.
.....Mendelssohn
Serenade.....Frank Taft
Offertoire in Ab .....E. M. Read
At Evening .....Dudley Buck
"Then at the trellised window loiter
Deferring their good night with blissful words."
Allegro Pompose.....C. M. E. Harries
Cavalliera Rusticana (Intermezzo.)
.....Mascagrin
Marriage Fanfare .....S. G. Gilbert
Silver River Gavotte.....A. Messenger
Grand Offertoire de Concert.....E. Thayer
Overture to Lohengrin.....R. Wagner
Bridal March from Lohengrin.....
.....
Pastorale in G.....Munro
Wedding March.....Mendelssohn

The bridal party arrived at the church promptly and the first notes of the wedding march announced their entrance. On the left of the church entered the bride leaning on the arm of her father, and accompanied by the maid-of-honor, Miss Maymie Irene Fieles, cousin of the bride, of Lawrence, Mass., and the flower girls, Sadie and Eleanor Johnston, nieces of the groom, of Nethenwood.

On the right side of the church the bridesmaids, Miss Florence A. Whitney, of Gloversville, N. Y.; Miss Marie Reed, of Newark; Miss Ethel Titsworth, of Plainfield, and Miss Edith Howland Manchester, of Providence, R. I., made their appearance and met the bride and party attending her. In doing this they made a circle of the church, and as the party met the bridesmaids preceded. They then proceeded up the aisle nearest them and were met by the ushers, who preceded, in returning through the next aisle to the front of the church, the entire party were met at the altar by the groom, his best man, Langdon Bartlett Wood, of New York, and the officiating clergyman.

While the ceremony was being performed, soft strains of music were heard coming from the organ. In the ceremony two rings were used. One was the gift of the groom to the bride, and the other was the gift of the bride to the groom. Both rings made a circle of the wedding party and were finally placed on the fingers by the clergyman officiating.

As the party was leaving the church, the bride and groom preceded and were followed by the others who assisted in the marriage, while the Mendelssohn wedding march was being played. Immediately after the marriage a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Central avenue, and about two hundred guests were present to extend hearty congratulations to the happy couple and wish them success and happiness through life.

The gown of the bride was peau de soie. She wore a tulle veil caught up with a pearl and diamond crescent, the gift of the groom, and she carried white roses and lillies of the valley.

The maid-of-honor wore a gown of pink organdie over pink taffeta, and carried pink roses. The bridemaids were all gowned in white organdie over pink taffeta, and they carried pink roses. The flower girls wore gowns of white organdie and carried baskets of roses.

The decorations at the house were exceedingly pretty, and the arrangement was pleasing. Greens, hydrangeas and choice flowers were used to beautify the several rooms, while the dining room was a rare scene of beauty.

The bridemaids, with the exception of Miss Titsworth, were classmates of the bride at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, from which place the bride was graduated. The bride presented gifts of stickpins to the maid-of honor and bridemaids while the groom presented his ushers with leather glove cases, and to his best man he gave a diamond stickpin.

During the reception a wedding supper was served to the guests by a well-known caterer. The reception was a delightful affair and complete in every particular. At a late hour Mr. and Mrs. Johnston left their relatives and friends to enjoy a honeymoon of about one month, and on their return they will go to housekeeping in this city. They were the recipients of an exceedingly large collection of presents of value and usefulness, included among which was an oak sideboard, a gift from the employers of the groom. Other gifts included silver and goldware, furniture, glassware, and many things too numerous to mention. The bride and groom start their married life with the brightest of prospects, and they have the best wishes of their large circle of friends.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

MISS MAUDE IRENE MOSHER BECOMES MRS GEORGE L. HOMAN.

The Event Celebrated Amid a Wealth of Flowers and Pleasant Circle of Friends Sept. 14—The Wedding Party.

The first house wedding of the fall season was celebrated Sept. 14th, the bride being Miss Maude Irene Mosher, daughter of John P. Mosher, of East Fifth street, manager of The Sabbath Recorder, and the groom, George Laing Homan, son of Councilman Homan.

The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock. The bride looked charming, and the maid-of-honor, Miss Bernice Octavia V. Alfred, N. Y., is to be acknowledged beauty. The bride and groom entered the front parlor from different directions, and took their places in a bower of palms and smilax.

The groom and best man, George Rockfellow, came from upstairs, and the maid-of-honor and the bride, leaning on the arm of her father who gave her away, entered from the library. Rev. I. L. Cottrell, of Shiloh, N. J., an uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony.

After the wedding a reception was held, after which the bride and groom left on a honeymoon to be gone until October 1st. When they return they will take up their residence with the groom's parents on Hillside avenue.

The bride wore a gown of white taffata made en train, with pearl trimmings. She wore a veil caught up with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of white bridal roses. The maid-of honor wore white mousline over yellow silk, and carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

The entire lower part of the house was handsomely decorated with greens and flowers. In the front parlor was a pretty little bower of palms and smilax, in which the couple took their places. The mantle was banked with clematis. The front parlor was in green and white. The back parlor was in green and yellow, smilax, golden rod and yellow roses being used in the decorations.

The bride presented the maid-of-honor with a ring set with turquoise, and the groom's gift to the bride was a diamond ring set with turquoise. His gift to the best man was a pearl stick pin.

The couple were well remembered with presents, which were displayed in an upper room. One hundred and thirty invitations were issued, and guests were present from Brooklyn, New York, Alfred and this city.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At the regular meeting of Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., Friday, a committee was appointed, consisting of Henry Liefke, Peter VanFleet and C. L. Leland, to draw up a set of resolutions of condolence to be sent to Mrs. E. E. Marshall. Another committee, composed of J. D. Moon, V. W. Nash and J. W. A. Bauersachs, was instructed to draft another set of resolutions to be presented to International Lodge, No. 6, of Niagara Falls, the members of which took charge of Mr. Marshall when he was taken ill there.

Ate Watermelon.

The members of Lucetta Council, Daughters of Liberty, held a watermelon sociable at the home of Mrs. Wm. E. Koyer, of East Third street, Friday. It was an impromptu affair and arrangements were made for it Wednesday night. Songs and recitations were the order of the evening, and a good time was had by all. The committee in charge consisted of Wm. B Ayres, chairman; Mrs. William E. Koyer and Miss Dora Bennett.

INTEREST IN RACING IS NOW REVIVING.

Another Race Meet to be Held at the Oval.

HARRY K. LISTER IN CHARGE

CRESCENT OVAL TO BE THE SCENE OF MORE CONTESTS AWHEEL.

Riverdale Field Club Will Conduct Mere Bicycle Races Saturday Afternoon, September 24th—Five Events—One For Tandems—The List of Prizes to be Contested For—List of Races.

The impetus given to bicycle racing in this section by the Riverdale Field Club has started a healthy growth in the interest in the sport. The success of the first attempt at track racing since the demoralization of the Crescent Wheelmen has given Mr. Wood, the head of the Riverdale Field Club, much encouragement to continue the good work. As a result he has announced another race meet at the Crescent Oval for Saturday afternoon, September 24th.

This time, there will be only one attraction and that will be bicycle racing. The baseball season is practically over and it is probable that the Riverdales, as a baseball team, will not make many more appearances here this season. So on that occasion the baseball game will be given up and the entire afternoon devoted to bicycle racing.

As at the first meet, Harry K. Lister is in charge as secretary of the race committee. His success as a race promoter has been excellent and Mr. Wood has done well to put the affair in his hands. He has already secured the sanction of the racing board of the L. A. W. for the meet and it will be conducted after the fashion of the usual L. A. W. meets.

The programme as now arranged will include five events. They will be a one-mile novice, a one-mile open, a five mile handicap, a one mile handicap and a two-mile tandem scratch. The last event will be the great one of the day. There is also a prospect of a match race between Ray Poole, of this city, and Nick Fifer, of Elizabeth.

Excellent prizes will be given in each event. They will be as follows:

One-mile novice—First, gold medal; second, kodak; third, racing suit.

One-mile open—First, gold watch; second, racing robe; third, gold stick pin.

Five-mile handicap — First, silver stop watch; second, solid gold stick pin; third, gold link cuff buttons.

Two-mile tandem, scratch—First, two silver watches; second, two kodaks; third, two racing suits.

The races are scheduled to begin at 3 o'clock promptly. The track is being looked after and will be in better condition than it was for the last races. The number of entries was very satisfactory on that occasion and there is every prospect that there will be even more starters this time. Now that the racing men are beginning to learn that there is a track in Plainfield again, they are very anxious to ride here. All were well pleased with the treatment they received at the last race and are willing to come again. The tandem race is by far the most spectacular event of the programme and always finds favor with the crowd. Several well-known teams from this vicinity have announced their intention to compete.

In Good Sanitary Condition.

Inspector Pangborn, of the Borough Board of Health, has made a thorough inspection of the residence of Mrs. Harned, 19 Craig place, and finds that there is but one case of typhoid fever there, and that was under the care of a trained nurse. He reports to the Board of Health that the house and outbuilding are kept in the best sanitary shape. The house of Mrs. DeBaud, 10 Craig place, has also been inspected and the condition of things there is reported to be perfectly sanitary.

Didn't Pay Funeral Expenses.

P. Casey & Son have brought suit against Michael and John O'Keefe for $94 for burying their brother, who died three months ago the 26th of this month. The bill includes a casket, burial robe, gloves, carriage hire, etc. The case has not been tried Saturday, but upon motion of the plaintiff's counsel it went over for one week.

Returned From England.

Rev. and Mrs. A. M. Powell, of East Sixth street, returned Thursday to their home in this city from England, where they have been spending the summer months. They were both impressed while abroad with the strong Anglo-American sentiment on the part of the English.

Pipe and Telephone Line.

A party of surveyors have located a pipe and telephone line from Washington to Jersey City across the farm of W. H. Rogers, of Washingtonville. There will be a station on the Union Village road.

CHAPLAIN JONES' TALK.

A SMALL AUDIENCE IN THE CASINO TO HEAR OF NAVAL VICTORIES.

The Chaplain of the Texas Praises the "Hoboes" of the Ship—Many Glorious Things Were the Results of the War.

If the people of the United States had evidenced the same amount of interest in the trouble between this country and Spain that the people of Plainfield displayed in the lecture given in the Casino last Thursday by Chaplain Henry Jones, of the Battleship Texas, there is no doubt but what today this country would be a victim instead of a victor. There was a very small attendance. The lecture was one of great merit and intense interest, coming as it did from a man who was an eye-witness to many exciting scenes in the late war.

When Chaplain Jones, accompanied by Councilman F. H. Andrews, made their appearance on the stage there was loud burst of applause. Mr. Andrews introduced the speaker of the evening with a few appropriate words, after which Chaplain Jones talked somewhat as follows:

"I am glad to see so many out. I stand before you, I presume, a conceited man. Not because I am here, but because I am a chaplain in the United States Navy. I always was proud of my office. I am not proud simply because I am chaplain of the men, but for the reason that I am on the Texas. The newspapers of this country have spent thousands of dollars in telling all about her faults. There is only one thing that they said was true, and that was that she is a 'hodoo.' She has proved herself a 'hodoo' to the Spanish navy."

Chaplain Jones related in detail what happened from that time until after the fight at Santiago. He told in a graphic manner about the Merrimac incident and of the fight at Santiago and how the Spanish ships were one after the other destroyed. He paid a great tribute to Captain Phillips, of the Texas, and said that he was a man that believed more in his God than he did in his guns. He said that while the sailors all had sympathy for Cuba, with them it was the Maine first that they wanted to revenge, and they did so.

In conclusion he said that there were several things about the war for which he thanked God, including a closer union between all churches, pastors and priests; that it had brought out character in the army and navy, a union of the blue and the gray; that women, wealthy women, were found to be beside the sick soldier, and that wherever the American flag went it proved to be a forerunner of the Gospel of Christ.

Lawyers Debated on Legal Points.

After a lengthy trial in which the two lawyers debated on various legal points, Charles Saueracker was ordered to appear in City Court next Saturday morning when Judge DeMeza will pronounce sentence on him. Saueracker was represented by Councilman Walter L. Hetfield. W. A. Codington was the lawyer for the complainant, Charles Doyle.

Died in His Eightieth Year.

The death of John V. Hulick, of Gladstone, occurred Friday. He was the father of Daniel L. Hulick, of Duer street. He was 80 years of age and leaves five children and a wife. Mr. Hulick was a tailor by trade and was one of the first men to be employed by Mr. Schepflin on West Front street. He resided in this city for many years.

Described Work in the Camps.

John Whiting, of New York, who has been engaged in Y. M. C. A. work in the various soldiers' camps this past summer, was present at the Christian Endeavor meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church Friday and spoke about his experiences. During an interval a duet was sung by Miss Adelaide and Miss Ada Bunyon. Arthur Heath led the meeting.

Valuable Dog Poisoned.

A valuable dog owned by D. Webster Littell, of 715 West Seventh street, was a victim of a poisoner. He was found dead Saturday, and the work was undoubtedly that of a vicious person.

What is Scott's Emulsion?

It is the best cod-liver oil, partly digested, and combined with the hypophosphites and glycerine. What will it do? It will make the poor blood of the anæmic rich and red.

It will give nervous energy to the overworked brain and nerves. It will add flesh to the thin form of a child, wasted from fat-starvation.

It is everywhere acknowledged as The Standard of the World.

LAWYER DIDN'T FIGHT.

COUNSELOR M'CLURE DISAGREED ON THE POINT OF EVICENCE.

He Declined to Contiune the Defense of Miodovnic and as a Result Justice Nash Gave Verdict to A. M. Thorn.

The second trial of the case of A. B. Thorn, the Somerset street plumber, against David Miodovnik, the West Front street barber, for payment of a bill for putting in a heating apparatus, did not take the time given to the first trial last week. Then the case was begun Monday and ended Tuesday, when the jury couldn't agree.

Monday the case was called at 2 o'clock, was given to the jury half an hour afterwards and a verdict was reached in a few moments. Judgment was accorded the plaintiff for $86.56, the full amount claimed.

Counselor W. K. McClure, who represented the barber in place of Justice Howcorn, disagreed with Justice Nash on a point of evidence and threw up the case. There was nothing left for Counselor W. S. Angleman to do then except to present enough evidence to convince the jury of the justness of his client's claim, and to ask them for a verdict, which was given him. Mr. McClure will probably carry the case up.

The jurymen were George Rockfellow, Curtis M. Thorpe, L. Spengenberg, P. N. Kline, M. C. Armstrong, T. Osment, John Dorgan, A. Utzinger, T. R. VanZandt, T. A. Cuming, J. Dunham and M. Coyne.

FOUND A STOLEN WHEEL.

A Young Lad Spied One in the Bushes on West Fourth Street.

Last Thursday Gerald Cashman, of 316 McDowell street, found a bicycle in a clump of bushes on West Fourth street. The tool bag was removed from the wheel. The young man reported the find to the police and this morning the wheel was identified by Dr. Stelle, of Park avenue, as his own and the same was turned over to him. There is no doubt but that the wheel was stolen from Dr. Stelle, and after being ridden was thrown in the bushes where found.

Improving His Properties.

David Eastman, of Crescent avenue, has of late been improving several properties owned by him. One is at the corner of First place and Crescent avenue, and the other is on Ninth street, between First place and Watchung avenue. Mr. Eastman has spent a large sum of money on both of these properties and thereby enhanced their value.

W. D. Murray to Speak.

William D. Murray, a member of the sub-committee of the international Y. M. C. A. committee on army work, and who is interested in rasing money for the soldiers' camps, will address the members of the Seventh-Day Baptist church on this subject next Saturday at their morning service.

In Honor of a Cousin.

Miss Ethel Williams, of Grandview avenue, entertained a few friends Thursday evening in honor of her cousin from New London, N. Y., who is visiting her.

—Dennis J. Galbraith, of North avenue, is about to begin the erection of two new houses on West Fourth street.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT P. AIN-FIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Music World.

Rev. H. W. McKane, pastor of the First Church of Christ of this city, is said to be a good speaker and well informed on all topics of the day. He has devoted some time to the incidents of the late American-Spanish war, and is fully prepared to give an interesting and doubtless instructive description of the pictures and views to be exhibited at Stillman Music Hall tomorrow night by Prof. B. Benton Parker, of Schnectady, N. Y. The pictures and views number in the neighborhood of 200 and are said to be most perfect. Reserved seats can be obtained at box office.

Al. Reeves and his famous big company of white and colored performers appear at Music Hall Saturday night and present a bill of great merit and amusement. There are over 50 people in the company and include some of the best-known people in the minstrel and vaudeville ranks. Mr. Reeves himself is a noted artist, and as a premier star banjo performer, has been the "head-liner" of innumerable companies. He has now, however, gathered about him an organization of which he is sole proprietor and manager, and promises an entertainment of superior finish.

WANT ACKERMAN FOR CONGRESS.

Certain Republicans Who are Dissatisfied With Fowler's Record.

A number of prominent local Republicans, who, it is said, are opposed to the renomination of Congressman Fowler because of his action in the local postoffice appointment, will endeavor to induce Ernest R. Ackerman to enter the field as a candidate for the Congressional nomination in the Eighth district. It is not known whether or not Mr. Ackerman will permit his name to be used.

At present Mr. Ackerman is out of the city, but on his return he will be visited by representatives of the dissatisfied element and urged to allow his name to be used. If he determines to do this he will be given strong support in certain quarters.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

George Frazee, of Watchung avenue, is able to be out again after a short illness.

Miss M. E. Eycke resides at 39 Summit avenue, and not on Craig place, as previously reported.

Miss Fannie Hayes, of Somerset street, has returned from a visit with relatives at East Millstone.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Hulick, of Duer street, are at Gladstone attending the funeral of Mr. Hulick's father.

Raymond A. McGee, of Orchard avenue, Washington Park, has returned from a visit at Ridgewood.

Peter See, of Jersey City, has returned to his home after a visit with his grandfather, William M. Stout, of East Front street.

R. Everett Dwight, now a member of Battery A, Warburton's Philadelphia battery, is on a furlough, part of which he will spend at his home on Rockview avenue.

GIFT OF OLD GLORY TO BOROUGH SCHOOL.

Presentation Made by Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M.

EXERCISES LAST TUESDAY.

PATRIOTIC DEMONSTRATION MADE BY 700 SCHOLARS.

The Flag Presented On Behalf of the Donors by Rev. Mr. Woodruff, of Scotch Plains—Received for the School by A. V. D. Honeyman, Member of the Board of Education—Flag is a Large One.

Tuesday a. m. at 8:30 o'clock the North Plainfield Borough School was the scene of flag-raising, speech-making and patriotism. Somerset Council, No. 102, Jr O. U. A. M., presented the school with a new, large and handsome American flag. This council is now located in Plainfield, but it was formerly a North Plainfield order, and hence its interest in the borough school.

Garret T. Dunham took charge of the exercises in behalf of the order. "America" was sung and a portion of the ritual read, when Rev. Mr. Woodruff, of Scotch Plains, was introduced and he presented to the Board of Education the new flag. Mr. Woodruff made an eloquent and inspiring address, stating that the order he represented desired to see a flag and a Bible in every schoolhouse and were working to that end. He gave touching instances of recent patriotism in the Cuban War, and said schoolboys and girls needed no urging to make them loyal to flag and country. He hoped this flag would float every morning as a token of the blessings and greatness of this great land.

The president of the Board, S. St. John McCutchen, being unavoidably absent, the gift was received on behalf of the board by A. V. D. Honeyman, one of its members, who said in part:

"There is nothing in the whole wide world so beautiful as the American flag. It symbolizes everything good and great and generous and noble, in country, in commerce, in community, in citizenship. It is the personification of law, of liberty, of loyalty, of union. In peace and in war, in life and in death, over land and over sea, on the schoolhouse and at the masthead, where leads the Red Cross and where follows the gospel, whatever the race, color or condition of man, at Appomatox or at Manila, wherever a free-born American presses his feet and lift his hat to his fellow Americans as princes and kings, that flag waves —the symbol of free religion, free education, free justice and exact equality before the law. It stands for every State, unifies every party, includes every creed, guards every hearthstone.

"You could not, sir, have presented to this educational institution a gift of which we might be more proud. Every child within sound of your voices knows well that this flag stands for heaven, home and country; and if, after the eloquent remarks you have made, each listener is not

Now ready to vow ever
To the red, the white, the blue,

before this altar of learning, higher purposes and more patriotic inspirations, better thoughts for self and better deeds for country, then the lesson of this hour has been missed and somebody will prove unworthy of the great names of Washington, of Lincoln and of Dewey—which may God forbid."

The entire school then marched out to the front lawn, and Mr. TenBrock raised the flag to the halyard, amid the shouts and huzzas of over 700 children. The "Star Spangled Banner" was sung and the exercises closed.

WILL PLAY TWO GAMES.

Plainfield's Football Eleven Will Not Have an Active Season.

The young men of this city who have for the last four years supported a representative football eleven made a strong effort at the beginning of the season to place a team on the gridiron to play every week. It has since been found to be impossible and the efforts of the supporters of the team will be confined to two big games for the season, one on Election Day and the other for Thanksgiving Day.

Negotiations were entered into with Mr. Wood, of the Riverdale Field Club, to have the team play under his management, but the fact that the team cannot be gotten together will end them. It can be authoritatively stated that Plainfield's big team will not play regularly this season but will make its appearance Election Day and Thanksgiving Day. It is greatly to be regretted but circumstances will prevent a majority of the young men from taking any active part in the game this season.

Working on a New Bridge.

The abutments for the bridge at East Bound Brook have been laid, and about fifty men are employed in building the structure.

T. F. VanHorn, of 114 Grove street, has returned after a two weeks' sojourn at the Delaware Water Gap.

TRIES ANOTHER COURT.

ADAM FRITZ BECOMES ANGERED AT JUSTICE SMALLEY.

Says That He Couldn't Secure Justice There and Duplicates an Action Against a Tenant in Justice Mattison's Court.

Being sued in two different courts for the same cause is an experience which Miers Compton, of Fritz avenue, is having now.

A few weeks ago Adam Fritz, of Somerset street, in whose house Compton lived, began proceedings against his tenant for the recovery of certain rents alleged to be due. Suit was brought in Justice Smalley's court and the case was to have been tried two weeks ago.

On the day of trial W. G. DeMeza, Compton's attorney, filed an affidavit stating that a material witness was out of the State and asked for an adjournment for thirty days. On the strength of the affidavit it was granted.

Then Mr. Fritz was angry, and it is said made some remarks to Justice Smalley about not being able to secure justice there. All the same the case was adjourned until next month.

A few days ago Compton was surprised at being served with another summons, this time to appear before Justice Mattison. The plaintiff is Fritz and the demand is the same as in the first case in Justice Smalley's court.

In this way Compton is being sued twice for the same bill. His lawyer says it is illegal and will endeavor to have the second suit quashed when the case comes up for trial Thursday.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

William R. Moore, of New street, is very proud of seven cotton plants that he has in his yard that are in full bloom. When his late son, Cyrus Moore, was in Virginia, he sent home some cotton seeds, and from them he has succeeded in raising the seven plants.

City Judge George DeMeza is the owner of a cute little fox terrier, of which he is very fond. The dog goes by the name of "Rex," and is known to almost everyone who is acquainted with Judge. Rex is too lively for his master, and seeks acquaintances outside his own home, so it is no unusual thing to meet the little dog in stores, on street corners, or far out in the country. He has a number of tricks which he can do to perfection, and these he seems willing to perform for the amusement of anyone. An interesting little story is told in connection with Rex and a well-known lawyer of this city. Rex is very fond of driving and is never happier than when perched up on the seat of a trap alongside his master. This lawyer, one day, drove to Pluckamin. On his arrival he drove up to a friend's house, when out jumped Rex. The lawyer was surprised to see the dog, for he had never noticed his being there, but made a young lady of the house a present of the dog. What was his surprise a few days afterwards to meet the City Judge and with him was the dog which had been given away. Explanations followed, then it was found out that Rex had made his way home from Pluckamin on foot.

FAIR ATHLETES WILL PLAY BASKET BALL.

High School Girls Will Continue Their Games.

OFFICERS WERE ELECTED.

ANNUAL MEETING OF G. A. A., OF HIGH SCHOOL HELD.

Miss Pruden Chosen President and Miss Randolph, Secretary and Treasurer—Will Have Class Basket Ball Teams—To Play in Whittier School —And Two Coaches Cannot Serve.

It is the young women of the Plainfield High School who are now showing the most interest in athletics. The movement started among them last fall looking toward the advancement of athletics has steadily grown and this fall is resumed with renewed energy. Meanwhile, there is a remarkable lack of interest in all athletic sports among the boys of the High School.

The success of the different class basket ball teams last winter has encouraged the girls to take up the game again this fall. Those who played last year are anxious to enter the game again while there are a number who, while new at the game, wish to learn and will take an active part in the coming contests.

The annual meeting of the Girls' Athletic Association of the High School was held last week to elect officers for the coming year. Miss Jessie Pruden, one of the most active advocates of basket ball in the Senior class, was chosen president. Miss Bessie Fitz Randolph, another of the basket ball enthusiasts from the Senior class, was elected secretary and treasurer. Miss S. Lena Bass, one of the instructors, was elected to the board of managers, which will consist of the two officers and herself.

At present, basket ball will be the only kind of exercise that the girls will take part in. There will be three teams at any rate and possibly four. The question of coaching will come up for two of the coachers, Walter L. Long and George Proctor Smith, have left school and will probably start on a business career, which will prelude their coaching the teams. While the girls are beginning to have a good idea of the game, they still think that they need the advice and direction of someone better skilled than they.

The second floor of the Whittier building will be continued to be used as a gymnasium for the basket ball games. Now that the cold weather is almost here, arrangements are being made for the beginning of practice which will be necessary before any regular matches are played. The captains are yet to be chosen, but they will probably be announced shortly.

A New Era

is a rather high-sounded phrase, but that's what the country is confronted with. The past wretched half-dozen years are dead and buried, and we turn our faces towards better things. Coincident with the advance of prosperity is the initial year of the second decade of the Inter-State Fair's history. That history the people know. They have never been deceived in the past. What the enterprising and alert management of the fair has promised has always been fulfilled to the letter. Its success is built, year by year, on the solid masonry of honesty. There isn't a rotten stick or a crumbling stone in the structure, and the plaster has lots of hair in it. Can you believe that this year's exhibition will be better than last? Well, it will. Come and see for yourself. The place, Trenton; the dates, September 26 30.

Lawyers Had Heated Arguments.

Judgment was rendered in Justice Moffett's court Monday afternoon in favor of Charles Hand and John F. McIntyre against James W. Morrison and wife for $67.75, being rent for a house on South avenue. The trial lasted for two hours, and there were a great many heated arguments between the two lawyers, S. S. Swackhamer for the plaintiffs, and J. P. D. Kirch for the defendants. Mr. Kirch filed a setoff, but that the Justice would not allow.

Wedding Reception to be Held Here.

The marriage of John Clark, of Elizabeth, son of Bernard Clark, proprietor of the Fourth Ward Hotel, of this city, is announced. Mr. Clark married a Boston belle recently and the happy couple are now enjoying a honeymoon. On their return to this city a large reception will be given them at the Fourth Ward Hotel, and a committee of friends will meet them at the North Avenue station to give them a welcome.

Fell Off a Scaffold.

Herman Hansen, a carpenter, of Cedar street, fell off of a scaffold while working on a new house on West Third street, Monday, and received painful injuries. He fell twenty feet and narrowly escaped striking a pile of bricks. He was attended by Dr. Long. The injuries will confine him to his home for the rest of the week.

SCENE IN A PORTUGAL WINERY,

In the mountains, at the Quinto do Sexio, Portugal, a famous Port Wine district where the custom of treading the grapes for Port Wine is still in vogue. From ten to a dozen men or women for each gang in turn continue the treading, day and night, during the four or five weeks vintage. Some of the treading vats are large enough for three separate rows of ten men each, who with their white breeches well tucked up, their arms on each other's shoulders, raise and tread their feet alternately, with song and shouts to keep the lazier ones up to the work, and a band with string instruments enlivens the hours.

Speer, of New Jersey, Uses Rollers instead of Feet.

It is from this district the vines were imported over forty years ago that now fill the vineyards of the Speer Wine Co., at Passaic.

At Passaic the same kind of grapes are crushed between large rollers of rubber, revolved by steam. This is the only place in this country where the real genuine Port Wine is made from the Oporto grape—and they are grown right in SPEER'S VINEYARDS.

These vineyards extend over ⅓ of a mile along one of the Main avenues of Passaic, and comprise fifty six acres. The soil being rich in iron makes the wine most valuable for Medical use.

SPEER'S WINES

Are well known to be of the highest character, the oldest and most refined Wines in America, equal if not superior to any wines in the world. They consist of Port, Sherry, Burgundy, Claret, Sauterne Wines, and ★★★ Climax Brandy. Mr. Speer has some Wine in his cellars that he made over thirty eight years ago. All of Speer's Wines and Brandy are very old, rich, well rounded, soft and delicate. Every family should have a bottle or two of each variety of Speer's Wines and Brandy always in the home, for sickness or family use.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would benefit the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for them?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant, and increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant, and increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the whole human facts—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

SPEER'S WINES

Are well known to be of the highest character, the oldest and most refined Wines in America, equal if not superior to any wines in the world. They consist of Port, Sherry, Burgundy, Claret, Sauterne Wines, and ★★★ Climax Brandy. Mr. Speer has some Wine in his cellars that he made over thirty eight years ago. All of Speer's Wines and Brandy are very old, rich, well rounded, soft and delicate. Every family should have a bottle or two of each variety of Speer's Wines and Brandy always in the home, for sickness or family use.

For Sale by Druggists and Grocers Who Sell High Class Wines.

A physician asked me to recommend Ripans Tabules to him. I did so, and he used them in his practice, and has been a physician since, and that means a saving of $2 a call.

A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were present two daughters who specially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

A new style pocket containing TEN RIPANS TABULES, packed in a paper carton, sold by druggists for five cents, is now placed on the market. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical, who will not pay the high price for the family bottle. Ripans Tabules may be had of druggists everywhere, or by sending five cents to the Ripans Chemical Company, No. 10 Spruce street, New York—or a single carton will be sent for forty-eight cents. A dozen cartons, packed in a handsome case, will be sent for five dollars. Each Ripans Tabule contains the active principles of the most approved curative agents, and is of about the same degree of strength as the tincture of the pharmacopoeia.

BIG STATE CONVENTION.

BUT THERE ARE MANY OTHER FAVORITE SONS.

Democratic State Convention Held at Trenton Today—Adjourned Until 2:30 o'Clock Without Action—Union County Delayed the Convention.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Trenton, Sept. 28—Elvin W. Crane, of Newark, was nominated on the first ballot.

Trenton, Sept. 28—There are waves on the Democratic sea of State politics. In fact there are many of them. So many that it is difficult to tell just exactly how things stand with the Democrats of New Jersey. The recent troubles of the party in this State have tended to clog the State machinery of the party and the result is apparent here today. There is a host of candidates for the Gubernatorial nomination and each has his following. Among them all, however, Prosecutor Elvin W. Crane, of Newark, stands the most prominent, with General Richard A. Donnelly, of this city, close behind.

The wheels of the party machinery have not revolved as tranquilly as many of the party would have liked to see. There has been too much confusion and delay which, with the booms of the various candidates, have combined to that end. There is plenty of enthusiasm, however, and every good Democrat in the city is supremely confident of the final election of the candidate whoever he happens to be.

The general uncertainty that prevails was apparent among the Union county delegation. The caucus of the delegation was called for 10:30 o'clock in room 26 in the Trenton House. The rank and file of the delegation crowded into the room, but the leaders failed to appear on time. At 11 the caucus was adjourned to the Democratic Lyceum, where there was more room. Half an hour later, the meeting was called together by John L. Growell, of Rahway, chairman of the county committee.

Plainfield had nearly her whole delegation present and the places of the absentees were soon filled. J. M. Connelly, of Elizabeth, was made chairman, and J. Coudert, of Cranford, secretary.

A committee composed of J. L. Crowell, of Rahway; Captain Collins, of Elizabeth; John Lane, of Summit; E. D. Moffett, of Plainfield, and J. M. C. Marsh, of Westfield, was appointed to examine the credentials of the delegations from the different townships and cities.

In the selection of the county honors at the convention Peter Egenloff, of Elizabeth, was selected as vice-president, and Thomas Lane, of Summit, as secretary.

There was a lively contest over the election of a State committeeman. The contestants in the race were W. D. Wolfskiel, of Elizabeth, the present incumbent; Peter Egenloff, of Elizabeth, and Thomas F. Lane, of Summit. Nobody received a majority on the first ballot and so they tried again. The second ballot resulted in the selection of Peter Egenloff.

The convention committeemen were chosen as follows: Rules, James Brennen, of Elizabeth; organization, Peter Egenloff, of Elizabeth; resolutions, Thomas Lane, of Summit; credentials, John L. Crowell, of Rahway.

An informal ballot on the preference of the delegates was held and resulted as follows: Prosecutor Crane, 24; Major Seymour, 19; Senator Daly, 5; Benjamin F. Lee, 2. It was decided after a little argument to allow the delegates to vote individually. The Union county caucus finally adjourned at 12:30 o'clock and the delegates hastened to the Opera House.

PLAINFIELDERS AWHEEL

THEY TOURED TO GETTYSBURG AND THROUGH MARYLAND.

Charles Dunham and G. E. Stillman Returned Sunday After an Eventful Trip—Tandem Scheme Didn't Work.

After spending a week awheel in the States of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Maryland, Charles Dunham, of Central avenue, and G. E. Stillman, of West Seventh street, returned to their respective homes Sunday afternoon. They wheeled from Plainfield to Philadelphia and thence along the Lancaster pike to York, Pa., and on to Gettysburg. There they spent two days in wheeling over the battlefields and saw all there was to be seen. They found their wheels particularly useful there, and were able to see much more than the ordinary tourist.

After leaving Gettysburg they rode to Hagerstown, Md., and then across to Baltimore, where they took the train for home. The roads all the way, with few exceptions, were very poor. There had been little or no rain for four weeks and the dust was several inches thick, completely hiding the rocks in the roadway which made the riding quite exciting.

The most exciting incident of their trip occurred between Hagerstown and Baltimore on a lonely road, ten miles from anywhere. Mr. Stillman encountered a rock and two of the spokes in his front wheel snapped allowing the tire to rub against the forks at every turn of the wheel. They had read of the tandem plan of placing the forks of one bicycle on the same axle with the rear forks of another. They tried it and after riding a short distance landed in a heap. The tumble snapped several spokes for Mr. Dunham.

After various attempts to repair the damage, they set out with both front wheels sadly wabbling and managed to reach Baltimore by walking the hills and riding the level stretches slowly.

PLANS FOR SCHOOL MEET

DAILY PRESS MEDAL HAS GREATLY INCREASED INTEREST.

Over a Dozen Boys are After the All-Round Championship—Handicaps to Be Announced Tonight at Meeting of Leaguers.

Despite the short notice on which the fall games of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association were arranged, great interest in the games has been manifest among the boys of the school. The Daily Press medal for the all-round championship of the school has awakened new zeal among the scholastic athletes, and fully a dozen of them have expressed a determination to try for it. Besides that, there are a number of the boys who will try in some of the events in which they take a special interest.

The Daily Press medal has been received and is now on exhibition. It is of silver, made in pretty design, and suitably engraved. It is enclosed in a handsome velvet case. It was secured through Asa Collier.

The entries for the events closed yesterday, after which a meeting of the advisory board will be held and the handicaps arranged. They will be published in today's Daily Press. The games will be held Friday afternoon at the Crescent Oval, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. The bicycle events will be under L. A. W. sanction.

The officials have been selected as follows: Referee, Thomas A. Cuming; track judges, Albert B. Meredith, Ira W. Travell, George Weeks Sandford; field judges, Carroll L. Bunyon, Walter L. Long; timers, J. W. VanSickels, Thomas Quinn, Walter B. Rittenhouse; starter, H. C. VanEmburgh; clerk of the course, Charles B. Morse.

Want to Conduct a Temperance Rally.

Ethan Lanphear, of Central avenue, has received a communication from the celebrated temperance workers, the Beveridges, in which they state that they have combined with Volney B. Cushing, of Malden, and they would like to come to Plainfield for a short time. Their terms are $15 and anyone who is sufficiently interested in the matter can communicate with Mr. Lanphear regarding a temperance rally.

Sermon to Women.

It has been the custom of Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, to preach an annual sermon to women. This year it will be preached Sunday evening. The members of the chapter of King's Daughters connected with the church will act as ushers.

The Next Republican Primaries.

The city executive committee met Tuesday and called the primaries to elect delegates to the Congressional convention for Monday evening, October 3d.

ASBURY PARK INVADED.

GREAT ARMY OF ENDEAVORERS NOW AT THE SEASHORE.

Plainfield Delegation Went By Special Train and Are Now Quartered at Willard Hotel and the Albemarle.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Asbury Park, Sept. 28.—Asbury Park has been invaded. Every new train brings fresh recruits to the invading army which is now in complete possession. The annual convention of the Christian Endeavor Societies of the State, which begins here this afternoon, promises to be the greatest yet in the records of the State organization. Asbury Park, with its large auditoriums and multitude of hotels, seems particularly fitted for the gathering, while the delegates are enabled to get a breath of the delightful sea breezes while enjoying the good things of this annual meeting of the Endeavorers from every part of the State.

The special train bearing the delegates from Plainfield and vicinity arrived here this morning after a pleasurable trip. There was a reception committee awaiting them at the station and plenty to direct them to their quarters.

The morning has been devoted to the reception of the delegates and locating them in their different headquarters. Although the city is crowded, everybody appears happy and contented. The Asbury Park Endeavorers have already proved themselves splendid hosts and their arrangements for the care and comfort of their guests has been very satisfactory.

The Plainfield delegation is now quartered at the Willard Hotel, with the exception of a few who, with E. E. Anthony, are stopping with the State officers at the Albemarle. The Plainfield party consists of the following:

Rev. J. W. Richardson, Mrs. Jere. Manning, Mrs. Catherine Randolph, Mr. Howard Randolph, Miss Mary Randolph, Mr. L. W. Randolph, Mrs. L. W. Randolph, Mr. Robert Love, Miss Emma V. Fish, Miss Minnie G. Morse, Mrs. Harriet Runyon, Miss Elma Runyon, Miss Adelaide Runyon, Miss Cora Brokaw, Miss Mary Berkaw, Miss Swackhamer, Mrs. R. A. Frazee, Miss Mabel Wilson, Mrs. Hawkins, Miss F. G. Hawkins, Mr. J. M. Hawkins, Mr. H. J. Martin, Mrs. H. J. Martin, Mrs. J. G. Miller, Mrs. C. C. Bissell, Miss Ella C. Benedict, Mr. W. S. Lowry, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Mr. S. C. Peck, Mrs. S. C. Peck, Miss Nettie J. Beeching, Miss Angie Dietrich, Miss Addie Dietrich, Mr. E. E. Anthony, Mr. Frank Clarkson, Mr. A. L. Force and Mrs. A. L. Force.

CHURCH ANNIVERSARY.

Dunellen Methodist Church to Hold a Week's Special Services.

Dunellen, Sept. 28.—From October 16th to the 20th, the Methodist Episcopal church here will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary. It is an occasion long looked forward to by both pastor and people, and will no doubt be the means of aiding the church both financially as well as spiritually.

The exercises will begin Sunday, the 16th, when there will be special preaching and speaking. In addition to the services Sunday there will be reunions of the people with former members and friends of the church Monday and Tuesday evenings. At these gatherings addresses will be delivered by former pastors. Invitations have been extended to the churches of both borough as well as to churches in neighboring towns, and there is no doubt but what a large gathering of friends from all over will attend the services.

Wednesday evening congratulatory addresses will be delivered by the town pastors and also by visiting clergymen.

The Ladies' Aid Society will provide a dinner Thursday evening. Preceding the dinner an attractive entertainment will be given.

The speakers who have so far been secured to make addresses are Rev. Dr. C. S. Woodruff and wife, of Dover; Rev. Dr. Simpson, of Hackensack; Rev. T. D. Frazee, of Staten Island; Rev. S. D. Jones, of Stony Point, N. Y., and Rev. George Angleman, of Junction.

Will be a Fine Tour.

Mr. Honeyman's next tour is to be to the Holy Land and Egypt. He has announced it by beautiful itineraries, which can be had upon inquiry at 181 North avenue. This will be, undoubtedly, the finest tour in the entire series of the "Honeyman's Private Tours," which are so well-known and have proved so successful.

The New Water Plant.

Manager Charles Sebring, of the Watchung Water Company, has about completed the improvements at the plant at Greenbrook. It is certainly one of the most complete in this vicinity.

A QUIET SESSION IN COUNTY COURT.

Few Cases of Importance to be Tried at Somerville.

PLAINFIELD REPRESENTED.

GRAND JURY HAS 98 COMPLAINTS TO LOOK AFTER.

Former Mayor Place is Foreman of the Grand Jury—Grand Jury Now Occupied With the Blume Case—Other Cases to be Tried During the Term—A Full List of the Jurymen.

Somerville, Sept. 28—The September term of the Somerset County Court opened here yesterday morning, and what promises to be a busy time for lawyers and judges was fairly begun. Judge Magie made no formal charge to the Grand Jury, but stated that if at any time they needed information to ask for it. There are 98 complaints to look after.

The court calendar shows thirty-two civil cases, not all of which will come to trial during this term of court.

The cases that occupied the attention of the court yesterday were those of Andrew Meyers against J. C. M. Blume, and Elizabeth Meyers against J. C. M. Blume. Reed and Coddington, of Plainfield, were for the defense in both cases.

Dudlington & Swackhamer, of Plainfield, represent the defendant in the case of Thomas Dowd against the Watchung Water Company, and Pope & Runyon, of that city, the plaintiff in the case of Fredericks & Wolf against Florence Howtell et als, contract on lien claim. The case of J. A. Blatz against George Billing is set down for this term. Murphy & Blatz represent the plaintiff, and Councilman Walter L. Hetfield the defendant. All these cases will be tried in a few days.

There are no very important cases on for this term. Several cases have been appealed from the Justices' courts in the borough of North Plainfield, and will be tried this term. Charles F. Debele against Howell Thatcher from Justice Thomas', and H. J. Heins et als against W. L. Smalley et als, from Justice Mattison's. This last case was tried May 16th. These are the only cases of interest to Plainfield.

The grand jurors are as follows: Charles Place, foreman; Samuel B. Wheeler, Van B. Lane, Oliver Perry, David Lewis, VanClive Meeker, Abraham H. Lane, Robert E. Cramer, Jacob R. Sutphen, C. D. Thomas, Edwin S. Voorhees, Albert S. Lewis, Wm. H. Terhune, Benj. F. Welch, John C. Staats, Charles E. Austin, Wm. Kirch, George W. Hope, Peter Gulick, Henry Reimer, Rynear N. Quick, Wm. Lowbow, Charles E. Westervelt.

DEATHS AT THE PLAINS.

TWO OLD AND WELL-KNOWN CITIZENS PASS AWAY.

Orman Noble, a Life-long Resident, Dies in His Seventy-fifth Year—Wm. Jamison Suffers Fatal Stroke of Paralysis.

Scotch Plains, Sept. 28—Orman Noble died at the home of his son on Park avenue last evening at 9 o'clock. Mr. Noble has been ailing for a long time and for several weeks has been confined to his bed and his friends and family have known that the end was near.

Mr. Noble was one of the oldest residents of the village, having reached the ripe old age of seventy-five years, and has been a resident of the village nearly all his life. A widow and two sons survive him, Morton C., who is in business in Newark, and Wm. B., who holds a responsible position with the Nassau Bank, of New York city. Mr. Noble leaves many friends, who will miss his familiar face and pleasant word for everyone. Interment will be in the family plot in the Baptist cemetery. Notice of funeral later.

Wm. Jamison, father of Mrs. Abram Wade, died suddenly at his home at Lyons Farms yesterday morning, from a paralytic stroke. Mr. Jamison for years ran a truck farm in Washington Valley and was well known through this section. His sudden death will be a great shock to his many friends who admired him for his many good deeds. A wife and three children survive him. Mr. Jamison and family during their residence in this section, were active workers in the Methodist church of this village.

Hurt by a Stone.

Clarence Francisco, of Pearl street, is suffering with a severe wound on his head, inflicted by a sharp stone thrown by a boy named Callahan.

MORE SCHOOL CHILDREN.

SUPT. WIGHTMAN, OF THE BOROUGH, REPORTS AN INCREASE.

Some Classes So Large That Half-Day Sessions Will Be Held—New Building Badly Needed—Will Relieve Crowding.

An important meeting of the Borough Board of Education was held in the schoolhouse last Monday evening, when several matters of interest were considered and acted upon. Contractor Wm. C. Smith stated that work on the new public school has progressed to the first story, and the Board ordered that the first payment on the work be made. Four school children residing near Dunellen district asked the Borough Board to transfer them to the Dunellen district, as the borough school is too far away for them to attend. The request was granted.

Superintendent Wightman reported that there are now 1289 new scholars attending the public school who did not attend last year. There are also 116 more scholars in the primary department than can be accomodated. The class taught by Miss Stanton has 100 scholars. This class will be divided, and the Board decided to secure a new teacher. The new teacher and half of the class will occupy the same room, holding a session at a late hour in the afternoon.

The Board directed that the lease of the German Reformed church, which has been used for school purposes, be terminated after October 15th, and that Miss Hetfield and her class return to the public school building, where half-day sessions will be held. Various complaints were received by the Board concerning half-day sessions, but nothing can be done until the new school is completed.

MONSTER BAKE AT THE PLAINS.

W. S. Emery's Clambake Was a Decided Success All Round.

Scotch Plains was awakened from its usual quiet solicitude Tuesday, it being the occasion of W. S. Emery's annual clambake. Mr. Emery had spared neither time or expense to make the affair a success, and from the way his friends turned out it was all he could have hoped for. An improvised stage had been erected on the lawn in the rear of the hotel, and during the night the guests were entertained with music by Drake's Band, of Elizabeth. During the day a gang from the Plainfield Electric Light Company had erected poles and strung wires so that as soon as the evening gloom had settled the yard was illuminated with numberless electric lights, making the scene as light as day. Shortly after 7 o'clock guests began to arrive, some coming in carriages, by stage, others from a distance coming on the cars. Stages were run to the station for their accommodation. Mr. Emery had provided talent to help entertain his guests, and while they were waiting for the bake to be served a short programme was rendered. About 9 o'clock the bake was pronounced as being "fit for a king," and soon the long tables were filled and clams, chickens, etc., began to disappear with great rapidity, but there was enough and more than enough for all. After the bake the rest of the night was given up to a social time.

HIGH SCHOOL CADETS ELECT.

The Company Will Continue Drill This Winter With Thirty Members.

The Plainfield High School Cadets have reorganized for the coming year. All the old commissioned officers graduated or left school last June and it was necessary to elect an entire new staff. William A. Fisher was chosen captain, Roy H. Radford first lieutenant and George Foggate second lieutenant. Howard Martin was elected first sergeant. The remainder of the non-commissioned officers will be chosen later when it is seen which of the cadets are best fitted for the places. There will be about thirty cadets in the company. Another meeting of the Cadet Company will be held Thursday to arrange further details for the year's drill. Captain George F. Edwards will be in charge of the cadets as usual.

HOME FROM THE FRONT.

Daniel C. Main Has Safely Encountered Dangers of Battle and Sickness.

After passing through many adventures as a nurse in the ambulance train of the Fifth Army Corps, Daniel C. Main returned to the home of his parents, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Main, of Central avenue, Tuesday. Main reached New York sat Thursday on the transport, "Seguranco," but was detained at quarantine until yesterday when he started for home.

He is looking much better than was expected after his encounter with yellow and malarial fevers but still is rather thin and weak.

ACKERMAN FOR SENATOR

PROMINENT PLAINFIELDER WILL BE NAMED AT COUNTY CONVENTION.

Ernest R. Ackerman Will Be Pushed By Local Republicans As the Successor of Governor Voorhees in the Senate.

A week ago the advocates of Judge Cross' candidacy for the Republican nomination as State Senator to succeed Governor Voorhees, thought they had a clear field. Although Mayor C. J. Fisk, of this city, had been mentioned for the office, it was understood that the Mayor did not want the nomination under any circumstances.

A new candidate has now entered the field. Every since there was a good prospect that Union county would have to elect another Senator this fall, the friends of Ernest R. Ackerman have been anxious to have him allow his name to be presented to the county convention as a candidate for the Senatorial nomination. He has at last consented and now Judge Cross, the Elizabeth favorite, finds himself confronted with a powerful rival.

Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, who is one of the leading supporters of Mr. Ackerman, is an indefatigable worker. He will make a strong effort to secure the support of the other townships outside of Elizabeth. It will be in Elizabeth that Mr. Ackerman will meet his greatest opposition. Plainfield will undoubtedly give him its solid support. The attitude of the remainder of the county will depend on what other candidates are put up. Plainfield will be able to exchange votes for Senator for others for some other nomination provided Elizabeth does not get there first.

Judge Cross is conceded a very strong candidate for the nomination and it will be very interesting to watch with just what success the efforts of Mr. Ackerman's friends are met with. It will undoubtedly be a lively time and furnish plenty of interest at primaries and convention.

WEDDED DUSKY BELLE.

YOUNG COLORED COUPLE MARRIED BENEATH FLORAL CIRCLE.

David C. Martin, Popular Driver for Edward White, was the Groom—Miss Curtis the Bride—The Rest of the Bridal Party.

Mrs. Julia Stevenson's house, at 305 Arlington avenue, presented a gay appearance Tuesday at the marriage of her daughter, Miss Jennie B. Curtis, to David C. Martin. The couple are popular young members of colored society here, and the wedding was attended by fifty guests mostly from this city.

The ceremony was performed in the parlor under an arch of golden rod and daisies by Rev. James E. Groves, pastor of Mt. Zion A. M. E. church. To the music of a pretty wedding march the bride and her bridesmaid, Miss Maggie Wood, entered the parlor, preceded by the flower girl, Miss Wilhelmenia Wood. The bride was leaning on the arm of William Lee, of Baltimore, a relative, who gave her away.

The groom and the best man entered from another direction, and soon the few words were said which made two hearts one. The best man was Joseph Barrett.

The bride wore a white silk dress trimmed with white satin. She wore a veil and orange blossoms, and carried a bunch of bridal roses.

The groom drives one of Edward White's delivery wagons, and is a popular and faithful employe. The couple will continue to reside at the home of the bride.

The Trolley Schedule.

The cars of the Plainfield Street Railway Company on the main line now run as far as the Dunellen railroad station in the daytime, and as far as Taylor's Hotel during the evening. The reason for this is that during the day the cars are run under twelve minutes' headway, while at night fifteen minutes is the rule. Under the twelve minutes' headway the cars do not have time to run the extra distance.

Suffered a Relapse.

Mrs. H. S. Hall, of East Fifth street, who has been quite ill, suffered a relapse Tuesday, and is now in a dangerous condition. Tuesday the physician in charge said that she must be moved from the house where she was, so last night Mr. Hall had her taken to Charles Van Winkle's house on the corner of West Fourth street and Madison avenue.

Tough Gang of Boys.

There is a tough gang of young men who loiter around the Watchung avenue bridge that need the attention of both the city and borough police. The profanity and disgraceful acts heard and seen around that section are a disgrace to the neighborhood.

CITY BUSINESS MEN TALK OF MANY THINGS

The Members Favored the Nicaragua Canal.

HAVE LOW EXPRESS RATES.

BUILDING ORDINANCE AGAIN HEARD FROM IN COMMITTEE REPORT.

New York Firm Wanted to Take Charge of Board's Exhibit at Paris Exposition—Will Change the Regular Meeting Night—Wanted Lower Rates for Young Commuters from Here.

For such a comparatively weak organization the Plainfield Board of Trade, at its regular meeting Tuesday, considered several great questions of National importance. There were just eleven members, a quorum, present a few minutes past 8 o'clock when President Lounsbury called the meeting to order.

A communication was received from E. W. Mills, of the U. S. Express Company, in which he stated that Plainfield is now enjoying the lowest of any trunk line rate on express goods, and that the rate is the same as the one in Newark. He stated that the Adams Express Company charge the people of Rahway a higher rate to New York than is paid in this city. The above communication was received in response to a request from the Board that a lower rate be secured if possible.

Another communication was received from Thomas A. Cuming, in which he suggested that the time of meeting be changed from Wednesday evening to some other night. Later in the evening Mr. Laing made a motion that the time be changed from the third Wednesday night in the month to the third Monday night. As an amendment to this motion D. W. Littell moved that the third Tuesday in the month be selected.

At the next meeting of the Board the question of deciding on some other night will be voted upon, as the laws require that due notice be given on such action.

A communication was received from a New York firm in which they stated that they would like to take charge of any exhibits which the Board would make at the Paris Exposition in 1900. This was referred to Charles Hand, chairman of the committee on manufacturers, and the communication received from the San Diego Chamber of Commerce, asking the support and endorsement of the Board in the Nicaragua Canal matter, was kindly received. President Lounsbury felt as though the Board should communicate with the Senator and Congressman from this district and ask them to vote for the construction of the canal. The president and secretary were given the power to take such action.

J. C. Pope, chairman of the membership committee, reported the name of J. Howard Leggett for election, and the name of Ira LaRue was proposed for membership. Mr. Leggett was elected and Mr. LaRue's name will come up at the next meeting.

Mr. Laing made a brief report on the subject of the city building ordinance. He stated that progress could be reported, and that the City Council had so far made a number of changes for the purpose of adopting the same.

No report was received from the committee on the railroad station. B. B. Rogers thought that if James E. Martine's name was added to that of the committee something would be done. Mr. Lounsbury said that Mr. Martine was not a member of the Board and could not be appointed.

Mr. Lounsbury introduced the subject of lower commutation rates between this city and New York for young people, and stated that the plan as suggested by F. E. Kinsman is not original with him, for the subject had been discussed before he mentioned it. This matter was left to the transportation committee.

During the evening Mr. Bradley, of the firm of Landis & Hughes, made a few remarks concerning his work in this city of making a birds-eye view map of Plainfield. He showed some of the members samples of his work and stated that he would like to have the co-operation and endorsement of the Board. This concluded the business and the meeting adjourned.

After the meeting the members discussed several subjects, including lower rates for gas, water, etc., and at times the discussion became quite exciting.

A Church Anniversary.

The thirty-first anniversary of the Mt. Olive Baptist church will be observed Oct. 23d, and exercises appropriate to the occasion will be presented.

RODE RACES AMID A DRIZZLING RAIN.

Race Meet of Riverdale Field Club Held.

MANY EXCITING FINISHES.

THE RACES WERE WELL CONTESTED DESPITE THE WET.

Michal Burke, a Local Rider, Won the Five-mile Handicap From a Big Field—Ray Dawson Rode and Was Victor in the Mile Open—The Tandem Race Was a Great Success.

Saturday afternoon saw bicycle racing on the Crescent Oval once more. After lying in idleness for two years, the Oval has once more been put in condition, the necessary enterprise coming from outside in the shape of Robert C. Wood, the head of the Riverdale Field Club. The race meet, itself, originally intended for the local riders, became of State importance and the sport-loving people of Plainfield were given as good racing as can be seen anywhere.

What promises best for the future of bicyle racing at the Oval is the fact that the meet was a financial success. While Mr. Wood did not make a great deal out of it, the mere fact that he came out ahead augurs well for the success of wheeling contests in this vicinity.

The day was by no means an ideal one for track contests of any kind. All day there seemed a promise of rain, but it held off during the morning and the sun was out most of the time. Then it clouded up as the wheelmen began to gather at the track, and by 4 o'clock a thin mist began to fall.

Including the contestants and their trainers, there were at least 500 people present. What the audience lacked in numbers it made up in enthusiasm, which was as evident after the rain began as before.

At three o'clock the racing began. Harry K. Lister opened up a lively campaign and throughout the meet there was no delay between the events except when the referee granted an intermission of ten minutes to allow the contestants to rest.

The novice race was called first in three heats with some six starters in each. Charles Embleton, of Westfield, was favorite in the first heat and won by a clever spurt. Clarence Rittenhouse, of Plainfield, rode unbalanced. The Boland brothers of Rahway, in the next heat, had everything their own way. Will Jeffrey, this city, paced the third heat and then won. Albert Schomp, a High School rider, finished second by several lengths.

In the final, the Boland brothers fought it out again on the stretch. The Westfield man was third. Schomp was crowded off into the sand on the far turn while Jeffrey pocketed.

The one mile open brought out some of the best amateur riders from the Metropolitan district. Ray Dawson won cleverly in the second. Peter Simmons, the local colored rider, was crowded to the rear and finally finished sixth.

The final heat was very close, Dawson showing up in front after a terrific spurt with Wahrenberger while the Trenton crack, Crisp, had to be content with third.

The five mile handicap was the event of the day, however. Owing to the prospect of a steady downpown, shortly, Referee Cuming decided to run the race in one heat with thirty-four starters. The riders were well distributed about the field with the Boland brothers, Michael Burke, of Plainfield, and William Downs, of Newark, as limit men at the 400 yard mark. Ray Dawson rode alone from scratch.

On the finish, Burke had a little extra speed up his sleeve and just left his brotherly opponents a few yards from the tape. The finish was very close. Jorden Hasen led the remains of the large bunch over the tape.

The one mile handicap was a moist contest. In the first heat, the scratch men could not catch the first bunch and so did not qualify. In the second, Wahrenberger ran through the field from the 10 yard mark and won cleverly by a few inches. He finished first in the final but looked around and was therefore disqualified, Richr, who was a close second, was awarded first prize. DeHaven and Letson fell on the far turn. DeHaven was knocked senseless.

The tandem race furnished lots of enjoyment despite the sharp shower that prevailed throughout. Eugene Richter and William J. Dodd took the pace from the start in the first heat and there they stayed until the finish.

Ray Dawson and Milton Brown were thought to have the second heat for a surety, but George Voorhees and Gabriel from New Brunswick were too strong a combination. Both teams held back until the last lap when they ranged up side by side. It was nip and tuck until they rounded the last turn when the Brunswick team opened up half-a-dozen lengths between them, and the crack riders were successively passed by the Pierce Wheelmen team and Mooney and his mate who won the coveted places.

The hottest race of the day was the final of the tandem, Dodd and Richter took the lead again while Voorhees and Gabriel watched them carefully. The Brunswick boys came down the stretch like a whirlwind and won by a length from the Pierce team while the Plainfield combination took third by half a length.

The summaries were as follows:

One-mile novice—first heat, won by Charles Embleton, Westfield; Hahs Nelson, Oak Tree, second; John W. Williams, Trenton Y. M. C. A. third. Time, 2:33 3-5.

Second heat—Won by Frank E. Boland, Rahway; Joseph J. Boland, Rahway, second; William A. Morris, Jr., Bayonne, N. J. A. C., third. Time, 3:01.

Third best—Won by William T. Jeffrey, Plainfield; A. L. Schomp, Plainfield, P. H. S. A. A., second; A. C. Cornell, New York City, third. Time, 3:07.

Final heat—Won by J. J. Boland; F. E. Boland, second; Charles Embleton, third. Time, 2:45 3-5.

Three-mile open. First heat—Won by Milton B. Brown, Passaic, T. C. C.; Jack Jasper, Bayonne, N. H. C. C., second; John Allgair, Jr., Somerville, third Time, 2:45.

Second heat—Won by Ray Dawson, Boonton, N. Y. A. C.; George W. DeHaven, Sewaren, second; Hamilton Crisp, Trenton, Y. M. C. A., third. Time, 2:41 1-5.

Third heat—won by W. F. Wahrenberger, Brooklyn; Stanley Godfrey, New York, Three Wheelmen, second; George V. W. Voorhees, New Brunswick, B. B. C., third. Time, 3:04.

Final heat—won by Ray Dawson, W. F. Wahrenberger, second; Hamilton Crisp, third. Time, 2:48 3-5.

Five-mile handicap. Run in one heat—won by Michael Burke, Plainfield, 400 yards; Frank E. Boland, Rahway, 400 yards, second; Joseph J. Boland, Rahway, 400 yards, third; Jordan Hansen, Perth Amboy, E. A. C., 150 yards, fourth. Time, 12:40.

One mile handicap. First heat—won by W. A. Morris, Jr., Bayonne, N. J. A. C., 140 yards; George V. W. Voorhees, New Brunswick, B. B. C., 60 yards, second; F. M. Letson, Stelton, Y. S. C. T., 140 yards, third; Gus Welsing, New York, P. W., 120 yards, fourth; W. R. Grigsby, Montclair, L. T. C., 100 yards, fifth; John Allgair, Jr., Somerville, 80 yards, sixth. Time, 2:32.

Second heat—won by W. F. Wahrenberger, Brooklyn, 10 yards; G. W. DeHaven, Sewaren, 20 yards, second; Henry Welsing, New York P. W., 120 yards, third; F. W. Richt, New York, 30 yards, fourth; Henry Behlert, Brooklyn, 80 yards, fifth; H. S. Laveille, New York, 120 yards, sixth. Time, 2:32 3-5.

Final heat—won by F. W. Richt; W. R. Grigsby, second; Gus Welsing, third. Time, 2:20 3-5.

Two-mile tandem. First heat—won by Eugene Richter and William J. Dodd, Plainfield; J. J. Boland and F. E. Boland, Rahway, second; William Embleton and William Goltra, Westfield, third. Time, 5:11.

Second heat—won by George V. W. Voorhees and Joseph H Gabriel, New Brunswick, B. B. C.; W. J. Mooney and Fred Slater, Rahway, second; Stanley Godfrey and Ronald Bedell, New York city, P. W., third. Time, 5:27.

Final heat—won by Voorhees and Gabriel; Godfrey and Bedell second; Richter and Dodd third. Time, 5:02 3-5.

FOUGHT WITH A HAWK.

DESPERATE BATTLE PUT UP BY BIRD WITH A BROKEN WING.

Frank Dencklau's Exciting Hunting Experience in the Passaic Valley—Finally Secured the Prize of the Hawk.

With a wounded hawk as an adversary, Frank Dencklau, of East Second street, had a desperate encounter last Thursday while on a hunting expedition in the Passaic Valley. In the early morning Dencklau, Walter L. Long, of Park avenue, Fred C. Bonney, of Mercer avenue, and Godwin Beard, of Hillside avenue, started out with their shotguns. After wandering over to the Passaic Valley and meeting with varying success they finally spied an immense hawk perched on a tall tree.

They surrounded the tree after a time and blazed away. The contents of Dencklau's gun broke a wing and the great bird fluttered down on the other side of the Passaic, which is not very wide at that point. There being no bridge in the vicinity, Dencklau left his gun on the bank and waded through. The hawk was very active and thoroughly aroused. The bird fought with beak and talons, scratching the would-be captor's hands and tearing his clothes. At last Dencklau laid the bird low with a blow from a club he picked up, and seizing it before it could recover held the head of the struggling biped under water until it was drowned.

The great bird was then carried across the river and brought to Plainfield, where Dencklau is having it stuffed in remembrance of the exciting experience. The bird is one of unusual size, measuring nearly four feet from tip to tip.

GIVEN G. A. R. HONORS.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF LATE REV. H. F. F. SCHNELLENDRUESSLER.

Glowing Tribute of Words by Ministers to Their Dead Brother—At the Grave the Rites of G. A. R. Were Observed.

Very impressive were the funeral services of the late Rev. H. F. F. Schnellendruessler which were held from Trinity Reformed church Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The church was well-filled with friends of the departed. There was also a large delegation present from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of which organization the deceased was a member.

The services were opened with Scripture reading by Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, which was followed with a vocal selection, "Asleep in Jesus," by Miss Etta Krymer. Miss Minnie Williams, Horace J. Martin and Horace J. Martin, Jr., accompanied on the organ by David E. Titsworth.

Scripture reading was then continued by Rev. Mr. DeHart, of Raritan, after which Rev Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of the church, made a few remarks. In part he spoke somewhat as follows:

"You have seen our departed brother very often on the street; for more than a generation he has been a resident here. The scholars who attended the public schools about fifteen years ago remember his kindly and efficient instruction, and his patriotism was evidenced when the war broke out. For two years he served as chapain of the Sixteenth N. Y. heavy artillery, U. S. Volunteers. In his death the church not only suffers a loss, but our denomination in a great loser, and this congregation also suffers. He was a student of God's word, and his mind was not easily swerved. Up to the very last he maintained his faith in God.

"He was a liberal man, far beyond his means. He gave more largely than 99 out of every 100 of the Christians in this city. The Lord has taken care of him even to old age, and has carried him along through the pathway of life over many rough places, and I commend to all these words of comfort."

The next speaker was Rev. Mr. Doolittle, of North Branch, a classmate of the deceased in the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, who paid a glowing tribute to his character.

After Rev. Mr. Doolittle's remarks Rev. Augustus Todd, of Dunellen, offered a fervent prayer. This was followed with a selection, "Sleep on Beloved," by the quartette. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Koechli, of Somerville, a former pastor of the German Reformed church, of the borough.

Those present were then given an opportunity to view the remains, after which the body was borne from the church to the hearse by Deacon F. C. Adams, and Elders A. L. Force, Horace J. Martin, G. L. VanEmburgh and J. T. Lair.

At this time the members of the G. A. R. took charge of the services and interment was made at Hillside Cemetery. At the grave Commander E. C. Morse had charge and he was assisted in the services by Chaplain M. C. Dobbins, and Comrades E. D. Moffett, I L McVoy and Wm. C. Smith. The pall-bearers from the post were Comrades M. C. Dobbins, E. D. Moffett, James Clarkson and I. L. McVoy. During the services a usual volley was given by the firing squad consisting of Comrades Emmons, Compton, Sargeant, Sam. Moore, Wagoner, E. K. Allen, W. W. Coriell and Charles Willis.

The floral tributes consisted of several bunches of flowers, a large pillow from the G. A. R., and on the casket there rested a large American flag.

Among the floral tributes contributed to the memory of the departed was a sheaf of wheat and palms sent by J. D. Shepard, and a large bunch of roses sent by Mr. and Mrs. Craig A. Marsh.

Stepped by a Tree.

An exciting runaway was noticed on Watchung avenue in the borough Friday afternoon by Marshal Schenck. It was a two-wheeled rig and a fractious steed. In the gig there was seated a man and woman, and as the horse ran at full speed towards the mountains the man could be seen holding onto the reins with all his might. The horse was finally run into a tree. The occupants were not thrown out, but the gig suffered slight damage. The occupants refused to give their names, and after recovering their senses proceeded on their journey.

To Dance on Anniversary.

The picnic of Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men, which was to have been held at Mountain Side Grove last week, has been postponed until October 7th, when it will be held in conjunction with the celebration of the anniversary of the formation of the tribe at Red Men's Hall.

Phillip Kirch, of Central avenue, has associated himself with his father in the grocery business on Liberty street, corner of West Fourth street.

POLITICS WILL BE LIVELY IN SOMERSET.

Many Candidates For the County Nominations.

LEADERS MAY NOT AGREE.

ADDED INTEREST IN THE CONVENTION THE RESULT.

Former Senator Thompson and Senator Reed are Reported to be Not on the Best of Terms Politically—May Back Different Candidates for the Nominations of the County Offices.

A week from Monday will see a lively fight in the Republican ranks throughout Somerset county. At that time the Republican primaries to elect delegates to the county convention will be held. The convention of the Republicans will be held in Somerville the Thursday following. The Republican convention a year ago saw the serious beginning of the breach between former Senator L. A. Thompson and Senator Charles A Reed.

There was a time, and it was not so long ago, that these two men were particularly intimate in political circles. Thompson has long been looked upon as the Republican leader of this county while Senator Reed has, as one of his able lieutenants, risen rapidly to his present place in county affairs. At the last county convention, Thompson backed Surrogate Spencer for that nomination and the State Senator was credited with favoring George C. Cooper, of Somerville. Thompson's man was nominated.

At the gathering of the Somerset county delegation at Trenton Thursday, Thompson did not appear and Senator Reed was the leading star. As such he was made chairman of the delegation. It was rumored about, however, that there was a lively time in prospect for the coming county convention.

There are at present several candidates in the race after the Republican nomination for the offices of Sheriff and Assemblyman. Neither of the leaders have taken any active steps for any of them, so that it is rather difficult to see who are to be the principal rival candidates. George C. Cooper, of Somerville, is mentioned as a candidate for the Assembly. So, too, is Ed. Cooper, of Warren. Assemblyman VanDoren is pointed out as wanting the shrievalty nomination, as also does George C. Snyder, of Franklin.

Tobin, plumbing house corner Stelle and Field avenues, $930.

FUNERAL OF JUSTICE SPERRY.

Sermon by Rev. W. C. Snodgrass—Wealth of Floral Tributes.

Last Friday at the home of Mrs. Stevens, of Grandview avenue, the funeral services of the late Justice Sperry were held. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, officiated, and he was assisted by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, who offered prayer. During the service vocal selections were rendered by the Misses Carroll, John Steiner and Charles Hummer.

The floral tributes were very beautiful and impressive. The interment took place Friday in Evergreen cemetery, and those who served as bearers were Mr. Buttman, W. J. Conroy, J. S. Lunger, J. W. Van-Horn, W. H. Coombs and Justice Crossley.

DANIEL MAIN HOME.

Returned From Cuba on a Transport—Was Sick With the Fever.

Daniel Main, son of Rev. Dr. Main, of this city, returned Thursday from Cuba to New York on one of the transports. Mr. Main was in the hospital corps, and during his stay in Santiago he was ill with the fever. He has not yet entirely recovered from the effects of his illness, but is very much better. On the transport that brought him north there were seventy-six soldiers of the Fifth Army Corps. The transport is still held at quarantine, and will be kept there for several days.

COUNTY ROAD PROPOSED

WOULD BE A SHORT CUT TO NEW MARKET.

Suggested That Middlesex Might Connect New Market With West Seventh Street and Then Macadam Road to City Line.

Anyone who has had occasion to want to reach New Market from Plainfield in a hurry and has attempted to take a short cut through West Seventh street or any other of the parallel thoroughfares has found the roads in terrible condition. Most of the traffic from New Brunswick, Stelton and neighboring towns, which passes through New Market en route to Plainfield, usually finds its way here by the way of Dunellen. It is considerably longer but the condition of the roads elsewhere make it rather imperitive.

It has recently been suggested that Middlesex county would do a good thing for its citizens and the rest of mankind if a macadam county road was built from New Market acroes to West Seventh street, and through that street to the city line. Then the city, in turn, might extend the macadam on West Seventh street a block further to connect with the county road. Such a connecting link between Plainfield and New Market would open up an entire new line of communication between Plainfield and the principal places in Middlesex county.

Such a road would find general favor with the great army of wheelmen that yearly pass between Plainfield and New Brunswick. The road-bed backed Surrogate Spencer for that nomination and the State Senator was credited with favoring George C. Cooper, of Somerville. Thompson's man was nominated.

QUARRELED OVER A BACKYARD.

Paradise Alley Neighbors Take Their Troubles to Court.

Mrs. Lena Levine, of Cottage place, swore out a warrant in Justice Mosher's court for the arrest of a neighbor, Sebastian Miller, Friday, charging him with assault and battery. Miller was arrested by Constable Rockafellow Friday night and held in $50 bail for a hearing Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The Levines and the Millers live in same house on Cottage place and have the use of the same backyard. In the yard is a clothesline on which both families hang their washing. The line is not long enough for all the washing and there are frequent disputes between the two families.

They have always passed off peaceably enough until last week, however, when the line was so crowded with laundry that it seemed impossible to get another rag on it. The two families then got into a quarrel in which Mrs. Levine says Miller used a dishpan with such force against her head and face as to bruise it severely. She then had her alleged assailant arrested.

Not a Financial Success.

Music Hall held a small audience last Thursday when Rev. H. W. McKane, of the borough, gave a lecture with illustrated views of the Spanish American war. The views were first-class and the descriptive talk was an enjoyment to those present. During the evening Mrs. McKane rendered two vocal solos, accompanied by Wm. E. MacClymont. From a financial standpoint the affair was not a success, but otherwise it was in every particular a pleasure.

Was His Own Surgeon.

Charles Barris, of Cottage place, who cut his hand a few days ago while at work tinning a cornice on a house on Somerset street, did not go to a physician to have the wound attended to, but going into a tailor shop borrowed a strong needle and some silk and set about drawing the piece of flesh together himself. The amateur surgeon was quite successful, and the wound is healing nicely.

Illness of a Trained Nurse

Miss Valentine, a trained nurse, who has been residing at Morristown, and who was taken ill at that place, was brought to Plainfield Friday morning and removed to the home of J. P. Northrop, on Rockview terrace, where she will remain for the present. Dr. E. W. Hedges is in attendance.

Election to Fill a Vacancy.

There was a meeting of Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, last Friday. One candidate was elected to membership. An election was held to fill a vacancy in the officers. Louis Morbing was made first sergeant and S. J. Robinson second sergeant.

An Approaching Marriage

The marriage of Miss Anna Kyle, of this city, to Mr. Jomini, also of this city, will occur in the East Third Street mission October 4th at 6:30 p. m. The couple will leave immediately after the ceremony for the west where they will reside.

A Dunellen Man's Toot.

Paul Kratzel, a resident of Dunellen, was found hopelessly drunk on Somerset street last evening by Marshal Wise. The man deposited $10 as security for his appearance for trial this evening at 7 o'clock.

MERRY WEDDING BELLS.

PRETTY NUPTIAL AFFAIR IN HOPE CHAPEL THURSDAY.

Miss Annie Hangliter is Now Mrs. Adam Angerbauer—Married Under a Bell of Golden Rod, Which Really Rang.

The wedding bells rang merrily in Hope Chapel Thursday for the first time in many months at the marriage of Miss Annie Hangliter, daughter of Robert P. Hangliter, of 225 Monroe avenue, to Adam Angerbauer, of 518 East Third street, a popular young clerk in Smith Brothers' grocery store. The young couple were united in matrimony by the pastor of the chapel, Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, at 7:30 o'clock, in the presence of about sixty invited guests, and many more friends of both the young people, who came in to witness the ceremony.

The couple are both well-known to the society of the West End, and were started out on their matrimonial life with best wishes from a host of friends. They will reside for the present at the groom's home, on East Third street, but later expect to go to housekeeping.

The wedding party, consisting of the ushers, maid-of-honor, bride and her father, entered the chapel from the rear, and moved down the main aisle to the front where they were met by the groom and his best man. The pulpit was decorated with golden rod and greens, and directly over the heads of the bride and groom hung a marriage bell of golden rod, in which was hidden a dinner bell. Just at that point in the ceremony when the clergyman placed the ring on the bride's finger, some one behind the scenes pulled an invisible wire and set the dinner bell to ringing.

Consternation reigned on all sides for a few moments, but after some explanations the ceremony proceeded, and the minister gave his blessing on the alliance.

The bride wore a pretty gown of white organdie, and carried a bunch of bridal roses. Miss Laura E. Hangliter, the bride's sister, was maid-of-honor, and was dressed in flowered organdie. She too carried flowers. The ushers were Edward Hangliter, of Plainfield, and Wm. Hangliter, of this city, brothers of the bride; James Slorah and W. B. Sutton. Henry Angerbauer, the groom's brother, was best man.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, and an opportunity given the guests to inspect the presents. They were numerous and consisted of household furniture, a handsome silver service from an aunt, a couch from the groom's fellow clerks, a pretty wall-pocket from the bride's Sunday-school teacher, and other gifts from numerous friends. Supper was served and the couple received the congratulations modestly. There were present guests from Buffalo, Cleveland, Philadelphia and this city.

The wedding march at the chapel was played by Councilman William N. Runyon.

$150 BUGGY WRECKED.

An Exciting Runaway That Occurred in Washington Valley Thursday.

A runaway occurred in Washington Valley Thursday in which a $150 buggy, recently purchased by Harry Acker, was wrecked beyond repair. Acker, who lives just beyond the mountains, had harnessed a spirited horse to the buggy preparatory to taking a morning drive.

Acker had just left the animal's head for a moment, when something about the bridle gave way. This frightened the horse and he started away on a mad run, dragging the buggy behind him. Round and around the barnyard he ran, the vehicle catching against posts and the side of the barn until there was nothing left of the buggy except a few odd pieces still attached to the shafts.

The horse finally stopped and suffered himself to be disentangled from the wreckage. As there was no one in the buggy, there was no one to check the animal's flight.

NEW COLORED CHURCH.

Of Methodist Denomination With a Minister from Philadelphia.

A new colored church has been organized in this city. It is called the African-American Methodist Episcopal church, and they have secured a meeting place in the old East Third Street mission building on East Third street. This new church has been organized about one month and there are now eleven members on the church roll. Rev. J. W. Wesley, of Philadelphia, is the pastor, and he is working hard to secure a large membership. Services are held during the week and every Sunday morning and evening. Last evening a social and supper was given at the church by the members.

Important Appointment.

Announcement is made of the appointment of Dr. H. K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, by the President, as a commissioner to go to Porto Rico to investigate and report on the internal affairs of that island.

Charles E. Buell, of Craig place, has been selected as his secretary. They will sail for Porto Rico October 5th.

COSTLY TUNE PLAYED IN A FANWOOD HOUSE.

Clever Ruse of a Sneak Thief to Get Into a House.

SLICK YOUNG MAN, INDEED.

DUPED THE SERVANT AND STOLE BOOTY WORTH $150.

While Mr. and Mrs. William Stanberry, of Fanwood, Were Away From Home a Young Man Posing as a Piano Tuner Visited the House and Was Admitted by the Servant Girl.

He came to tune the piano, he said, and thus gained entrance to the home of William Stanberry, of Fanwood, on Wednesday afternoon for the house servant suspected no harm. It was by far the most expensive tuning that Mr. Stanberry ever paid for. The prepossessing young tuner, after drumming on the piano for a time, quietly ransacked the house and then departed with some $150 worth of valuables.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanberry were away at the time and the servant was left alone. The stranger came, well-dressed and of gentlemanly appearance. Mr. Stanberry had sent him to tune the piano, he told the servant. After working over it for a short time, he sent the maid on an errand. He then improved his opportunity and gathered in the jewelry that he could find. The maid returned and he soon departed, bowing himself out.

When the family returned later the theft was discovered and an investigation made. Mrs. Stanberry was greatly relieved to find that the thief had overlooked a chamois bag hanging on her dressing case and containing three gold watches and her valuable diamonds, valued in all at $500.

Mr. Stanberry notified the police of Plainfield and Elizabeth of the robbery and sent a description of the thief. The slick young stranger disappeared completely, however, and no trace of him has been found.

HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETICS.

A Field Day For High School Boys In Prospect This Fall.

Interest in general athletics among the boys of the Plainfield High School is on the increase. The annual meeting of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association was held at the school house Thursday afternoon. The following officers were elected for the year: President, Claude Edwards; vice president, Roy H. Radford; secretary, Walter Squires; treasurer, Henry Cuming.

It was decided that the High School would not have an eleven in the contest for the football championship of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association. A committee, composed of Messrs. Colbourn and Henry Cuming, was appointed to look into the advisability of holding a closed meet at the Crescent Oval this fall. They will report at the next meeting.

EXPERIENCES IN THE KLONDYKE.

J. P. Wolfe Hears From His Brother Who is After Gold.

William C. Wolfe, brother of John P. Wolfe, of Rose Hill Farm, Somerset county, who left this city for the Klondyke region, has written to his brother under date of August 9th. Mr. Wolfe does not speak very flattering of the conditions and circumstances of those that are located near him. He says that very little gold is being secured where he is and that the average amount obtained is from 50 to 65 cents per day for two men. He speaks of the trouble the white people have had with the Indians for the reason that the former killed one horse belonging to an Indian. He also says that many people who have gone further into the Klondyke region than they have are returning with precious little gold. He says that he is not sick of his job, and that he will stay as long as he can.

FOR A PUBLIC PARK.

John Taylor Johnston Farm Suggested as a Suitable Site.

The borough correspondent of the Bound Brook State Centre contributes the following item this week:

Sometime in the next century, when all the short-sighted Jerusalems are roaming about here and in their last sleep, the citizens of Plainfield will be petitioning and demanding the purchase of the John Taylor Johnston farm for a public park suitable for the community. It contains 300 acres of land, running along Front street in Plainfield for nearly half a mile and thence back into Somerset county and Mountain and into Washington Valley. Lakes and brooks abound and most of the property is now a park.

AN INFORMAL TEA.

Pleasant Social Event at the Home of Miss Wood.

A very charming informal tea was given Thursday afternoon by Miss Katherine Wood and Miss Anne Miller, daughter of Major Miller, of LaGrande avenue, at the home of Miss Wood's father, Francis Wood, 313 Franklin place. The assistants in receiving were Miss Wood and Miss Mary Miller, sisters of the hostesses, Misses Marion Bowen, Mabel Pierson, Annie Miller, Margaret Tracy, Gertrude Baker and Edith Gilbert.

FEW PLAINFIELDERS TO PLAY FOOTBALL.

Players Are Working and Can't Spare Time.

MANY GONE TO COLLEGE.

THE PLAYING WILL BE CONFINED TO THE HOLIDAYS.

Almost All of Last Year's Team is Unable to Get Away From Business Duties—Will Meet Good Teams on Election Day and Thanksgiving Day—Rutgers Team Wants to Play.

There is a general feeling of regret among those who are interested in outdoor sports that Plainfield will not see a football eleven in regular games during the season. There are none, however, more disappointed than the players themselves who have found much enjoyment in the game. The present situation precludes the possibility of an eleven of any strength to play regularly every week. Lack of time on the part of the managers and the players would make any attempt farcical.

Early in the season, there seemed a great chance for Plainfield to put a representative eleven on the field. Both Elizabeth and Orange had given up their big teams and were far nearer in line with Plainfield. Then several of the less powerful college teams, including Rutgers, Stevens Institute and New York University, had expressed a willingness to meet the Plainfield boys on the gridiron. The Knickerbocker Athletic Club and the San Remos, who are practically the New York A. C., were quite anxious to schedule games.

When the supporters of the team began to count up the available material, it began to appear that there were many losses from the usual squad without sufficient gains to make up for them. The players of last year's Alls team, while thoroughly up in the game, are still too light to be of much use on the big teams. Behind the line the losses were the greatest. George Cathcart, one of the mainstays of the team, will be unable to play at all on account of business duties that will occupy him Saturday afternoons. Harry McGee, who fitted so nicely into the position of full back last year, will be unable to play Saturdays for the same reason. Thomas U. Smith, the well-known half, is also kept off the gridiron on account of business. Teddy Freeman will be unable to resume his old place behind the line as his health will not permit. Darling finds business and health a double reason to keep him off the field.

Lou Waring, good at either quarter or end, cannot play but every other week, while Roy T. Phillips, captain of last year's Alls team and sub-quarter, is now a business man in New York. Henry Ryder is not available for end. Edgar I. Sarrell is still ready to line up at end. George Snediker may be able to don the moleskin suit if his studies at the New York University Law School do not interfere. Fletcher Hallock and Will McClure, the tackles, are both available.

All the candidates for the positions of guards are gone. Business duties will prevent both Ed. Brown and "Shorty" Milne from playing. Nathan E. Lewis is away at Stevens Institute. Thomas A. Cuming will play, but he is anxious to give up his old position at centre and try for tackle, for which he is far better qualified, being much too light for the central position on the line. Then there are other candidates who will be unable to play for various reasons.

Rather than make a farce of the team, it was deemed best to give up the idea of a regular schedule and confine the efforts of the supporters to two games, one Election Day and another Thanksgiving. Most of the players can get off on both of those occasions and then there will be considerable material available in the Plainfield boys returning from college.

It was intended to have the team play under the management of the Riverdale Field Club, but nothing will be done in the matter now. Last year's management will look after those two games and they will form the only important games here. While the teams for those occasions have not yet been settled upon, they will probably be Rutger's College or Stevens Institute and the San Remos or Long Branch A. C.

Should be Protected.

At the Plainfield Public Library there is on exhibition a beautiful coral brain, the gift of a friend. This costly piece of work is left on a small table entirely exposed. It should be placed under a glass case, and thus ensure its safety. Anyone so disposed can chip pieces off and thus destroy its perfectness.

One Candidate Initiated.

A very interesting meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., was held Thursday, at which time one member was initiated. In the good of the order those present had an unusually good time.

STATE CONVENTION WAS OF ONE MIND.

A More Harmonious Gathering Never Took Place.

VOORHEES THE ONLY MAN.

REPUBLICANS UNITED IN THEIR SUPPORT OF "WAR GOVERNOR."

Union County and Roger Murray Were Prominent in Trenton—County Delegation Did Not Get Choice Seats—Murray's Gold Ballot for Voorhees—Rooms Started in Somerset Delegation.

Never in all the annals of either political party in Jersey was there a convention like the one held Thursday by the Republicans.

There was not the slightest suggestion of anything but the most satisfactory amicable understanding among the three hundred odd Republicans who gathered there from all parts of the State from Cape May to Sussex. There was a unity of ideas on the part of the G. O. P. ites that was remarkable to behold. Foster M. Voorhees, the "War Governor," was the logical candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination and to him every delegate looked. There were other aspirants for the honors, but they seemed to recognize that Voorhees was the man for the place and turned to and lent a hand in rallying the party around him.

It was a remarkable convention and everybody remarked on the fact. While it was a foregone conclusion for several days before the convention that Voorhees would surely be nominated, there was no certainty but that other points might come up to cause trouble in the ranks. If there were, nobody saw them, and the political sea was calm indeed.

As Foster Voorhees came from Union county, it was eminently proper for the delegation from that county to assume the role of an important body. The little silk badges, proclaiming Voorhees as candidate for the nomination for Governor, worn in 1895, were rejuvenated by many of the Union county delegation and worn in addition to their fancy delegation emblem of silk. As chairman of the county committee, Charles N. Codding, of Westfield, was a very busy man. But he was not a whit more busy than Plainfield's Assemblyman, Roger P. Murray. Murray went down the night before and was on his feet most of the time after his arrival at Trenton button-holing, or being button-holed. He took an active part in the preliminary work of the convention, and was prominent in the council-of-war in which the county honors at the convention were partitioned out.

Murray was the most active of the Plainfield delegates, nearly half of which did not arrive until it was almost time for the convention to open. At the county caucus, held at the Trenton House in the morning, neither the Second nor Fourth wards were represented.

The scheme of a gold ballot originated with Assemblyman Murray, although he passed it off as a gift of the Plainfield delegates. It was a handsome gold gold plate, properly engraved, and gotten up for Murray by R. H. Radford, of Plainfield. It was a great pity that through a misunderstanding the ballot was not produced at the opportune moment, as the ballot cast by the convention for Voorhees had to be written on a scrap of paper.

Owing to the prominence that Union county attained as the home of the candidate, the Union delegation considered that they were entitled to one of the choice positions in the Opera House. Their expectations were in vain, however. The committee from the State committee, placed them on the main floor but up under the gallery where they were almost hidden. It was agreed that when Voorhees should be named the delegation should make themselves heard in some way, but the hubub was so great on all sides that any special demonstration on the part of the Union county men was impossible.

Congressman Charles N. Fowler was selected as a worthy citizen of Union county to nominate her man, and he did it very successfully. Fowler has quite a dramatic manner about him that was particularly appropriate on this occasion. His speech brought forth roars of applause.

As there wasn't anything to fight about regarding the Gubernatorial candidate, it was expected that there would be schoudburst of foundry booms for county and township offices among the different delegations. Some of the delegates found much to hear from each other in that way, but the Union county group was particularly free from such affairs. Judge Cross was way in the lead for the Senatorial nomination to fill out the term left vacant by the proposed resignation of Voorhees. Voorhees intends to offer it at once, for he is confident of election and does not want to complicate matters by having two offices at once.

There was some feeling about to see just how Fowler stood for another term to Congress. There was a little effort against him in Hudson, while some of the Plainfield Republicans were rumored to be still sore over his choice in the race for the postmastership of the Plainfield office. Most of the Eighth district, however, expressed itself very strongly in favor of the present incumbent, and present appearances point that he will be renominated with but little if any fight.

The delegates from Somerset had much to think about. There were some who prophesied another collision between L. A. Thompson, the Somerville leader, and Senator Reed. Thompson did not put in his appearance and rumor said that he was waiting for the county convention. As a result, Senator Reed was made chairman of the delegation without contest and marshalled his forces in good order. There were several other matters to occupy their attention as well. Assemblyman VanDoren, of Millstone, was prominent in the delegation. His present aim appears to be the nomination for sheriff. George Cooper, of Somerville, is also mentioned for the same place. Both were carefully looking over the ground yesterday.

A story from the wilds of Somerset has it that Sheriff W. H. H. Wyckoff, of Somerville, and Assemblyman VanDoren are anxious to swap offices at the next election. Whether Wyckoff will make any fight for the Assembly nomination is a matter for conjecture. Another little boom for the latter coveted place was started by Edward Cooper, one of the little gathering of Republicans up in Warrenville. He is reported to be ready and waiting to have his name go up for the Assembly.

Now that the State convention of the Republicans is over, all eyes will be turned toward the Democratic party to see who will represent them in the fight against Foster Voorhees. The Democrats will hold their convenhere Wednesday of next week. Then convention and Inter-State Fair will divide the honors.

YOUNG CYCLIST HURT.

ROLAND CHANDOR HAD A NARROW ESCAPE FROM SERIOUS INJURY.

Was Upset by Horse and Then Two Wheels of Vehicle Passed Over His Legs—Mrs. William Smith Was Driving.

Although two wheels of a carriage passed over his leg Friday afternoon, Roland Chandor, of East Fifth street, is able to move around today. Young Chandor was riding his wheel on Watchung avenue yesterday afternoon, when he encountered Mrs. William Palmer Smith, of Belvidere avenue, who was driving her carriage. The lad says that she was on the left-hand side of the street and so he supposed that she would turn out. Finding that she was not going to, he attempted to turn around and get out of the way. Then the horse struck him, and boy and wheel went down in a heap in the roadway.

Before any of the witnesses of the accident could reach him, the frightened horse went on and two of the wheels passed over young Chandor's leg. He was badly bruised but escaped serious injury. The wheel was wrecked.

Break in Fire-Alarm Wire.

Friday afternoon there was a break in the fire-alarm system in the borough, and Electrician Julius J. Stahl succeeded in locating the trouble on Grandview avenue, where the wires were crossed by an electric light wire.

The Kidneys

are the seat or the starting point of many maladies, all of them serious, all more or less painful, and all of them tending, unless cured, to a fatal end. No organs of the body are more delicate or more sensitive than the kidneys. When symptoms of disease appear in them not a moment is to be lost if health is to be restored. The best way to treat the kidneys is through the blood, cleansing it from the poisonous matter which is usually at the bottom of kidney complaints. For this purpose there is no remedy equal to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For many years I have been a constant sufferer from kidney trouble, and have tried a number of largely advertised kidney cures without benefit. At last a friend advised me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The use of eight bottles of this remedy entirely cured my malady."—MARY MILLER, 1253 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

TROLLEY OPENING WAS WINE-IMMERSED.

Auspicious Running of First Street Car in Dunellen.

TIME OF BIG JOLLIFICATION.

AFTER THE CAR WAS RUN OVER THE LINE BANQUET WAS HELD.

Motor was in Charge of Superintendent Radel, of the Brunswick Traction Company—Car From the Plainfield Company—Mayor Brakeley Broke Bottle of Wine Over Dashboard—Banquet Served.

The people of the borough of Dunellen, together with the leading residents of Plainfield, Bound Brook and New Brunswick, united Thursday in one grand outburst of enthusiasm. There was fireworks, huzzahs and general jollification. The cause of this demonstration was the formal opening of the trolley road through the borough, a thing which the residents have waited for long and patiently. The auspicious moment arrived and was attendant with all the signs of success that anyone could desire. All along the line of the trolley road handsome decorations could be seen, while the burning of red fire and the display of fireworks helped to make the occasion one long to be remembered.

Long before 8 o'clock those who had invitations gathered at the corner of Jerusalem avenue, where the Plainfield trolley turned off, and waited for the trolley car that was to take them for the first time over the new road, which is 1 5-8 mile long. In the crowd was Mayor Brakeley and all of the local Councilmen, while there were many other prominent citizens.

It was a little after 8 o'clock when car No. 19 of the Plainfield Street Railway Company made its appearance.

The car was beautifully decorated with red, white and blue, Japanese lanterns, etc., all the work of Motorman William Brown and Conductor Phillip Maguire, both of whom brought the car to this place from Plainfield. The car was filled with many prominent Plainfielders.

After everything was in readiness, Edward Radel, of the Brunswick Traction Company, took charge of the car on the front platform and ran it over the road for the first time. On the platform with him was Mayor Brakeley, of this place; Superintendent Adlemann, of the Plainfield company; Mr. Bound, of New Brunswick, and a representative of The Daily Press.

Mr. Radel presented Mayor Brakeley with a bottle of choice wine, and as the car passed from Plainfield into the borough, His Honor broke the bottle of wine over the dashboard of the car.

Dr. J. T. Fritts, vice-president of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, made a few remarks and complimented Mr. Radel. He said that the borough ought to be proud of their trolley. He assured the Brunswick company that the Plainfield company would continue to extend any courtesy possible.

Alderman Daley, of New Brunswick, made a rousing speech, which was full of praise and commendation for the Brunswick Traction Company and the pretty town of New Brunswick—the hub of the universe—according to his idea.

Other remarks were made by Councilmen Schneider, Wilcox, Wyncoop and W. J. Wingas, of this place; Alexander Findlay, Judge DeMeza, of Plainfield; H. B. Willis, Sheriff Litterst, Mr. Schlesinger, of New Brunswick, and George O. Stevens, of Plainfield, entertained the crowd with remarks and songs.

The car then sped along over the new road in a perfect manner. At various points along the road the car stopped and there was great demonstration by the people.

The car passed on to the end of the borough limits and then returned to Taylor's Hotel, where the guests got off to accept the generous hospitality of the Brunswick Traction Company. Once gathered around the festive board Mr. Radel made Alderman Daley, of New Brunswick, "toastmaster." In accepting the honor Mr. Jacobs thanked Mr. Radel and then returned the compliment by calling on the great trolley magnate. Mr. Radel made a few remarks, in which he thanked the people of Dunellen for giving him a franchise, and also explained the reason for delay in operating the road, mainly the slowness on the part of certain officials.

Mayor Brakeley was then called on and he extended the glad hand to the Traction Company.

Among the prominent guests present were Dr. J. T. Fritts, J. H. Smith, Geo. O. Stevens, Judge DeMeza, Andrew Love, J. J. Kenney, Charles Smith, Harry Werner, J. A. Blatz, John Brown, Chief of Police Grant, Alexander Findlay, Frank Hedden, John Adlemann, of Plainfield; Freeholders Mobus and Andrew Lutkins, of North Plainfield; Mayor Brakeley and all of the Dunellen Councilmen, George Day, O. A. Douglass, W. J. Wingas, Alvah Gray, James Craig, Abner Corieli, Postmaster Corieli, Mr. Brice, Adam Dealaman, W. E. Terry, Harry Swackhamer and Freeholder Gise, of this place; Mr. McElroy, of New York; Charles Sebring, of Greenbrook, and many prominent officials of New Brunswick.

STORMY SCENE IN COURT.

ADAM FRITZ HAS TO DISCONTINUE SUIT BEFORE JUSTICE MATTISON.

Justice Smalley Declined to Discontinue an Action That was First Started Before Him, and Which He Had Adjourned.

There was a stormy scene in Justice Mattison's court Thursday morning when the case of Adam Fritz against Miers Compton came up for trial. The suit is for dispossessing Compton from one of Fritz's houses on Fritz avenue, and was a repetition of a suit started in Justice Smalley's court several weeks ago.

There were a number of points about the case which the lawyers interested, Murphy & Blatz, for the plaintiff, and W. G. DeMeza, for the defendant, differed. When the case came up for trial in Justice Smalley's court two weeks ago, the defendant filed an affidavit stating that a material witness was out of the State, and asked for an adjournment for thirty days. This was granted.

The plaintiff then went to Justice Mattison and instituted another suit against Compton, on the same grounds as the old one, thinking in this way to bring about a trial in a week or ten days. This suit was set for trial yesterday. When the case was called Mr. Blatz asked to have it dismissed.

Mr. DeMeza, whose client was in this way being sued in two courts for the same thing, objected to this and asked for an adjournment, intending in the meantime to bring some action against the plaintiff, Fritz, for thus suing his client in two courts at the same time.

After a heated argument on both sides the Justice decided to dismiss the suit, and thus leave Justice Smalley to continue to have cognizance over the original action.

Mr. Blatz, Fritz's counsel, said that when the adjournment was granted by Justice Smalley, he told him to dismiss the suit, and supposed the Justice had done so, and so began action over again in another court.

A HOME WEDDING.

Miss Maggie Bergen Becomes the Wife of an Elizabeth Man.

The marriage of Miss Maggie Bergen, daughter of Edward Bergen, of 658 South Second street, to George Warner, of Elizabeth, was celebrated Sept. 21st, at the home of the bride at 8 o'clock in the presence of about forty relatives and friends from this city and Elizabth.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, the Episcopal service being used.

The bride was attended by Miss Elizabeth Mills, of Roselle, as bridemaid, while Mr. Weber, of Elizabeth, acted as best man.

The bride was gowned in a traveling dress, with hat to match. She and her husband left the city on the 10 o'clock Blue Line train last evening for a short honeymoon, after which they will reside in Elizabeth.

The coach that conveyed the bride and groom to the North Avenue station was decorated with tin cans, palls, bells and lots of white ribbon, and as the coach passed through town no one could help but notice the rig, and a large crowd was attracted to the railroad station to see the couple off.

CAUGHT THE POPULAR FANCY.

J. W. Johnson Has Been Very Successful in Making Souvenir Spoons.

In all the multitude of souvenir spoons now on the market, there is none more tasteful and satisfactory than the "Clara Barton" spoon designed and made by J. Wesley Johnson, of this city, a prominent New York jeweler. It has caught the public fancy in the short time that it has been out and promises to be very popular. Edward White, the Plainfield merchant will sell them in this city.

Mr. Johnson has met with remarkable success in the manufacture of souvenir spoons. Just after the Maine was blown up he placed on the market a spoon with a picture of the Maine in the bowl. The handle was of an appropriate design. As a result, a thousand gross of these spoons were sold before the demand ceased.

The "Clara Barton" spoon has a gold bowl with the head of Miss Barton engraved in it. The handle has a red enamel cross upon it and the words, "Red Cross Society. Clara Barton."

State Council Daughters of America.

The State Council, Daughters of America, will convene at Trenton, Thursday, October, 20th, in Masonic Hall. Martha Washington Council, No. 23, of this city, will be represented by Mrs. Biker and Mrs. Eliza Radin.

A MAIN ROADWAY IS NOW FAST CRUMBLING.

Dry Weather Has Ruined a Principal Thoroughfare.

CAN'T BE REPAIRED NOW.

PARK AVENUE, FROM NINTH STREET TO CITY LINE, IN BAD SHAPE.

The Roadway Has Crumbled to Sand, Making Wheeling There Very Poor—Will Have to Be Re-macadamized—City Can't Do it Now—There Are Other Streets Showing Similar Signs.

Those Plainfielders who have had occasion to drive or wheel out Park avenue from Ninth street to the city line cannot help being impressed by the very poor condition of the roadway. The macadam surface, once so firm and smooth, has now crumbled into sand and is so rough and uneven that cyclists find progress there decidedly unpleasant. Among those who noticed the roadway when it first began to crumble was Councilman Elliott T. Barrows, chairman of the street committee. A conference with Street Commissioner Gavett followed and the need of improving that portion of Park avenue considered. It will not be until next spring that anything will be done to the street, however.

The greatest enemy to the macadam road is the dry weather and it is the dry weather that has been the chief agency in reducing Park avenue to its present condition. As long as the top dressing of the macadam remains moist at all it is knitted together like cement. As soon as it becomes thoroughly dry for any length of time it surely crumbles and the end of the road is not far off. It was the long spells of dry weather that has ruined this and many of the county roads in this section. Most of the city streets are watered every day or so and their life greatly lengthened, but where the rain is the only wetting that the road receives, the dry weather days have.

Councilman Barrows says that it will be impossible to patch Park avenue in the locality mentioned this fall, as it will have to be re-macadamized to do any good. Any kind of repairing or patching would hardly last while it was being put down. Under the present state of affairs, it will be impossible for the city to re-macadam Park avenue this year, but the street committee hope to see the work done next. Park avenue is one of the principal thoroughfares of the city, and is one of the three principal ways over which the army of wheels and vehicles pass in coming or going.

West Front street, near Grove street, is already beginning to crumble, although put in good condition nearly a year ago. Other streets in the city are fast getting in that condition. The advocates of a permanent pavement for the streets in the business section point out these facts as strong arguments for the adoption of their schemes.

MR. CHAMBERLIN HOME.

Return After Reporting the War for the New York Sun.

E. O. Chamberlin, of Madison avenue, has received word that his son, Wilbur J. Chamberlin, a New York Sun correspondent, who was wrecked off Cuba Sept. 8th, has arrived in Jersey City, his home. Mr. Chamberlin and the crew of the press boat were picked up by a passing vessel and taken to Key West. After being detained in quarantine for four days he was released and came north as soon as he could get transportation.

Mr. Chamberlin went to Cuba at the outbreak of the war and was in the thick of the fight from start to finish. Although in the fever district, Mr. Chamberlain is in perfect heath and has kept well all through the summer.

CEMETERY FOR A SHORT CUT.

School Children Said to Use Evergreen Cemetery in a Wrong Manner.

Complaint has been made to the authorities that the school children are using the Evergreen cemetery, on Plainfield avenue, as a short cut from their homes to school. In this way the cemetery has become a playground for the children, who desecrate the graves and run up and down the paths and roads.

The people who live in that vicinity are most all Roman Catholics, who have no interest in the old cemetery, but when those who have those friends and relatives sleep beneath the sod, they feel hurt and pained at the little reverence that seems to be shown the burial plot.

An Informal Affair.

The Misses Wilcox, of Fairview avenue, gave an informal social and reception at their home last Thursday in honor of their cousin, Miss Minnie W. Doremus, of East Orange. There were about fifteen guests present and an evening of great pleasure was had by all. Refreshments was served by the hostesses and thus an event long to be remembered came to end.

UPS AND DOWNS IN LIFE OF A SOLDIER.

Chas. A. Peterson's War Record Show Vicissitudes in Army.

ON THE MOVE CONSTANTLY.

LAST LETTER RECEIVED SHOWS HIM TO BE IN PORTO RICO.

In His Letters He Did Not Complain in a Severe Manner of His Lot as a Soldier—He Wants a Small American Flags Sent to Him to Present to the Natives—Likes the Climate—He is Anxious to Get Home.

As illustrating the vicissitudes of army life, the following notes from the experiences of Charles A. Peterson, of Company B, U. S. Engineer Corps, are interesting.

Mr. Peterson is well-known in Plainfield as the son of the Watchung avenue florist, and as the efficient assistant of Street Commissioner Gavett. The notes are taken from letters received by members of Mr. Peterson's family.

He enlisted in the latter part of May, was assigned to duty at Willett's Point, L. I. Ten days of the stay at this point were spent in the hospital, recovering from lameness caused by "Government shoes."

July 6th, found him at Old Point Comfort, after a sea voyage and a march through a drenching rain.

Two days later he was at Newport News, awaiting the transport boat, "Leelanaw Duchesne." While here, he saw many of the famous war vessels of our navy, including the uncompleted "Kentucky" and "Kearsage."

On the 11th we heard from him on the high seas near Charleston, S. C. At the latter place the soldier boys were well treated, receiving grapes, peaches and other welcome additions to their military menu. Being invited out to breakfast with some of his friends, he had the honor of an introduction to the Mayor's daughter.

On July 31st he writes from Ponce, on the south coast of Porto Rico, and corroborates the reports that the inhabitants of that island welcomed the arrival of the Americans. He refers to the abundance of pineapples, bananas, etc., and says "all we have to do is to go after them."

On August 8th he writes that they are expecting orders to move on to San Juan, and requests that some American flags be sent for him to present to the natives.

Rumors of peace began to reach the army, but there was difficulty in obtaining definite information.

Charlie considers the climate "fine," never warmer than ninety-five degrees, and quite cool in the evenings.

The last letter received was dated August 28th, and our soldier boy was then looking forward to an early return to the United States (mainland) and a furlough of twenty days.

All the later letters are sent as "soldiers' mail," endorsed as such by one of the army officers, the only stamp being a "postage due."

It was seldom that Mr. Peterson could give his family any address to which they could direct their letters, and, indeed, the troops were never certain where they were going or where they would go.

The letters are singularly free from complaints of the hardships of army life, a single reference to the food furnished and a bare mention of a few days of serious illness on his arrival in Porto Rico, being the only cases in which he speaks of the unpleasant part of his experience.

Fireman Taken Suddenly Ill.

The fireman of the engine of the train from New York due here at 8:19 Saturday, was taken ill just as the train rounded this city, so Richard Titus, of Easton, the rear brakeman, mounted the engine and fired to the end of the run.

Going Right Into Dunellen.

The cars of the Plainfield Street Railway Company are now running as far as the railroad station in Dunellen. They are running under twelve minutes headway.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Mr. Martine and the Senatorship.

Whenever there comes a time in the course of political events in Union county that there is an office vacant and there is no Democrat who aspires openly and above-board for the nomination to it, it always seems to behoove the political reporters of New Jersey to connect the name of James E. Martine, of this city, with the nomination. Just now the reporters in their anxiety to name some Democrat for the vacancy in the Senatorial seat to be resigned by Mr. Voorhees, have, as usual, struck the name of the "Farmer Orator" as a probable candidate.

We have no knowledge of Mr. Martine's intentions in the political field and possess no authority to speak for him, but we think that he has no more idea of becoming a candidate for Senator from Union county than he has of going to the Klondike. As a matter of fact, the genial "Farmer Orator" has lately eschewed politics as a part of his activities. Mr. Martine is one of the largest real estate owners in Plainfield and has a world of details to look after if his property is made a paying investment. Since the early summer months he has been paying strict attention to these personal affairs, and has given but little thought to furthering political ambitions.

Mr. Martine is not the man, however, that can become passive in political affairs during a campaign, and he will no doubt do his share of the work for the Democrats in the approaching contest for the Gubernatorial chair, but so far as accepting a nomination for Senator from Union county we think it is the furthest of the "Farmer Orator's" aspirations.

The Nomination of Voorhees.

The duty of the Republican State convention at Trenton Thursday was merely a perfunctory one in naming Foster Voorhees for their candidate for Governor, for the fact of his becoming the standard-bearer of his party in the approaching campaign was a foregone conclusion long before the delegates were even chosen.

The naming of Mr. Voorhees is the most gratifying thing which the Republicans of Union county have ever experienced. Identified with its affairs ever since he first entered the world to make his own way, mingling democratically among its citizens, honored as greatly as the county could honor with positions of trust and importance, popular among all classes for his personal charms, Voorhees was a favorite son in all that appellation implies in the political vocabulary.

Now that the nomination has actually been accomplished the Republicans certainly feel that they have the strongest candidate that could have been named and the Democrats are assured of the fact that they have a foe worthy of their best mettle. The selection of a man for the chief executive of New Jersey such as Mr. Voorhees is will necessitate the Democrats bringing out their very best Gubernatorial timber, and this, of course, ensures the commonwealth an administration for the next three years that will at once advise the people of good government, no matter which party wins at the polls.

A Good Thing All-around.

Dunellen people evidently anticipate great things from the trolley in that place, judging by the enthusiastic reception which they gave the first car as it made a trip over the route Thursday. The operation of this line of the Brunswick Traction Company, however, not only means a splendid improvement for the town it passes directly through, but it is also an auspicious event for Plainfield.

The opening of this new line of transit for suburban county will mean increased business for the Plainfield merchants. While it does not offer an entirely new business territory to Plainfield it certainly will afford better facilities for the residents of the section to come to this mart with trifling inconvenience and slight expense. That will make the visits of the suburban population more frequent and as the trolley will be a mighty contributing force for the building up of the surrounding county with which it is in touch, the consequences will mean not only a permanent but an increasing traffic to Plainfield as the metropolis of the whole of Somerset county and a very large section of Middlesex county.

The News' story of an Oak Tree farmhand suddenly finding $10,000 worth of Spanish doubloons sounded very "fishy."

It was a good thing that the reporter put "Mr. Jeems" out of the country before he startled the world with the thrilling story. To verify the alleged facts of the story would be harder than to find the proverbial needle in the haystack.

Mayoralty Talk.

The lack of spirited interest in the Gubernatorial campaign has caused an early discussion of candidates for the municipal election to be held next December. From the mutterings of discontent heard concerning the Republican administration of affairs in the city the Citizens' movement is likely to receive a strong impetus this year, and will undoubtedly be even more powerful than it was a year ago.

Dr. Cornelius D. Leveridge has been mentioned as a good candidate for Mayor for the Citizens', and the members of the Asbestos Club, of which he is one of the shining lights, are urging him to enter the canvass for the office with all the persuasive powers they possess. Mr. Leveridge is averse to the step, however, and says that he will not become an aspirant for municipal honors. During his long residence at Cranford he filled many of the local offices with benefit to the town and credit to himself. One of the considerations that induced him to remove to this city, he says, was to escape those public duties, and now he doesn't propose to diverge from his resolution.

The name of Robert D. Cook is heard as a possible candidate for the Republican nomination of Mayor. Though he has only recently become a resident of the city, formerly residing in the borough, his friends urge that he has a ready knowledge of city affairs and needs, and that his well-known capacity as a business man would commend him to a large number of voters.

Prohibitionists on Hand.

Meeting year after year with no hope of victory to encourage them on, but just as resolutely following out what they consider their line of public duty, the Prohibitionists are a great example of perseverance. It appears that the Prohibitionists recently held a meeting in Somerset county, but for an item which appeared in a column of other temperance notes it is not likely that the nominations made by the cold water people would have ever seen the light of day.

It appears that the convention was held at Bound Brook Sept. 17th, and resulted in the following nominations being made:

Assembly—John H. Rhodes, Boyceshill.
Sheriff—Geo. H. Murphy, Bound Brook.
Coroners—Wm.H. Lunger, North Plainfield, and Samuel Hann, South Bound Brook.

Wm. H. Esche and John J. Voorhees were re-elected county chairman and secretary.

The Prohibitionists are always optomistic if anything. Some years their candidates poll more and some years less votes than at previous elections, but somehow or other they are always feeling that the future holds out great things for them in the way of embodying their principles into the political institutions of the country. A Somerset county correspondent says of the situation in that bailiwick:

The outlook for prohibition work is better than it has been for years. Every township should be represented in the list of workers. Public meetings will be held throughout the county, literature will be scattered and an aggressive campaign made against the saloon and saloon politics.

Democratic Plans.

The sub-committee of the Democratic State committee appointed to select the chairman of the convention met in Newark Saturday and selected ex-Prosecutor William B. Gourley, of Paterson, for temporary chairman. Senator Daly, of Hudson county, was also nominated, but only received two of the seven votes of the sub-committee for the place.

Committeeman E. P. Budd, of Burlington county, was present to talk with the other members of the committee about the platform. Mr. Budd was appointed chairman of a sub-committee to outline a platform to be submitted to the committee on resolutions at the convention when appointed. Mr. Budd's plan was to confine the platform to State issues. In this Mr. Budd was supported by other members of the sub-committee.

Senator Daly protested against this. He was opposed to side-tracking National issues. The Senator is an ardent silver man, and believes the party should endorse the National platform of 1896. William D. Wolfskiel, of Union county, another member of the State committee, who was present at the conference, approved of Senator Daly's attitude.

Good Man For The Democrats.

The name of Irving I. Roes, of Westfield, is mentioned in connection with one of the Assembly nominations on the Democratic ticket in Union county. Mr. Roes would make a very good candidate for the Democrats of this end of the county to choose for such an honor.

He has wide acquaintances in and around his home, has served acceptably for several years as Township Clerk of Westfield—a Republican stronghold—and would add strength to the chance of the Democrats to succeed on election day. He is a hustler when he undertakes a job, and if his nomination was made the party leaders could be assured of having a live candidate who would do his best to get votes.

The season of base bawling is rapidly drawing to a close.

Elizabeth Jumps In.

It is just as was expected. Elizabeth Republicans now step to the front and proclaim their intention of gathering in the Senatorial nomination to be made by their party in Union county. In a long editorial yesterday's Elizabeth Journal presented the county seat's claims upon the honor. Incidentally it indulged in some office-holding statistics that proved quite interesting. Here is what it says in this respect:

The city of Plainfield has the Sheriff, the Jail Warden, the County Attorney, the Assistant County Clerk, the Director of the Board of Freeholders and one member of the Assembly.

The city of Rahway has the Law Judge, the County Clerk, the Clerk of the Board of Freeholders and the Under Sheriff.

The city of Elizabeth has the Surrogate, the County Collector, the Prosecutor and two Assemblymen. It has had the Senator, and the list shows that with that official Elizabeth has still proportionately a much smaller number of county officers than either Plainfield or Rahway.

And here is Elizabeth's side of the story:

With perfect propriety, therefore, the city of Elizabeth may come before the Republican county convention in Union and claim the name as candidate for Senator as a part of her equitable proportion of the county offices. But this, with her usual diffidence, she has not done. Elizabeth has, as already stated, been urged by other cities and by the townships, to present a candidate, and has responded to the request. If better men than Elizabeth has now, or stronger claims than Elizabeth can advance are presented before the next Republican county convention, without a doubt the convention will give them the consideration they deserve.

The candidates that Elizabeth offers are Judge Cross, former Mayor Rankin and William H. Corbin.

All About Mr. Martine.

James E. Martine has almost totally abstained from political actitity for the past few months, but somebow or other the political writers are bound to have him in the foremost ranks. Read the following from the New Jersey page of The Tribune:

James E. Martine, the evergreen and always effervescent "Farmer Orator" of Plainfield, has graciously consented, 'tis said, to accept the Democratic nomination for Senator in Union county. James has always been willing to contribute his share to the gayety of nations, and by accepting a nomination for senatorial honors he will put the great public under another obligation to him. His appearance as a candidate must necessarily cause great rejoicing, especially in the neighborhood of that smart Democratic organ, "The Summit Record."

The Elizabeth Journal has the following introductory comment in reproducing the editorial about Mr. Martine's political activity printed in The Daily Press the other day:

James E. Martine will not be the Democratic candidate for Congress in this district, for State Senator in this county or for any other elective office, if the Plainfield Press correctly reflects it. It has this to say of the ever-genial and thoroughly gentlemanly "Farmer Orator."

The L. A. W. Trouble.

There have long been many members of the League of American Wheelmen who have believed that the control of bicycle racing was beyond the legitimate province of that organization and that it would far better confine its efforts to advancing the interests of the wheelmen of the country by promoting good roads, favorable legislation for wheelmen and providing more complete information and privileges for cycling tourists than in dabbling in the affairs of the bicycle race track.

The avowed object of the league is to promote the interests of wheelmen, although of late the league has been more prominent in its control of racing than in other ways. The result of the present difficulty between the racing men and the L. A. W. officials may result in the diversion of the L. A. W. men's efforts toward the real object of that organization which would undoubtedly give it a more healthy standing among the wheelmen at large than it holds at present.

A Parental Pleasure.

When we mentioned Si Drake, the sage of Lincoln, as the man who would be the happiest delegate to the Republican State convention to vote for Foster Voorhees we overlooked the fact that the candidates own father would be accorded that supreme pleasure. The elder Mr. Voorhees was up in the gallery with the Hunterdon county delegation, and voted for his son's nomination along with the rest. His gray head and smooth, venerable face were all that made him conspicuous.

Reaching Out.

Great cities from little efforts may grow in this State. Jersey City wants to absorb Hoboken. Paronne and Harrison: Paterson would take in its populous suburbs, and Newark would annex the Oranges. Such ambitions may be chilled by the Legislature, but they bespeak for the great centres named a creditable desire for advancement, even the limit of county boundaries.—New York Press.

And don't forget that there is a Greater Plainfield, as promising a municipality as there is in New Jersey.

The Trenton True American pokes fun at Foster Voorhees. But that won't win an election for the Democrats. If Voorhees is beaten it will have to be done with better campaign arguments than The True American puts to the fore in its editorial columns.

Lieut. Hobson's work of raising and feeding the Maria Teresa will do more good for his country than the sinking of the Merrimac did. But there isn't so much glory in it.

Practice Against Theory.

The claim that the value of farm property is enhanced by the construction of stone roads and that the county expenditures for such roads will be more than made up by the increase in taxable property does not seem to be borne out in Burlington county.

Burlington has built more stone roads under the new State road law than any county. Most of its trunk roads have been macadamized, and hundreds of its fertile farms now front on thoroughfares equal to any in the State. The farmers, who at first were skeptical as to the advantages claimed for the improved roads, now freely admit their benefit in the saving of horseflesh and the facilities afforded in the marketing of crops.

In spite of the facts, however, the assessed valuation of property in Burlington county this year is $107,000 less than last, and the decrease is attributed to a decline in farm values.

Feminine Presumption.

The women of the Town Improvement Association of Plainfield are agitating the subject of the Central Railroad of New Jersey building steps along the depot platform at the North Avenue station so as to reduce the height of the step that has to be taken to board the passenger coaches. It is claimed that the steps from the depot platform to the cars are too high so as to make boarding a train a disagreeable and, at times, an embarassing performance for women.—Newark Evening News.

Isn't it a bit presumptious for women to want to vote if they can't get on a train alone. The political train has some very difficult platforms at times.

Before Justice of the Peace Miller in Vineland, Friday night, a jury found a verdict of $70 and costs against Charles Bateman and his brother Albert, for so cruelly overdriving a liveryman's horse that it had to be killed. Considering the crime, prison stripes would be a fashionable attire for these men.

Aren't the trolley magnates treading on dangerous grounds when they break a bottle of wine over a trolley car to mark the opening of the Dunellen line in an auspicious manner. Think of the W. C. T. U. resolutions that such an act is possible to inspire.

The Democratic primary for the election of delegates to the Congressional convention of the Third district, to be held in New Brunswick next Monday, will be held in the borough Friday night. The primaries in other Somerset county towns will be held Saturday afternoon.

Former President Cleveland is reported to have bought land deal to make Princeton a magnificent winter resort for millionaires. It is evident that Grover looks upon Jersey as his home for the rest of his natural life.

Will the present Senator or the former Senator of Somerset county be the leader in the Republican ranks in that bailiwick? There is chance for argument.

The school is located on what is known as the Parnell estate and J. M. Gregory, formerly Dean of Howard University, is the principal. Mr. Kline simply performs his work for the honor that is in it, and there is no money consideration attached.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Rev. George Hauser, of the borough, who has just returned from a trip abroad, tells his friends a good story about a rat that appeared on the ship. The sailors were so superstitious about that little animal that they would not allow Mr. Hauser to kill it. They declared that if he did they would have a rough voyage.

ROUGH MAN HELD UP UNPROTECTED WOMAN.

A Dastardly Occurrence Near Bound Brook Last Monday.

ACCOSTED IN THE DARK.

MRS. JOSEPH NAYLOR, OF LINCOLN, WAS THE VICTIM.

Her Screams for Help Were Heard by College Boys Who Came to the Rescue Just in Time—The Desperado Disappeared in the Darkness—Mrs. Naylor Fainted Away—Ruffian Described.

While returning from shopping in New Brunswick Monday, Mrs. Joseph Naylor, of Lincoln, had an exciting and unpleasant encounter with a desperate tramp whom she encountered near Bound Brook.

Mrs. Naylor had taken a trolley car from New Brunswick to Bound Brook, but owing to an accident on the line she was delayed in getting to the latter place until 7:30 o'clock. It was then too late to get a train to her house, a little over two miles distant, and she concluded to walk the remainder of the journey.

She had her arms full of bundles. It was quite dark, and she decided to walk along the track of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. She had gone about a quarter of a mile when she met a heavy-set, rough-looking man. The stranger planted himself directly in her path and asked in a threatening voice;

"Where are you going, woman?"

"I am going home," answered Mrs. Naylor who by this time was thoroughly frightened. Thinking that the stranger was probably bent on securing money she thought she would avoid trouble if she offered him her pocketbook. Instead of accepting the pocketbook the ruffian made a jump for her. Mrs. Naylor decided to put on as plucky a front as possible, and dropping all her bundles but one containing a small kettle she struck him a hard blow over the head with that article. The man was knocked to the ground by the force of the blow. Before he could regain himself and attack her again, Mrs. Naylor was screaming with all her might. A moment later, however, the desperado had grabbed her by the throat and was choking her.

In the meantime, though, her yells had been heard by John and Chauncey Egel, students at the University of Pennsylvania, who resided a short distance away. They hurried in the direction from whence the cries were heard. As the Egel boys neared the scene of the strife the assailant loosened his hold on Mrs. Naylor and ran away in the darkness. Mrs. Naylor was found in an insensible condition, having fainted from fright and the blows which the stranger had struck her with. She recovered in a few minutes and was assisted to the Egel home.

Mrs. Egel described her assailant as a man about twenty-five years of age, shabbily dressed, about five feet ten inches tall and wearing a scraggy beard. The police in neighboring towns have been notified to be on the lookout for him.

RESENTED THE INSULT.

Mary Didn't Propose to Have Her Sobriety Questioned.

Mary G. Johnson is a large and massive colored woman who was recently employed as cook in the family of Herman Simmonds, of Watchung avenue. Because she claims Mrs. Simmonds owes her a month's wages, $14, she brought suit against her in Justice Mosher's court, and the case came to trial Tuesday morning.

Mary has worked for Mrs. Simmonds for about five years, so she said, with an occasional intermission, and during that time had no fault to find about getting her money. But last June Mary went to New York one night and didn't return until the following night of early morning, and then, the defendant claimed, in an intoxicated condition.

Mary explained her long absence from the house by saying she had lost herself in the mazes of New York, coming from Thompson street to the Liberty street ferry.

When Counselor W. K. McClure, who represented the defendant, suggested to the girl that perhaps she had been drunk that night, Mary flew into a rage, seized her hat and would have left the court room had it not been for the united efforts of the Justice, the lawyers and half a dozen spectators, more or less.

Mrs. Simmonds claimed that she had paid Mary in full and didn't owe her anything. At the conclusion of the case Justice Mosher reserved his decision.

Pope & Runyon represented the plaintiff.

SNEAK THIEVES AT WORK

CASH DRAWER IN SCHEUER'S STORE ROBBED OF $30.

Obtained Entrance Through the Rear Cellar Door—Thought That the Thieves Were Acquainted With the Store.

Sneak thieves are again at work in this city, but the police have thus far been unable to locate them. Recently a thief or thieves entered the grocery store of S. Scheuer & Co., of West Front street, and stole $30 from the cash box in the office.

The money was taken during the night and an entrance was effected to the store through the cellar from the rear. An investigation proved this fact, for it could be seen where the parties entered. Nightwatchman Rockafellow is supposed to look after the place in addition to the protection afforded by the regular police, but he says that he saw no suspicious characters about the place the time the robbery took place.

When Mr. Schloss entered the store the following morning he discovered the loss of the money, but nothing else was disturbed about the store. This leads Mr. Schloss to believe that the thieves were well acquainted with the store and only had one object in view, that of taking the amount of money secured.

The police have no clews as to who the guilty party or parties are.

BETTER CHURCH EDIFICE

MT. OLIVE BAPTIST WITNESS MANY NEW IMPROVEMENTS.

In Celebration of the Event Rally Services Were Held all Day, at Which Visiting Pastors Preached Powerful Sermons.

All day Sunday there were rally services at the Mount Olive Baptist church in celebration of the improvements made in the church. The attendance at each of the three services was unusually large. In the morning a sermon was delivered by Rev. Benjamin W. Hand, of this city, following which the pastor, Rev. E. C. Jackson, received the subscriptions from those present which is to be used in paying the debt for improvements on the church. In the afternoon the Sunday-school held a short session and at 3 o'clock another attempt was made to secure subscriptions. At this service a large amount of money was received, most everyone giving a dollar.

Following this part of the exercises, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, delivered a strong and impressive sermon to a large congregation.

The evening service was in charge of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Jackson, and another large amount of money was received. The improvements recently made in the church were all greatly admired by those present yesterday. New carpet, freshly painted wood-work and bright decorations all added to the general attractiveness of the church.

The total amount received during the day was $111.

Clever Display Made by Enterprising Firm of Woodhull & Martin.

A glance in Woodhull & Martin's show windows will convince a purchaser that whatever he or she wants can be found inside the mammoth stores. The firm employs a window-dresser now who does nothing else but place the pretty goods in the best possible places to show well.

The firm are making a specialty this week of school children's umbrellas, twenty-four-inch, steel rod, fancy handles, strong and just the right size for children. They are selling fast and cheap. Their line of satchels and valises is large, and they are being sold at honest prices. This line can be seen in the center of the store.

Told of His Work Among Soldiers.

Thomas Graham, the Scotch evangelist, addressed the Y. M. C. A. meeting Sunday afternoon. Mr. Graham gave a plain Gospel talk, and during the discourse related several incidents connected with his work among the soldiers at Pompton Lake and Sandy Hook. Mr. Graham took up this work under the auspices of the State Y. M. C. A. June 10th.

Honorably Mustered Out.

Arthur B. Crane, of East Second street, and Walter E. Probasco, of East Front street, are no longer members of the great volunteer army of the United States. A week ago they were honorably mustered out of service from the First Delaware Volunteers. They have been home for several days and are now preparing to return again to their studies at the University of Pennsylvania, from which they enlisted at the opening of the war.

Private Banta Dead.

A press despatch says: "Private Edward E. Banta, of Company G, Second New Jersey, died at St. Luke's Hospital, Jacksonville, at noon yesterday, after four weeks' illness from typhoid fever. He was a son of John Banta, of Plainfield, N. J. Young Banta was in his twenty-first year." The Daily Press reporters have been unable to locate Banta's parents.

LIVERY HORSE WAS DRIVEN TO DEATH.

The Animal Belonged to "Uncle Dan" Roberts.

STEED MIRED IN A DITCH.

FRED BOWDEN AND A FRIEND HAD HIRED THE RIG.

Stableman Awakened Early Yesterday Morning and Bowden Made the Urgent Plea That he Wanted the Horse to go to His Sick Mother — Roberts Intends to Prosecute Him.

It was about 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning that Fred Bowden, of Grant avenue, accompanied by a friend, called at the livery stable of Dan Roberts, on North avenue, and awakened Charles Cox, the night man, from his sleep. Bowden said that he had received word that his mother was dying and that he wanted to get a horse and buggy. His demands were so urgent that Cox let Bowden have a rig.

That was the last seen or heard of the rig until Sunday forenoon when N. M. Giles, a milkman, living near Bound Brook, called at the livery stable and told Mr. Roberts that he had a horse in his barn that belonged to him. A description of the rig was given and corresponded with the one hired to Bowden.

Mr. Giles stated that Bowden called at his home early Sunday morning and asked for help to get a horse out of a ditch. He responded and took two or three men with him to help. When they reached the schoolhouse at Harris Lane they found the horse lying in the ditch completely exhausted. Several attempts were made to get the animal on his feet, but every effort failed. Eventually the horse was taken to Mr. Giles's barn where he died at 4 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Roberts says that there is no doubt but what the horse was actually driven to death. He was one of the best horses in the stable and has made a mile on the Waverly track in three minutes.

Mr. Roberts is determined that he shall receive the full penalty of the law. Bowden and his friend left the scene of the accident soon after Mr. Giles and his men took charge of the rig, and nothing has been seen of them since. The statement that Bowden's mother was dying seems to have been a ruse to get the rig from Mr. Roberts. Mr. Roberts will prosecute Bowden.

BORROWED A HORSE.

Slower Didn't Understand and the Results Were Serious.

John Slover hired Al Dunavan's wagon Saturday to move some household goods from New Market to Plainfield. Late in the afternoon he tied the horse to a post on West Second street. Mail Messenger Jim Frisbie came along, untied the horse and started to drive away. Slover saw him and compeled him to bring the rig back. Then Frisbie made a remark that caused Slover to cuff him with his fist. Chief Grant arrived and arrested Slover. Roundsman Flynn also appeared and had to throw Slover down and put the handcuff on him before he would go to jail.

Now it appears that Dunavan told Frisbie that he might use the rig whenever he wanted providing that it was not being used. Slover did not know that. When arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning he pleaded guilty to striking Frisbie and resisting an officer. He was fined $8.

King's Daughters Elect.

Last Monday there was a meeting of the Brightside Circle, King's Daughters, at the home of Miss Claypool, on Grandview avenue, at which time the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. J. A. Powlison; vice-president, Miss Claypool; secretary, Miss Kiernan; treasurer, Mrs. Frank Jones. The next meeting will be held the last of October.

Streets in Bad Shape.

Some of the streets in the West End are not fit to be called streets, for they look more like cow paths. Considering the amount of tax received from that end of town it seems as though the Council ought to provide better streets. On West Third street, near Spooner avenue, there is one block that has nine different grades, it is said.

A SENSATIONAL ARREST.

PROMINENT MILLSTONE CITIZEN IMPLICATED IN SERIOUS CRIME.

William Wallace Charged With Being One of the Gang that Bound and Gagged a Watchman and Committed a Robbery.

Wm. Wallace, an influential resident of East Millstone, and well known throughout Somerset county, was arrested and taken to the Somerset county jail Saturday, charged with being a member of the gang that the night of September 16th attacked Henry Jones, a night watchman employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, bound and gagged him, and then broke into the ticket office of the depot and blew open the safe, but failed to secure much booty. The arrest caused a great sensation through this section, as Wallace was looked upon as one of the substantial and highly-respected citizens of East Millstone. Wallace carried on a large bottling business and served customers for several miles around. The arrest was made by Detective George D. Totten, who has been working on the case for sometime and from apparently worthless clues has secured evidence which it is believed will make it go hard with Wallace.

After being arrested Wallace tried his best to secure a bondsman for $2 000, but he was unable to and was compelled to be locked up in a cell in the county jail. Jeremiah Washington, Thomas Wright and Thomas Shine, whose characters up to this time had been regarded with respect by their neighbors, are the ones implicated in the crime with Wallace. They were also arrested Sunday and put under $2,000 bonds. They are confined in the county jail.

The crime with which the men are accused was especially bold. While Night Watchman Jones, who is about seventy years of age and somewhat feeble, was attending to his duties during the early hours of the morning of September 16th, when suddenly four masked men pounced upon him. Stifling his attempts to yell with a coat, they quickly proceeded to the work of looting the station. After finishing their job they left the night watchman bound and gagged till some of the railroad employes found him in the morning. The brutality with which he was treated came near causing his death.

BIBLE TRAINING CLASS.

It Has Been Twelve Years in Existence in the Y. M. C. A.

Twelve years ago Monday the first Y. M. C. A. Bible training class was organized in this city in the little rooms of the Y. M. C. A., on East Front street. Charles T. Kissam, a former resident here, but who now resides in New York, organized the class, and was its first teacher.

Among the members were numbered Rev. Milton A. Craft, W. D. Murray, J. A. Robinson, Charles F. Powlison, all young men who are numbered today among the most earnest workers for the association in this city. The class started out with about 30 members. It has about the same number today, and is taught by the general secretary, J. H. Manning.

To Take Testimony.

Counsellor W. S. Angleman has been appointed a commissioner by the Circuit Judge of Escambia county, Florida to take testimony in a chancery case in which the parties are the Ferry Pass Inspector and Shipping Association and Charles Krueger. The claim involves some timber lands in Florida of great value.

A Driver's Skill.

Last Saturday afternoon at the Gentlemen's Driving Association Park a very serious accident was averted through the careful driving of Mr. Phœbus, who was driving "Fanmany." A piece of harness broke and the trotter became quite fractious, and would have caused serious damage had not the driver exhibited rare skill.

Broke His Good Conduct.

Fred Randolph was arrested for the fourth time Saturday evening on the charge of being drunk and using his tongue too freely. Randolph had been leading an orderly life for a year, and so the Judge let him off Monday morning with a $3 fine.

RALLY DAY IN THE SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

Sunday Marked the Resumption of Activity After the Summer

PLANS FOR EARNEST WORK.

SERVICES IN SEVERAL OF THE CHURCHES AND CHAPELS.

Rev W. C. Sandgrass Addressed the Scholars in the Congregational Church —"The Twentieth Century Movement" Explained to Hope Chapel by Rev. Mr. Newell—Exercises Held by Other Schools.

Even with the prospect of rain at any moment, the rally service of the Sunday school of the Congregational church was well attended. It marked the closing of the vacation period and the return to the regular regime of the active winter season. During the summer months the session was held in the morning. With the first of September the afternoon sessions were resumed but no special service marked the change until yetterday.

All the departments of the Sunday-school were well filled and the superintendent, J. A. Robinson, was much pleased with the showing made. The rally-day service was entitled "Christ, Our Leader." It included hymns by the school and responsive readings. The primary department also took part. There were two cornet solos well rendered by Benjamin LaVere.

In place of the lesson was a short review exercise conducted by A. C. LaBoyteaux. The address of the afternoon was made by Rev. W. C. Sandgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church. He spoke on "Christ, Our Leader," and told the children why and how He was.

Sunday was "rallying day" at Hope chapel, and this introduction to the fall work was made pleasant by a special service of songs and addresses.

A movement has been introduced among Sunday-school workers called the "Twentieth Century Movement." The idea is to interest Sunday-school teachers and scholars in building up their individual schools and classes as well as to help financially and in other ways towards establishing schools in other places, and all this is to be done during the short time between now and the dawning of the twentieth century. Hope chapel teachers and scholars want to have a share in this work, and at the exercises yesterday Superintendent Squires broached the subject and explained what the "Twentieth Century Movement" means.

Rev. Mr. Newell spoke on what Hope chapel stands for. An interesting feature about the service was the calling of the roll by the secretary at which each teacher answered, giving the number present and those absent in her class. According to the number of pupils on the teachers' books, Hope chapel is not large enough to hold all of them, should the entire number belonging to the chapel Sunday-school decide to attend some Sunday.

The rally day exercises at the East Third Street mission opened with a piano solo by Clifford Braider. Scripture reading by the superintendent, L. W. Randolph, prayer by H. E. Needham and a solo by Miss Lena Jomini came next. A song was sung by the infant department, and two little girls, Beulah and Violet Van-Winkle sang and recited. The address of the afternoon was made by L. H. Biglow, J. There was a good attendance.

Rev. Dr. Richards, of the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school, made an address at the rally day exercises held there Sunday afternoon. There was special music by the choir. No lesson was studied, the hour usually devoted to that being given up to Dr. Richards.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular; free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

SAFE TRIP THIS TIME.

MR. AND MRS. LACASSE'S RETURN FROM THEIR OCEAN VOYAGE.

There Was No Exciting Incidents This Time on a French Liner—Say the Bourgogne's Captain Was Not Insane

Although once perilously near destruction on the ill-fated Bourgogne, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian C. LaCasse, of the borough, have at last successfully completed their trip to Europe and return and are once more in town, preparing to return to their work of giving instruction in the French language.

For a time Mr. and Mrs. LaCasse were probably the most conspicious Plainfielders in the country, gaining their notority through their successful efforts to escape from the sinking French liner. It was not long after that they decided to brave the perils of the deep once more and visit their native land as they were attempting to do when the Bourgogne came to grief. They went over on the French liner Gascogne, and after spending several weeks on the other side, returned on that same steamer. While abroad they stopped near the family of the late Captain Deloncle, of the Bourgogne.

The Gascogne arrived in New York Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Four hours later Mr. and Mrs. LaCasse were in Plainfield. Mr. LaCasse brings home with him a valuable fox terrier.

Owing to the report current of the alleged insanity of Captain Deloncle, the arrival of the LaCasses was watched with interest. They were interviewed by a Press reporter in regard to the story and both were very positive that there was no truth in it.

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

W. C. T. U. Honor the Memory of the Late Frances Willard.

Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the rooms of the W. C. T. U., a service was held in memory of the anniversary of the birthday of the late Miss Frances Willard. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson conducted the service and she was assisted by other members of the union who gave short quotations from Miss Willard's writings and speeches. Mrs. Tomlinson spoke affectionately of the late temperance leader and said that the influence of her work would always be felt. The music at the service was in charge of J. D. Moon and was appropriate to the occasion.

Soldiers Instead of Gold Hunters.

Word has been received from two Plainfield boys, Wm. Higgins and Alfred Montjoy, who left home a year ago last summer. The lads started for the Klondike and got as far as San Francisco when news of the approaching difficulties with Spain reached them and they directed their steps southwards. When volunteers were called for both young men joined the First Louisiana Volunteers. They expect soon to be mustered out, but Higgins likes army life so well that he is going to join the signal corps.

WHY SHE WORE MOURNING.

The Second Wife Undertook the Obligations for Sol.

He had asked her to be "his'n," and she had made up her mind that she had "worked out" long enough, any way. So she accepted him. She was perfectly satisfied with her place, but she wanted to have a house of her own. So they were married.

It wasn't long afterward that she came back to see her former mistress about something, and the latter noticed that she was wearing mourning. Of course, she was sorry for her, and was rather surprised that she had made no mention o fher bereavement. It is indeed a grievous thing when a honey moon is cut short.

Finally the former mistress brought up the subject herself.

"You are in mourning, Maggie," she suggested.

"Yes," replied Maggie, complacently, and with no show of feeling at all, "I thought it was the least I could do fer 'im."

"It is showing no more than proper respect, of course. I am very sorry. It must have been a great shock."

"Great shock!" exclaimed Maggie, in surprise. Then, as she grasped the idea, she went on. "Oh, he ain't dead, with his accent on 'he.'"

"You haven't lost your husband?"

Maggie shook her head.

"Then why are you in such deep mourning?"

"Just to please the poor lad," answered Maggie. "You see, it's thisaway," she went on, when she had decided to he comes to me an' he says, 'Maggie,' he says, 'the poor doman niver had nobody to put on mournin' for her, an' I dunno that she's been treated right,' he says. 'What' says I. 'Me first wife,' says he. 'She was all alone in the world, excepth' fer me,' he says. 'She had no wimen folks to wear mournin' fer her.' An' so I says to him, 'I'll do it fer the poor woman,' I says. An' here I am."

And the best of it is that the story is absolutely true.

HE WAS PAID FOR THE AD.

But Not at the Rate of Two Dollars an Inch for Six Feet.

"I was running a paper down in Tennessee then," prefaced the ex-newspaper man whose only work now is to collect what other people owe him in the way of rents and interest. One of the few fine-looking women you find in the mountains of that region walked into the office one afternoon and said: 'Be youins the editor?'

"Upon being informed that I enjoyed that distinction, she looked me over as though greatly disappointed and then told a long story of petty domestic difficulties that had led to the disappearance of her husband about two weeks before. Now she wanted to put in a nice advertisement to have him at home. How much would I charge her?

"'Two dollars an inch,' I answered.

"Taking a pencil and a sheet of copy paper she figured laboriously for pretty nearly an hour. At length she tore the paper into shreds and was deliberately walking out of the office when I asked her if she thought the charge too high.

"'I don't reckon I know anything 'bout your bus'ness, suh. But I never see that much money, let 'lone handlin' of it. Joe's wu'th it, but I couldn't never buy him back at them figgers. He's f foot 3 in his bare feet, suh, Joe is. At $2 a inch I make it $150. I'll jest have to go out and git his trail an' foller.'

"I didn't even smile, gentlemen. There was something noble in her resignation. I advertised 'Joe,' got other papers to copy and we rounded him up. One morning there was a ten-gallon keg of moonshine whiskey at my kitchen door, and I did not advertise for an owner."
—Detroit Free Press.

Madame Carnot's Generosity.

A pretty story is told of the sweet mercy of a deeply injured woman. Madame Carnot has lived in seclusion ever since the death of her ill-fated husband, devoting herself almost entirely to her children and grandchildren, finding in them the solace for those sorrows which have embittered her life. Recently the brother of her husband's murderer ventured to write to the unfortunate widow. He laid his case before her. After the assassination of the President by his brother, he found it impossible to obtain employment in France, owing to a not altogether unnatural feeling against the family. In desperation, he went to Spain, where he succeeded in procuring a place as porter to one of the monasteries, but he was cast adrift again when his relationship to the murderer transpired. Madame Carnot, like a noble woman, saw the hardness of the case, and at once promised to keep him in work as long as he lives. He is now in Paris.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Cats Belonging to the Shah.

In enthusiasm for cats, the Shah of Persia surpasses all other royal devotees. He has fifty of them, and they have attendants of their own, with special rooms for meals. When the Shah travels, they go with him, carried by men on horseback. The late Czar of Russia was very fond of the feline tribe. When visiting the King of Denmark on one occasion, he alarmed the servants by rushing out very early in the morning to the garden. Seeing the window of his sleeping room, he had seen a big dog attack his favorite black cat, and without staying to complete his toilet, he had run to her rescue. The famous royal cat of Siam is a large, white, short-haired variety, with black face and a peculiar formation of ear. Its previousness may be judged from the fact that it took three gentlemen of influence three months to procure one for the English consul at Bangkog.

ORIGIN OF THE FLAG OF TRUCE.

White Sanctity of the Holy Grail Was Probably Its Inspiration.

An exchange of prisoners under a flag of truce, notably a press correspondent for a brother of General Weyler, brings to mind the origin of this custom. It is due to the church, and took its rise, as an institution, in the tenth or eleventh century. "La paix et la treve de Dieu" (The peace and the truce of God) was a law instituted between the turbulent barons and the church, as severe injury and loss was most frequently the result of the private warfares which constantly raged. To protect itself somewhat, but more especially as the guardian of justice and the preservation of moral order, the church established a system which has exercised a beneficent influence down to this day.

The agreement stipulated a cessation of hostilities on certain festivals and "fainted" days, generally Saturday to Monday. The barons and warrior class pledged during the time of war to extend full protection to women, pilgrims, priests, monks, travellers, merchants, and agriculturalists; to abstain from the destruction of crops and farm implements, the burning of crops and the killing of live stock of the peasants. Penalties in violation of this agreement comprised money fines, baffings, banishment and excommunication.

Originating in the south of France, this system was extended and adopted through the whole of France, Italy, Spain, Germany and England, and, in 1095 Pope Urban II. proclaimed its universal extension throughout Christendom.

The crown, in time, assumed this protective power and the phrase was changed to "La paix et la treve du Roi," or "The peace and truce of the king." The republics recognised the time-honored institution, and the simple unfurling of a white flag will instantly cause a cessation of hostilities. The adoption of a white emblem appears to be lost in tradition, as authorities do not reveal it. Doubtless it is similar, or may have arisen through a belief in the white Samite which shielded the Holy Grail from the gaze of unbelievers. Emblematic of purity, associated with the mythical knights of the round table, and used in the crusades, it is probable that this accounts for the flag may have originated from the Samite of the Holy Grail.

Some of the conditions surrounding it at the present time are worthy of consideration, viz.: The admission of the flag of truce cannot be insisted upon, unnecessary slaughter of presentation is avoided, owing to the possibility that an unfair advantage may be taken; if presented during an engagement firing is not required to cease until the flag bearer be killed or wounded. Is there ground for complaint. The truce emblem can be retained, if admitted, during an engagement.

In naval combats the ensign is run up with the national flag of the enemy, and if hauled down on the land as well. Penalties are incurred if the truce emblem be wrongfully used, the severest being the ignominious death of a spy.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

AFRAID OF THE GLASS EYE.

Japanese Coolies Would Not Serve the Owner of It.

A year or two ago an artist from San Francisco who wore a glass eye came to Yokohama and established himself in a little bungalow on the outskirts of the city.

The weather was extremely warm, and before the stranger had become settled he was besieged by a number of coolies who wanted to get the job of fanning him at night. The artist looked over the applicants and finally selected an old man who brought excellent recommendations from his last employer.

When it was time to retire the artist took out his glass eye, laid it on a stand at his bedside and went to bed. The old man picked up his fan and the San Francisco man soon had fast asleep. He slept peacefully for an hour or two when he was awakened by a chorus of buzzing insects about his head. He looked about him and found the coolie whom he had hired to fan him had gone.

The next morning when he went in search of another coolie he was amazed to discover that no one would work for him. He was looked upon as a wizard and capable of miracles, with whom it was unsafe to be about. The old man had gone among his friends and told how the Californian had taken out his eye at night and laid it on a stand in order that he might watch his movements. He said that he kept his fan in motion. The old coolie's story created such excitement that the San Francisco man was never able to get another Japanese to fan him after that.—Yorkville Yeoman.

The Chinese Who Served with Dewey.

The Chinese servants ordinarily used for fetching and carrying were impressed into service, and showed courage and skill. They showed as much nerve as the American. They aided at the whips and in lifting and carrying the ammunition. Their faces were as impassive as when serving dinner in Hong Kong harbor. They chattered to each other in their own language, and laughed in their Celestial way when a shot, striking the foremast, shook the ship, caused the paint to scale off the mast a foot from us, and the angle iron was strengthened it inside to rattle loudly. "Very well, indeed one, and mechanically resumed his task.—Atlantic Monthly.

BATTLING WITH THE ELEMENTS.

The Fury of a June Storm About Key West and the Cuban Coast.

Will the Cuban question drag along until the summer which is the season of awful tempests in West Indian and Carribean waters? Obviously it ought to be settled before summer or the advent of the rainy season on land and the hurricane season on sea will render it impossible of settlement until fall. Throughout the summer months the risk of wreck in the northern part of the Carribean Sea is so great that the most powerful men-of-war are not proof against these sudden storms even while riding in harbor. In 1782 the Ville de Paris, the Centaur and the Ramilles foundered in a gale, and a whole fleet of West Indiamen was sunk in 1830, also while lying in to a hurricane. The wind suddenly shifted from west to east and blew equally heavy and every ship in harbor, says the London Nautical Magazine, "under a square course foundered with the loss of their various crews.

These southern storms which are generated under the equator move like the Gulf Stream in a northerly direction and come into collision with the archipelago of islands in the northern limit of the Carribean Sea. Of these islands the three four largest, namely Cuba, San Domingo, Hayti and Porto Rico form a continual barrier opposed obliquely to the trade winds. And as a mass of moving atmosphere, coming from the north, also presses down with great force in its westerly progress, the obstruction which the islands thus affords produces a constant tendency to atmospheric disturbance and a consequent eddying motion which sweeps along the coasts gathering the rapidly increased powers of destruction as it proceeds.

Probably the most thrilling example of these Southern ocean disasters was that which occurred in the harbor of Apia, ten years ago. It was so terrible an event that it is said to have actually subdued a rebellion, and the natives certain that Heaven was angry with them were so awed by the storm of that year that no power on earth could again stir them to revolt.

In 1888 there were complications between Great Britain, Germany and the United States in Samoa. A native Chief Tamasese, was the Kaiser's favorite for the crown and the German gunboats Eber and Adler were sent to Apia in his behalf. England sent the Calliope, and the United States dispatched the Trenton and four other war vessels in order to check the Kaiser and to maintain order.

One evening these various war vessels were all lying at anchor as proudly as Sennacherib's host in the harbor of the Assyrians. Hostilities on shore. Without much warning one of these fierce gales struck the harbor, and in less time than it takes to say "Cock Robin," the attention of the seamen was suddenly diverted from the doings of the natives and his fellow conspirators; hatches were battened down, topsails reefed; the upper spars were girt; great guns were securely fastened in their places; additional anchors dropped and ample cables played out to allow the ships to heave to and ride in a heavy sea. The various captains were thundering orders to their crews and the latter were rushing madly to their posts of duty, when suddenly the cables dragged and the immense war vessels were pitching hither and thither like chips in whirlpool while the terrified and crazed natives looked on in amazement, believing as they did in their superstitious Samoan way that the Angel of Death spread his wings on the land. After a short but brave battle against a terrific wind and a high rolling sea the German gunboat Eber went down, sending a last puff of white smoke into the air as the watery quenched the fires of her boilers below. Seventy-five brave seamen went down with her, four of their bodies being sometime later washed on the shore. The crew of the Nipsic, seeing their ship dragging anchor before the storm detached a Krupp gun from the gun carriage and fastening it to an eight-inch hawser, swung it as an additional anchor into the sea. While doing this the Nipsic was rammed by the Olga losing two of her boats in addition to other injuries and her smoke pipe. With her smoke pipe gone steam was impossible to be kept up so the Nipsic was beached upon the sands and in an effort to lower one of her remaining boats some of the crew were thrown out and drowned; others with great difficulty, and by sliding to shore on life lines were saved in quite a miraculous way. In less than five minutes the Alder drifted broadside on the reef where her sister ship had foundered. In another moment she was lifted bodily out of the sea on the crest of a gigantic wave and later pitched down on her side, drowning twenty of her crew. While this distressing series of incidents was happening in one part of the harbor, the Vandalia of the American squadron was in another place running before the storm into the British ship Calliope. She was beached with great difficulty, many of her crew meantime dropping into the surging angry sea. In the last effort the captain gig was knocked down by a machine gun that had broken loose, rolling over him on deck and killing him outright. His body was washed off and he sank in a moment. Next morning when the muster roll on the Vandalia was had no bird can safely fly through, surpass which strengthen it inside to rattle loudly. "Very well indeed one, and mechanically resumed his task.—Atlantic Monthly.

SUPERSTITION OF ACTORS.

They Bank Next to Sailors in Adhering To Signs.

Next to sailors, stage folk are probably the most superstitious people in the world. Not only are there numerous curious beliefs that have general vogue in the profession, but almost every actor and actress of note has his or her pet superstition. Very few actresses will wear opals. "An opal will kill the best piece ever put on the boards," once remarked a well known actress. To quote any lines from Macbeth in the theater, save when the tragedy itself is being played, is supposed to bring bad luck, and for the same reason the "tag" of a play is never spoken at rehearsal. Mrs. Leslie Carter, it is said, refuses to go on the stage without a four-leaf clover pin, which she has worn for many years. During the belfry scene, when "The Heart of Maryland" was running in New York, it became unfastened and dropped on the stage. She did not miss it until she reached her hotel. Then she drove straight back to the theater and asked excitedly to have a search made for it. Great was her rejoicing when a gentleman who had picked it up pulled it out of his pocket and handed it to her. Many of the Italian ballet girls, when traveling, take with them a piece of bread from their last meal in their native land, tied in a rag and worn as a charm. It is their belief that, so long as they wear this, they will never be in want of food.—Woman.

SLEEP AND DREAMS.

How Agassiz Worked Out a Scientific Problem.

Agassiz was studying a fossil fish in the Jardin des Plantes, says W. J. Stillman in London Spectator, but had never been able to determine the species to his satisfaction. After a time he dreamed that he caught the very fish, and without difficulty determined the question, thinking, as he woke from the dream that he would have no difficulty. But on returning to the fossil, something in the dream had escaped him, and he could no more determine the species than before. The next night he had the same dream, and again forgot the essential point. He then determined to take a pencil and paper with him to bed, and make his note as soon as he awoke. The dream came the third time, but to his surprise on fully awakening he found the drawing made and lying on the table at his bedside, with three bones displayed in their natural order, as he had given them. It is thirty years since Agassiz told me the incident, but those who have access to his history of the North American fishes will be able to read it in his own words in the introduction, and correct my memory if my memory has in any detail failed me.

PILING ON THE AGONY.

Brilliant Oratorical Powers of the Man with a Show.

When a man begins to brag he must be very careful to keep track of what he says. An amusing instance of the results of not doing so was shown in the case of the manager of a music hall in the north of England, who, although a most illiterate man, prided himself not a little on his brilliant oratorical powers, and made it a point in the course of the programme every Saturday night to announce the leading items of the forthcoming week's entertainment. One evening he finished his weekly speech in the following remarkable terms:

"And, last, but not least, ladies and gentlemen, allow me to inform you that at an enormous expense I have exclusively engaged the marvelous Bromdee brothers, the world-famed acrobats, to appear here in their celebrated entertainment for six nights, commencing Monday next. Understand, ladies and gentlemen, the Bromdee brothers, the champion acrobats of the world."

Here he paused for a moment to regain his breath, and then proudly continued:

"You, and what's more, on Monday week we've got a troupe coming what can knock 'em into a cocked hat!"—Harper's Round Table.

MUSIC IN A TOMB.

Favorite Airs of a Deceased Husband Played Daily in a Vault.

A gentleman who died some time ago, was passionately fond of music. Long ago he requested that, whichever of the two departed first, the survivor should honor the memory of the deceased by having a music box or some similar instrument placed in the sepulcher and played at frequent intervals.

The sexton at the cemetery agreed to allow the widow to place a small oak table at the head of the casket, on which were a handsome music box and a vase of flowers. She visits the cemetery daily, rain or shine, and prays musical reverence to the memory of the deceased. While the favorite airs of sacred melody are being rendered she calmly sits on the casket close to the vase and lovingly communes with the spirit of the deceased. More than 200 bodies are stored in the big vault, and as the music is so dense that in heartbeat almost creates an echo, the impressive but weird notes of the music floating over the caskets and emerging through the iron-grated doors fairly border on the supernatural—Pittsburg Dispatch.

TRADEMARKS FOR THE ORIENT.

Why Merchants Should Study the Chinese Superstitions.

United States Consul Gracey, at Foo-Chow, China, has made a report to the State Department upon labels and tradmarks in that country, with the purpose of showing American merchants how important are such matters in their trade with China. He says that the sale of American or foreign goods in China is often crippled by having some label or trademark which is offensive to the Chinese. Many colors have a special opposition by the people; some offend their tastes and others their superstitions. Some are all right on some kind of goods and all wrong on others. The Chinese will often buy biscuits, needles, thread, matches, soap, medicines, meats, sweets, etc., for the sake of getting a lucky label. Some colors and combinations of colors are to the Chinese unlucky.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

ILLEGIBLE WRITING.

Some Eminent Men Who Wrote Remarkably Bad Hand Manuscript.

Carlyle would not have struggled with a keyboard, but it would have prevented that miserable compositor fleeing from Edinburgh to London out of his way if he had. Carlyle's, however, was a copper plate to others that could be deciphered. Thackeray's manuscripts, we are told, presented the appearance of a sort of battle field on paper, in which the killed words were well stamped out and the new recruits pushed forward in anything but good order. Napoleon was unique in everything, even in his handwriting. His letters from Germany to Josephine were at first taken for maps of the seat of war. And his signature was an indistinguishable hieroglyphic. Byron and Dean Stanley wrote atrocious "fists," and it is said that Sydney Smith's was so illegible that he used to chaff Jeffrey badly. He used to say that he read Jeffrey from left to right, and his wife from right to left, but neither could make out a syllable. Jules Janin would rather rewrite than attempt to read over again what he had written, and Balzac could never read what he had written. The acute thinker mended matters by employing a secretary, whose writing was absolutely undecipherable. Balzac was as big a sinner, and Dickens's microscopic characters, written on blue paper with a crow quill, appalled many seasoned compositors. A terrible hand had Henry Ward Beecher. His daughter once declared that she had three guiding rules in copying it—if a letter was dotted it was not an "i," and if it was crossed it was not a "t," and a word with a capital letter did not begin a sentence. Jacob Bryan said of Archdeacon Coxe's caligraphy that it could neither be called a hand nor a fist, but a foot, and that a club one. His hieroglyphics formed a clumsy, tangled line which ran across the paper in knots, which it was impossible to unite into a meaning.—London Globe.

FATHER OF FORTY-ONE CHILDREN.

Levi Bradshaw of Connecticut the Banner Father and Grandfather of the Country

A short ride from Moosup in what is known as the Sparks district, in the eastern part of Killingly, lives Levi Bradshaw, whose record for populating the earth is such that he deserves to become famous. Bradshaw emigrated from Rhode Island, has lived in that vicinity about thirteen years. He is now in his seventy-first year. He has been married three times and he is the father of forty-one children, forty of whom are now living. By his first wife he had six children, including a pair of twins. His second wife bore him twenty-four children, half of whom were twins. His present wife presented him with eleven children.

Bradshaw was not 14 years old when he married the first time. The eldest son is now 44 and has several children and grandchildren. Twenty-nine of the old man's sons and daughters are married and all have children. The grandfather does not know just how large his family of grandchildren and great-grandchildren has become. He can enumerate up to 150, but is in the dark as to the remainder. He estimates that they may run up to 200 or so.

The Killingly patriarch married his last wife in Danielson thirteen years ago. Only one out of her eleven children has died. The rest are healthy and robust, like the father. Mr. Bradshaw is believed to be the banner father of New England and the banner grandfather of the United States.—New London, Conn., Day.

PATAGONIAN MARKSMANSHIP.

Can Kill Water Fowls Afloat 200 Yards Distance.

The Yahgans live nearer to the South Pole than any other known people. They occupy some small islands lying south of Terra del Fuego, and are found also on the south beach of that great island itself. The territory they occupy is a maze of mountain peaks, and the conditions under which they exist are almost beyond realization by a civilized person.

The typical weapon of the Yahgans is the rawhide sling, with which they are able to kill water fowl afloat at 200 yards. To hit any bird at that distance would be called right good shooting. They can knock down and stun a guanaco with a heavy round pebble up to a hundred years. The reason for the sling as a tool of destruction is found in the fact that the Yahgans live on the beaches, where plenty of rough pebbles are always at hand. These islanders try out oil from whale blubber and store it for future use in the bladderlike leaves of a kind of seaweed found everywhere in that region.—Boston Transcript.

What Would Mither Say.

A poor old Scotsman, who could no longer till his "wee bit land," was obliged to accept the kindly proffered hospitality of his English friends. On the day of his arrival they, thinking he would enjoy it, procured some cress, which was added to the luxuries already on the table. The poor man, accustomed all his life to fare of the plainest kind, hesitated to partake of such a decided novelty as cress, and was induced to try it only by fear of hurting his hostess' feelings. In a short time she noticed that tears were coursing down Andrew's cheeks, and inquiry elicited this reply:

"I'm thinking what my puir mither would say gin she could see her son eating grass like a coo!"

He—I'd give up my life for you. She—Would you really give up the life you are living?—Boston Courier.

TO PACE CANNONS.

American Horses That Are Best Suited for Purposes of War.

In the midst of the attention we are giving to the personnel of our armies there is a feature not less important than the feeding and the physical condition of the men, and which we are apt to overlook. It is the condition and training of the army horse. Horses are almost as necessary an adjunct to a successful war as are men.

With the exception of carriage horses for use on the boulevards of large cities, and of race horses—of which class we probably breed the fastest in the world—we have not made any new additions in the production of good and serviceable horses. This was because, having such splendid railroad and electric facilities, we have had less need for horses than other people. One of the results of our new expansive policy will be to create public interest in the cavalry horse; for while we may have soldiers and a navy that can beat the world, without strong and speedy horses capable of covering a march and capturing a position by a dash, we cannot be fully equipped as a nation.

The effect of the rifled carbine guns will be to reduce the relative efficiency of cavalry, and of infantry from those of the olden time, but nevertheless the horses will still be a powerful factor in war. The style of horse needed in the army is that known in the older countries as the hunting horse, an animal with enormous heart, lungs and heavy loins, deep quarters and free moving action. Such a horse when well-groomed and bred will carry a mount of 180 pounds across country at an excellent riding pace for the space of five or six hours, and will be comparatively fit and fresh for a prolonged march at the close.

Hunters thus trained in the field to rough work, make excellent army horses. Not being much accustomed to the delights of the chase in this busy country, we have not developed the European type of hunting horse; but he is coming.

The best type of the American horse for use in the army, now comes from Kentucky, and from the neighboring mountainous states. It is claimed by some that the small, "chunky" horse is far better fitted for transporting cannon than horses of finer proportions and of greater weight and frame.

It was the need of horses of such endurance and powers which more than anything else defeated Napoleon's campaign upon Moscow.

The Russians were convinced of this, and when some of them saw a French gun at the base of an ice-covered mole with the horses that drew it, lying with broken limbs beside it, because Napoleon had omitted to bring horses for they exclaimed with joy: "God made Napoleon forget that there is a winter in this country."

The great purposes of horses in war are to transport guns, to carry the soldiers, to protect them in case of a charge and to furnish food to the army in case of famine. Many a soldier has protected his own life against an enemy from behind the dead body of his horse, and when a retreating force was cut off from its base of supplies, an army was often provisioned by the sutler's forces returning to the scene of conflict and cooking the horses that were killed in battle.

And in the Sioux campaign of 1876 General Crook was so hard pressed for food that he had to kill some of the horses, the command subsisting on the meat for several days.

The well-trained cavalry horse fights some upon his own account. He rears upon his hind legs and strikes venomously with his forelegs at the sight of an enemy whose colors he knows nearly as well as those of his master. In a charge of infantry the horse being much larger, offers a greater target than the rider who chest is protected by the erect neck and head of his gallant steed. Horses thus save the lives of the men, and few phases of war are better calculated to inspire terror in unmounted troops than a desperate advancing charge of cavalry at close quarters, with dust flying and hoofs clanging, and the discharge of carbines keeping music to the war-like neighing of stallions on full gallop. The skirmishes during the Peninsular war were mostly of this character, and the Duke of Wellington used to say that a man and his horse thus equipped, were equivalent to five infantry soldiers, though since the introduction of repeating rifles the proportions of Wellington's time are greatly altered now.

It is somewhat sad to state that despite all the uses of horses in war, and notwithstanding the great exposure of this noble animal to danger in case of battle, statistics show the death of a greater proportion of horses from disease, neglect or starvation than from actual slaughter in action. Want of food, want of water and want of rest, the common misfortune of every campaign, kills over fifty per cent. of the horses; and overwork, disease and exposure destroy a far larger proportion than are actually killed in war. If these good people who spend their nights dreaming about the parliament of Man and the federation of the world, would devote some of their spare energy to enforcing the plainest dictates of humanity in the cases of dishonest army contractors the peace societies would do much to mitigate the horrid treatment of horses in war, and accomplish some real good. Even in times of peace the number of unused horses for cavalry and artillery purposes is very large. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897, Uncle Sam lost 1,061 cavalry and artillery horses out of a total of 6,531; and this percentage which is very large would be much greater in war times, as owing to the excitement which occurs the horse sometimes suffers incredible tortures from want of food, rest and water

MUSK AND RHUBARB FROM THIBET.

Throat Rubbed With Garlic Run Through the Fool to Test Purity of Musk.

In return for the tea and other articles sent into Thibet through the Mamonetin representative of the Thibetan trade guilds, the natives send back a long list of articles, including musk, rhubarb, wool, skins of various kinds, precious stones, medicines, and a coarse grade of unbleached, silken fabric.

Musk, which forms an important part of Thibetan outward trade, is a secretion of a small deer (Cervus moschus). This animal occurs throughout Eastern Thibet, but the largest herds are said to roam over the plains near the Koko Nor. A great deal of musk passes out to North China. The consumption in Szu-Chuan is considerable, and there is no article more easily smuggled. A single "pod" rarely contains more than one-third of an ounce of musk.

Good musk, which is recognized by its rich brown color, and intensely pungent odor, is bought for ten to twelve times its weight in silver on the frontier in Chung-King it sells for as much as eighteen times its weight in silver.

It is said that practically all the musk which passes through Ta-Chien-Lu is adulterated by the Thibetans before it reaches that market by means of blood and liver. The usual test for ascertaining the purity of musk is to moisten a thread rubbed with garlic through the pod. If no odor of garlic remains the perfume is held to be sufficiently pure.

Another important article of export from Thibet is rhubarb. This plant grows abundantly in many parts of the country, the supply is said to be in excess of the demand. Great quantities are grown on the hills about Ta-Chien-Lu, but the natives, in order to dispose of it rapidly, dry it by artificial heat and thus injure its quality. The drug is from the point of view of the civilized natives, the most useful of Thibetan medicines. The best quality grows at an altitude of above nine thousand feet, and the roots are brought down in the rough state by the tribes or by the Chinese traders in Thibet. The large roots are trimmed or chopped into rough square lumps; in the Ta-Chien-Lu district, owing to the dampness of the climate, the roots have to be carefully dried, and are perforated to prevent mildew, which is the great enemy of the Chinese drug merchant. On arrival at Chung-King the lumps of rhubarb are again trimmed into small, square pieces, and after being dried are packed for Shanghai, where an equal weight is worth five times its value on the frontier.—Manufacturer.

SECRETARY SEWARD IN DISGUISE.

He Went to Court In the Hotel Porter's Knee-breeches, Stockings and Shoes.

In the North American Review, Sir William Russell, LL.D., narrates an anecdote in which Secretary Seward had part:

Mr. Seward, who had been received with great respect in Russia, came to England, and, naturally, desired to go to court. He was to be presented at the levee by the United States Minister as a Senator of the United States.

He drove off at the appointed time to the palace, but was stopped in the corridor by a gentleman in uniform, who said he could not pass because he was not "properly dressed."

Mr. Seward was in full evening dress, black dress coat, waistcoat and trousers and white cravat, but it would not do. The gentleman explained that he must have knee-breeches, shoes and stockings—that was absolutely necessary. An idea struck him, and as Mr. Seward was a nice old man, about his size, the porter of the hotel he was staying at, who sat in a box in the hall, and off he drove.

Immense success! The porter had a handsome pair of knee-breeches and black silk stockings and low shoes. A few dollars for the loan was all that was needed. Mr. Seward was speedily equipped, drove back to the palace, where he was admitted and finally had the pleasure of making his bow in the hotel porter's clothes to her Majesty.

Now, all that is changed, and American citizens attend European courts in plain evening dress.

Lincoln's Famous Letter.

A copy of the following letter of Abraham Lincoln, written to a Mrs. Bixby, of Boston, has been engrossed, framed and hung in one of the Oxford University (England) halls, as "a specimen of the purest English and elegant diction":

Dear Madam: I have been shown in the files of the War Department a statement of the Adjutant General of Massachusetts that you are the mother of five sons who have died gloriously on the field of battle. I feel how weak and fruitless must be any words of mine which should attempt to beguile you from grief of a loss so overwhelming. But I cannot refrain from tendering to you the consolation that may be found in the thanks of the Republic they died to save. I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom. Yours very sincerely and respectfully,

BRAZIL'S COMMERCE.

The Average American Overlooks the Opportunities That Lie at His Threshold.

While seeking in the Far East for consumers of his surplus products of farm and factory, the average American overlooks the opportunities open to his enterprise and sagacity in a continent which like, comparatively speaking, at the threshold of his factory and the gateway of his farm. At the same time, he fails utterly to realize that the United States the chief consumer of South American products is paying, by way of exchange, a vast tribute for her nearest and most natural market for her own products, but on all she sells there. If intelligently utilized, not only would the semi-home markets of South America save to the American consumer what he now pays in exchange to his more enterprising European competitor, who has forestalled him in the exploration and development of the vast resources of the southern republics, but they would in time turn the overwhelmingly adverse balance of trade to the credit of the United States.

To-day the leading commercial city of Brazil, Rio de Janeiro, with a population of nearly 750,000 souls, contains but one strictly American mercantile house supported by any considerable amount of capital. In the entire republic, with a population of 14,000,000, only two such houses exist. The American colony, registered, numbers probably 1,500, embracing a few coffee buyers, agents only, farmers, clerks, mechanics, dentists, and other professional men scattered over the country, while the British, French, German, Portugese and Spanish colonies number respectively, in the order named, many thousand inhabitants, representing hundreds of millions of dollars placed in mercantile, banking, mining, transportation, and other pursuits, which yield remunerative dividends.

It is obvious that a large number of energetic and intelligent Americans engaged in industrial pursuits in Bra zil would have an enormous influence in developing its natural resources, and, consequently, in increasing the purchasing power of the country.

HOW MICA IS OBTAINED.

The Process is Described as the Poetry of Mining.

The mica trade is controlled practically by three or four large concerns in New York, Chicago and Boston. These houses have an agent who buys for cash whatever mica is brought in by the miners. They control the market and fix the prices to be paid to the miner, as well as the prices for which it is sold in the markets.

Mica, it need hardly be said, is a very valuable, almost precious, mineral, as those who are obliged to buy a small strip for their stove doors will testify. A package worth hundreds of dollars can be carried in a basket slung over the arm, or in a pair of sad dlebags on horseback. When prepared for the market the solid block, as taken from the mine, is split into sheets. These are cut into squares or rectangles of almost every possible size, from 2x2 inches up to 10x10 inches, and sometimes even larger. There are no less than 183 regular sizes kept in stock by dealers.

The mining of mica is the poetry of mining. It is impossible to conceive of a more exciting and fascinating employment. The veins of mica-bearing quartz, lying between rocks of different formation, has been found. The cap rock has been blasted away. Little "nigger-heads"—small lumps of mica—nestling snugly with slate and other rock—are growing plentiful. The rock is carefully examined by the experienced miner, and all indications are that mica will soon be found. A blast is made. The rock and debris are cleared away, and there in the bottom is a block of the precious stuff, a ragged corner showing itself black and glittering in the white quartz in which it is imbedded. With the tips of the fingers the miner gently and affectionately caresses it. More dirt and small stones which partly covers it. Its thickness is carefully noted, its position in the rock is learnedly discussed, and many a speculation indulged in as to its size and quality. The hole is quickly drilled, the small blast is made, just loosening the rock, and all eagerly crowd around as one of the men with his pick pulls away the broken stone. There it lies, a black, glittering mass, nine or ten inches across by three or four inches thick, and irregular in shape, as all blocks of mica are. A good-sized block, and, if solid and of a perfect cleavage, will be worth several dollars. The excitement is not allayed, however, and will not be until the block is split open and we know how it looks on the inside. It is a very bad thing to split open a block at the mine, and contrary to all rules, for there is danger that the fine, polished faces will be scratched.—Goodey's Magazine.

A New Kind of Trolley.

Who would have thought ten years ago that the following little conversation would occur in 1898?

"Mama, Mama," said four-year-old Dotty, as a tired pair of horses lazily dragged a street car along an suburban avenue, "there's a new kind of twolle car as have to have horses."—Electrical Review.

THE AMERICAN SAILOR OF TO-DAY.

The Black Sheep of the Family No Longer Eligible in the Navy.

Jacky, who used to be more sailor than gunner, is now more gunner than sailor. Just in proportion as he has ceased to be a part of the great engine on which he lives, so he has come more and more into the control of it. And as the cardinal purpose of a warship is to hit things with her projectiles, Jacky has become a specialist in getting that work done at which he does it in two places—at the guns and at the engines. Correctly pointed guns are of no use unless the platform on which they rest is put in proper relation to the thing to be hit, and kept there; equally it is useless to get the ship into proper place unless the guns are correctly pointed. Men who can do either of these things must have natural capacities, and be susceptible to education, and only men of this sort are eligible for the navy.

Accordingly the "beach-comber," or the "rock-scorpion," or any other variety of that ruck of marine refuse which drifts around the great maritime ports in ships in any craft where grub is plenty and work light, no longer slings his hammock on Uncle Sam's berth deck, as he used to do to the shame of the service in years gone by. Nor can the tramp, nor the jail bird, nor even the incorrigible black sheep of the family that has provided for to the relief of constables and long suffering relatives. No man or boy can now pass a United States naval recruiting officer unless he is clean, healthy, honest, young, strong and intelligent, or else he will afterward get that advancement, which is certainly open to him without fear or favor, unless he continues to show aptitude and ability.—Park Benjamin in Independence.

ASKED FOR A SHIRT, GOT A WIFE,

An Incident of the Civil War—A Kind Act Reaps Its Reward.

The following is given because of the valuable suggestion it may contain for our young soldiers. It is the story of a clean shirt and how it gained one a good wife.

During the civil war there was a young lady in Georgetown who found it in her power to do a great deal for the Confederate soldiers confined in prison at Washington. Young, beautiful, cultured, of a wealthy and prominent family, she was frequently allowed admission to the prison, which her she always took her maid with a well stocked basket of good things for the poor boys behind the bars. One day as she was passing through a group of men in the common prison, she stopped and asked them:

"If there is anything that you would like to have that I can bring you, won't you let me know? I shall be very glad."

One man stepped forward promptly. Bowing most courteously, he said:

"If you will be so kind, I would like very much to have a clean shirt."

He was a young lieutenant from Louisiana, one of the handsomest and most elegant men I ever met, and when that young lady looked up into his brave face she found it in her heart to give him much more than a clean shirt, for she married him as soon as the war was over.—Philadelphia Times.

An Opportunity Seized.

A certain little girl living not far from New York, has always had impressed on her youthful mind—sometimes at the cost of rather painful experiences—that it is wrong to cry. She has a very firmly convinced that she was a rule without exceptions, when suddenly an exception presented itself. The little girl was astonished, but rose nobly to the occasion, and this is the story thereof as told by a friend of the family:

The little girl's baby brother died, and the friend, meeting her soon afterward, sympathized with her regarding the loss.

"Yes," said the child, "and when he died, mamma cried and mamma cried. Then I cried a little, too. Mamma said it was right for me to cry this time, because my little brother was dead, so I cried harder and harder; why"—with great earnestness—"I just cried to beat the band!"

Shipping Molten Iron by Rail.

Shipping molten iron by rail is a daily stroke of economy to be witnessed at Duquesne, Pa. The molten iron is taken from the furnaces and runs into an immense mixing ladle having a capacity of 250 tons, and from this it is poured into the 20-ton ladle cars, the ladles being made of sheet steel or iron, with a lining of refractory material. The cars are then hauled by a locomotive to the steel works, where the direct conversion of the molten iron into open-earth steel is made, avoiding all the expense of casting the metal into pigs and cooling, handling and reheating and remelting the pig metal.—New York Commercial.

Excellent Effect.

"I suppose, Henry," said the old gentleman to his future son-in-law, "that you are aware the check for $5,000 I put among your wedding presents was merely for effect?"

"Oh, yes, sir," responded the cheerful Henry, "and the effect was excellent. You've just finished it this morning without a word."—Harlem Life.

A Chance for All.

Mrs. Grab—Are you going to have your darter take music lessons?

Mrs. Gadd—No, I guess not. She hain't no ear for music.

Mrs. Gabb—Well, I wouldn't be discouraged at that; mebbe she might learn to play classic, anyhow.—New York Weekly.

Queer Notions.

Kissing is unknown to the Australian aborigines, the Maories, Papuans, and Eskimo.

Among the Kols of Central India a sham fight always accompanies a wedding ceremony.

Suicide at one time was very common among the Brahmins of India, who held the body in contempt, regarding it merely as a covering for the soul.

Census-taking in Japan is simple, but the results are utterly untrustworthy. The houses are counted, and an average of five persons is allowed for each house.

The Papuans of the Miiny coast of New Guinea are still in the most primitive state. They are wholly unacquainted with metals, and make their weapons of stone, bones, and wood.

The laws of Mexico provide that a Mormon who wishes to take a second wife must present a certificate, signed by his first help-meet, to the effect that she is willing; and he must also have the express consent of the second wife and her parents.

A singular custom prevails among the Tartars or Kurds. If a man loses his cattle or other property, he pours a little brown sugar into a piece of colored cloth, ties it up, and carries one such parcel to each of his friends and acquaintances. In return he is presented, according to circumstances, with a cow, or sheep, or a sum of money.

A regular slave-mart still exists in many country districts of Finlan. Once a year such paupers, lunatics, and aged people of each parish as cannot support themselves are put up at public auction, and consigned to those families or farmers who will board them at the lowest price offered by the parish authorities. The helpless creatures are made to work as much as possible by their owners, who have the right to chastise them.

Dressy Accessories.

For the woman who may possess but few changes in the way of bodices, the perfectly plain corsage is the best style to select. There are any number of little accessories which may be used to give the effect of having quite a number of pretty waists. Dainty over blouses, fichus, small boleros and pretty neck fixings tend to brighten up the plainest gown and gives a stylish finish as well.

A pretty model for freshening up a waist is portrayed in the illustration. The fichu of lace comes over the shoulders, crossing in front and tieing in a graceful bow at the back.

Protecting Expensive Tables.

Expensive dressing tables are frequently provided with a plate-glass top, which fits over them perfectly. This protects not only the finish of the table itself, but as it can be lifted off, often the expensive embroidered drawn-work mats and doilies are placed between the glass and the top. In this way they show through and are yet protected. The plan, however, is scarcely an artistic one. The glass top is not a bad idea in itself, but the plastering of doilies beneath seems unsuitable. The same objection applies to the elaborately ornamented dressing-table utensils. It is a common thing to have these tables set out so elaborately that a number of everything for real use is kept in one of the drawers, such a course being actually necessary because of the elaboration in the show set. Fewer of these show implements and a selection made of rich, plain ones, in addition to a dainty one like the careful use which belongs to refined ways, would seem to be in better taste.

Obstinacy or Determination.

How often do we speak of a child as obstinate and pig-headed when he is merely determined. We fail to see what we take to be obstinacy to give up some pet project, is really a courage and tenacity of purpose which will prove a successful shield in years to come when fighting the battle of life. What a terrible mistake we make then when we try to subdue the child, and, as we say, "break his spirit."

A Chafing Dish Recipe.

A chafing-dish dainty served at a recent Sunday night tea was chopped Little Neck clams salted in a little butter. Just before they were ready to serve two or three eggs were broken into the brazier and the mixture tossed lightly with a fork until the eggs had cooked to the consistency of a soft scramble, when it was turned out on squares of toast, a little paprica sprinkled over it, and the dish served.

DR. ERNEST VON SCHWENINGER.

The Wily Physician Who Was Able to Make Bismarck Take Medicine.

Dr. Ernest Von Schweninger, the physician of Prince Bismarck, is the only doctor who was ever able to induce the iron chancellor to take medicine. But Dr. Schweninger is a remarkable man. He got his pathology, anatomy and physiology in Munich, and it was in that city he began his medical career at 30 years of age. It was soon afterward that he met the family of Bismarck, and his amazing success with its members gave him at once a great reputation and a very large practice. He has rather original ideas of medicine, and stands for reform in the practice. He is also a great dress reformer, believes in wearing the hair long and denounces corsets. He treats the sultan of Turkey by telegraph, and Baron Rothschild often consults him. Even Li Hung Chang has found him an excellent adviser. His greatest fame rests on the fact, rare in medicine, that his patients always get well. He holds a professorship in the University of Berlin, but his colleagues, Koch, Virchow, Treitscheke and Dubois-Raymond, do not like him, nor does he like them. The doctor has a striking appearance. His nose is straight, his skin bronzed, and his figure athletic. It is said that Bismarck said that the doctor "is the only man whose will is as strong as or even stronger than my own." That is why, perhaps, the man of blood and iron consented to take Dr. Schweninger's direction.—Chicago Times-Herald.

THE DIVERSITY OF WARSHIPS.

A Very Necessary Adjunct to the Modern Man-of-War.

If Paul Jones in ghostly guise wanders around the warships of our new navy he must see many surprising accessories to the fighting and working forces as organized in his day. One novel and necessary addition is the crew of a warship of the present time is the submarine diver. The importance of this individual to the welfare of a warship has been amply shown during the recent operations against the Spanish fleet. He has been the most important point in the manoeuvring during the opening events of the war, and this has rendered it necessary for our ships to be in the best possible condition for work, owing to the lack of drydocks to enable us to clean the foul bottoms of our vessels when they come off a long voyage. It has been necessary to send divers down to do the work as best they could.

It has not been done well, but it has been the best kind of substitute that could be found for the proper article. The submarine divers are able only to scrape away the barnacles and seaweed, and even then they are so handicapped by the heaviness and unhandiness of their dress that it is impossible to do the work in any but a clumsy and incomplete way.

But, good or bad, the diver has become a necessary part of the ship's crew. Many warships carry one or more trained men. He must be possessed of an exceptionally strong constitution, and above all without the slightest tendency to any heart trouble.

To Remember Faces.

To remember a face, as a person is called, the rule is not difficult to follow; pick out some feature or peculiarity by which you can distinguish that face or person from all other faces or persons and associate the name with that feature or peculiarity. No two countenances or figures are alike, and it is by noting how they differ one from another that you will remember them.

In explaining his remarkable memory for faces, Henry Reed once said to a reporter that he never looked a man in the face that some striking peculiarity, a line, a wrinkle, an expression about the eye, the set of the lips, the shape of the nose, something set that man's face down in his mind sradically and distinguished from the rest of mankind—so that when a man approached him he would think: "Here comes that man Robinson, whose right pupil is bigger than his left," or "Here is Thompson, whose nose is so crooked."—Self Culture.

Coloring Leather by Electricity.

A clever adaptation of the principle of catahoresis, by which medicines are driven through the skin to any part within the body by means of electrical currents, has been made in the decoration of leather. The zinc covered table on which the hide or skin is placed forms the positive pole of the generation of current, and the fluid dyeing material is poured on this table, and the negative pole is then connected to the leather. The current stamps the required design on the immediate surface of the leather and carries the coloring matter within. Patterns may be made on the leather by covering it with an ordinary stencil system and connecting the plates to the negative pole.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE CAPTAIN'S ECONMOICAL WIFE.

Toppled the Other Way and Put the Boat in Place

In a Massachusetts seaport town there is a retired sea captain who makes a frequent boast that he has the "smartest woman along shore." New instances of her enterprise are constantly coming to notice. The last one refers to an exploit by which she saved herself a doctor's bill. The captain tells the story with great relish.

"She's getting pretty heavy," he begins, "and now and again she'll miss her footing. Well, not many months ago she missed it on our stairs and fell all in a heap down three steps over to her side.

"When I got to her, she said, just as brisk as usual: "Don't ask me if I've hurt myself, Cap'n, for of course I have. I reckon I've unjointed a bone in my left leg, falling on it. Now don't try to pull me up. Let me scramble round a minute, and you go for the doctor.'

"Well, the doctor's our next neighbor, and didn't take long to get him. He looked her over, and said there was a bone somewheres round her left hip that was out of kilter.

"At that mother rose right up on her feet and toppled over the opposite way from what she'd fallen downstairs, and we heard a kind of a crack.

"She looked up at the doctor with her mouth kind of whitish, but the same old twinkle in her eyes, and she says: 'I believe I've set that bone myself, doctor,' and she had!"—Youth's Companion.

FRIENDLY WITH THE DOGS.

The Rats Knew Their Protectors and Wouldn't Eat Without Them.

A gentleman who lived some years since in Renfrewshire was accustomed, after his shooting excursions, to feed his dogs in their kennels, the food being placed in a long trough. On one occasion, when he had attended to them as usual, he looked into the kennel through a hole in the door, and was somewhat astonished, not at perceiving a number of rats there, but at seeing them in the trough, quietly and fearlessly partaking of the bread and milk with the dogs, which seemed to pay no attention to them whatever. He was determined to destroy the rats and the next day he placed the trough in such a position that a gun pointed through the hole would rake it from one end to the other.

At the usual hour the food was placed as a lure, and the dogs were kept out, but the plan did not succeed. The plotter against the rats could observe the head of one of them—old and aggeravated—appear out of hole after hole, and from under the manger for the purpose of reconnoitreing, but none of them descended. Having waited to no purpose for half an hour he let in the dogs, and in a few minutes the rats were again perfectly in perfect harmony. They seemed to be aware that their safety was connected with the presence of the dogs.

Slang Puzzled Him.

Edouard Remenyi, the great violinist, who recently died, used to say that some of the hardest studying he ever did in his life began after an experience he had in Detroit.

"On my first tour of this country," he delighted in telling, "I worked unceasingly to acquire a knowledge of the language and got on fairly well. But the slang that I found so prevalent baffled me more than anything else. I gave a performance in Detroit one night and met with a reception that warmed my heart toward her people. Among other things, this appeared in one of the papers next morning: 'Remenyi's ugly little bow, long fingers, whose clutches hung loosely about his ungainly person, waddled to the footlights.' But, sakes alive! how he did play the fiddle!

"Now, I couldn't make out what that 'sakes alive' meant at all. Timidly approached a gentlemanly citizen, told him of my inability to grasp the meaning of the slang, and asked him if the expression was intended to be complimentary.

"He kindly read it and replied: 'Well, I should snicker.'

"I was more bewildered than ever, and from that time on made the study of slang one of my chief occupations."—Detroit Free Press.

WIT AND HUMOR.

"Do you understand women?"

"Yes, I understand them well enough to know that I can't understand them at all."—Chicago Record.

"Hark! Somebody is playing a delightful bit from Wagner."

"Oh, no; that's only James shovelling coal in the cellar."

"You called on Miss Spritely the other evening? Didn't you find her charming in conversation?"

"I found her charming in monologue. We didn't succeed in holding any conversation."—Chicago Tribune.

A NEGRO CROESUS.

Astonishing Rise to Riches and Power of a Former Alabama Slave.

The richest and most powerful man socially and politically in the Republic of Guatemala is John Knight, a negro, who was born a slave in Alabama and who was sold from the public slave block as late as March, 1860.

Knight was an exceptionally bright boy. He never saw his father, who was sold into a distant state before he was born, but the family to which Knight belonged gave him an education, and at the age of sixteen the boy was sold for $1,600, a high price, considering that the sale occurred in November, 1860, the very time of Lincoln's election.

Knight remained with the family of his new master until the close of the war. In common with thousands of other slaves, he then declared his freedom. He walked to New Orleans, and for the first time in his life was away from his master's properties. In New Orleans he worked as a wharf laborer for a firm which handled fruits from Central America. He saved his money. Everyone about the wharves knew John Knight, the strong, capable and industrious colored man there. One day in June, 1866, he was sent by his employer down to Yucatan, in Central America, to live there as boss of the packing and shipping of fruits to New Orleans. He had $20 a week salary.

That was practically the beginning of John Knight's millions. He lived in Yucatan a year, worked hard, saved his every cent, and dreamed of the day when he could have an orange, banana and pineapple shipper on his own account. Having saved a little, he leased tracts of free and fertile fruit lands south of San Christoval in Gautemala, he went and located there. A live, wide-awake person was something unique in those days in that region of revolution and counter-revolution, in which Ramon Sanchez had been deposed, was just as its close.

John Knight saw what hard work and an opportunity to gain the favor of the new administration would do for himself. He secured a grant for a concession of some 50,000 acres of land suitable for pineapple and banana growing he would go to New Orleans and get the wholesale fruit dealers, who ruled the American market thirty years ago, to agree to buy $2,000,000 a year of Guatemala fruits. The Guatemala Government gladly accepted the proposition. In less than three months the deal was consummated at New Orleans. It was the beginning of the trade of millions of dollars annually.

To make a long story short, John Knight got other concessions, as he demonstrated the profit there was in growing fruits for the United States markets. The shipping business to New York and San Francisco was started and enormously enlarged.

He married a native young woman in Stapa in 1872, and the union has been a great help to his fortunes. About twenty years ago he induced New England capital to embark extensively in coffee growing in Guatemala, and he invested over $150,000 of his own capital in the industry. The Government gave him a very advantageous shipping concession for his efforts in bringing capital to the country. Coffee growing proved wonderfully renumerative for a dozen years. At one time the annual shipments of coffee from the Knight fincas were the largest from any private estate in all Central America.

The negro planter branched out in other directions. He went to Philadelphia and contracted to furnish many thousands of feet of mahogany yearly for ten years. Then he bought up tracts of mahogany trees in Nicaragua and Guatemala. At one time he was the second largest dealer in mahogany in the world. Everything he touched he made a success.

He lives in royal style in the suburbs of Guatemala City. No one in that region except the Barrios ever entertained so lavishly as Don Knight and his wife. Their home is a large modern house, filled with costly and polished woods, costly hangings—all furnished from New York and New Orleans. A small army of servants attends the wants of the family.—New York Journal.

Pirate of Salt Water Fish.

The greatest enemy to the best species of fish is found in the vicious, voracious, and dangerous bluefish. In size, ordinarily as long as your arm, with teeth like barbs, he can snap in halves a fish of his own size, and nearly all fish stand in mortal dread of him. Generally traveling in schools—sometimes as much as five miles in length—they will in short order decimate a whole school of shad, spot, mackerel or such like. In his stomach can be found numbers of smaller fish, according to size. One was opened which contained a trout of almost his own size, while another contained a shad almost as large as himself. Similarly are found having within themselves one or more of their own species of smaller size. But their destructiveness does not end here. They will follow a school of shad, spot, mackerel and cod, snapping and slashing their prey until the water is all afoam. They eat until they can hold no more, but their viciousness is not abated. With a snap a shad is sundered and spit out, and the next snare is the same fate. They never tire, and the fish destroyed, but uneaten, cover the surface of the water.

Without question the bluefish is by far the greatest factor to be reckoned with in connection with the preservation of our food fishes. But man's effort seems to be futile in his extinction or banishment. Nets will not hold him, and only the stoutest line (for he is "game" in every sense of the word), protected with metal about the hook, will withstand his vicious snapping.—Richmond Dispatch.

Y. M. C. A. GYM. NOW OPEN

INTEREST IN ATHLETICS IS HIGH AT THE VERY START.

The Gymnasium Has Been Undergoing Repairs for the Last Month—A New Game Called "King Pin" Introduced.

After being closed twenty-six days for repairs, the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium was informally opened Monday to its members. The interest in the athletic department of the institution has not lagged during the summer as was forcibly illustrated by the twenty-five members who were present last night to use the privileges.

The gymnasium has been thoroughly overhauled and put in first-class condition. The tank and the locker rooms have been enameled white and make a very pretty appearance. No classes were formed last night, but the physical director will begin to organize them along during this month.

The summer memberships expire September 1st and several of the summer members became so accustomed to using the gymnasium and the tank that they have taken a full membership. It promises to be one of the liveliest seasons in the history of the Y. M. C. A. C. E. A. Heywood, the physical director, has introduced a new system of gymnastics to develop men. Now the poorest, physically, can come in and begin any time, and at the same there will always be enough work for the most advanced.

Basket ball is looking up, and the candidates for the regular team will practice for the first time Friday night at 8:30 o'clock. The season will no doubt be an active one, and some big matches are sure to be scheduled. The management of the team has not yet been decided upon.

In addition to the regular team, Mr. Heywood has determined to organize three more teams, if he has material enough to do so, among the members. These last teams, though, will not play with any outside teams either here or elsewhere, but will compete among themselves for a banner. Other athletic and gymnastic contests will be arranged later on for medals, and all who attain to a certain average will be eligible for the prizes.

A new game for the Juniors has been introduced called "King Pin." It consists of an upright pin on which rings are to be thrown. It requires some little skill to do this successfully, and the game promises to be popular.

The Bard Company Organized.

A meeting was held last Monday of the stockholders of The Bard Company, recently incorporated, for the purpose of electing directors and officers. The Board of Directors elected are as follows: David Eastman, of Plainfield; Geo. L. Colgate, of Plainfield; Chas. W. Hunter, of Caldwell; Geo. W. Wrennick, of Westfield; W. L. Chapman, of Somerville. The officers are Geo. L. Colgate, president and treasurer; Geo. W. Wrennick, vice-president; W. L. Chapman, secretary.

Appealed the Case.

Instead of paying a judgment of $3.45, D. J. Galbraith, of North avenue, has appealed a contract case from Justice Moebser's court to the Common Pleas at Elizabeth, and hopes to have the decision reversed when it comes to trial this fall.

STILL ON THE BADGER.

NAVAL RESERVES HOPE TO BE MUSTERED OUT BY OCTOBER 1ST.

But the Boys Have Become so Accustomed to Disappointment That They Won't be Surprised at Most Anything

A week ago the Badger's crew looked forward to an early mustering out. A bulletin was published cutting down furloughs to twenty-four hours, and the two half-watches that had gone on extended furloughs were telegraphed for. This, with the sailing orders for League Island navy yard, created a wave of enthusiasm which was speedily checked by the order from the commandant of the yard to take aboard 550 tons of coal before leaving.

The boys have become so accustomed to disappointments in regard to being discharged that they merely groaned in unison, gave their coal, their suits and started in. The captain of the Massapequa, the collier from which the coal is being taken, reported fifteen tons a day as the average for a single bucket. The Badger's boys averaged a little over 100, and as one of the crew put it, "we are so good at the business that Uncle Sam will keep us to coal ship for him."

Saturday, a week ago, the ladies of the church, about thirty in number, visited the ship and were entertained by the crew as well as circumstances would permit. They were presented with two framed photographs of the ship and her crew, and in return they insisted upon furnishing the Badger's mascot, the dog taken from the prize, with a silver collar.

While nothing is known officially about sailing orders, it is confidently expected that all hands look forward to being mustered out by October 1st.

NEGROES AGAINST VOORHEES.

In Convention at Trenton They Decide to Ask Recognition From the Democrats.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 28.—A convention of colored voters was held yesterday afternoon in the Taylor Opera House assembly rooms. It was decided that they present themselves in a body to the Democratic Gubernatorial Convention today and ask for recognition.

The leaders of the movement say they don't want any promises from the Democrats, but mean to show the Republicans what the colored voters can do.

By resolution they condemned the Republican party for laxity in giving representation, and the Republican candidate for Governor, Foster M. Voorhees, "for his unfriendly action to our race, viz., his antagonistic efforts to defeat a measure in behalf of the Bordentown Colored Industrial School. He and Senator Skirm were the two Republicans who voted against this measure, which was directly in the interest of every New Jersey Afro-American."

—The Bard Company are offering great inducements to bicycle purchasers now to make room for golf and camera goods.

—Joseph Booth, a returned missionary from Africa, now living in Piscatawaytown, addressed the congregation of the Seventh-Day Baptist church Saturday evening on the manners and customs of the African people, and related his experiences among them.

THE CONVENTION.

county Democrats was in striking contrast from that of the Union men. The caucus met in room 28 at the Trenton House promptly at 10 o'clock. Judge Bartine, of Somerville, was made chairman, and George H. Cramer, of North Branch, secretary. The representatives on the convention committees were chosen as follows: Rules, L. S. DeFour, of Bound Brook; organization, Judge J. D. Bartine, of Somerville; resolutions, ex-Senator Charles B. Moore, of Franklin; credentials, George H. Cramer, of North Branch.

The delegates were sent unpledged to the convention where they will vote as individuals and not as a solid delegation. This, of course, practically admits that the vote from Somerset will be divided. North Plainfield is represented by John P. Emmons, H. M. Cooke and W. E. Smith.

There is a great concourse of politicians here who make the Trenton House their headquarters. Prominent among them is the "Farmer Orator," James E. Martine, of Plainfield. Before noon, the hour set for the convention, the delegates began to swarm in the direction of Taylor's Opera House where the convention met.

The convention, with the exception of the Union county delegation, was ready to begin at noon, but the call to order was delayed forty minutes for the men from Union county. Then tiring of waiting, Col. Price, chairman of the State committee, called the convention to order at 12:40 o'clock, after which the State call was read. Five minutes later the Union county delegation marched in to their seats. A section in front, to the left of the centre, was reserved for them. In the proscenium box, overlooking them, was Senator Smith.

The temporary organization was effected with ex-Prosecutor William B. Gourley, of Passaic, as temporary chairman and William K. Dovereux, of Monmouth, as temporary secretary, with the following assistant secretaries: S. A. Lanning, Cumberland; John H. Mattison, Somerset; James D. Carpenter, Gloucester; H. L. Stout, Hunterdon; James J. Farrell, Essex; Charles A. Ranson, Hudson; James F. Burke, Camden; James Kerney, Mercer.

Chairman Gourley made an eloquent address in which he rehearsed the faults of the present state of administration and condemned the action of Griggs in accepting the national appointment as unconstitutional. During the speech, he mentioned the name of Bryan which was loudly cheered by the delegates from the rural districts. Senator Daly, who afterwards rose to make a motion, received an ovation.

At 5 o'clock the convention adjourned for a recess of an hour. The convention is said to be the largest and most enthusiastic Democratic gathering ever held in Trenton. Each gathering of the different candidates has all sorts of badges and placards for its favorite son. So far the race is free for all and it is impossible to say how it is going to turn out.

Senator Smith, as yet, has come out strongly for no special candidate.

The Democratic State committee held a meeting last evening in room 16 at the Trenton House, at which the temporary officers of the convention were chosen.

The committee decided to increase the number of delegates in the convention to 1,051, which gives the following counties these additional delegates: Hudson, 6; Bergen, 1; Burlington, 1: Camden, 2; Essex, 2; Middlesex, 1; Somerset, 1; Union, 2. It was also decided to allow two colored delegates from Monmouth county into the convention. The delegates will be John Marshall and W. Frank Patterson. It was further agreed that a body of dissatisfied Republican colored voters, numbering 60, should be allowed into the convention hall, and that Colonel William Murrell could make a five-minute speech, stating what arrangement the colored voters desired to have made for the establishment of a permanent colored headquarters.

Has Not Forfeited Franchise.

A Fredonian reporter interviewed E. H. Radel, secretary of the Brunswick Traction Company, this morning, regarding the reported forfeiture of the right to extend its line through Somerville because the tracks had not been laid over the entire proposed route. Secretary Radel characterized the rumor as the veriest bosh and said that as soon as the Central Railroad finished its viaduct the trolley tracks will be laid.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

On Adjourned Case.

The contract case of George Miller against Mrs. Phœbe Marshall was adjourned Monday once more, this time until Friday morning, when the case will be tried at Mrs. Marshall's house because she is very feeble, and cannot leave her room. The case was brought in Justice Moeber's court.

EIGHTY YEARS OF LIFE.

ETHAN LANPHEAR RECITES HIS OWN CAREER INTERESTINGLY.

It Fills a Book of 160 Pages—Exploits His Views on the Great Moral Questions—Reviews Troubles in the Church.

"Life, Travels and Observations of Eighty Years" is the title of an interesting little volume which Ethan Lanphear, of Central avenue, has recently issued. The book is typographically beautiful consisting of 160 pages and a number of illustrations. It was written by Mr. Lanphear since his eightieth birthday, March 2, 1898.

It is divided into four chapters, all of which are very interesting reading though they are made up wholly of incidents in the author's life. He devotes considerable space to exploiting his ideas on the great moral questions of the day, such as temperance, church connections, theology and its various phases as viewed by different denominations.

The third chapter is the most interesting locally. It deals with the author's exciting experiences in local church life with a frankness that makes it almost sensational in a way. His recitation of the charges made against him in the Seventh-Day Baptist church is very out-spoken, though he mentions no names. He also rehearses the attempt to divide the city park into building lots without mincing words of his opinion of the men that endeavored to engineer the deal to consummation. He claims to have been instrumental in preserving the city park as it is.

The last chapter of the book is devoted to his personal history, religious opinion and sundry topics.

Only 100 copies of the book were issued, and the edition has nearly been exhausted.

TRAMP'S UGLY MANNER.

THREATENED TO HARM MRS. EDEN BOICE MONDAY MORNING.

The Tramp Said "Let Me in Here or I'll Do You," and When the Door Was Shut in His Face Threatened to Break It In.

"Let me in here or I'll do you!"

These were the words that greeted the ears of Mrs. Eden Boice, of West Third street, corner Central avenue, early Monday morning.

The person addressing Mrs. Boice was a large man of the tramp style. His clothes were of the worst sort and his general make up filled one with horror. He was insulting and bold, and when he appeared at the back door of Mrs. Boice's house and asked for something to eat, he did so with a spirit of hatred and determination. Mrs. Boice was greatly frightened and immediately screamed for help.

This incensed the tramp and he ran into the yard, where he picked up a large stone. When he returned he found that Mrs. Boice had locked her self in the window. This excited him still further and he threatened to break the door in and to smash the windows.

Mrs. Boice continued to scream and finally her cries reached the ears of neighbors. Presently an officer appeared and learned the trouble. As the officer appeared the tramp disappeared and after searching for nearly an hour the officer was obliged to give up all hope of finding the hobo.

In the meantime Mrs. Boice had suffered from the shock and her nerves were much affected. It was sometime afterward before she fully recovered her composure. She then related how she had been insulted by the tramp and how he threatened her life. From the description given of him he was a total stranger in these parts, but it will not be well for him if he is caught roaming about the city.

TO INCREASE THE MORTGAGE.

Sanitary Company Will Borrow $6,000 of James Clark.

A special meeting of the Plainfield Sanitary Company stockholders will be held at the County Clubhouse Saturday evening for the purpose of ratifying the following resolution adopted by the board of directors:

Whereas, At a meeting of the directors of this company held May 27th, 1898, a resolution afterwards ratified by the stockholders, was adopted, authorizing the making of a mortgage to James Clark as trustee for $5,000. And

Whereas, It has been found necessary for the purposes recited in said resolution to borrow the sum of $6,000, instead of $5,000. Be It Resolved, That the bond and mortgage authorized to be made shall be for the sum of $6,000, and that it shall be made to James Clark and John W. Murray as trustees."

Bought the Late E. E. Marshall's Stock.

Woolston & Buckle, the wall paper merchants on North avenue, have purchased the stock of paper, etc., in the store recently conducted by the late E. E. Marshall, and the business will be closed out. The business was transacted by Charles Runyon for Mrs. Marshall.

Robberies Reported.

It is stated on the best of authority that during the past few weeks there have been several robberies in this city, but they have been kept quiet in the hopes that the thieves might be caught. It is also said that there are a number of the city police who have not yet heard about them.

SCHOOL BOYS TO TRY FOR THE PRESS MEDAL.

All - Round Championship of Plainfield High School.

HELD FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

NINE EVENTS TO BE CONTESTED AT THE CRESCENT OVAL.

A Meeting of the Athletic Association Yesterday Arranged the Details—Events to Be Handicapped—Most of the Contestants Are As Yet Untried—Much Interest Shown By High School Boys.

It is now the turn of the boys of the Plainfield High School to renew their activity in athletic sports. While there is not sufficient material in the school for a football eleven, general athletics have taken a boom within the last week. It has been the custom of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association to hold its handicap games in the fall of every year, The Daily Press medal for the all round championship of the High School has been a prominent factor in attracting the boys to enter the games and has yearly produced exciting contests. This year The Daily Press medal will bring out a number of the scholastic athletes who will meet for their annual competition at the Crescent Oval Friday afternoon.

The Daily Press medal was first offered in 1894, when it was won by Edgar I. Serrell, of the class of '95. In 1895 George Proctor Smith, of '98, was the victor. No field games were held the year following. Last year Carroll L. Runyon, of '99, won the medal by clever work. As all the prominent athletes have now left the High School, it is an open question as to who will be the winner this year. The result will be an increase in the interest among both contestants and audience.

A meeting of the Athletic Association was held Monday afternoon when it was decided to hold the fall handicap games at the Crescent Oval Friday afternoon. They will be open only to the boys of the High School. It was then announced that The Daily Press medal would be offered again this year. It will be a handsome silver medal, appropriately engraved. The list of events was left to the Advisory Board. The entries will close Wednesday afternoon. The handicapping will be done by the Advisory Board, which is composed of Albert B. Meredith, Thomas A. Cuming and Charles B. Morse, assisted by the former president of the association, Carroll L. Runyon, whose class acquaintance with the boys makes him particularly fitted for the work.

The Advisory Board held a meeting yesterday afternoon when the following list of events was selected: 100-yard dash, 440-yard run, ½-mile walk, ½-mile bicycle race, 1-mile bicycle race, running broad jump, running high jump, putting the shot, three-legged race.

Tickets for the field games have been issued and will be sold by the members. Admission will be sold by the members. Admissions will be ten cents which will admit to the grand stand.

There are now over a dozen of the High School boys who have expressed a wish to contest for the all-round championship. Most of them will take part in every event. The events will all be handicap so as to give all a chance. The points in the events will be scored five points for first place, three points for second and one point for third.

STREET WORK.

Small Improvements Being Made in Several Parts of the City.

William Hand, who is macadamizing West Sixth street beyond Grant avenue for the property-owners, hired the city steam roller and sprinkler Thursday to put the finishing touches on the work. After the men had finished that job, they took the roller to Grant avenue and smoothed down the rodbed which was torn up by the recent rains.

Work is progressing slowly on the streets, culverts and storm sewers. Much of the water that used formerly to go to Grant avenue now finds its way down the Plainfield avenue storm sewer. It is proposed to run another pipe diagonally across South Second street at Grant avenue to the twenty-four-inch storm sewer to still further relieve the surface at Grant avenue.

There is still some cleaning to be done about the Grant avenue storm sewer. During the heavy rain three weeks ago, when the men should have been at the grates scraping away the debris which had accumulated during the rain, they were off in another part of the city felling trees. The gratings became so clogged with branches and mud that the water could not flow through. This water, standing there, did considerable damage which is not all effaced yet.

SCENE IN A PORTUGAL WINERY,

In the mountains, at the Quinto do Sexio, Portugal, a famous Port Wine district where the custom of treading the grapes for Port Wine is still in vogue. From ten to a dozen men or women for each gang in turn continue the treading, day and night, during the four or five weeks vintage. Some of the treading vats are large enough for three separate rows of ten men each, who with their white breeches well tucked up, their arms on each other's shoulders, raise and tread their feet alternately, with song and shouts to keep the lazier ones up to the work, and a band with string instruments enlivens the hours.

Speer, of New Jersey, Uses Rollers instead of Feet.

It is from this district the vines were imported over forty years ago that now fill the vineyards of the Speer Wine Co., at Passaic.

At Passaic the same kind of grapes are crushed between large rollers of rubber, revolved by steam. This is the only place in this country where the real genuine Port Wine is made from the Oporto grape—and they are grown right in SPEER'S VINEYARDS.

These vineyards extend over ⅓ of a mile along one of the Main avenues of Passaic, and comprise fifty six acres. The soil being rich in iron makes the wine most valuable for Medical use.

SPEER'S WINES

Are well known to be of the highest character, the oldest and most refined Wines in America, equal if not superior to any wines in the world. They consist of Port, Sherry, Burgundy, Claret, Sauterne Wines, and ★★★ Climax Brandy. Mr. Speer has some Wine in his cellars that he made over thirty eight years ago. All of Speer's Wines and Brandy are very old, rich, well rounded, soft and delicate. Every family should have a bottle or two of each variety of Speer's Wines and Brandy always in the home, for sickness or family use.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthropist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked: "Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the basis for the character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS
RIPANS
ONE GIVES RELIEF

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what I was demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $2 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar."

Some of this interview there were present two daughters who spend $10 objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the eldest lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. Before saying about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES (enough for an ordinary occasion) can now be had of druggists for five cents. This low-priced sort is for the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce ST., New York. The single cartons (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents. RIPANS TABULES may also be had of some druggists, general storekeepers, or by mail at 60 cents a bottle. Ripans Tabules are sold in many foreign countries.

HYMEN MAKES HIS BOW IN FAITH CHAPEL.

Celebration of the First Wedding Ever Held There.

MISS KYLE WEDS MR. JOMINI.

THE CHAPEL PRETTILY DECORATED FOR THE OCCASION.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes Performed the Ceremony—An Impressive Scene Was the Singing by the Guests of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again"—The Young Couple Will Live in the West.

Faith chapel, East Third street, was filled with admiring friends Tuesday at 6:30 p. m., when Miss Anna Kyle and Alfred Jomini, both residents of this city, were united in marriage by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church. There was a special significance attached to the event owing to the fact that it was the first wedding in the new chapel.

The chapel was decorated in an attractive manner by Mrs. L. J. Denton. The entire front of the main room was occupied with palms, rubber plants, and other kinds of green foliage, while a broad band of white satin ribbon was suspended directly in front of the pulpit.

Clifford Braider presided at the piano and rendered several classical selections while the guests were waiting for the bridal party. At the appointed hour the signal was given and Miss Kyle and Mr. Jomini entered the chapel together, while the Mendelssohn wedding march was being played. When they reached the front of the chapel they were met by the officiating clergyman. The ceremony was a simple one and much admired. Following it Mr. and Mrs. Jomini received their position and for a short time received the best wishes of their friends.

During congratulations Mr. Braider entertained the guests with favorite selections. A feature of the affair was the singing of "God be With You 'till We Meet Again," by the friends of the bride and groom. After the reception the happy couple left for South Plainfield, where they took a train on the Lehigh Valley Railroad for the west. Their destination is Spokane, Washington, where Mr. Jomini will engage in business. As they left the chapel they were showered with an abundance of rice. The large number of useful and pretty gifts received by the couple testified to their popularity.

The bride's gown was a Yale blue cloth, trimmed with white satin and lace. She carried a beautiful bouquet of bridal roses and maiden-hair fern.

Those who acted as ushers at the wedding were Robert Schreiner and Irving Brady, intimate friends of the contracting parties.

CONTEMPT OF COURT.

Jacob Sadosky Will Have One More Chance to Clear Himself.

A short time ago judgment was rendered in Justice Mosher's court against Jacob Sadosky, a Pole, for about $25. The constable returned the execution unsatisfied, and Counsellor W. K. McClure then began supplementary proceedings before Judge Vail to compel Sadosky to appear before William M. Stillman, a Supreme Court commissioner on September 21st, and explain where he had placed his property and money. This Sadosky failed to do, so proceedings were begun against Sadosky for contempt.

This case was to have come before Judge Vail today, but the court wishing to be lenient with the Pole gave him until next Wednesday before passing sentence upon him, and ordered him to appear before Supreme Court Commissioner Stillman Wednesday afternoon.

INDUSTRIAL HOME FOOD.

A Disinterested Visitor Says That Inmates Are Well Cared For.

Certain reports injurious to the reputation of the Industrial Home having been circulated, it seems but justice to Mr. TenEyck to say that the attention of one fully competent to judge in regard to such matters, was called to these reports and she writes: "I can truthfully say that the inmates of the home are treated very well. The food they have is nourishing—they have plenty of it and it is nicely prepared. I have been going to the home off and on ever since last January, and often arrive unexpectedly just at meal time, so that I very often see what they have to eat."

Place for Voting.

The empty store on North avenue in the row of buildings owned by Woolston and Buckle, has been secured for election purposes. Hereafter the polls will be established in this store.

AFTER THE "PHENOM."

NEWARK POLICE SAY HE CANNOT EVADE THE LAW.

Evidence of the Advertising Claims Made in Public is Against Him—He Will be Prosecuted in a Vigorous Manner.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 5.—It is the belief of the police that when the "Boy Phenomenon" comes into court this week to answer to the charge of practicing medicine without a license, he will find that the method of escape which has enable him to evade the law in Camden, Plainfield and other cities will fail him here.

The law says that no one shall practice medicine or healing for compensation without a license, and that all forms of "faith cure" or so-called magnetic healing are illegal when employed in a professional way or in cases which require medical treatment. The "Phenomenon" says that he is not a physician, but a remedy, and that he is prescribed in a perfectly regular way by a licensed physician, a man named Starkweather, who accompanies him.

In the mass of evidence in the possession of the police is the letter paper used by the boy's manager, I. Sherman, when he writes to prospective dupes or those who, having been duped, write to demand their money back. On the heading of this paper the boy is exploited as "The Magnetic Wonder of the Century in the Scientific, Magnetic, Manipulative, Medical and Mechanical Treatment of all Chronic Diseases."

According to this, say the police and the medical authorities who are prosecuting him, he is not a simple remedy but treats diseases, and any one who thus advertises violates the law. It is marvelous, the authorities say, how so many persons can be duped when the utter worthlessness of the alleged remedy is so evident.

STOLE WATERMELONS.

Then Carted Them Off to Treat His Friends With.

Dunellen, N. J., Oct. 5.—S. Sorenson, a farmer living near Green Brook, has had considerable trouble with watermelon thieves lately. It got to be so annoying that Sorenson decided to keep a watch on his patch to detect the thief.

Monday he saw a wagon drive up to the patch, and soon a man jumped out and began to fill a bag he carried with melons. Then he drove away. Sorenson followed him and says that the man was Lyman Peters, whose drives for Charles Sebring. Peters drove to a stone crusher back in the mountains and it is said distributed the melons to the men there and all enjoyed a feast.

That night Sebring swore out a warrant for Peters' arrest, and he was taken before Justice Smalley. He pleaded guilty, and agreed to settle the matter by paying for the melons, the damage done, and the costs. Constable VanHorn made the arrest.

GOT DRUNK INSTEAD OF WORK.

Foolish Practices of a Jersey City Painter.

Frederick Wilson, a Jersey City painter, came to Plainfield Tuesday to look for work. He couldn't get that, so he got drunk instead. Sergeant Kiely found him wandering around on West Front street late last night, and as Wilson couldn't give any account of himself, he locked him up.

When arrested the prisoner gave his name as John Henderson, but when arraigned before the City Judge this morning said he had made a mistake and that it was Frederick Wilson. Wilson was able to talk quite intelligently when brought into court, so the Judge suspended sentence in his case.

Met For the First Time.

John Fitch, a resident of Millersburg, Ohio, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Harry C. Selden, at present residing in Brooklyn, spent the day Tuesday in Plainfield visiting their aunt, Mrs. Mary L. Force, of 201 Watchung avenue, and their cousin, A. L. Force, of Duer street. It was the first time they had ever seen each other and the day was very pleasantly spent together. They were strong in their praise of Plainfield as a beautiful city, one in which they would like to reside.

Will Remain Non-Committal.

Cranford, Oct. 4.—Chairman Park, of the Cranford Board of Education, speaking for the Board, announces that the Board will take no part in the fight between Holmes and Shearer for the county superintendency of schools, but favors the appointment of a county superintendent who has not already the care of a school on his hands.

—Several of the crosswalks about the city have been repaired and the customary jolt experienced by cyclists is therefore omitted.

TWO SERIOUS RUNAWAYS

DRIVER OF A MEAT WAGON THROWN OUT AND MADE UNCONSCIOUS.

The Meat Was Strewn Along the Road For a Mile or So—Driver Not Seriously Hurt—Two Other Rigs Collided.

An exciting runaway was witnessed Tuesday morning between Smalleytown and Mt. Bethel on the road to Stirling. A horse and wagon owned by Mundy & Co., the butchers, of this city, and in charge of one of their drivers, was on its way to Stirling with a load of meat for the market at that place. Between the two places there is a long hill, and in going down the horse struck his feet against the wheel of the wagon. This frightened the animal and he ran away.

All of the meat in the wagon was thrown out and scattered along the road, and the driver was pitched out and for over an hour lay in an unconscious condition along the road. The horse broke away from the wagon and ran a long distance before he was caught near Mt. Bethel.

The people who captured the horse returned along the same road and finally found the driver and wagon. The driver was taken to a nearby house and given proper treatment, and later in the afternoon continued his journey his journey. The wagon was repaired and made ready for use. Some of the meat was picked up and taken on to Stirling, while some of it was unfit for use and was given away. The driver was not seriously injured.

A team of horses and a large truck owned by the Plainfield Kindling Wood Company got mixed up last Tuesday at Washingtonville with another rig owned by a farmer residing near Mt. Bethel. The driver of the kindling wood wagon left his rig near Finger's Hotel while he went inside. The other rig from over the mountains came down the mountain on a trot and collided with the kindling wood wagon.

The team to the wood wagon ran away and an exciting time was the result. Both wagons were somewhat damaged, and the horses were greatly frightened. In the course of an hour the rigs were straightened out and after the drivers had had their say they went on their way rejoicing.

A LUCKY ESCAPE

Thomas Cuming Heads Fell Mell Into a Fire Horse.

Manager Thomas A. Cuming, of the Eldridge Bicycle Company, met with an accident Tuesday that might have cost him his life. As it is his left side feels numb and lame, and it will be several days before he can use it.

Mr. Cuming had been to New York and returned on the 10:15 train, arriving here about 11:30 o'clock. Just as the train pulled in the fire gong sounded and Mr. Cuming ran down the street to the bicycle store after a wheel and rode to the fire.

On his way back Mr. Cuming rode quite fast and came down the hill by McNabb's house ringing his bell. Everyone got out of the way and the rider supposed he had a clear track, not noticing that the fire engine horses had been unhitched from the engine and were being walked up and down the road in the shadow of the trees. He crashed into one of them.

The shock threw Mr. Cuming to the ground and bent his wheel a little. The handle-bars struck the animal in the breast, and he reared and fell back on his mate. Everyone thought that the wheelman was badly hurt, if not killed, but he was able to pick himself up, found no bones broken, and rode home.

INSPECTED SEWER BEDS.

North Plainfield Township Health Officials Made a Visit.

The North Plainfield Township Board of Health spent last Tuesday inspecting Plainfield's sewage beds and from all accounts they had a pleasant time. Several hours were spent in going over the beds and inspecting everything of interest. That the members of the Board detected bad smells goes without saying. They refuse to give out anything for publication, but state that a report will be made soon. It is quite likely, however, that action will be brought against Plainfield by the Board. After the inspection the members all adjourned to Taylor's Hotel, where a sumptuous repast was served.

An Official Visit.

Last Tuesday an official visit was paid to Iroquois Tribe, I. O. R. M., of Trenton, and among the State officers present were Great Sachem Smyth, Great Senior Sagamore Stiles and Great Junior Sagamore William Newcorn, the latter of this city. There were five tribes present and a general good time was had.

—The Christian and Missionary Alliance will meet this morning at 9 o'clock and this evening at 7:45 o'clock in the W. C. T. U. rooms.

MINISTER GONE WITH CONTRIBUTION BOOK.

Strange Proceedings of Rev. W. B. G. Costor in Plainfield.

STATEMENT OF THE FACTS.

MADE BY LEONARD SPANGENBURG OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE.

It is Intimated That the Colored Minister Was Not as Straight-forward as He Should Have Been—Church Edifice Reverted to Mr. McClure on Account of Failure to Make Payments as Agreed.

The affairs of St. Peter's A. M. E. church are such that Leonard Spangenberg, who acted as chairman of the church finance committee, has deemed it wise to make a statement.

On May 1st, 1898, Rev. W. B. G. Costor, of Newark, came to this city and represented himself as the selected pastor for the above church, and stated that he had been sent here by Bishop Walters, of the A. M. E. Zion church of America. He said that he wanted to buy the Fillmore avenue church property of Lawyer W. K. McClure, and a contract was made with the church, May 11th, 1898. On August 11th the first payment was due, but the pastor let it pass by default and through the courtesy of Mr. McClure the time was extended to Sept. 12th. Again the pastor failed to make a payment and again the time was extended to Sept. 23d. On the latter date Mr. Costor failing to pay, Mr. McClure took possession of the property.

Mr. Costor came to this city highly recommended by Bishop Walters, and at a rally service held on June 10th, the Bishop was in Plainfield and formally introduced the new pastor. It was the desire of Pastor Costor that some prominent white person assume the chairmanship of the finance committee and Mr. Spangenberg very reluctantly accepted the position for the purpose of helping the colored race. He says that if everything had gone right a self-supporting church would have been established in this city.

Through Mr. Spangenberg's influence many of the best people of the city were persuaded to contribute to the church. The rally held on June 10th was a failure owing to the fact that no support was given. A circular was issued to seventy-six churches by Bishop Walters, but the church at Red Bank was the only one to respond. They sent $5 toward establishing the new church and buying the property on Fillmore avenue.

While Mr. Costor was holding camp meetings in Netherwood the Plainfield Street Railway Company contributed $35, of which $27.50 was for the benefit of the new church and $7.50 for Pastor Costor. The latter, under his own signature, made a statement of the finances and reported receipts to the amount of $183.36. This money was used for floating debts and none of it for the benefit of the church. On the afternoon of August 14th Rev. Madison Peters, of New York, spoke at the camp meeting and members of the church state that $60 was received from those present, and that $20 was received in the evening of the same day. Pastor Costor reported $46 as the collections for that day.

Pastor Costor has led Mr. Spangenberg to believe that he has a large acquaintance of wealthy people and that he could secure a sufficient amount to pay off the indebtedness, but thus far he has failed to collect the money. The pastor left town with the contribution book to secure money. Up to now he has not been heard from. The money received by Mr. Spangenberg has been used to go toward paying a debt of $100 back rent due Mr. McClure. Mr. Spangenberg cannot make up his account as the contribution book is out of his hands.

In all he handled $119.66 and that he can account for. Mr. Costor has no more authority to collect money for the church. The denomination represented by Mr. Costor has 2,100 churches in the United States and Canada, with property worth $6,000,000 and a membership of 700,000.

Mr. Costor's brother was in Plainfield yesterday and attended to the moving of the goods of the pastor out of town. Where Mr. Costor is now no one knows. He resided at 302 East Third street. He owes house rent and bills to the amount of $50 or $60.

Mr. Spangenberg desires to warn all people against paying Mr. Costor any money on behalf of the contribution book he has in his possession, as he has no authority to collect on the same.

A BLAZE AT MIDNIGHT.

A SMALL HOUSE ON WOODLAND AVENUE TOTALLY DESTROYED.

Located on the Farm of Henry Clay Randolph—Supposed to Have Been of Incendiary Origin—Firemen's Long Run.

Last Tuesday a few minutes before 11:30 p. m. Frank Schuck, of Vine street, pulled fire alarm box No. 29 at the corner of Watchung and Woodland avenues. Just before that he saw a bright illumination not far from where he was standing. The fire department turned out in its usual quick manner, but were of little use as was afterward discovered.

The fire was in a small house on Rahway road not far from the home of Henry Clay Randolph. The house was owned by Mr. Randolph, and was occupied for a long time by Louis Miller and family. Two weeks ago the family moved out. Since that time the house has been vacant. The firemen laid about fifteen hundred feet of hose and used some water, but they directed their efforts more especially to the houses in the immediate vicinity to save property.

The house was undoubtedly set on fire, and was nearly burned down when the firemen reached the place. All of the apparatus was taken out except No. 1 hose carriage. It is not known whether the house was insured or not, but the loss was not a heavy one.

The reason that Frank Schuck happened to pull the box was that he was calling on some friends in that vicinity. He secured a key from a neighbor.

GRAND JURY REPORTS.

Somerset Body Brought in Twenty-six Indictments.

Somerville, Oct. 5.—The Somerset County Grand Jury concluded its work yesterday afternoon and was discharged with the thanks of the court. In all twenty-six indictments were found and it is said that some of them are of interest to North Plainfield. It is also stated that indictments were found against Constable Waller, Thos. Shine and Thomas Wright, the three men implicated in the assault of the late Henry Jones, of East Millstone. Jeremiah Washington, the other person implicated in the same affair, turned State's evidence.

The case of Dr. A. D. Warde was thrown out by the Jury on the grounds that the punishment does not fit the crime. The punishment for such crime is $100 or one year's imprisonment in jail, or both. The Grand Jury adjourned to next Tuesday when the several cases on the docket will be taken up for trial.

LIBRARY DIRECTORS

New Appointments Made by Mayor Fisk Last Night.

At the meeting of the Library Board held last Tuesday a letter from Mayor Fisk was was read nominating the following to serve for three years: Alexander Gilbert, Joseph W. Yates, H. P. Talmadge, to succeed members whose terms had expired. Election of officers for the ensuing year were then made.

The secretary was directed to extend the thanks of the board to the State Historian of the State of New York for his valuable gift of the fifteenth report of the N. Y. State Geologist; to Mrs. R. K. Case for her valuable gift of twenty volumes of the general orders and circulars of the Adjutant-General, the property of her late husband, Col. Rufus K. Case; and to the Hon. Charles N. Fowler for his valuable services in securing many valuable Government publications for the library.

An Editor's Daughter's Dolls.

The editor of Harper's Magazine, Mr. Henry H. Alden, has a daughter who has made a collection of over 100 dolls, each doll representing a different nation and being made in that country. The collection is said to be the most unique and finest of its kind in existence. Miss Alden is now to show the world her dolls, and explain them, and in the next issue of The Ladies' Home Journal she will show pictures of the first twenty. In following issues she will show the others.

Cut His Foot With an Axe.

Mr. Myers, of Mt. Bethel, was brought to Plainfield yesterday to have a severely-injured foot treated. Mr. Myers was using a large axe at his home and the instrument slipped and cut his foot to a considerable depth. He was taken to the home of Dr. Zeglio, where the latter assisted by Dr. Buchanan, looked after the injured man. No serious results are feared.

—During the absence of Dr. J. B. Probasco, of East Front street, from the city, his patients are being cared for by the doctor's son, Dr. Norman Probasco.

WOMAN'S PATHETIC PLEA

WILLIAM STANBERY VISITED BY MRS. PAUL METZ.

The Woman Urged Leniency Towards Her Recreant Husband, but Mr. Stanbery Was Unable to Give Consolation.

Fanwood, October 5.—William Stanbery, whose house was robbed of $125 worth of jewels and other articles two weeks ago by a sneak-thief who visited the place in the absence of Stanbery and his wife, and told the servant girl that he was sent there to tune a piano, acted as a host under strange circumstances when the wife and seven months' old daughter of Paul Metz, whom he charges with the crime and now languishes in the Union county jail, visited Fanwood.

Mrs. Metz lives at 209 East Sixty-first street, New York, and she came to Fanwood for the purpose of pleading with Stanbery not to prosecute her husband, but to allow him to return to his family and have one more chance at leading an honorable life. Mrs. Metz carried the baby in her arms, and urged her claims with a pathetic devotion to her husband that was sad to see.

Stanbery was touched by Mrs. Metz sorrowful entreaties for her husband, but told the wife that it was a duty to the community that he owed to see that Metz was severely punished for his alleged thievery. Every rebuff that Mrs. Metz received was met with a tearful plea for her recreant husband until her interview with Stanbery reached until the time for dinner. Then Mr. Stanberry acted graciously and invited Mrs. Metz and her child to a seat at the family table. After having exhausted her arguments Mrs. Metz left for home. The Metz case was one of the first considered by the Grand Jury, which was called yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanbery and servant were in Elizabeth yesterday testifying before the Grand Jury.

A COSTLY SPREE.

It Will Deprive a Woman of Her Liberty for Three Months.

A fine of $25 and sixty days in the county jail is what it cost Mrs Mary Rothenhouse, of East Front street, yesterday, for a spree she went on Tuesday. Addie Lowrie, a colored woman, was the complaining witness against Mrs. Rothenhouse, and accused her of swearing and beating two colored children while in an intoxicated condition on West Third street.

The prisoner said she had taken a little beer, but denied being intoxicated, and as for abusing the children, why, "It's agin my nature Judge to do anything like that," was her answer. Mrs. Rothenhouse begged the Judge to be "as easy on her as he could," and thanked him when he put the sentence on her. Roundsman Fredericksen and Patrolman Mattox arrested the woman on a warrant at her home Tuesday evening.

NEW SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT.

William H. Shearer Succeeds Mr. Holmes in Union Court

Governor Voorhees Tuesday appointed George W. Howell, of Morristown, to succeed Stephen Pearson, as the Morris County representative on the State Board of Education. Mr. Pearson resigned.

The State Board of Education named the following county school superintendents yesterday:

Atlantic County—Senator Samuel D. Hoffman.

Cumberland—John M. Glasbell.

Hunterton—Jason S. Hoffman.

Union—William J. Shearer.

With the exception of Mr. Shearer, all are reappointments.

Jersey Officers Resigning.

Pompton Lake, October 4.—Another resignation, that of Captain Bickle, of Company K, Third New Jersey Volunteers, was sent in to take effect on the 15th of October, but it has been accepted as having taken place on the 1st, and when the captain, who is on a furlough, returns he will find himself minus his command. It is rumored that Captain Muddel, of A, and Worley, of G, will be the next to resign. A bugle corps of eight men has just been organized and six additional ones are to be put in the drum corps.

A Convention Rally.

Bound Brook, Oct. 5.—An Asbury Park convention rally will be held Friday night at 8 o'clock in the Presbyterian chapel at Bound Brook. Interesting addresses will be made by Endeavorers who attended the convention, among them being Rev. Mr. Dawson, of New Brunswick; Rev. W. E. Davis, of Lebanon; Rev. H. B. Hibshman, of Mt. Pleasant; E. E. Anthony, of Plainfield, and others. Horace J. Martin, of Plainfield, will have charge of the meeting.

Mrs. Corwin, of Park avenue, has almost recovered from her illness.

ACKERMAN AND THE SENATORIAL HONOR.

Plainfielders Believe That They Can Nominate Him.

SUPPORT FROM HOUSTON.

ELIZABETH MAN WANTS TO BE THE NEXT SHERIFF.

Judge Cross' Efforts to Secure the Nomination May Be Euchred By "Bob" Houston Throwing a Few Votes in Ackerman's Way and Get Plainfield's Aid for Nomination of Sheriff.

Early in the fall there was some talk to the effect that Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, would attempt a campaign to secure the Republican nomination for Congress from the Eighth District. The sentiment has been almost entirely for the present incumbent, Charles N. Fowler, however, and the Ackerman boom was early killed by the announcement that that same gentleman would ask the G. O. P. to make him their choice for the State Senatorship left vacant by the resignation of Foster M. Voorhees.

Judge Cross, of Elizabeth, was early in the field after the Senatorial nomination and was considered a likely candidate. Then, however, it was announced that a rousing boom had been started by the friends of Mr. Ackerman in his favor as against Judge Cross. Also it was said that J. Martin Roll was after the nomination. He doesn't seem to cut much of a figure in the chase.

At first glance it looks as if the Plainfielder has very little chance to win against the Elizabeth man, but there is a view that is not apparent at first sight. Elizabeth is going to have her share of political plums this fall. First, there is the candidate for Governor with a good show of election. If "Bob" Houston is nominated for the Assembly, and there is not much doubt but that he will be, Elizabeth will have another candidate in him. The Surrogate is already an Elizabethan and so are a small army of the minor offices that the county has to offer.

If Elizabeth wants the Senator, too, the Plainfielders consider that she is having a little more than her share of the plums. Her present honors are sufficient. There is another reason. "Bob" Houston wants to be sheriff when Kirk's term expires. He has a big backing in his native city and his followers will be glad to swap their support for a Plainfield man for Senator for a Plainfield backing for Houston for the shrievalty candidacy.

With all her present honors, Elizabeth is pretty well provided for. The backers of Mr. Ackerman fully realize this state of affairs and are quite confident that if the claims of the Plainfielder are asserted with strength that Elizabeth will request her candidate to withdraw and leave the way clear for his co-worker from Plainfield. Of course there is a possibility that the friends of Judge Cross will resent any dictation from the rest of the Republican townships. That would probably result in a split in the delegation from the county seat. The rest of the county is sure to be rather jealous of Elizabeth for fear that she will get more than her share and there will be an inclination to help her principal rival in the division of the spoils.

RECEPTION FOR MRS. LEWIS.

Pleasant Social Event in Honor of a Former Plainfield Girl.

A delightfully informal and impromptu reception was given Tuesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. John Clapp, 14 Mercer avenue, when former neigbors and many friends greeted Mrs. David Lewis, of Ilion, N. Y., extending hearty congratulations. The two daughters of Mrs. Lewis, Misses Francis and Helen Weir, shared in the congratulatory welcome. Mrs. Lewis has been stopping during her brief stay in town at Mrs. Wests on Crescent avenue, but will leave today for her home in Ilion, N. Y.

State of City Health.

The meeting of the Board of Health was held Tuesday night. Only routine business was transacted, a few bills paid, etc. There are a few cases of contageous disease in the city. One house has three diphtheria cases and another one a case of scarlet fever. Otherwise the health of the city is good.

Rewards for Choir Boys.

The boys of Holy Cross choir who received the silver medals for the month of September were Harold Luckey, Louis Gardiner, Albert Yaeger, Kenneth Stuart, Henry Kemple. Harold Luckey won the silver cross.

NEW YORK LETTER.

Special Correspondence.

In all the talk about Theodore Roosevelt as "the man of the hour," whose political star is now in the ascendant, the fact has been lost sight of that he has been connected with every branch of the public service except the judicial. He has served nation, state and city. He has held executive positions and sat in the Legislature. He has been connected with the army, the navy and the police. He has been administrator, investigator, orator and writer. He was a member of assembly sixteen years ago. He was delegate-at-large to the National Republican convention of 1884. He was candidate for mayor in 1886. He has since been chairman of the civil service commission, president of the police board, assistant secretary of the navy and colonel of the Rough Riders. This is a far more varied experience than Seymour, Fenton, Hoffman, Tilden, Robinson, Cornell, Cleveland, Hill and Flower had when they were first elected as governor. Yet because Roosevelt is still a young man he is spoken of as lacking in that judgment and mental poise which is associated with advanced age and long experience in affairs. The reason why Roosevelt is held to be lacking in judgment is because he is intense, enthusiastic, and throws his whole heart and conscience into what he is doing. And that is the reason why he became so popular far more than because he displayed physical bravery in the battles before Santiago. His moral courage is the larger ingredient in his popularity.

Competition in War News.

Now that the war is over the reporters and correspondents will return, seeking employment in an already overcrowded profession. The expenses of war news has been so great that peace is a boon to some of the leading newspapers, which have been running at a loss. Never before indeed has an equal amount been spent for news in so short a time and under such intense rivalry.

Speaking of rivalry, how it recalls the early days of the Herald and Tribune, whose efforts to obtain early news at sea seem very limited, yet they were great for that day. Foreign news then came by the Cunard steamers, whose port at that time was Boston, and as horse expresses were used to bring the news the smartest drivers and animals were always successful. Part of the route was by steamboat, and on one occasion Bennett made a "beat" by placing a printing case on board, and while the vessel was sailing, the compositor was at work, so that as soon as they reached this city the Herald extra was issued in advance of all others. When the Oregon question assumed a warlike aspect it was so important to have early foreign news, that Greely chartered the swiftest sailing vessel in this port to go to Liverpool and bring back the news. The vessel referred to was a yacht which could outsail the slow steamers of that day. How strange this appears in comparison with our ocean telegraph, and yet it made a great sensation and did much to help the Tribune. Bennett and Greely were both hard fighters, and the former crushed all his rivals except the Tribune. These editors never met and only knew each other by sight. They were essentially different in all their leading traits of character, but each succeeded in building up a great newspaper.

Concerning Leases.

Bothel, who holds a lease in part of the Governor Morton property, is determined to make a handsome thing of it, and who can blame him? His lease is for two years, and as the owner wants to demolish and rebuild he is delayed by the obduracy of his tenant. Morton's building scheme evicts several other tenants whose leases had expired, and the result will be a great a stately business structure. But Bothel holds the fort and will surrender only on captivating terms. His position is worth at least $10,000, which sum was paid to a down town grocer for a lease held under similar circumstances. The owner wanted to rebuild and preferred paying the tenant's enormous price to waiting for the expiration of the lease. Still better terms were obtained in Cortland street recently, when a saloon keeper on an important corner was paid, as it is said, $20,000. He learned that the adjacent property had been purchased for a grand office building, [illegible] got me price. It is often said that it is better to lease property in New York than to own it, and one man has made a fortune in this manner. He perambulates the city, and whenever he sees desirable property at a moderate rent he takes a long lease. As a general thing before the lease expires he sells it at a handsome advance, and experience has made him a master in this specialty. CYRUS THORP.

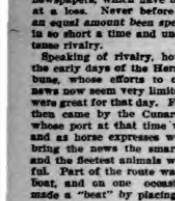
FAMOUS LEES OF OLDEN TIMES.

The First of the Family to Come to America.

When Longfellow wrote "a thing for flouts and sneers and jeers is an American aristocracy" he could not have meant it in a literal sense. There are many families in the United States who can show an illustrious descent, and whose achievements in peace or war would favorably compare with the renowned families of older nations were our institutions strained in order to nurture titles or kindred persons distinguished as could be post have intended that it was a bad or unbecoming thing to have come of good stock, or to have had famous forefathers. As we hope that our own deeds shall be sweet and inspiring in other ages, so we are all in duty bound to revere the memories of those who have gone before us. Burke who uttered so many wise aphorisms has truly said on this subject: "he will never look forward to posterity who does not look backward to his ancestors; and their deeds whether good or evil can never be a matter of indifference in the life of a nation."

And amongst those prominent families who have enriched the history of the United States, and whose records can never be a subject of indifference to our people is that of the Lees of Virginia. The family of Lee is probably among the most distinguished in martial deeds as well as in point of antiquity. And as illustrious public services will always rate higher than mere uneventful pedigrees, however long descended may be the line or numerous the quarterings, let us see how the Lees of Virginia measure up in this important respect.

The first to whom there is mention was the Richard Lee of Colonial times, who was Secretary of State for Virginia. He's said to have been six feet high with a handsome face denoting spirit and enterprise, and which appear to be characteristics that have impressed themselves upon all his descendants. In the time of King Charles he received large grants of land of Virginia where he died in 1663.



GEN. ROBERT E. LEE.

His son, Major Richard Lee, was sent to Oxford University, and when he returned was appointed Naval Officer for the Potomac River being succeeded in that capacity by his son. He was spoken of by the English Governor as a "loyal discreet person and a gentleman of as fair character as any in the country," the succession of the son being a mark of esteem for the father.

This son, Thomas, accordingly became president of the King's Council and Commander-in-Chief of the Colony and played a rather important part in the early annals of Virginia. His negotiated a treaty with the "Six Nations" or Indians which so advanced the King's interests that the Queen Caroline sent him a present of $80,000 on the occasion of the burning of the family mansion at Stratford. This was a mark of uncommon esteem, and when Sir William Gooch, the Governor of Virginia, died, he was appointed the first American Governor of his native state. He left six sons, whom John Adams alluded to as "that band of brothers, those able and virtuous Lees."

They were the neighbors and the earliest advisers of Washington whose home was only one mile distant. When the famous Westmoreland declaration against the Stamp Act was drawn up its official connections of the Lee family was severed with England. Four of these six brothers signed their names to the Westmoreland declaration and two, Richard Henry Lee and Francis Lightfoot Lee, also signed the Declaration of Independence. Indeed this Richard Henry Lee has a most intimate connection with the Revolution. Like others of his family he was sent to school to England and was so painfully reminded by the sons of noble aristocrats of the inferiority of the colonists to themselves that he returned from England a pronounced Republican and henceforth resolved to make his country free. It was he who drew up in the Continental Congress the famous stirring resolution "that these united colonies are and of right ought to be free and independent states, that all political connection between them and Great Britain is and ought to be totally dissolved." One of his sons was Washington's Attorney General and the other was the famous dashing "Light Horse Harry" Lee. He raised the independent corps of light cavalry which he commanded and which under the name of "Lee's Legion" became proverbial for the dash and bravery of its men in the Revolutionary War. In 1779 at the head of three hundred men he captured the British fort at Jersey City taking one hundred and sixty prisoners for which Congress also publicly thanked him, and also presented him with a medal and a commission in the army.

"Light Horse Harry" was renowned in war but it may not be generally known that he was no less renowned in peace and was the author of the phrase used by Washington: "First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen," which occurs in the resolution he moved in Congress in 1799 when Washington died. Colonel Lee married his cousin Matilda Lee and succeeded to the family seat at Stratford, where, in 1807, General Robert Lee was born.

Another brother of "Light Horse Harry's" had been sent to school at Eton. He wrote an anonymous appeal to the English nation to deal justly and intelligently by the American Colonies and though the authorship was never suspected by his fellow students at the famous English school, the document was so able a presentation of the American case that it was said to be the production of Lord Chatham or of Edmund Burke, both of whom were staunch friends of America, when to be a friend of the Colonies meant ostracism from the drawing rooms of London.

The latest member of this prominent American family, and beside whose virtues and historic achievements those of a Howard or of a Prince of Conde or if a Platten of Germany would be honored by a comparison, is General Fitzhugh Lee, who has just been voted the thanks of a Congress for patriotic services to his country at Havana.

THE NAMING OF AMERICA.

A Short Sketch of the Man From Whom America Was Named.

The celebration of the four hundredth anniversary of the naming of America will probably bring once more into notice the claims of Columbus and of Amerigo Vespucci to the honor of discovery. At the time of the Columbian Exposition the controversy as to whether Columbus or Amerigo Vespucci was the original navigator, led to several geographical societies in Europe, while these rival claims of both were disputed in toto by the partisans of a third claimant, and a still earlier voyager named St. Brendan. As between the friends of Columbus and of Vespucci the former emblazoned in history as the real voyager, while those of the latter claim that his name is associated for all time with his deeds in the very name of the country itself. The fortune of the name of America is one of the singular as an instance of the fitness and the power of a name notwithstanding what the poet insinuated to the contrary.

The name of "American" has too become the symbol of an originality and prowess to which not even the majestic word "Roman" could aspire in its grandest and most triumphant period. Great oaks from little acorns grew, and it is worth knowing that the name Amerigo was first borne by a poor Italian whom his biographers dignify by coupling his birth with that of Lorenzo the Magnificent; that this name was afterwards given to a single province of the New World, next spread over the whole southern continent, then passed to the Northern, later on became the distinguishing appellation of the whole vast continent and so grew and expanded until the word "American" has come to be universally accepted as the antithesis of everything that related to the traditions of the crowns and courts and chain of continental Europe.

Amerigo Vespucci was born at Florence, March 9, 1451, and in youth was a studious young man, working out problems of a philosophical character. He therefore early attracted attention even from princes and nobles, and at the age of 40 years was induced to settle in Seville.

In his capacity as an officer of the city, Vespucci had to draw up a statement of the expeditions of Columbus and was requested by the King of Portugal to set out and discover a route to the "land of spices" as India was then called, but by way of Brazil. In his letter to Lorenzo de Medici and to the Duke of Lorraine he gave an account of these voyages and of the condition of the Western World in one of which it was said that the torrid zone is habitable and inhabited.

The people of the new world, he there also tells us consisted of forty-four bell shaped houses and was built on piles in the middle of a lake, the dwellings being connected together by drawbridges. Some of the inhabitants approached the galleons of Vespucci in canoes hollowed from the bole low trunk of a tree and after gazing at Vespucci and his sailors the natives paddled back to their insulated city with great precipitation. They soon returned, however, bringing with them sixteen young women and showed a disposition to get aboard the ships, a fact which in our fin-de-siecle way of looking at matters will indicate to us that those on the mainland had met sailors before, or had at least understood their habits. Vespucci then sailed eighty leagues along the coast, landing occasionally, and at last entering a sheltered haven, where he was received with hospitality and he and his crew ignorant of all failing in the language of our day "a high old time." The country seemed quite populous and great multitudes assembled to admire the new and wonderful denizens of the ropeans whom they entertained as if they were beings of a superior race. In short there is much ground for belief that Vespucci was the discoverer of the mainland while the credit of first seeing the islands of the West Indies probably belonged to Columbus.

The relative claims to the distinction of first discovering the west has caused a bitter contest over the character and exploits of Vespucci, while the haughty admirers of Columbus claim was only a beef contractor in Castille, and a master pilot instead of a navigator.

We are much obliged to Vespucci for giving the early inhabitants of this country so good a reputation in his annals and while we are the heirs of his name there is also on our part a strong temptation to keep his memory green in spite of the efforts of his detractors to blur or efface it.

NO FEAR IN THE NAVY.

ADMIRAL SAMPSON TALKS OF THE COURAGE OF CREWS.

After the Enemy's First Shot Their Daring Is Reckless. All the Officers Fear To Running the Ship Aground. Men Seem to Court Danger.

"No," said Rear Admiral Sampson, with decided emphasis, "the element of fear is an imperceptible quantity in the average our naval crews when in action."

"Indeed," he went on to say, in slow, carefully weighed words, "I can't tell whether it is braggadocio, or foolhardiness, or a plain passion to be absent, but the fact of it, but the men of our crews, all that I have ever seen in action, display an amazing propensity to hunt for danger unless it comes naturally their way. For instance, when only the smallest guns aboard could be worked the port men will deliberately seek the exposed decks, right in the line of shot and shell, instead of keeping below behind armored protection. All sense of danger seems to be paralyzed while the excitement of action is on. It pervades the entire crew as well as those engaged at the guns. And this accounts for the fact that, in most cases, the casualties reported were among those who had no business to be where they were at the time; but it is almost impossible, in moments of such great excitement, to restrain them."

"Possibly they might learn some discretion," suggested the reporter, "if the men across the channel could hit things better than the Spaniards."

"Yes," said the Admiral, with a smile, "perhaps they might; but I wouldn't like to be too sure of it, either. They lose their identity, and with it all sense of personal danger, in the wild stimulus of battle. But, let me say right here that a striking difference can be seen in the conduct of all crews between the first time they are under fire and the second ones. It may not be fair to call it fear exactly, for we don't see that sort of thing in our men; caution, natural caution, would be a better word. In their first action they show a decided tendency to enjoy the benefits of all the protection afforded, but these principles of self-defense seem to evaporate with the smoke of the enemy's first fire, and, from that on, the most reckless daring takes their place. The only cases that came personally under my observation in this recent campaign were those of the Iowa and New York, but this sudden change in them from common sense caution under fire to the most reckless exposure, could very plainly be noticed, and I'm sure other officers have the same experience to give on this point. The ce of battle once broken, so to speak, the men are total strangers to anything resembling fear."

Here the reporter instanced the case where one of the compartments of the Texas was hit by a Spanish shell which killed one sailor and wounded a number more, and asked the Admiral why the fatality in such a warship would cause any temporary stampede in a crew.

"Oh, no," he replied. "It wouldn't be human nature for a man to see one of his comrades torn to tatters by a shell and others badly wounded around him, without a shudder, but no American sailor would think of leaving his gun at such a sight. It is astonishing how cool and callous they become to such spectacles during the heat of action. We don't have stampedes in the navy."

"And now that you have disposed of the American crews, Admiral," the reporter said, "what about the officers on the ships in action? Have they any acquaintance with fear?"

"Yes, they have, every man of them," he answered, as the care-worn furrows in his brow grew deeper, and his eyes rested on the questioner with unusual force, "but it isn't the fear of the shells or the enemy's projectiles of battle. It's that awful, unspeakable fear of running his ship aground or getting her otherwise in bad position. This is the only dread that bothers the officers in action. In an open sea-way there is none of this danger to keep their nerves in a tension, but it comes with consuming force when they begin an engagement with shore batteries, approaching nearer and nearer to port more and more fraught, and menanced more and more, each moment, by the oppressive fear of striking a shoal or bar"—and the Admiral's face wore an expression of positive pain, as if the recollection of this great fear had come back to him vividly like a nightmare, and he was seeing shoal ripples in the rustling of the trees.

"In the matter of courage among the officers," the Admiral went on, "is there any marked difference between our native-born sailors of American pedigree and those of foreign parentage?"

"I have not been able to detect any," he replied very heartily, "for they are all equally brave."—New York Mail and Express.

SLEEPING IN SIGNAL TOWERS.

A New Attitude of Railroad Managers to Men Guilty of a Grave Fault.

When the soldiers sleep on picket duty in time of war they are liable to be courtmartialed and shot. Soldiers know that, and still not even the fear of death is sufficient to keep them awake always. A momentary lapse of alert, waging intelligence on the part of a railroad man sometimes means the loss of life and property. When railroad men are found asleep at their posts they are not taken out and shot; they are simply discharged. At least that was the invariable rule up to a very recent time; no railroad officials would even inquire into the particulars of a case of this kind. Recently there has arisen a promise of greater leniency with regard to the man found asleep on duty. Some railroad men have worked on the question carefully and intelligently. They have considered the fact that not even fear of death will keep the sentinel awake always, and have realized that the lower penalty of discharge must therefore be ineffective sometimes. They have reasoned that men have always slept and probably always will sleep at certain times when they should be awake. Beginning with this fact, there has been evolved a change of attitude on the part of the railroad toward its employees. A man is charged to stay awake just as emphatically as ever before; but the mere fact of being asleep is no longer considered the gravest infraction of duty. The thing that men are discharged for under this new system is the giving of a wrong signal. That is, they are discharged for making mistakes that might cause a wreck, whatever may have been the reason for making them. Going to sleep, it is argued, is not in itself the gravest mistake. The mental attitude of the railroad toward its employee under this system is something like this:

"Don't go to sleep. In the name of everything good and holy don't go to sleep! But if you do, wake up thoroughly before you act. Don't touch a signal before you count twenty-five, or before you wash your face, or before you do something else to convince yourself that you are wide enough awake to act reasonably and rationally."

Investigators have found that a man who has slept will upon waking take the most desperate chances to cover up his fault when discharge is the inevitable result of detection. Take for an example the case of a tower operator on a block system where the home system is normally set at danger. A man, and especially a very tired man, never knows upon waking how long he has been asleep. It might seem to him hours since he let the last train into his block. In reality only one short minute might have elapsed since he leaned his tired head upon his desk and sank into the unconsciousness of utter exhaustion. If he woke up and saw a train standing at the tower his first wild impulse, under the old system of discharge, would be to throw things wide open and take the chances of a clear track. He would do this rather than report the telegraph which would inform him as to the position of trains, but would also inform the despatcher's office of his condition. If anything had happened to the forward train and it had come to a stop without connecting red rear lights, especially some such combination of errors that causes a wreck under modern methods of railroading), the rear train would inevitably crash into it and spill things. Not even an elaborate interlocking system, such as is in operation on the New York Central, is an absolute protection, because machines get out of order and make as serious mistakes as men. For the safety of lives and property it is necessary to depend upon the employees, and it may also be said that no present employee of any railroad has ever made a mistake, when you consider a "mistake" in the technical railroad sense of having caused a wreck. Railroads discharge men every day for proving themselves human, and no railroad will take a man from another road without a clean record.

It speaks well for this new method that wherever it has been tried it has continued in use.—New York Sun.

MME. GRISI AND JENNY LIND.

A Short Sketch of Two Noted Singers After They Had Left the Stage.

"Mme. Grisi made sad mistakes in her declining years," says the Rev. Mr. Haweis. "Unlike Jenny Lind, she never knew when to leave off. She refused, but found life insupportable. The fact is, unlike Marie, she was quite an empty-headed person, with no pursuits or interests apart from the stage, or any power of occupying herself. Grisi came back to the concert room when far too fame to attempt the stage. I heard her singing at the Palace somewhere in the sixties. She was born in 1812 and died in 1869. She imprudently tried 'Casta Diva,' her great song in 'Norma,' but reached her high notes with a painful effort. The old men who flocked to hear her and remembered her triumphs in the thirties and forties sat crying like children. They fancied they still heard the goddess of the stage when Rugini, Tagliafico, Mario and Labache had left the Italian school under Rossini, Bellini, Donizetti and Verdi to the highest pitch of intoxicating popularity; but to my taste, poor Grisi's 'Casta Diva' was a piteous exhibition.

"How different this from Mme. Lind-Goldschmidt, who, although she had long retired from the public stage, could still sing ballads like 'The Three Ravens' and some of Mendelssohn's 'Leider,' and even 'Oh, for the Wings of a Dove,' with incomparable effect. She sang till quite late in life in the chorus of the Bach choir, under the direction of Otto Goldschmidt, her husband, and one day a little choir boy of mine, who also sang in the Bach choir, came home breathless with excitement, relating how at rehearsal the solo lady had failed to appear, and Mme. Lind had volunteered to sing the part in 'Hear My Prayer,' and how nothing he had heard was like it, and nothing could ever be like it again.

"A few days before she died at Malvern, she was driving in an open carriage, and noticed a flock of sheep on the free Downs, and gazing on the mellowing tints of the autumnal woods; suddenly she lay back on her cushions, and, with her eyes fixed on the distant sky, hummed to herself the sweet melody of 'Oh, for the Wings of a Dove,' which Mendelssohn had written expressly for her many years before. Little did he know that it was to be her swan song."

SOME BIG PENSIONS.

How Our Government Aids the Wives of Dead Presidents and Soldiers.

The Presidents widows get, you know, $5,000 a year by special act of Congress. Mrs. General Grant and Mrs. Garfield and Mrs. Tyler, I think, are still drawing pensions. Mrs. President Lincoln received $3,000 a year from 1870 to 1882, when the amount was increased to $5,000. Mrs. John A. Logan gets $40 a week, and the widow of Admiral Farragut received $2,000 a year. A number of widows of noted generals of the late war have received or are receiving pensions. Among these were the widows of E. D. Baker, George H. Custer, the Indian killer; of Robert Anderson, the hero of Fort Sumpter; of Daniel McCook and Frank P. Blair.

Among the biggest single pension amounts now granted are those given to widows on account of a clause in the pension act of 1896, which makes the widow entitled back to the death of her husband. The other day a widow who had been married in 1858, and whose husband had died in 1867, applied for a pension. She claims the right to be paid $8 a month for every month of the married life of her husband, a period of thirty years. The law, I am told, will give her the pension. Another widow from Ohio, whose husband died in 1871, married again fifteen years later. She now claims a pension on account of the death of her first husband for her fifteen years of widowhood, and wants it in a lump.—Frank G. Carpenter, in Washington Star.

How the Japanese Sleep.

When night comes, beds are prepared, says K. Mitsukari in the Atlantic. Bedding is brought out from the closets, where it has been put away during the day. One or two large thick futons, or cushions, are spread directly on the mats of bedrooms, and coverlings which look like enormous kimono or clothes are spread over them. Every traveler has told of the pillow made of a wooden box with a little cylindrical cushion on the top, but this kind of pillow is not in use at present. Softer Cylindrical pillows, made by stuffing a cloth bag with husks of buckwheat, are now more commonly used. In the Summer it is necessary to have mosquito nets, which generally inclose the whole bedroom.

As a rule, Japanese families retire early. Ten o'clock is about the average time. Eleven is considered late. A function that begins at nine or ten and lasts till the small hours of the morning fairly staggers the Japanese. "Why," they say, "even ghosts, who are comme il faut, retire by that hour."

"Appreciate art!" he exclaimed. "Say! I can hardly tear myself away from that statue. If I only had it—"

"I suppose you would never tire of looking at it."

BATTLE UNFOUGHT.

COMMODORE SCHLEY ALL BUT ATTACKED AN AUSTRIAN.

It Was on the Eventful July 3d, When His Fleet Had Submerged the Spanish Warships. That He Mistook the Austrian for an Enemy.

Here is an incident which shows more clearly than anything else just what the navy is ready to do and how delicately balanced is the chip on the shoulders of our sea fighters. When Schley had emptied our history on July 3 and every ship in these waters under the royal banner of Castile had been shattered, he was sailing east to resume station before Santiago. Word came to him that the Pelayo, pride of the Spanish navy, had reached the Caribbean, and he was directed to engage her as soon as found. To naval experts the suggestion that a cruiser fight a battleship is insanity gone mad, but nevertheless the Brooklyn started on her errand.

Near Santiago a battleship was sighted, heavily armored and turreted, but at such a distance that her colors could not be distinguished under the glass. Toward her the Brooklyn started. Commodore Schley and Captain Cook stood on the forward bridge as the big cruiser fairly leaped forward to give battle.

"She is white—an unusual thing in war time," said the commodore, watching the stranger through his glass. "I don't believe she is Spanish." he remarked a moment later, and then, consulting the picture of a sister ship to the Pelayo, suddenly exclaimed: "By Jove! It is the Pelayo, after all!"

"On the signal bridge!" shouted Captain Cook. "Can you make out her colors?"

"Not yet, sir," came the answer, followed a moment after by "We have raised her colors, sir, and she is Spanish."

"Send your men to quarters, Cook," said the commodore, "and start an eight-inch shell for her when I give the word."

COMMODORE SCHLEY.

On went the Brooklyn, fast closing the distance between herself and the stranger—a big battleship of modern type, and with her flag aft—two stripes of red on each side of yellow, as it appeared, and the crown in proper place. The bugle sung "To quarters!" and the men, although they had been fighting all the morning, rushed to their guns with a cheer. For a moment the commodore hesitated. "On the signal bridge!" he called. "Are you certain the stranger is a Spaniard?"

"Certain, sir," came the reply. "I can see her colors distinctly."

The commodore had his glasses on the battleship. Turning to the captain of his ship, he said: "Cook, that fellow is not a quarters. His guns are turned away from us. He is not up to snuff. Watch him closely, and the moment he sends his men to quarters or moves a turret, let drive. Give him everything you have. We will sink him in twenty minutes unless he gets a shot under our belt."

Just then the officer on the bridge reported that the battleship was signalling with the international code, and soon translated the message: "This is an Austrian battleship."

Half an hour after the commander of the Maria Theresa (Austrian) was seated in Commodore Schley's cabin.

"If you had sent your men to quarters or moved a turret I should have raked you; it was a narrow escape," said the commodore during the conversation. "Your flag is so like Spain's, saving that you have a white stripe where she has yellow, that it is hard to tell them apart at any considerable distance, and I came near letting drive at you."

"We know that," returned the Austrian, "and we were very much worried. We signalled long before you answered. We had no wish to be troubled. We have no wrecks along the coast. But," he inquired, as he rose to leave, "do you send cruisers to meet battleships?"

The commodore smiled as he answered: "We always make a fight with the first ship we have at hand. We never wait because we are outrated. We try to win with what we have."

"You Americans are very remarkable," said the Austrian as he went over the side to his boat.—Chicago Record.

THE VOYAGE OF THE OREGON.

The World-Breaking Record of the American Battle Ship As Described by Her Gallant Commander.

14,000 MILES TO WAR.

"And Every Officer and Man Would Have Died at His Post to Insure Her Safe Arrival."

(Julius Chambers in New York World.)

"What should Cervera have done?"

"He should have stayed in Santiago harbor forever rather than come out the way he did," was the solemn remark of Capt. Clark lately of the battleship Oregon, recently. "The fleet was a fortress. With its guns he could have driven the United States army away from shore until such time as it could have mounted ten-inch guns to sink his ships. He was master of the situation and should have 'hung on' until every last member of his ships' crews had died of absolute starvation! Then would he have been a real hero—an eternal figure in history!

"Think of the chances in his favor! Yellow fever might have come and decimated the American ranks. A gale might have broken loose on the Caribbean seas that would have scattered our ships to the four winds of heaven, after which Cervera could have sailed away without opposition and returned to his native land undefeated."

The story of a great achievement, not less great because modestly told, is that of Captain Charles H. Clark, recently in command of that wonderful fighting machine, the battleship Oregon.

CAPTAIN CHARLES E. CLARK.

Captain Clark is a large, well built man, 5 feet 9 inches in height, and tips the scales at 200 pounds. His face lights up with a cordial smile whenever he meets anybody he knows and he is equally affable to strangers.

"The Oregon's voyage doesn't seem great to me," began Captain Clark, "though it became memorable because of its opportune completion just at a time that the Oregon was needed to strengthen the North Atlantic squadron in order to impart confidence at home. That the Oregon should have sailed 14,000 miles to be present at the destruction of Admiral Cervera's fleet, and got there in time, is really interesting and curious.

"I was appointed to the ship on March 17, and we sailed two days later. She had been on the dry dock at Brewerton only a short while before, and her hull was thoroughly clean. From stage to stage the coal capacity of the ship determined the length of the run. The weather, except in the straits of Magellan, was excellent. The run down the Pacific coast need not be dwelt upon. Nine hundred tons of coal carried us to Callao. No trouble occurred with the engines, and the same may be said of the entire voyage. The incident of this run of 4,000 knots was a fire in the port coal bunker. The fire was dug out and quenched. It was a terrible ordeal for the men and a period of great anxiety to all on board. Several acts of real heroism were displayed in this hazardous fight with the flames.

"When Sandy Point was left behind we all realized the possible dangers in front of us," continued Captain Clark. "The Oregon convoyed the Marietta to Rio without incident. And in that harbor the Nictheroy lay at anchor, about to be added to the American navy. The Brazilian government was very courteous. It may have been owing to the fact that the purchase of the Nictheroy had not been completed. There was the Tennessee! Detecting her presence at once, I ordered the Marietta to guard the harbor mouth and told her captain to send a boat on board the Spanish craft and serve notice upon the Temeraria that if she came within one mile of the Oregon our guns, big and little, would open on her without notice.

"On reaching port I had been notified by our consul that war was on, and I could not afford to take any chances. I steamed into the harbor two miles above the usual anchorage for war vessels, giving to my ship an isolated position, so that I might be justified in regarding the approach of any strange craft as a hostile act. The utmost vigilance was employed by day and night; men were constantly at the rapid fire guns. A searchlight and patrol boats watched the water after nightfall. The risk was too great for me to take any chances, and although the Brazilians acted all right and were even generous in not holding us to the twenty-four hour rule recognized under international law, I could not be sure of the after absence of cranks or Spanish sympathizers.

"We sailed from Rio on May 4. I decided when we had been at sea a little while, to leave the Buffalo (formerly the Nictheroy) and Marietta to shift for themselves. They were so slow that I feared the Oregon might be late in arriving where she was most needed. I left these ships off Cape Frio, 100 miles above Rio, after signalling them 'Come to Bahia; or run ashore if attacked by overwhelming force.' I reached Bahia on the 8th, but we were told to 'come on.' We sailed next morning, and this run of ten days to Barbadoes was the most thrilling of the entire voyage. We steamed absolutely without a light.

"Indeed, the entire trip from Sandy Point to Jupiter Inlet was a lightless voyage. In pitchlike darkness we drove ahead at our highest speed—seeing lights many times, but always avoiding the ships that bore them. We were out of court. We had no right of way without a light. Even if we met a vessel on our port we gave way.

"Night and day the men stood at the guns. Not for a single moment was vigilance relaxed. The strain on the men was terrible. For four days at a time hammocks were never strung. Watch and watch about, the men lay beside the guns sound asleep, while the men on duty stood silently above them. All the lookouts were doubled and changed with unusual frequency.

"Barbadoes was reached just before daylight, May 18, and after rushing 250 tons of coal aboard we sailed the same evening. Still the orders read, 'Come on!'

"From our consul I learned that Cervera's fleet was at Martinique, just to the north of us. This fleet had been much extolled for speed and fighting qualities. I am not a rash man. I was not looking for that fleet. The situation seemed critical. Sailing just before dark, I headed northwest, apparently into the heart of the Caribbean sea. This information, I have no doubt, was promptly communicated to Admiral Cervera. But as soon as the darkness of a moonless night had thoroughly set in, I changed the course due south and ran below Barbadoes and thence far to the eastward before I took the Oregon to the northward. We thus passed far to sea east of Martinique, and eventually turned into the North Atlantic beyond St. Thomas, carefully avoided the Windward channel and the shallow waters of the Bahamas."

"Why did you go to Jupiter Inlet?" was asked.

"I didn't know where the department wanted to use me," was the prompt reply. "I was in the dark as to the location of the two fleets. I knew one had been at Hampton Roads and another at Key West, and the charts told me that Jupiter Inlet was in telegraphic reach of all points on the coast. From that place, also, I had coal enough to make the run to either of the two fleets. You can easily understand that had I gone direct to Key West and the Oregon had been wanted at Hampton Roads, several days would have to be lost in coaling. Of course the fact is that we went to Key West. This was the end of what may be called a successful, though not a remarkable voyage."

"Tell me something about the endurance of the men," I asked.

"Their suffering from the heat was beyond description," began Captain Clark. "Battened under the hatches for weeks at a time, every man worked with the absolute individual energy of a hero. Every coal heaver deserves credit. The engineers, as I said, had no rest. Real enthusiasm existed in every part of the ship, after leaving Rio, when the prospect of having to grapple with the foe in mid-ocean became imminent. I want to say, as solemnly as I know how, without discrimination, that I believe every officer and man on that ship would have died at his post to insure the safe arrival of the Oregon.

"If we couldn't beat a Spanish fleet we would have tried, even if we lost our ship. To be sure, I would have striven to save the crew by beaching the Oregon. Saving life is always to be thought of, and it would not have been overlooked when the contest be came open."

"Do you believe the Spaniards would have fought fair if you had been attacked in mid-ocean; would they have honored the white flag if you had been compelled to raise it?" was asked, with some hesitation.

"I am not so sure that they would," gravely replied Captain Clark, with a slowness that argued his strong views on the subject. "The Hobson incident had not occurred. Cervera himself would not have countenanced any injustice, but I shudder at the hopelessness of our brave jackies, marines and others in mid-ocean had we been compelled to swim for our lives. There is no telling our fate had we by accident steamed into the middle of that fleet. The torpedo boats might have surrounded us, and we might have gone quickly to the bottom in half a mile of brine."

"Apropos of this, what is your opinion of the future of the torpedo boat?" was the next inquiry.

"Nobody knows any more about the efficiency of a torpedo boat than I do, and I know nothing. I do not think that a single moving torpedo could sink the Oregon. If one compartment were torpedoed she would still float. The rapid fire gun, with its accuracy of aim, has, in my judgment, greatly reduced the danger of the torpedo craft."

"Now, captain, tell me your ideas of the great naval victory off Santiago harbor on July 3."

"I hope it will not be taken as vainglorious if I say that it was lucky that a battleship with cruiser speed was there that day," replied Captain Clark, with some hesitation. "The Spanish hearts were broken by the big guns of the battleships. Their men lost zeal when the 13-inch shells began to skip about them."

"I never saw a more sublime sight," said Captain Clark. "Out came the Spanish ships, with their great ensigns flying to the breeze that their own momentum created. The sea was like a pond; hardly a ripple appeared in any direction. Those great ships looked handsome and defiant. And I want to say, in all candor, that it looked for a time as if some of them would get away—I mean through our lines. We didn't know how badly we were punishing them. The Indiana, Iowa, Oregon, Texas and Brooklyn were all hammering them at the same time. Five of us were jumping at them like furious wolves, if the simile be a good one."

"I believe the Spaniards set their range for five thousand yards and never altered it for any of their guns. A steady stream of projectiles was going over our heads all the time. They fired shot and shell enough to have done us the greatest kind of harm, but we weren't hurt in any extent. The Spaniards were utterly demoralized at the way we went at them. It certainly was a revelation to most of us. The scores the Spaniards made were stray shots. Hardly any roll was on the sea that morning—it was like a pond. I never saw the ocean smoother."

"What is your opinion about the scuttling of the Spanish ship after their surrender?"

"It was wrong, and in violation of every principle of good faith on the part of a conquered foe," replied the Captain. "The men who did those acts forfeited their right to be protected, and ought to have been shot then and there. Scuttling a ship after surrender is treachery. The moment the white flag goes up everything in the possession of the surrendered force, on sea or on land, becomes the property of the victor. The vandal who violates this well-recognized rule puts himself outside all laws of mercy. He is to be hunted to the merciless who comes into a camp as a friend and then destroys the provisions or other property of the men from whom he asks and receives protection. He deserves death and always gets it. I do not believe that Admiral Cervera gave orders for anything of the kind. No, no. He is a gentleman. Irresponsible men committed the outrage. The fact that the ships filled with water is not positive proof that the sluiceways were opened. I believe the Spaniards did these things, but I cannot say so and prove the fact. Many of the Spaniards were crazy. A crushing defeat had demoralized them completely."

CASE FOR THE COURTS

"Are these your tickets?"

"Yes," said Dimpleton, examining them.

"They are not good," said the conductor.

It was 9.30 a. m. on the Wagner car that left Cleveland at 8.30, and it was the last day of the Dimpleton wedding trip. Dimpleton had bought his railroad tickets at the station in Cleveland the night before, and on entering the train he handed them to the parlor car conductor to give to the train conductor, in order to avoid further annoyance. It was this individual who now confronted him.

"What's the matter with them?"

"They are not stamped."

"That's not my fault. If the ticket agent failed to stamp them it's the company's negligence."

"I can't help that, sir. You will either have to pay your fare to New York or get off at the next station. Those are my orders."

That morning, after paying his bill, Dimpleton had seated himself in a remote corner of the hotel office and counted up the sum of six dollars and eighty-nine cents, the amount that was left in his pocket to see him and his bride into the Greater New York. This would be enough, said Dimpleton to himself, allowing for two moderate luncheons, two moderate dinners, the incidentals and the cab fare home. With the consciousness of these facts, and suddenly confronted by an unforeseen dilemma, Dimpleton's pulse promptly rose to thirty points above par, and his heart sank to six eighty-nine. It was necessary for him, however, to assume a bold front. The passengers were becoming interested, and Mrs. Dimpleton's indignant glance at the conductor and her confident glance at him made this imperative.

"I'll do nothing of the sort," he said with a rising voice.

"Do pay him, dear," said Mrs. Dimpleton, laying her hand appealingly on his arm. "You can make them pay you back, I am sure, when the facts are ascertained."

"Certainly," said the conductor. "The company will telegraph on to the agent at Cleveland, and your money will be refunded. I have no doubt, of course, that it is all right, but I have no authority to act, and it would cost me my place to accept those tickets."

Dimpleton looked up and down the car at the line of faces, and promptly rose to his feet.

"No, sir!" he shouted. "Give me back those tickets and put us off, and be hanged to you! I can stand it if you can. You'll have the prettiest suit on your hands you've had in a long time."

At this point the man in the next section spoke.

"I admire your pluck, sir, and I believe you have a good case. But it isn't necessary for you to leave the train. Pay your fare over again, keep the tickets, and I shall be glad to be a witness to the transaction. I have suffered myself at the hands of this company," and he handed out his card.

"Do," said Mrs. Dimpleton.

"Never!" replied her indignant husband. "You are very kind, sir, but I am going to make a sure thing of it. I am going to be put off this train at the next station, and I am going to be."

Thus it happened that an excited groom and a despondent bride stood on the platform at Buffalo, and saw their train roll out of the station.

"Oh dear!" exclaimed Mrs. Dimpleton, as she sank down into a seat in the waiting room. "This is dreadful! I did so want to get home to-night, and you know they expected us. What are you going to do now?"

"Do? said Dimpleton. "The first thing I am going to do is to telegraph on to the office for money."

"Money?"

Dimpleton smiled feebly.

"Yes, dear," he said. "I may as well confess. The fact is that I spent more than I expected to on this trip, and had only just enough left to get home with. I wouldn't have thought of getting off that train if it hadn't been for this."

Mrs. Dimpleton looked at him rather hopelessly for a moment and then her face flushed with surprise.

She was experiencing that first indignation, that first sudden ebb of confidence in her husband, which usually comes to every woman some time within three weeks after the ceremony.

"My dear," she said, with a strong effort at control, "you might have informed me of this before. It seemed quite unnecessary for me to tell you, but before we left, papa was thoughtful enough to put a hundred dollar bill in my purse."—Life.

A Bible Engraved on Stone.

In 1857 Mindon-min, King of Burma, erected a monument near Mandalay called the Kuthodaw. There are built 700 temples, in each of which there is a slab of white marble. Upon these 700 slabs is engraved the whole of the Buddhist Bible, a vast literature in itself, equal to about six copies of the Holy Scriptures.

This marble Bible is engraved in the Pali language, thought to be that spoken by Buddha himself 500 B. C. But, alas, for all this human ingenuity and perseverance! If his majesty, Mindon-min, thought to perpetuate the teachings of the Great Buddha by causing it to be graven on the rock he nourished a vain ambition.

The climate of Burma is moist, and its effects have already wrought havoc on the surface of the white marble.

This is certainly the largest known copy of any portion of literature. Even the National Encyclopedia of China, its 5,000 volumes, occupies a comparatively small space.—Boston Traveler.

"Come in and shut the door," was his greeting. "I have been waiting for you."

"You are alone, as usual," she asked, drawing nearer.

"I am always alone. Why in the world did you come?"

"You had a telegram just now, in the garden," she explained; "I feared it might be bad news."

He gave a little hard, mirthless laugh. "Bad news has long ceased to be possible in my life," he said, coldly. Was that why you came?"

"Yes."

"Reason enough to keep most people away," he remarked, drily. At last she asked: "Why do you walk round and round your room every evening?"

He shrugged his shoulders. "Force of habit, I suppose; it is the way I think."

Then, hastily changing the subject, he inquired: "What will your mother say when you tell her where you've been?"

"I don't think it will occur to her to ask. Her thoughts are taken up at the present moment"—she glanced at the clock—"in accepting an offer of marriage on my behalf. She is an admirable woman; I have no doubt a good mother, and when she has disposed of me we shall all have been married before the age of 24."

The girl was gazing at him steadily and without flinching; vaguely she found herself wondering if there had ever been a time in her life when she had not known him—when, in fact this stranger had not been her first and greatest thought, the supreme interest which completely filled the emptiness of her world. So had love come to her unsought, and as yet she knew it not by that name. When she spoke her voice was low and appealing: "Well, it can matter little how one works out one's destiny, if in the end all will infallibly turn out well. For instance, I shall marry the man of my mother's choice, and perhaps for a few years we will be miserable together; but at last death will free one of us and then life's object will become clear and I will vow it from the imperative of my last hour, from the standpoint of age, experience or resignation, as a charming picture in a circular frame, and shall smile to see how well the colors blended." She laughed hopelessly.

"Poor little girl" he muttered, rising, and, leaning against the mantlepiece, he looked down at her with yearning, dreamy eyes. "Shall I tell you the riddle of my life?" he asked. She assented

"Ten years ago I married the girl my father chose for me—an heiress, the only child of rich and indulgent parents. We did not love each other—a punishment which I doubtless deserved. Less than a year after our marriage I first noticed a strange expression in my wife's face, which day by day became more apparent, and then she began to talk strangely and to say senseless things. Vainly I strove to fight the fear which was fast growing to certainty, till at last the violence of a mad woman left me in doubt no longer as to the terrible thing which had come upon me.

"I won't describe to you the horror of the next few months, when the best brain doctors in London pronounced her case hopelessly incurable, and when I had done all I could to restore the balance of her disordered mind, without avail. I did not want to send her away, but at last the matter was taken out of my hands. When I was recovering from a knife wound in my left temple—you see I am destined to carry a reminder of her to my grave—the doctors insisted on removing her to an asylum, and there I have been obliged to leave her ever since."

The girl had drawn nearer to him; his story had been a shock to her, but her thoughts were not of herself. "How dreadful!" she said, "and how lonely you must often be! Why have you never let me know you all these years?"

"I—I dared not!"—he turned away. He did not see the glory of love and suffering that shone in her soft, dark eyes. He only heard both in her voice, for there stole into his eyes the light of happiness.

"It was unkind of you," she said; "I might have been better than nothing."

She crept close to him, and shyly put her hands in one of his; he bent over them, holding them to his brow. "Little girl," you don't understand," he said softly. "Better than nothing! —it was just because you are better than everything that I could not say to you, 'Come!' Every day since I first came here I think I would have given my soul to see you come in at that door as you did to-night. I was often lonely, but it satisfied me to know that you were near. It amused me to wonder what we should say to each other if we ever met."

"Yet," said the girl, "I wonder that you can hold such happy theories about life! Do you really believe that your riddle will be solved?"

"I think," he answered gravely, "it was solved by the telegram you saw me open in the garden; it brought me the news of my poor wife's death—and you came to save me from the horror of my thoughts."

The girl would have drawn away her hands, but he detained them; she swayed a little, and he supported her with his arm, "I must go back," she said faintly. He folded her cloak about her tenderly. "I am going to take you home," he said.—Max Hamilton in St. James' Budget.

THE CUBAN BLOODHOUNDS.

They Were Introduced Into the South to Hunt Slaves.

The first Cuban bloodhounds landed upon this continent were imported two hundred years ago by Spanish planters of Louisiana, then a Spanish territory. We all know what the dons were about 1760. Negroes were cheaper then, and if a slave gave trouble it did not much matter that the bloodhound's hold upon his throat was broken only by the tearing of its flesh and tendons. Many times in those days the fugitive negro did not live after his capture. If he succeeded in gaining a tree, his olive-skinned masters shot him out as they would a squirrel. If on the ground when caught the dogs killed him, sometimes before the arrival of the horsemen, who had ridden hard to be in at the death.

The Cuban hound was a valuable dog, and he was well treated. In some of the old court records of Louisiana are bills of sale of him. In instances the prices ran as high as $300 a pair. The breed spread all through the south, although I have never heard of the dogs being used as man hunters in the upper tier of southern states. I doubt that one has ever been laid upon the trail of a negro in Virginia, North Carolina or Maryland.

As a matter of course, the planters of this century were careful to protect their slaves as far as possible from attacks by the animals. This was generally easy. The runaway slave invariably made for the swamp at the back of the plantation. It contained many streams and lagoons, which aided him in throwing the dogs off the scent. If the worst came to the worst he could always climb a tree.

The bloodhound is now used only in the pursuit of criminals. Every southern penitentiary has a brace or more of them. They are not infrequently a part of the sheriff's outfit. The breed is not always pure, but the dogs serve their purpose better than fairly well. Their keenness of scent is one of the most remarkable things in nature, though it is of value chiefly in the more thinly settled region. It seems incredible that the mere temporary pressure of a man's boot or shoe upon the ground should leave a traceable scent for twenty-four hours, providing that there has been no rain, but there is no doubt that it does. Sometimes in the south a murderer breaks jail. Until the universal introduction of chilled steel cages this was not a difficult matter. Dogs are telegraphed for at a distance probably of 150 miles. They arrive a day after the escape. They are led in leach to the point where the criminal is supposed to have made his exit and uncoupled. They take up the scent instantly and follow it rapidly. The man hunt have crossed much water or confused his trail with the hurrying footsteps of dozens of others to throw them off. Always supposing that twenty-four hours is the extreme limit of "law" allowed the fugitive, the bloodhounds are the best means of meeting his capture. Having far to travel, they do not bay. They save no breath to waste.

In the first canto of "The Lady of the Lake," Scott remarks that "the deep-mouthed bloodhound's mellow bay resounded up the rocky way." That was the English bloodhound. The English bloodhound, or the bloodhound of the continent for that matter, not only bays, but has a remarkably sonorous and beautiful voice. He "opens," as it is technically termed, upon a cold trail and keeps it up until the quarry is sighted or run down.

He is of great size, with deep chest, powerful shoulders, massive head, drooping jaws and long ears, a remarkably courageous and affectionate animal, courageous, though not especially savage, and one of the best friends man ever had. This hound is known in the old prints as the "sleuth" hound, or "slot" hound, taken from the old "sleuth" or "slot"—otherwise "trail"—of the deer. He is called the bloodhound, not because he is particularly fond of blood as a matter of diet, but because, having once found the blood-trail of a wounded animal, he follows it with wonderful stanchness by its aid, in fact, unless taken off by force, follow it until he drops, and rising will stagger along until he falls again.

The English bloodhound is not used in the south. That is where Mrs. Stowe's error was made. The dog there is the Cuban bloodhound. He differs materially from his English cousin. He is larger, fiercer and swifter, with more of a bulldog cut about his head. He is probably a descendant of a bull cross. He is invariably mute until the quarry is sighted. Almost any dog will give tongue when he comes within view of the object of his pursuit after a long chase. This dog is not a snapper, as is the English. He is a pinning dog, which comes probably from his bull strain. Once his teeth are locked, they can be disengaged only by the ingenious method of grasping his nostrils and shutting off his breath. —H. S. Canfield in Chicago Times Herald.

Democratic Nomination.

FOR GOVERNOR,

Elvin W. Crane,

of Essex County.

Eighth Congressional District.

Democratic Convention!

Under and by virtue of the power and authority vested in the undersigned by a resolution adopted at the last Congressional Convention, we have fixed upon Wednesday, October 15, 1896, at 2:30 o'clock p. m, as the time and Zoan's Armory Building, Elizabeth, Union County, New Jersey, as the place for the holding of the Democratic Convention of the Eighth Congressional District of the State of New Jersey, for the nomination of a candidate to represent said District in Congress.

The basis of representation fixed by the committee under said resolution is one (1) delegate for every one hundred (100) votes cast at the last Gubernatorial election and one delegate for every fraction over fifty. Townships and boroughs in the District shall have been formed since that election shall be entitled to at least one delegate each.

The number of delegates to be selected from the various wards of Plainfield is as follows:

UNION COUNTY.

City of Plainfield—

	Delegates.
First Ward	2
Second "	2
Third "	3
Fourth "	3
Township	1
Cranford "	1
Fanwood "	1
Garwood "	1
Mountainside "	1
New Providence "	1
Springfield "	1
Summit "	3
Union "	3
Westfield "	3
Roselle Borough	1
Roselle "	1

The appropriate committee in each county will fix the time and place for holding the primaries for the selection of the above number of delegates.

W. P. HAMILTON,
ANDREW DONNELLY,
Committee.

The Democratic Choice.

In these times of harmonizing all elements of the party and aiming to overcome those things which has brought defeat to them in the recent elections, the Democrats have done their best in nominating Elvin W. Crane, of Essex county, to make the fight against Foster Voorhees for the Gubernatorial chair. Mr. Crane is unquestionably a strong man for the Democrats to choose for their standard bearer, and in the present condition of the party, when it would not require very much to cause a breach promising devastating results, it is well that a man such as the Essex official is has been selected,

Mr. Crane is not objectionable to any Democrat and ought to poll a full party vote, which, if he does, must mean that he will be the next Governor of New Jersey. Once the party is reunited in its one-time accord and activity New Jersey is assuredly a Democratic State. Mr. Crane has a strong element of strength to accomplish the result, especially with a fair, strong and aggressive platform, such as was enunciated at the convention yesterday, to make the fight on.

It has been a good many years since New Jersey Democrats have gathered in a State convention with such enthusiasm as was displayed at Trenton Sept. 28th. True, there were differences of opinions over certain subjects, which for a few minutes led to a story scene, but they were got over safely and the convention ended in the best of feeling, the delegates determined to make common warfare against their political opponents.

Mr. Crane's Record.

Elvin W. Crane is a native of New York. He was born in Brooklyn in 1853, and is therefore three years older than his Republican opponent, Foster M. Voorhees. Before the present Gubernatorial candidate had arrived at school age his parents moved to Newark, and there he attended the public schools, from which he graduated.

After a short period at a private school he entered the law office of Bradley & Abeel, and in due course was admitted to the bar. He was soon afterwards appointed Assistant Prosecutor of the Pleas under his former preceptor, Gustavus Abeel, and held the same position under the latter's successor, Oscar Keen. He was a member of the Assembly in 1887, in 1889 was appointed Prosecutor of Essex county by Governor Green and was reappointed by Governor Werts in 1894. His term of office will expire in 1899.

Mr. Crane has been prominent in Democratic political circles for many years, and is the present chairman of the Essex county committee.

Satisfied that won't be compelled to go into the campaign knowing that they are leading a forlorn hope. It is neither good sense nor good politics the way Democratic affairs are conducted in Union county.

At present there are a few Democrats in Elizabeth who are about all there is in substance of the party machinery in Union county. They maintain a sort of an organization at the county seat, and capture what few honors and perquisites there are drifting around. But so far as the rest of the county is concerned, if it wasn't for Crowell in Rahway, Martine in Plainfield, Lane in Summit and Jackson in Springfield, it is an open question if even the primaries would be regularly held.

Union county was once classified as Democratic, but it is far from that nowadays. Still, with a thorough organization of the party in the various cities and townships, things would probably be different. There is plenty of young blood in the party that but needs some encouragement, some recognition in party councils, some different ways of party rule than now prevail. Stir up this latent material and the Democrats will find things coming their way more often in Union county.

The Democrats need to get out of this rut they are traveling in. It leads to nowhere.

For The Assembly.

In looking over the county for good timber for the county nominations, James P. Powers, of Elizabeth, is being suggested as a candidate for the Assembly.

Although Mr Powers is not a candidate in the sense that he is making a canvass to gain the honor, it is understood that he would accept the nomination if it is tendered to him. It would seem that Mr. Powers would make an available candidate in several particulars.

One of these is the fact that he was the last Senatorial candidate of the Democrats in Union county, and though he led what was considered a forlorn hope in that campaign—the one of 1896—he became well-known throughout the county by reason of it, and wherever he appeared at campaign meetings his presence always resulted in a favorable impression upon the voters. His genial ways and honest character makes him friends of a lasting kind.

Since his removal from Plainfield to Elizabeth Mr. Powers has built up a large law practice, and he is rapidly pushing himself into the front ranks of Union county citizens, from where many of the State's best and most noted men have graduated.

Elizabeth, no doubt, will claim at least one or two of the Assembly nominations and there is a prevailing sentiment that Mr. Powers would be one of the strongest candidates for the Assembly that they could decide upon.

A Coveted Improvement.

The Board of Trade of Plainfield continues to meet at regular intervals, but their results so far have been decidedly Spanish—mostly talk of what they are going to do. One thing, however, that the tradesmen are very anxious to accomplish is the project of having the Central Railroad of New Jersey construct tunnels under their tracks at the North Avenue station and then build another waiting depot on the east side.

It is argued that at present the railroad company takes a very large risk in damage suits that are liable to grow out of the dangers to which passengers are subjected by crossing and recrossing the four tracks to board the various passenger trains. Scarcely a day passes but what there are some narrow escapes from either death or terrible injuries, but with the proposed new depot and a tunnel approach to it from North avenue, the company would absolve itself of responsibility for accidents that might occur in such a manner.

A Permanent Pavement.

The need of a permanent pavement in the business district of this city is something that is recognized by everyone, and in taking the first definite steps to provide such an improvement, the Common Council last Monday did but its urgent duty.

Macadamized roadbeds are all very well for streets that carry but normal traffic, but with the number of conveyances that pass to and fro in a constant stream on Park avenue, Front street, Watchung avenue and Somerset street, the wear and tear is such that something more durable is essential.

In establishing such an improvement the cost will, of course, be greater than such work has been in the past experience of the city with its care of streets, but in the end it will be far more economical.

We cannot imagine that any sensible taxpayer will object to the proposed bonding of the city for the improvement contemplated.

Col. Murrell's Position.

Whether or not "Colonel" William Murrell, of Asbury Park, does what he says he is going to do to the Republicans this fall in the work of changing the colored voters to the Democratic column, he is at least getting plenty of notoriety out of his speech at the Democratic State convention last Wednesday. The Republican newspapers have fell like a thousand bricks upon the colored colonel, and if he is a sensitive soul he must be deeply pained by the editorial thrusts for which he is the target.

It must be admitted, however, that the Colonel's speech in the convention was not one that would convey the idea that the colored voter is a particularly smart man. The Colonel seems to regard the colored man's vote as something deposited with a view of are turn other than mere government—in fact, the Colonel hinted mighty plainly that if the Democrats got the support of his race that it would be with the expectation of a few future public perquisites.

That idea is all right in politics as far as it goes, but the Colonel carried it a little too far. He was too outspoken. The Colonel should have orated in praise of the colored man's desire for good government, equal rights and other theoretical things of State. Then, after the convention was over and the campaign in progress, the Colonel and his immediate advisors might get together with their white political brethern and fixed things for patronage after election. All these aspersions upon the Colonel's honest purposes would thus have had little ground for publication.

But still Col. Murrell undoubtedly knew from experience that a polished stand before election was generally ignored after election by the Republicans, and perhaps he concluded that he would be well not to indulge in glittering generalities in treating with his new friends. Whatever may be said of the Colonel it cannot be said that he is playing 'possum now. He is decidedly alive to the situation.

Mayor Si's Sauce.

Mayor Silas D. Drake, of Lincoln, was waited upon by a delegation of Lincolnites a few days ago and urged to become a citizen of the place himself. Though the Mayor has used all his versatile arguments to secure residents for Lincoln during the past two years, he has failed to convince himself of the advantages of living there and has instead been a commuter to Bound Brook. As Hamlet wouldn't be Hamlet with Hamlet left out so Lincoln don't seem to be Lincoln with the irrepressible Drake left out, and therefore the citizens have performed the strange duty of asking the Mayor to live in the town he rules over. Silas concluded that what was sauce for the goose was sauce for the gander, and so he has announced his intention of removing to Lincoln immediately. To commemorate the event Mayor Drake has decided to give a dinner to newspaper men of this section.

Congressional Outlook.

James E. Martine, who was chairman of the last Congressional convention of the Democrats in the Eighth district, yesterday issued the call for the convention, this year to be held in Bayonne, Oct. 17th.

Now that Mr. Martine's candidacy for the office has been put to an end by his own statement that he is not a candidate for any office, the name of former Judge Thomas J. Noonan, of Bayonne, is being suggested for the nomination. It is understood that Judge Noonan is inclined to accept the honor and make the fight against Congressman Fowler. Bayonne is the only reliable Democratic section in the Eighth district, and with Judge Noonan as a candidate it would spur the party there to greater efforts.

New Jersey's Glory.

Though New Jersey gained but little glory out of the late unpleasantness with Spain, her business men are bound to figure conspicuously in the saying "in time of peace prepare for war." At the opening of bids in the Navy Department in Washington for the construction of the four new type of monitors, authorized by recent act of Congress, Lewis Nixon, of Elizabeth, was awarded the contract. With this great work to be executed in Elizabeth and the building of disappearing gun carriages at the Pond Machine Tool Company's works in this city, Union county is taking front rank in both military and naval construction.

An Industrial Chance.

Plainfield's new Board of Trade had a very auspicious beginning. The members were full of worthy enthusiasm to boom their city and attract new industries here. Now a corporation wants to locate its manufactory here and employ some 300 men.

The Board will truly show its usefulness if this and other companies can be brought to select Plainfield as the site for their factories. This is a case where the practical efficiency of the Board can be properly demonstrated.

Good streets? Good!

In The Third.

The New York Herald has the following political gossip of interest in this section:

The campaign in the Third district is still in a formative state. There is no doubt that Representative Howell is to be put afield again by the Republicans. The Democrats feel assured they could have beaten him with Millard Fillmore Rose, but Mr. Rose is not in a consenting frame of mind. They still have hopes, however, and are canvassing the field with a careful eye. They have before them, as more or less available timber, George Helms, of Hainesville; Henry S. Terhune, once Senator from Monmouth, and a grandson of "Staff" Little; James F. Deshler, a son of Postmaster Deshler, of New Brunswick; former Senator William J. Keyes, of Somerville, and John F. Wilson, the Mayor of North Plainfield.

Fame Is Theirs Now.

The persistent efforts of the basket ball team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. to achieve victory and fame have not been in vain. The team has been classed as one of the best in this section and a photograph of the group of players has been selected by A. G. Spalding & Co., to be inserted in their annual basket ball guide, the recognized authority on the sport. Only the principal teams of the country have been invited to have their photographs appear in this volume.

How Modest They Are.

Elizabeth is entitled to the nomination for State Senator because, as already shown, it has not its full proportion of the county offices. But there is still another claim, and a very strong one. The present Senator is an Elizabeth man, and his term will not expire for another year. It is perfectly proper to insist that an Elizabeth man be named to fill the unexpired term, and next year allow the new conditions to govern this and the other nominations.—Elizabeth Journal.

Oh, the modesty of Elizabeth Republicans.

Mr. Martine's Position.

James E. Martine authorizes The Daily Press to announce that he is not and has not been a candidate for any office that the Democrats are to nominate for this fall. Mr. Martine is out of politics this fall so far as running for office is concerned.

Democratic Needs.

The essential need of the Union county Democracy is for the party members to get together, form an aggressive organization, with some sort of a head to it, and nominate candidates.

Ten years ago last Saturday, October 1st, 1888, W. L. Force, then postmaster of the city, established the free delivery system in the postoffice. The carriers were Solomon F. Flaig, Joseph Shepperd, Peter Flynn, John Mackey, E. T. VanWinkle and Wm. Demarest. The two latter are the only carriers now on duty out of the list mentioned.

The Fourth Congressional district is likely to swing back into the Democratic column this year, and this is causing a lively scramble among prospective candidates in Democratic ranks. The friends of Johnston Corbish, who was retired from Congress by the great slump in 1896 to make way for Mahlon Pitney, are urging that he is entitled to another nomination now.

Those people who think that Union county is unquestionably Republican now at all times, received a rude shock the other day when the State committee decided it wouldn't do to risk the Senatorship to a special election, but that if the G. O. P. elected a successor to Foster Voorhees the best chance of success would be at the regular election.

Between wondering if he will be compelled to perform the grewsome task of dispatching life from the body of Roesel, the convicted murderer, and trying to placate Summit Republicans who have been deprived of a constabulary representive at the county seat, Sheriff Kirk has plenty to occupy his mind.

It has been stated on excellent authority that Thomas Cuming, of Putnam avenue, will be a candidate for councilmanic honors in the next city election to represent the Second ward. Mr. Cuming is very popular and would undoubtedly poll a strong vote.

The good feeling among Union county Republicans at the nomination of their favorite son for the highest office in the State seems likely to be rudely disturbed by the scramble for the vacant office which is created as a result of the selection.

Among those being spoken of for Assembly nominations in Union county by the Republicans is George Ball, of Fanwood.

The Cranford Chronicle is pushing the name of Louis L. Coudert for a Democratic nomination of Assemblyman.

Governor Voorhees says that he will positively resign from the Senatorship this week—possibly today or tomorrow.

"All things come to him who waits"—even arrest. Thus sorrowfully soliloquizes Senator Quay.

—Of late there has been a good deal of fast driving in the borough, and the Mayor has decided that the practice must be stopped.

ECHOES OF CONVENTION.

ENDEAVOR DOINGS AT ASBURY PARK RECITED INTERESTINGLY.

Horace J. Martin Told the Trinity Church Society of the Great Assemblage of Young Christians—Election of Officers.

Those who did not attend the State Christian Endeavor convention at Asbury Park last week had the affair brought to them in an echo meeting which was held in Trinity Reformed church Monday, and addressed by the president of Trinity's society, Horace J. Martin, who was also their delegate.

Mr. Martin picked out a few striking points in the two days' services and spoke upon them, trying, in his short address, to cover the entire ground without going very deeply into details The speaker started with the arrival of the Plainfield delegation at the Park, and told how they were distributed at the hotels. Over a hundred Endeavorers were at the hotel where the Plainfield delegates were quartered.

Mr. Martin only attended the services held in the Auditorium and did not go near Educational Hall. He described the speakers at the Auditorium, the sunrise meeting Thursday morning, but held back the extracts from the addresses made at the convention for future use.

Mr. Martin described the prayer meeting held Thursday noon at Life Saving Station, No. 6, with the crew who had come out on the beach. After the service the crew gave an exhibition of their work, and from a mast, erected some distance down the beach, provided with stays and cross arms, rescued supposed shipwrecked sailors for the amusement of the spectators.

Rev. T. S. Davis, vice-president of the State organization, said that some one from the Endeavorers ought to be rescued, so climbing up the mast Mr. Davis got into the breeches buoy and came sliding down the rope to the beach. As Mr. Martin described the sight the reverend gentleman made with coattails flying and trousers legs half way up to his knees, there was considerable quiet laughter at the thought of the dignified vice president making an exhibition of himself. Before his address Mr. Martin sang one of the hymns which was a great favorite at the convention, "I Know Not When Thou, Lord, Will Come." Mr. Martin led the singing at the Auditorium one day, the regular leader being ill.

Last night's meeting was also a business meeting at which officers were elected. Horace J. Martin was re-elected president, and the other officers were: First vice-president, Edgar Sheppard; second vice-president, Miss Lillie Remson; recording secretary, Harry F. Crawford; corresponding secretary, Miss Mabel A. Woodruff; treasurer, Miss Ella R. Fenner.

At the convention the president, Mr. Martin, pledged $5 to the State treasurery on behalf of his society, and last night this action was ratified. One new member was elected and Mrs. Martin was transferred from active to honorary membership.

The treasurer's report for September was as follows: General fund, receipts, $13.81; disbursements, $9.56; balance, $4.25. Sinking fund, receipts, $6.05; no disbursements. Missionary fund, $17.06; no disbursements.

GOLF INTEREST IS GROWING RAPIDLY.

Saturday Was a Big Day at the Hillside Tennis Links.

PLAY FOR THE FISK CUP.

EVENTS SCHEDULED FOR REMAINDER OF THE SEASON.

At One Time There Were Sixty-seven Persons Playing Saturday Afternoon—Scores of the Club Far Beyond Expectations—Many New Visitors Saturday Afternoon—The Scores Made.

Last Saturday afternoon was one of the liveliest in the history of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and the course was occupied all of the afternoon with golf enthusiasts. At one time there were sixty-seven persons playing, and in all there were about two hundred people who visited the clubhouse and grounds. Especially noticeable were the number of private carriages present bringing many people, who were there for the first time.

Of course, everyone greatly admired the club's new house and grounds and were delighted with the situation. An informal tea was given by the women of the club, and in the evening dinner was served to a large number of people.

The success of the club is far ahead of anything heretofore dreamed of and if it continues to increase larger accommodations will have to be made.

At present twenty-four additional lockers are being installed for the men and women of the club, and increased accomodations will have to be made to provide for the horses and carriages that are brought to the grounds.

It seems to be the general opinion of many golf lovers that the membership of the club has reached its limit. This is not the case and there is yet room for many more people.

The course is now in excellent condition and during the fall it will be used annually. Saturday afternoon play was continued for the Mrs. Fisk cup and quite a large number of players were contesting for honors. The following scores were turned in:

	Gross.	Handicap.	Net.
J. H. F. Wharton	96	10	86
C. Wharton, jr.	118	14	104

AFFAIRS OF SCHOOL RECEIVE ATTENTION.

Regular Meeting of the Board of Education Last Monday.

A MONUMENT AND A FLAG.

SHAFT TO MEMORY OF LAFAYETTE AND FLAG FOR IRVING SCHOOL.

Medical Inspectors Report That all School Buildings are in Excellent Sanitary Condition—Large Enrollment of Pupils This Year—New Flag Pole to be Raised in the School Yard.

A monument in memory of General Lafayette and a new flag pole for the Irving School divided the attention of the Plainfield Board of Education last Monday at the October meeting of the Board. The session was short and uneventful. All the members were present except Mr. Abbott.

After the usual batch of routine business came the report of Tax Collector J. A. Martin showing school taxes amounting to $708.45 had been collected, together with $95.88 interest, making a total of $804.33.

The report of the medical inspectors was very satisfactory. The inspectors had examined all the school buildings and found them in excellent sanitary condition. They found very little to criticise. They reported that after consulting with Superintendent Maxson they had decided not to begin the personal examination of pupils until October 1st.

A communication from some of the residents in the neighborhood of the Bryant school stated that they would use their best efforts to see that the children did not trespass on the lawn if the front fence to the school was taken down. The communication was signed by Mrs. A. W. Wessman, F. S. Templin, Mrs. Mary B. Hill, Willard M. Miner and George M. Rittenhouse.

Superintendent Maxson reported that there were now about 2,000 pupils enrolled in the public schools, making seventy more than were enrolled last year at this time. He also told of a letter he had received from the Lafayette Memorial Commission, composed of a number of prominent men, with the object of erecting a monument to cost $250,000 at Paris in memory of the great French General. Mr. Maxson was appointed on the advisory committee and the Board was invited to have the schools observe October 19th as Lafayette Day, and to allow the children to offer contributions for the monument which is to be built by the children of this country. The date selected is the anniversary of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown.

Mr. Maxson suggested that the day be observed by the Plainfield schools, and the suggestion was followed out by a formal motion to the Board that was unanimously passed.

"Your executive thought particularly well advised. In fact, your school management in Plainfield is refreshingly capable and adequate." This was a passage in a letter written by Dr. Hamilton W. Mable, one of the editors of the Outlook who made the address at the last commencement, to Superintendent Maxson and was read to the Board and the reporters.

The flag pole was brought to the attention of the Board by Mr. Lounsbury, who was seconded by Mr. Maxson. He explained that the truck to the pole on top of the Irving school was split. Nobody could be found to climb the pole, so a scaffold would have to be erected. That would cost at least $25. Mr. Lounsbury thought the best thing to do was to put that money toward a new pole and stand it in the yard instead of on top of the building. The other members were apparently of the same mind for they all agreed and the building committee was empowered to get the new pole and have it set in the school yard. That over, the Board went into executive session.

At the executive meeting it was decided to make a trial for a time of abolishing the forenoon recess in the grammar classes and closing fifteen minutes earlier in the afternoon. There has been no afternoon recess for a long time, and since the Whittier School was started there has been no morning recess in that school. The teachers seem to be unanimous in the opinion that abolishing the recess is a great gain. There is much less roughness and rudeness among the children; there are fewer cases of discipline to be dealt with; there are fewer colds in consequence of the children getting heated by running while out of doors and then sitting in a cool school-room. Also much time is saved, since when there is a recess, considerable time is taken in going out and coming in, and it takes some time for the pupils to cool off and settle down to work when the recess is over. The new plan will begin Wednesday and will be watched carefully by Superintendent Maxson and the Board of Education to see whether it works as satisfactorily as is anticipated. The schools will close at a quarter of twelve, and at the middle of the morning session there will be calisthenic exercises to afford the pupils a change of position and a relief from continuous study.

BRUNSWICK MEN WON.

FIFTH COMPETITION FOR PETERS TROPHY HELD SATURDAY.

Dunellen Missed Some of Her Best Men—Winning Team Made Good Scores—T. H. Keller, of Plainfield, the Highest.

The team race of the Central New Jersey Trap-Shooters' League for the Peters Cartridge Company trophy, shot at the grounds of the Reservoir Gun Club, of this city, Saturday afternoon, was the fifth competition of the series. It resulted in a second victory for the Reservoir Club.

It was expected that Dunellen would make a hard fight for the prize, but two of their best men failed to put in an appearance. The Climax Club has also scored two wins for the trophy, and Dunellen one, so the next contest will be of unusual interest.

The score of the winners was exceptionally good, two of their members scoring 23 out of a possible 25. The highest score of the day was made by T. H. Keller, he scoring for the second time during the series a full score of 25. Darby, of the Climax team, was decidedly out of form which is accounted for by the fact that he has handled any of late. "Tee Kay," Jr., seems to be a promising novice and shows improvement at each meeting. His score of 17 is above the average and particularly good for a beginner. The next shoot of the league will take place at Bound Brook Saturday, Oct. 15th. Dunellen will then make a strong bid for victory. Bound Brook will also put in a strong team, and it is to be hoped that one of these clubs will score a win and keep the leaders company. Several sweepstakes were also shot during the afternoon. The following are the individual scores:

WELCOMED THEIR PASTOR.

Formal Reception to Rev. W. C. Snodgrass by First M. E. Church.

The ladies of the First Methodist church gave a reception last night to their pastor, Rev. Winfield C. Snodgrass, who has returned from a trip abroad. A short programme of music was given, interspersed by remarks from Mr. Snodgrass describing his trip, after which an informal reception was held at which an opportunity was given all to shake the pastor's hand and tell him how glad they were to see him back again.

Miss Mary Collier and E. C. Howard played a duet together on the piano, and Miss Collier also rendered a piano solo. Miss Julia Ketchem favored the audience with vocal solos. Refreshments in the form of ice cream and cake were served towards the close.

The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. G. Q. Packer, Mrs. N. W. Pike, Mrs. Whiting, Mrs. George Burgess, Mrs. H. A. McGee and Mrs. John Lewis. Mrs. French, the chairman, was absent, so Mrs. Packer took charge of the reception.

A SICK SOLLIER.

Prostrated on His Way Home From Porto Rico.

Charles Paterson, who has been very sick in the hospital at Fortress Monroe, is on his way home from Porto Rico and has been delirious several days, is on the mend.

His family in this city have received several kind letters from his nurse, a Miss Kenny, stating that he is receiving the best of care, and that they need not worry about him.

The nurse says he is always cheerful and is a good patient, and as soon as he is able to travel he will come home on a furlough.

Endeavorers Active.

The semi-annual business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church will be held on Friday evening of this week at the home of Miss Alice Morgan, of Albert street. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance, as officers for the coming year are to be elected. The short business session will be followed by a social hour. All members of the society who can do so are requested to take the Front street trolley car leaving the station at 7:45, and proceed together to the meeting.

An Approaching Marriage.

The announcement of the marriage of Miss Laura Emmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Emmons, of Jackson avenue, to Gilbert Fletcher, of New York, is made. The wedding will be celebrated in Trinity Reformed church Wednesday evening, Oct. 19th.

A BICYCLE THIEF CAUGHT IN THE ACT.

Started to Ride Away With Alpheus Stein's Wheel.

STEIN SERIOUSLY OBJECTED

CHARGED WITH ANOTHER CRIME HE FINALLY CONFESSED ALL.

Charles Ludy, of DeKalb Avenue, Now Awaiting Action of Grand Jury at Elizabeth—Confessed That He Took Tommy Timbo's Wheel—Police Were Sharp Cross-Questioners—Timbo Happy.

Tommy Timbo was jubilant Monday morning and sang the praises of the Plainfield police without reserve. He had his wheel back again, good as new, while the confessed thief of it now rests behind the bars at the county jail, charged with grand larceny.

Saturday evening, Alpheus M. Stein, of 52 Grandview avenue, rode up to the postoffice on his Cleveland wheel. Leaving it leaning against the curb, he walked a short distance away and stopped to speak to a friend. When he turned around he saw his wheel going down the street in the hands of a young man. Stein rushed after him and remarked that he thought there must be a mistake somewhere. The young man guessed maybe there was. He thought it was his wheel, he said, but now noticed that it wasn't. Then Patrolman Vanderweg appeared on the scene.

The young man told the officer that it was all a mistake and was for departing at once but Vanderweg said no. The young man grew persuasive but the patrolman was obdurate. The young man said his name was Charles Ludy and that he boarded with his sister at 21 Somerset street. Vanderweg locked him up despite his pleadings and investigated. No sister was found at the address. Instead, it was ascertained that Ludy lived with his parents on DeKalb avenue. They are respectable people. Young Ludy has been learning the trade of a mason.

Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Flynn started an investigation. They found that Ludy had been seen riding an Eclipse wheel two weeks ago Sunday. Then they began to cross-question the prisoner. He soon entangled himself in his lies. It is likely that he saw that it was hopeless and confessed that he had stolen Tommy Timbo's wheel from in front of the latter's store on North avenue two weeks ago.

Ludy told how he had gone riding that day with a lad named Clark from Liberty street out the Stelton road and returned by the way of New Market and Dunellen. Half way between those two places he left his purchase and he threw the wheel into a neighboring field and left it there.

Sunday afternoon the Sergeant and Roundsman went out to find the wheel. After spending an hour in a fruitless search, they met a colored man named Henry Stevens. He had seen the missing wheel in a field and told John Wyncoup who lives nearby. Wyncoup is a locomotive engineer on the Jersey Central Railroad. They went to see Wyncoup and found the wheel at his house. He had repaired the puncture and cleaned up the wheel and was patiently waiting the arrival of the owner. In the evening Timbo identified the wheel and took possession.

Last Monday Ludy was arraigned before Justice Newcorn and admitted taking both of the wheels. He was committed to the county jail at Elizabeth to await the action of the Grand Jury.

The police believe that Ludy has been concerned in several of the other bicycle thefts that have occurred in this neighborhood lately. He was rigorously questioned but would not admit any more. After his confession he was greatly dejected and spent much of his time weeping. He asked for a Bible.

State Convention Described.

At the consecration meeting of the Congregational Christian Endeavor Society, Sunday, which was led by Miss J. Louise Jenkins, a report of the State convention at Asbury Park was given by the society's delegate Miss M. G. Morse. Instead of each session of the convention being reported separately, Miss Morse gave a brief account of it as a whole, from a social, intellectual and spiritual point of view. It was a well-prepared and very enthusiastic report, and was greatly enjoyed by the Endeavorers.

Dissolved Partnership.

The partnership which has existed between Benjamin F. Crane and Benj. C. Mundy, the West Front street butchers, was dissolved Saturday night by the withdrawal of Mr. Crane. Mundy has taken a new partner and will continue to conduct the business as before. Mr. Crane will leave for Idaho in a few weeks.

THE CLUB WOMEN AGAIN.

MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB RESUME THEIR MEETINGS.

First Gathering Since the Summer Months—A Lecture by E. R. von Nardroff, of New York, on Electricity.

The members of the Monday Afternoon Club met Sunday afternoon for the first time this fall. There was a large attendance, showing that the members are quite anxious to return to the work of the fall and winter.

The subject of the meeting was electricity and a highly interesting illustrated lecture was given by E. R. von Nardroff, of New York. This expert gave a talk on "Electric Current: Its Properties and Uses," and he gave a number of very interesting experiments.

After the lecture the members of of the club were given the privilege of asking Mr. von Nardroff questions concerning the subject under discussion. Following this part of the programme, the club held a short routine business meeting.

On October 17th Mr. von Nardroff will return and give another illustrated lecture on the subject of "Recent Electrical Discoveries and Inventions.

ON HIS WAY TO A REFORMATORY.

Willie Frey Goes to the County Jail as a Matter of Formality.

Willie Frey, the twelve-year-old son of Charles Frey, of Madison avenue and West Second street, who was picked up by a policeman Saturday because he ran away from home, spent another night in the city jail. City Judge DeMeza gave the lad a hearing about 6 o'clock Monday and sentenced him to pay a fine of $3 or be committed to the county jail for ten days. As it was so late Chief Grant left him until Tuesday morning before taking him to Elizabeth.

To one who is not acquainted with the way things are run in this county, the sentence of ten days which was imposed upon Willie seems hard. But it was not done to punish him. His mother has been urging Chief Grant for several months to get her son in the Reform School.

As the Reform school is a place for young criminals, the Judge of the Common Pleas does not have power to commit there unless the young person has been legally sent to jail for some offense. Now, as Willie has been committed, it is likely that he will soon find himself in the Reform School unless his mother repents, as she has done several times before, and pays the boy's fine.

SURPRISING FORMER PASTOR.

Young People From Centenary Church, Newark, Visited Dr. and Mrs. Snodgrass.

A party of young people from the choir of the Centenary M. E. church, arranged a delightful little surprise party for their former pastor, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, of Central avenue, last Friday evening. Mrs. Snodgrass let into the secret and invited some of the young people from the First M. E. church, where Dr. Snodgrass is now pastor. The little gathering was a complete surprise to Dr. Snodgrass. An enjoyable programme was rendered during the evening by the visitors, and a pleasant time was enjoyed by all.

Told a War Story.

The afternoon meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday was addressed by Fred Kuehnle, a private of Co. D, 71st N. Y. Volunteers, who is now back in business again, after having been through the battle of Santiago. In the evening the soldier addressed the congregation in the First Presbyterian church.

POSTAL FACILITIES GREATLY IMPROVED.

Postmaster Bird Has a Quicker Despatch of Mail.

NO CAUSE FOR CONPLAINT.

LETTERS MAILED AT NOON DELIVERED IN NEW YORK THE SAME DAY.

A Direct Pouch for Philadelphia and Washington Now Closes at the Local Office at 7:30 p. m.—A Direct Mail Also to Boston at Noon—Money Order Service is Greatly Improved Locally.

Postmaster E. H. Bird has made an early start along the line of improvements in the local office. Some citizens complained of delay in the service from the fact that a letter dropped in the office during the forenoon was not delivered in New York until next morning.

Mr. Bird has removed cause for complaint on this score by introducing another direct mail to New York City, closing at 12:30 noon, and arriving in New York in time for delivery in any part of the city the same afternoon.

This mail also connects with important Long Island, New England and Hudson river mail trains. Another notable improvement has been made in the night mail, closing at 7:30 p. m. In the past this was but one mail, direct to New York, and there distributed to the early morning trains. Under the new order a direct pouch for Philadelphia, Washington and the south will be made up for connection at Elizabeth with the "Washington Fast Mail."

The third addition to the service is a direct mail to Easton, Pa., closing at 12:30 noon, connecting through that office with mail for Wilkesbarre, Allentown, Harrisburgh and Reading and other cities in that section of Pennsylvania.

These improvements, with those that will be made from time to time as the needs of the city demand, will put the Plainfield office on a level, as regards efficiency of service, with cities of nearly double our population, and it will require only the hearty support of the citizens to make Plainfield a first-class office, and secure all the advantages of such classification.

Under a recent order of the post office department, postmasters are allowed to issue money orders payable at the same office. This will be a great convenience to persons having no bank account, as it permit the transacting of business with the same security and at a trifling expense.

A HOME WEDDING.

Miss Jessie Slorah and James A. Cullinan the Contracting Parties.

Miss Jessie Slorah, daughter of Robert Slorah, of 309 Morris avenue, and James A. Cullinan, of this city, were married September 28th at 7:30 o'clock at the home of the bride. The house was decorated in an attractive manner with potted plants, palms, etc.

The bridesmaid was Miss Lucy Clifton, and the best man was James A. Slorah, brother of the bride. The bride was gowned in white organdie over white silk, and she carried bridal roses. The bridesmaid wore a gown of white organdie over nile green silk and carried pink roses.

Following the marriage congratulations were offered and a supper was served during the reception. Mr. and Mrs. Cullinan received presents consisting of silverware, banquet lamps, while a handsome side-board was received as a gift from the bridesmaid.

The bride and groom will not go on a honeymoon, but have gone to housekeeping at 424 West Front street, which house is already furnished and waiting for them.

Sold Under a Mortgage.

Last April Benjamin D. Ford, of Malvern Hill, Va., commenced proceedings through George Ball, solicitor, to foreclose a purchase money mortgage on property located in Metuchen and owned by the late Harriet Markham. The suit was contested by a second mortgagee, F. M. Bacon, but Mr. Ball succeeded in having the answer stricken from the file, and the sale was held Wednesday, Sept. 21st. Wm. M. Cortwright, of West Fifth street, was the purchaser, and the deed will be delivered Oct. 5th.

At the Ice Works.

Doctors now agree that consumption is curable.

Three things, if taken together, will cure nearly every case in the first stages; the majority of cases more advanced; and a few of those far advanced.

The first is, fresh air; the second, proper food; the third, Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil with hypophosphites.

To be cured, you must not lose in weight, and, if thin, you must gain. Nothing equals Scott's Emulsion to keep you in good flesh.

PRIZED WALKING STICKS

MADE FROM A PLANK TAKEN FROM A SPANISH FORT.

Twelve of Them Made by Patrick Casey, of This City, for a Captain Who Brought the Material From a Battlefield.

Patrick Casey, of Park avenue, has just completed a piece of work for Captain Henry L. Reilly, of Evanston, Ill., which is destined to make him known pretty well through that State. The work is ten canes which he has manufactured for the captain from a plank taken from the fort at El Caney, Cuba. The canes are fitted out with heads of oxydized silver, silver and gold, and will be presented by the captain to some of his officers who took part in the battle with him.

Mr. Casey secured the job through Wm. Ford, who is in Battery F, Fifth U. S. Artillery, with Captain Reilly. When the fort at El Caney was taken Captain Reilly tore away a 2x6 plank of solid mahogany and carried it away with him, and when he came north brought it along.

This fort is said to have been constructed in 1625, and yet the planks of which it was built were in a good state of preservation. Sixteen of these two-inch planks formed the walls, which were, therefore, thirty-two inches in thickness. Mr. Casey expressed six of the canes to Captain Reilly yesterday. He still has a small square of the wood left, out of which he intends having a match-box or something made which Mr. Casey will keep himself.

FUNERAL OF MRS. BUNTING.

Two Ministers Officiated at the Obsequies Saturday Afternoon.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Bunting, of 94 Mercer avenue, were held last Saturday afternoon from the house at 3 o'clock. There was a large attendance of friends and neighbors. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Sabine, pastor of the Reformed Episcopal church, of New York, assisted by Rev. Mr. Downey, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, of the borough. Eloquent and comforting words were spoken by each minister and the services were very impressive. Interment will be made in a receiving vault in Greenwood Cemetery, upon arrival of the deceased's son, John Bunting, Jr., of California, who is expected today or tomorrow.

Business and Pleasure.

On Thursday evening the members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will meet at the home of Miss Florence G. Hawkins of La Grande avenue, and hold their annual election of officers. A sociable will follow the business session.

HARRY CUMING WON THE PRESS MEDAL.

Successful Field Day Resulted in His Victory.

WAS HALF A POINT AHEAD.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS FURNISHED AN EXCITING CONTEST.

Cuming Was Closely Pressed in the Contest for The Daily Press Medal and the All-Round Championship by His Schoolmates—Medal Was Presented to Him on Monday Morning.

By the decidedly narrow margin of just half a point, Henry F. Cuming won The Daily Press medal and the all-round championship of the Plainfield High School Friday afternoon at the annual closed field games of the Plainfield High School held at the Crescent Oval. Sydney R. Craig made the strongest kind of a fight and finished secon l to Cuming in the chase after the medal. William A. Fisher, Hervey K. Doane, Claude Edwards, William Morgan and J. Stanley Mosher all showed up well and made things lively for the victor.

The weather was all that could be possibly wished for the games, while the track was in fair condition. The audience numbered 300 and was wildly enthusiastic. The fair sex was largely represented.

The opening event was the 100-yard dash. Cuming started quickly from the one-yard mark and soon was in the lead of the bunch of six runners. Fisher pulled up rapidly toward the last, but Cuming won by over a yard. Morgan was mildly being overhauled by Edwards, who was slow in starting, when he crossed the tape third.

Cuming scored five more points in the third wheel when he rode from scratch. He passed them all and won easily. Mosher second, Conant third and Edwards fourth. First scored five points, second three points and third one point.

Craig, although scratch, had an easy thing in putting the shot, while his principal rival, Edwards, did not show his usual form. Fisher carried off the laurels in the 440-yard run by a pretty sprint on the stretch. Edwards was pocketed but made a dive alongside of Doane, to be beaten for second by an inch.

The high jump went to Craig without trouble. Then his rival, Cuming, won the mile bicycle in great shape. He started from scratch and made a great pace until the last lap, when he was well up with the bunch. On the finish he ran away from the field.

The three-legged race made the crowd laugh. Edwards and Craig came down the stretch with giant strides and took the lead. Fisher and Cuming came to grief through the breaking of a strap and lost their chance, finishing second. Morgan and Hazeltine tried to gallop but it didn't work. Doane won the broad jump in a field of six.

The third mile walk was delightfully funny. Doane was the only man who knew anything about it but Fisher had a little spurt up his sleeve as the finish and passed him a foot from the tape. Cuming and Craig both grew so excited that they forgot and ran. They were disqualified. Edwards kept his head and finished third. J. V. Green acted as judge of walking.

Thomas A. Cuming was the referee. Ira W. Travell, Albert B. Meredith, and George Weeks Sandford were the track judges. Carroll L. Bunyon and Walter L. Long were the field judges. H. C. VanEmburgh acted as starter. The timers were Fred P. Taylor, Thomas Quinn and J. V. Green. The clerk of the course was Charles Burdette Morse.

The summaries were as follows:

One-hundred-yard dash. Won by Harry Cuming, 1 yard; William A. Fisher, scratch, second; William Morgan, 3 yards, third. Time, 11 3-5 seconds.

One-third-mile bicycle race. Won by Harry Cuming, scratch; J. Stanley Mosher, 25 yards, second; A. Conant, 10 yards, third. Time, 45 seconds.

Putting the shot. Won by Sydney R. Craig, scratch; William Morgan, 12 inches, second; Claude Edwards, scratch, third. Actual distance, 32 feet, 3 inches.

Four-hundred-and-forty-yards run. Won by William A. Fisher, 5 yards; H. K. Doane, scratch, second; Claude Edwards, 10 yards, third. Time, 1 minute, 4 2-5 seconds.

Running high jump. Won by Sydney R. Craig, scratch; William Morgan, 2 inches, second; Claude Edwards, 2 inches, and Harry Cuming, 2 inches, tied for third. Actual jump, 4 feet, 7½ inches.

One-mile bicycle race—won by Harry Cuming, scratch; J. Stanley Mosher, 125 yards, second; A. Conant, 50 yards, third. Time, 2:31 1-5.

Three-legged race—won by Claude Edwards and S. R. Craig, scratch; Harry L. Cuming and William A. Fisher, scratch, second; Frank Hazeltine and William Morgan, 2 yards, third. Time, 16-2-5 seconds.

Running broad jump—won by H. K. Doane, scratch; Sydney R. Craig, 2 inches, second; William A. Fisher, 1 inch, third. Actual distance of jump, 16 feet, 1 inch.

One-third mile walk—won by H. K. Doane, scratch; William A. Fisher, scratch, second; Claude Edwards, scratch, third. Time, 3:24 3-5.

The points in the contest for the all-round championship and the Daily Press medal were divided as follows: Harry F. Cuming, 18½; Sydney R. Craig, 16; Wm. A. Fisher, 15; Hervey K. Doane, 13; Claude Edwards, 8½; Wm. Morgan, 8; J. Stanley Mosher, 6; A. Conant, 2; Frank Hazeltine, 1.

The Daily Press medal and the ribbon prizes in the events were awarded Monday morning before morning exercises at the High School.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL RALLY.

INTERESTING EXERCISES IN THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Marked the Resumption of Active Work After the Summer Months—Services in First Methodist Church.

The annual rally of the members of the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church was held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and was attended by not only the scholars, but a large number of parents and friends. The Sunday-school room, especially about the platform, was prettily decorated with American flags and golden rod. The exercises were in charge of Acting Superintendent George H. Batchelor. They consisted of Scripture reading, singing by the school and prayers by the superintendent and Rev. Dr. Yerkes. Features of the programme was a vocal duet by Mr. and Mrs. L. Biglow, Jr.; soprano solo by Miss Harris; a recitation, "The Boyhood Dares," by Clarence Smalley; and a patriotic exercise by the members of the primary department under the direction of the superintendent, Mrs. Powlison. This exercise consisted of recitations and songs. During the afternoon an admirable and interesting address was made by the pastor of the church, Dr. Yerkes. He congratulated the scholars and teachers of the school, as well as the officers, for the excellent work accomplished during the past year. Acting Superintendent Batchelor also made a few remarks appropriate to the occasion. The rally throughout was one of great pleasure and profit to all.

Sunday was Rally Day with the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church. The afternoon session of the school was resumed after the vacation season and there was a large gathering of scholars and teachers for the active work of the fall and winter. The attendance of pupils and teachers was large and very gratifying.

The platform and front of Vincent chapel were prettily decorated with wild flowers and autumn leaves. The superintendent, J. W. Jackson, was in charge. After a short period for the lesson, a roll-call was held. There were also short missionary exercises.

The roll of honor was announced and included the Misses Smalley, Bolstert and Coddington, teachers; and the scholars, Lena Bonno, Mamie Devine, Clara Knight, Gertrude Sharp, Florence Taynor, Stryker Hoagland and Jennie Devine. The roll of honor included those who had not been absent more than three times in the last three months.

SNEAK THIEF'S QUICK JOB

GOT AWAY WITH $50 IN CITY HOTEL SATURDAY MORNING.

Clerk Rogers Left the Money in a Box in the Hall While He Went Into the Barroom and Back Again.

A sneak thief in the City Hotel Saturday morning got away with $50 in cash. The robbery was committed in less than a minute and a half while the clerk, Albert Rogers, was in the barroom, having left the cash box just outside the door in the hall.

There are two cash registers in the City Hotel barroom, and the clerk takes the contents of each upstairs with him at night. When the bartenders come on duty in the morning Rogers hands over to them the cash necessary to make change with.

Saturday, just before 7 o'clock Rogers came down stairs with a cigar box containing about $50, the contents of one cash register. Placing the box on the hat rack in the hall the clerk stepped into the barroom after the key and his coat. He was gone about a minute-and-a-half, but during that short absence some one came in the hall and disappeared with the box, for when Rogers came back, it was gone.

There is no clue to thief. At that early hour the office was deserted. Although the front door was unlocked, it was not open, and it is strange how anyone could have come inside, stolen the money and got away without being detected. A year ago some one broke into the hotel barroom one night and smashed a cash register, but only got a few cents for his trouble.

Heavy Sentences.

In the City Court Sunday Susan Harris, a vagrant, was given sixty days in jail. Michael McCarty, who was wanted for several troubles, was fined $100 and sentenced to fifty-nine days in jail. Michael Duncho, an old offender, was given $20 and sixty days.

METZ IDENTIFIED AS SNEAK THIEF.

He Was Arrested on Charge of Larceny.

NOW IN THE COUNTY JAIL.

WM. C. STANSBERY LOCATED HIM AT BENNER'S ROADHOUSE.

Stansbery's Domestic Says That He is the Man That Robbed the House Under Guise of Piano Tuner—Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers Also Identified Him—Warrant Was Already Prepared.

The readers of this paper have seen in these columns the account of the visit of the alleged "piano-tuner" to the residence of William C. Stansbery, at Fanwood, on the afternoon of Wednesday, September 21st, and the subsequent discovery of the theft of $125 worth of jewels. When Mr. Stansbery learned of the taking of his property, he waxed wrath and vowed that he would catch the man.

The first clue was obtained from George Allen, who drives a hack at Fanwood. A stranger, answering Stansbery's description of his "piano-tuner" had hired Allen to taken him to Benner's road-house on South avenue and return. Then followed an interview with Miss Lizzie Malone, housekeeper for John Benner.

After tuning Benner's piano, the stranger wanted to sell him a new one. Miss Malone arranged the sale, agreeing to give the old instrument and $350 for a Weber piano. On the occasion of his visit he gave the card of Jos. J. Flynn, New England Piano Company, 5th Fifth avenue, New York, saying that he represented him. He also said that W. Dygert was the manager of the concern. Now Mr. Dygert is a personal friend of Mr. Stansbery.

The first part of the week, Miss Malone received the following telegram porporting to be from the piano-tuner and signed "Joseph Higgins." It said "Have just returned. Will come up with beautiful piano as soon as possible."

Since then, Stansbery has been waiting for something to happen. It was shortly after 1 o'clock when Frank Allen told Stansbery that George Allen had taken the same man up to Benner's. Mr. Stansbery began his campaign at once. After telephoning to police headquarters in Plainfield, he secured Constable Robert Walpole and a warasnt from Justice Clark, of Scotch Plains, for one "John Doe," charged with stealing. The warrant had been already sworn out and was waiting for just such a chance.

Stansbery and his ally drove to Benner's and there found a man who answered to the description of the man they wanted. He was promptly arrested and hurried to the Stansbery home. With him at Benner's was Mr. Fox, agent for the Weber Piano Company, one of whose instruments was on the road. Mr. Fox knew nothing of the man with him beyond the fact that he had ordered the piano.

At the Stansbery residence, Miss Matilda Iverson, the colored domestic who was at home when the "piano tuner" called, positively identified the accused man as the same one who called the day of the robbery.

This testimony together with that of the other witnesses was next heard by Justice Clark who held the prisoner in $300 bail for his appearance before the Grand Jury. He pleaded not guilty.

Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Flynn had responded to Mr. Stansbery's call and driven to Benner's. From there they followed the party to Justice Clark's arriving in time for the hearing.

September 1st, a man called at the home of J. Pendleton Rogers, of 518 East Front street, to tune the piano. He had been there before as the tuner for the Fisher Piano Company. This time he represented himself as being from the same concern. While there he rummaged the dining room and secured a silver sugar sifter and several silver tea spoons. He then departed after which the theft was discovered. Mr. Rogers called on the firm in New York and was told that the man had formerly worked for them, but had been discharged for dishonest dealings. This man, according to the description, corresponded with Stansbery's acquantance.

The police had been on the lookout for the "piano tuner," and so brought Benner's captive to Plainfield after Justice Clark was through with him.

The prisoner gave his name as Paul Metz. He said that he resided with his father, Bernard Metz, at 209 East 61st street, New York. His father was in the bicycle business, he said. He had just come off a sick bed himself, he told a Press reporter, which he explained, accounted for his nervousness. He had a wife and baby at home.

Mrs. Rogers identified the man from afar off and was very positive in her identification. "Good morning," she remarked, but the prisoner smiled imperturbably and explained that he had never seen her before.

A complaint was sworn out before Justice Nash by Mrs. Rogers. The prisoner pleaded not guilty and was held under $100 bonds to appear for the Grand Jury. Not being able to obtain bonds, Constable Walpole took him to the county jail at Elizabeth.

BACK FROM HONEYMOON.

REV. MR. GARDNER AND BRIDE GIVEN A PLEASANT WELCOME.

Grace M. E. Church Made it Agreeable for Mrs. Gardner, Who Has at Once Become Popular Among the Parishioners.

The return of Rev. Mr. Gardner, pastor of Grace M. E. church, and his wife, from a pleasant honeymoon, was marked last Friday by a reception given at the church by the members and friends. The pastor and his wife were given a royal welcome home. The women of the church planned the reception which was of an informal nature.

Though a stranger to everyone, Mrs. Gardner proved herself equal to the occasion, and won the hearts of all present by her winning ways and genuine sociability.

Rev. Dr. Carroll took charge of the programme of the evening for the women and announced each number. There were instrumental selections by Fred VanEps, banjo; Bert Harold, piano; Bert Littell and Ray Carroll, mandolins. Another pleasant feature was the vocal selections by Miss Alice Carroll and Miss Grace Carroll, both of whom were obliged to respond to encores. A pleasing part of the programme was the recitation by Miss Elizabeth Hoagland. Dyckman Winckler rendered several violin selections. Another number that came in for generous applause was the piano solo by Miss Millie Valiant.

Following the programme the balance of the evening was devoted to social chat and the serving of refreshments. Those who had not previously done so, were given an opportunity to meet the bride and groom, and among those who extended their congratulations were Rev. and Mrs. William C. O'Donnell.

Mrs. John Valiant was chairman of the reception committe, while the entertainment committee was in charge of Mrs. Most. Mrs. John H. Carney had charge of the ice cream and assisting her were Mrs. Schering, Miss Della Voehl, Mrs. A. A. Taft, Miss Smalley and J. P. D. Kirch. Those who looked after the cake were Mrs. Kirch, Mrs. Vermeule, Mrs. VanNest, Mrs. Morton and Mrs. Higgins.

MISSION WOMEN TO MEET HERE.

Twenty-eighth Annual Convention to be Held October 19th and 20th.

The Philadelphia branch of the Woman's Board of Missions will hold its 28th annual meeting and the Woman's Home Missionary Union of the New Jersey Association its seventh annual meeting in the Congregational church in city Wednesday and Thursday, October 19th and 20th.

The programme for Wednesday, beginning at 10 o'clock, is in the interest of Foreign Missions and will consist of reports of the foreign and home missions work and the reading of papers by Miss Susan Hayes Ward, of Newark, and Mrs. George Whittlesey, of Washington, D. C. The speakers for the evening session have not been named.

The principal address Thursday will be delivered by Miss Moffat, of the C. H. M. S.

Delegates are invited here from every auxiliary of the branch and of the union, and those interested in missions in churches where there are no auxiliaries will be gladly welcome. The entertainment committe requests that all delegates send notice of intention to attend the meetings to Mrs. Wm. B. Wadsworth, 452 West Eighth street, Plainfield, N. J., by the 10th of October.

ILLEGAL USE OF BEER BOTTLES.

Detective Peterson Found Sixty of Frank Linke's Bottles at Lawrence Currin's.

Detective Peterson, of the New Jersey State Bottlers' Association, was in this city last Saturday for the purpose of hunting up violators of the law who use beer bottles for other purposes than that for which they are intended. Frank Linke, of West Front street, requested Mr. Peterson to come to this city, as he has been missing a number of bottles of late.

The detective visited the place of Lawrence Currin, which is just outside of the city limits. He had with him a warrant issued by Justice Warden, of Dunellen. The detective found nearly sixty bottles belonging to Mr. Linke. Mr. Currin was taken before Justice Warden and given a hearing and was then released on his own cognizance. The Justice will give his decision in the case in a few days. Detective Peterson will again visit this city soon.

Wanted in Several Places.

It is reported that Paul Metz, the piano tuner, who is now confined in the county jail on charges of theft, is wanted in several other Jersey cities on similar charges.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS FOR BASKET BALL.

Inter-Association Contests to be Held.

FIRST TEAM BEGINS WORK.

ALL THE OLD PLAYERS ARE BACK AND WILL PLAY.

There Are Also Some Thirty Other Candidates Anxious to Show Try for Team—They Will be Given a Showgin Other Teams—Season to Open October 10th—Practically Four Teams.

By long and persistant efforts during the past two years the basket ball team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. has risen to a position among the leading teams of this section. Some of the best teams hereabouts have been defeated by the local team while with others, the Plainfield boys have made an excellent showing.

The only trouble with the game in Plainfield has been that there was comparatively little chance for the other members of the association who were not on the regular teams to get a chance to learn the points of the game in a personal acquaintance. Of course, they could play together but the first team had the benefit of all the coaching and the rest played as they wished.

There were practically four teams in the local gymnasium last season. There was the first or regular team that represented the association in all the matches with out-of-town clubs. Then the members of the Business Men's gymnastic class had a team that occasionally arranged games with other clubs. The two other teams were strictly local. They were the "Students" and the "Big Five." The two last teams and the Business Men played matches occasionally but there was no regular contest arranged among them.

This year, a new order of arrangements is in view. The six young men that made up the team, with one regular substitute, are all anxious to play again this year. They have now been together for the past two years and understand each other pretty thoroughly. Besides, there are some thirty other candidates for the first team. There is not much doubt, however, but that the team will be made up of the same players. They are Walter L. Long, Max Moraller, Eric Moraller, Berry Egan, George Procter Smith and Fred Bonny.

The physical work committee of the Y. M. C. A. has a new plan in view to give the others interested in the game a chance to play as well as learn the game in the general way. Among the members of the association, and members of the lesser lights up to championship form so that they will be able to furnish new material for the regular team. There are to be three teams for inter-association contests. Each team will be under the direction of two of the players from the first team who will captain and coach the new men in all the points of the game that they have learned from experience. These three teams will arrange a regular schedule and play for the championship of the association. In this way, it is expected to greatly increase the interest in this sport.

Monday evening, October 10th, will see the opening of the class work at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. It is hoped to have the first game of basket ball on that occasion. Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood is arranging an excellent programme for that evening, part of which he hopes will be a game with a New York team. The regular team began practice Friday evening when all the regular team except Smith, who is out of town, appeared together with a number of other candidates. The practice will be continued now with regularity.

Walter L. Long was elected captain of the first team at the practice Friday night. The uniform of the team was also selected. It will consist of grey padded short trousers, a jersey of white, maroon or black, black stockings and white shoes. The object of the three colors for the jerseys is to enable the team to wear a color different from their opponents, whatever they happen to be.

KEAN GETS THE FRANCHISE.

Now He Can Build a Trolley Road from Elizabeth to Cranford.

Ex-Congressman John Kean has secured the right of way for his county trolley road from the Township Committee of Union.

This will enable Mr. Kean to proceed with the construction of his trolley road from Elizabeth to the boundary line of Cranford. This he expects to have completed in about eight weeks.

Back From the Klondike.

John Underhill, of Washingtonville, who has been searching the Klondike regions for sometime past, has returned home for a while. He expects to return to the gold fields in the near future. While away he had the pleasure of meeting Robert Wyckoff, of this city, who is also searching for gold. He reports that Mr. Wyckoff is doing very well.

AN IMPOSING PARADE OF THE ENDEAVORERS

A Novel Spectacle Witnessed at Asbury Park.

2,000 IN THE PROCESSION.

AND NOT THE LEAST AMONG THEM WERE THE JUNIORS.

The Young Christians Made an Inspiring Sight—Interesting Talks and Reports About the Juniors—Plainfield Delegates Received Home Saturday Morning After a Splendid Time.

The secondday of the great State convention was most enjoyably closed by a reception given by the State officers at the closed the evening session at the Auditorium. The officers formed the regulation reception group in the secretary's room at the back of the convention hall, and for a long time streams of delegates poured past them, shaking their long-suffering hands.

When the sun rose Saturday he had a heavy veil on and the early mist, which vanished before breakfast time, kept a good many away from the sunrise prayer meeting which was held in the Fifth avenue pavilion, and conducted by Edward E. Anthony, of Plainfield.

The address of the morning was by the always popular Amos R. Wells, and was entitled "Christian Endeavor Grit." "A sandstone sermon" he called it, and it was illustrated by a tabloid of small specimens of stone.

A short interlude for luncheon, then came one of the great features of the convention, and one in which the people of Asbury Park were deeply interested. This was the convention procession and the Junior rally. The entire convention turned out, probably at least 2,000 strong, to escort the Juniors to their assembly at the Ocean Grove Auditorium. The State officers and superintendents assembled on the steps of the Albemarle at 2 o'clock, and an escort formed of the Fourth Company, Boys' Brigade, marched to that place, and, after an enjoyable exhibition by the drum corps, in which the microscopic drum-major especially distinguished himself, marched with the State dignitaries to the Asbury Park Auditorium, where the procession started. Banners with the names of the counties were stationed at street corners along the line of march, and as the procession, beginning with the Boys' Brigade and the State officers, the Junior Endeavorers following them, reached each delegation it fell into position, its banner preceding it. Union county was very near the end of the line, as the counties marched in alphabetical order, but it was well represented. The procession was some what imposing, as there were probably nearly 2,000 persons in it, and, as one clergyman remarked, it was an eminently respectable and very creditable procession. The Endeavorers were a well-dressed, good-looking, smiling crowd, and as they marched up the boardwalk and the ocean front made, which had never witnessed such a parade before, they broke forth into joyful song. "Let a Little Sunshine In," "There's a Royal Banner," "Onward, Christian Soldiers," sang the Union county delegations, and the same hymns were heard all along the line.

At the Ocean Grove Auditorium the officers formed in line, with the young soldiers forming their escort, and stood at the side of the pathway, reviewing the long line which marched slowly past, to the music of the drum corps. The hundreds of delegates poured into the Auditorium, the Juniors being seated in the center of the house, and there followed a most inspiring session. Rev. A. W. Spooner, D. D., of Camden, State Junior superintendent, presided, and the devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. P. Peckman, D. D., of New Brunswick, with a few words from Rev. Dr. A. A. Ballard, of Asbury Park. There was a very entertaining address by Amos R. Wells, given in the form of a story entitled "Jimmy's Shoes." The talk was illustrated with a pair of shoes and stockings stuffed to represent feet, which Mr. Wells said he had brought to represent Jimmy, since he could not bring the boy. The story was told to show the change that is made in a child when it starts out in the Christian Endeavor way. The little feet that kicked, that lagged on the way to school, afterward kept in the straight path of light.

A brief and interesting report of Junior work in New Jersey was given by Miss Carolyn Post, of Hackensack, assistant superintendent. This report gave as the number of societies in the State 411, and as the number of Juniors 12,250. Of these 612 had joined the church in the past year. The last address of the session was a delightful "chalk talk," by N. S. Greet, of Boston.

A party of Endeavorers, including A. L. Force and others of Plainfield, enjoyed a visit to Camp Voorhees on Sunday, and tomorrow morning a large party, including several hundred, will go up and hold a more formal service, for the benefit of the soldiers.

Dr. Brett presided at the evening session, which was held in the Asbury Park Auditorium, the building being crowded.

The committee on resolutions introduced resolutions against the army canteen and Sabbath desecration. The election of officers followed, with this result: President, Rev. Cornelius Brett, D. D., of Jersey City; honorary past presidents, Rev. J. Clement French, D. D., of Newark, and Rev. John Kerr, of Union county; vice presidents, Rev. L. B. Dyott, of Newark; Rev. Arthur W. Spooner, of Camden, and Rev. W. F. Lumbar, of Moorestown; secretary, Miss Ida B. Stephens, of Hackettstown; treasurer, Edward E. Anthony, of Plainfield; executive committee, Rev. Charles Harris Jones, of Bayonne; Chaplain Second Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, Rev. T. E. Davis, of Bound Brook; Rt. Rev. Bishop Walters, of Jersey City, and Rev. Peter Stryker, D. D., of Asbury Park.

The convention sermon was preached by Rev. R. S. MacArthur, D. D, of Calvary Baptist church, New York, whose topic was "Calvary's Central Cross the Universal Throne."

The consecration service closed the evening, and the convention as well. It was conducted by Rev. J. H. Owens, of Paterson.

MARRIED SIX YEARS.

THE EVENT MADE A PLEASANT SURPRISE FOR MR. AND MRS. RYNO.

A Party of Friends Made a Visitation Unexpectedly, but They Were Received Cordially—A Pleasant Time.

Sept. 29th was the sixth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Corra Ryno, of Codington avenue, but aside from the realization of the fact little else was thought of it by the couple until last evening about 8:30 o'clock, when a large company of friends took them by storm and thus brought to their minds pleasant recollections. The surprise was complete as arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff, and an evening of uninterrupted pleasure was enjoyed by everyone.

The celebrants received their guests in a hospitable manner. Nothing was omitted to make the affair complete and the guests found the time passing quickly in various amusements and in having a social chat.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Ryno were presented with a handsome rocking chair from their friends. They accepted the gift with many thanks. The hospitality of the host and hostess was evidenced in the serving of refreshments which all enjoyed, and at an early hour next morning the guests departed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Ryno many happy returns of the occasion.

Those present included Mr. and Mrs. George Melick, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Stout, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Force, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stein, Mr. and Mrs. John Kitchen, Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Waldron, Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Higgins, Mrs. L. C. Kline and Willard R. Ross.

Broke His Arm.

Walter Mathews, a colored man living on West Sixth street, fell from the grape arbor in his yard Friday afternoon and broke his right arm in two places. Mathews was standing on a step ladder picking grapes when the ladder broke and he fell. The arm was set by a physician.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Cures Coughs

"My wife was suffering from a dreadful cough. We did not expect that she would long survive, but Dr. J. V. Boyd, deputy sheriff, happened to be stopping with us over night, and having a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with him, induced my wife to try this remedy. The result was so beneficial that she kept on taking it till she was cured."
R. S. HUMPHRIES, Sansay, Ga.

"My little daughter was taken with a distressing cough, which for three days defied all the remedies I tried. At length, on the urgent recommendation of a friend, I began to give her Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After using one bottle I found to my great surprise that she was improving. Three bottles completely cured her."

THE YOUNG CHRISTIANS

State Convention of Endeavorers at Asbury Park.

PLAINFIELD'S WELCOME.

DELEGATES DIVIDED BETWEEN TWO HOTELS.

Everything Arranged For Their Comfort—A Big Attendance at the Opening Session Sept. 28—The Chief Speaker Was Major Z. K. Pangborn.

The sun shone its best on the Asbury Park special that took the Christian Endeavor delegation from Plainfield Sept. 28th Engine 41 was the motive power for the train of five cars, and Walter Durling the very accommodating conductor in charge. The remainder of the train crew consisted of Engineer Frank Marshall, Fireman W. L. Smith, and Brakemen H. Wallaner and L. VanLake. There were 170 passengers on board, including the following, whose names were not mentioned in the former list printed in this paper: Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Beeching, Miss Ida Spicer, Mr. and Mrs. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ammerman, Rev. J. S. Braker, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church; Miss Annie Wyckoff and Mrs. Ira Winthrop Travell. Nine passengers were added to the train at Westfield, and one at Elizabeth. The run was made in an hour and twenty minutes. The cars were a scene of lively sociability during the entire journey, visiting from seat to seat, making the aspect of a car very different from that on an ordinary occasion. There was a little desultory singing on the part of the delegates, but no services were held, such as took place on the Atlantic City special three years ago. Jos. M. Hawkins, of the transportation committee, was in charge of the train, and made everybody as comfortable as possible. Robert Love, of the Third Street mission, refreshed his fellow travelers with five-o'clock-tea crackers, until his box was returned to him with only a few crumbs in the bottom.

Trolley tickets were distributed before the train reached Asbury Park, and a jolly crowd of Endeavorers, laden with wraps, bundles, and dress-suit cases, poured into the cars at the station, and were soon landed safely at their various hotels. Most of the delegates were quartered at the Willard, on Second avenue. The first delegates to reach there were Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Peck, who stood, smiling a welcome, on the piazza when the others arrived. Nearly fifty delegates from Paterson were also at the Willard, and the two delegations formed a large and jolly family party. They found a pleasant, clean house, with comfortable beds, and plenty of blankets for use in case of cold weather. At the Willard the delegates united in singing Christian Endeavor songs, under the leadership of Horace J. Martin.

The delegates at the Albemarle found themselves in the company of its State officers. In the dining room, genial Dr. Cornelius Brett, State President, beamed on his large farge family from the head of one of the central tables. E. E. Anthony, State Treasurer, was at another table, and Miss Ida B. Stephens, State Secretary, at still another. The Albermarle was found to be a very comfortable temporary abode, with large and pleasant rooms, and a fire burning briskly, all ready for cold weather.

All delegates were obliged to register at the Auditorium in order to receive their badges and programmes. A well-appointed registration room was fitted up on the lower floor of the building, where an obliging committee presented each person with the convention badge, of orange and black ribbon, with an oblong of celluloid, bearing the place and date, and a dainty picture of the ocean promenade. An American flag at the top emphasized the Christian citizenship idea. The cover of the programme was also of orange and black. A room beyond the bureau of registration was the literature room, where Christian Endeavor helps and other publications of the United Society were on sale.

The delegates wandered along the board walk, went trolley-riding, or rested at their hotels, with the welcome interruption of a generous and well-served dinner, until the opening of the convention, which took place at the Auditorium, at 3 o'clock, Rev. Cornelius Brett, of Jersey City, State president, presiding. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. A. G. Bale, of Asbury Park, and a prayer service by Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Paterson. The address of the afternoon was by Rev. W. H. P. Faunce, D. D, of New York, on "The Deepening of Christian Endeavor," and was an earnest plea for the quiet hour with God. Real Christian Endeavor singing came from the large audience—larger than at any previous opening session. Christian Endeavor banners waved over their heads, in company with the National ensign, and long streamers of red, white and blue, and of the State colors, orange and black.

The weather all day had been glorious, clear and warm, and a beautiful moonlight night closed it. The Endeavorers were divided in their interests, in the evening, as the meeting in the Auditorium was supplemented by another at Educational Hall. The Auditorium session had as its subject "Christian Citizenship." The chief speaker was Mayor Z K. Pangborn, of Jersey City, whose subject was "American Citizenship." The report of the Christian citizenship department was given by Rev. W. E. Davis, of Lebanon, and the report of the Sabbath observance department by Clarence Schenck, of Newark. In the Educational Hall session S. L. Mershon, of Montclair, spoke on "Territorial Expansion for Jesus Christ," and Rev. W. T. S. Lumbar, of Moorestown, gave an illustrated address on "The War with Spain," the stereopticon views of Manila, Cuba, Porto Rico, leading battleship commanders and scenes being given by Rev. I. Owen Jones, of Bound Brook. Devotional exercises were held at each session, and addresses of welcome given by prominent Asbury Park residents, and responded to by Dr. Brett in the Auditorium and Rev. T. E. Davis, of Bound Brook, in Educational Hall.

The music, both chorus and instrumental solos by local musicians, was of the best. All patriotic allusions were received with wild applause, and the fine addresses met with the careful attention they deserved.

WEDDING BELLS RANG

MERRY AND RESONANT TONES ANNOUNCED THE NUPTIAL UNION.

Marriage Ceremony of Miss Oleava Male to William H. Ross Was a Very Pretty One—Large Number Present

The marriage of Miss Oleava Male, daughter of Ambrose Male, of 925 Putnam avenue, and William Ross, of East Second street, was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents September 28th, at 5 o'clock.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Charles E. Herring. A marriage bell of greens and golden rod hung between the front and back parlors, and under this floral ornament the wedding party stood while the clergyman united the two. The bell was called a "liberty bell," and as the two were pronounced man wife, a real bell concealed among the flowers pealed forth the news right joyfully.

The bride is a brunette, and was attired in white silk, trimmed with real lace. She wore the customary veil and some apple blossoms in her hair and carried white roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Susie Male, of this city, and she wore pink silk trimmed with mousleinde soire, and lace. She carried pink roses.

To the accompaniment of Beethoven's wedding march, played on the piano by Harold Fenner, the clergyman, the groom and his best man, Harry F. Ryno, of Newburg, descended the front stairs and entering through the front parlor took their places under the marriage bell. The bride and her father, followed by the bridesmaid, entered through the back parlor. When the ceremony was over an informal reception was held, followed by a wedding supper.

The groom was for some time an employe of VanEmburgh & Son, the dry goods merchants. The couple will take a trip to Rochester next week, and upon their return will reside at the bride's home.

The couple were well remembered with presents. There was a rocking chair from the employes of VanEmburgh & Son's store; a clock from George VanEmburgh; a silver set from Charles J. Baxter; a table and clock from the bridesmaid and the best man, and other gifts from neighbors and friends.

The bride's father was a nephew of the late Job Male and inherited some of his property.

The family originally came from Canada, and have lived in this city about five years. The bride will inherit quite a fortune.

Guests were present from Rochester, Albany, Brooklyn and this city.

Bitten by a Mad Dog

Word has been received in this city by friends of August Trust, of Marlville, N. C., that he was recently severely bitten by a mad dog that was running about his place. No further particulars are known.

CRANE CHOSEN.

Newark Man Standard-Bearer For Democrats.

EXCITING CONVENTION.

A BIG FIGHT OVER THE ADOPTION OF PLATFORM.

Thomas Lane, of Summit, Lead the Silver Hosts Into a Discussion that Was Decidedly Stirring — Crane Named on the First Ballot.

The waves of uncertainty that marked the path of the Democratic ship September 28 upto the time of the adjournment of the State convention after the temporary organization had been effected, develed into bounding, tossing billows of monstrous size later in the day when the factional winds blowing in different directions came together. For a few minutes the good old ship was in a terrible choppy sea of discord, and the sailors were at odds as to just what sail should be flown to the breeze or how much the silver jib should be reefed in. The vessel that has weathered many a hard gale, and has floundered in several of late, too, was in good hands, though, and she finally came out of the embryo typhoon with the flags of approaching victory tacked high on her foremast. At least so saith the faithful.

The afternoon session of the convention was the most enthusiastic of recent years. The committee on resolutions were a few minutes dilatory in reporting, and after a selection by the band, perched high in the top gallery, Chairman Gourley allotted a few minutes to Col. William Murrell, of Asbury Park, as the representative of the independent colored voters of New Jersey, who had held a convention in the theatre the day previous and had resolved to come to the Democrats with their grievances.

Col. Murrell is a powerful-built colored man with a suspicion of negro dialect in his talk. But he got a great ovation and for a few minutes had the convention in the wildest sort of enthusiasm. What he said is of particular interest to Plainfield in view of the fact that the Republican majority in the Eldorado of the East has its backbone in the colored vote. Here is what the colored speaker had to say:

"We want to show results, not speeches. The Republican papers are lit up with headlines charging me with furnishing the brainwork of this movement—that is their gratitude for thirty years of service. We mean business. We offer uncompromisingly, without pledges or promises, our support to the Democratic ticket to pay our debts to those who have treated us wrong. We are now going through New Jersey to stump every hamlet to pay this debt."

He referred to the brilliant work of the colored soldiers in Cuba, and said the colored voters of New Jersey would stand like a rock against the Republican party in November. "This $2 a day on Election Day for the colored man is played out," said the Colonel as he took his seat amid vociferous applause.

And then came the platform as adopted by the majority of the committee on resolutions. It was read by former Senator Edwards, of Hudson county. It was about the platform that the tempest raged at the convention, and a Union county delegate—the Hon. Thomas Lane, of Summit—was the one who precipitated the trouble and kept it up for fifteen minutes and only resumed his seat after he had been completely tabooed by the chairman. As was anticipated, it was over the matter of endorsing the Chicago platform. The majority of the committee on resolutions referred to the national issues as follows:

"We, the representatives of the Democratic party in State convention assembled, reaffirming our devotion to all the great and vital principles of the Democratic party on national issues, and believing, however, that the coming State compaign should be fought out on State issues."

Before Mr. Edwards had finished Mr. Lane was on his feet, holding in his hand a slip of paper. As the reading of the platform was finished, Mr. Lane, with a dozen other delegates from various parts of the hall, yelled "Mr. Chairman" with all their might. There was a terrible hub-bub, but out of it all Chairman Gourley fixed his attention on Mr. Lane, and after a few moments the Union county man got a chance to speak. He stated that he wished to submit a minority report of the committee on resolutions, to the effect "that the national principles as enunciated at the Chicago convention in 1896 be endorsed." That was the breeze that fanned the factional tempest, and instantly there were delegates from all parts of the hall yelling for recognition.

Chairman Gourley evidently proposed to avoid trouble by ignoring Mr. Lane any further. He tried to proceed with the adoption of the platform as read, but it was impossible for him to be heard ten feet from the stage. Men were on their feet waving their arms and yelling at the top of their voices wherever the eye looked. Mr. Lane was in no mood to be ignored and he kept up a running roar of "Mr. Chairman, Mr. Chairman." He tried to demand his rights, but the chairman turned his head the other way and it was as if the Summit editor was talking to a stone wall. The tumult was kept up for a quarter of an hour, during which the chairman put the motion to adopt the platform and declared it carried. Finally, the noise subsided and Mr. Lane sat down, saying:

"Well, I kept 'em busy for a while any way, but what's the use of doing any more. When you're beat you're beat. That's all."

And then came the nominations for Governor. The delegates were treated to a wealth of oratorical effort, but all in vain. It was almost certain that Crane would be the first choice—perhaps not on the first ballot, but, in fact, he was. When the vote by counties was being called it looked nip and tuck between Crane and Daly. But towards the end it was seen that Crane was slightly in the lead, and as Warren county ended the roll call with twenty-seven for Crane, Bob Davis jumped up and changed the 165 of Hudson from Daly to Crane. That decided it. Then there was a tumbling over each other to get in on the winning side and county after county cast their vote for Crane. The nomination was made unanimous after that, and Crane was the Democratic nominee to fight it out with Voorhees at the election polls.

CAME HOME ONLY TO DIE

MRS. E. M. BUNTING PASSES AWAY AFTER A LONG ILLNESS.

Had Been Spending the Summer at the Seashore, But Her Health Did Not Improve—Was an Earnest Christian.

The death of Mrs. Evaline M. Bunting, aged eighty-four years, of 94 Mercer avenue, occurred September 28th, about 6 o'clock, after an illness lasting about one year. During the past year Mrs. Bunting was quite feeble, and this, together with a complication of diseases, hastened her death.

The second week of last July she went to Avon-by-the Sea, where she hoped to recover her strength, but she was obliged to give up about three weeks ago, and since that time she was confined to her bed. Dr. Ryan, of the above place, was in attendance, and Sept. 28th Mrs. Bunting was brought to Plainfield in a private car. It was noticed that she was rapidly failing and that the end was near. Up to within a short time of death she was unconscious. She was removed to her home at noon from the railroad station in an ambulance.

Mrs. Bunting was born in New York, and was the daughter of James Mitchell, of that place. She was married to John Bunting, for many years a well-known banker, and he died several years ago. She resided in New York up to seven years ago, when she took up her residence at 94 Mercer avenue.

Mrs. Bunting was a faithful member of the Reformed Episcopal church, of New York, and was an earnest Christian woman. She leaves one son, John Bunting, Jr., who resides in California.

The funeral services were held from the late home last Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and the interment was at the convenience of the family.

DEMOCRATIC DELEGATES.

Borough Choose Representatives to Attend Congressional Convention.

The Democratic primary to elect three delegates to attend the Congressional convention was held last Friday in the basement of the Borough Public School. Andrew E. Kenney called the meeting to order and was elected chairman, with Lambert Rodine, secretary. The delegates chosen were J. H. Trewin, David J. Carney and William L. Saunders. The tellers were Lewis Bird and Wm. N. Pangborn. The delegates were empowered to fill vacancies. It was stated by Mr. Trewin that the date for holding the convention had been postponed, but that the right date will be duly published. There was a very good attendance of citizens at the meeting and everything passed off harmoniously.

PRETTY WEDDING OF AUTUMNAL SEASON.

A Brilliant Social Event in a Borough House.

CASE-NEEDHAM NUPTIALS.

BRIDE'S HOME THE SCENE OF A LIFE UNION PLEDGE.

Daughter of a Former Mayor Becomes the Wife of a Promising Young Business Man—Ceremony was Performed With Pleasing Effect — A Military Hero one of the Guests Present.

A pretty wedding of the autumnal season was that of September 28th, when Miss Alice Louise Needham, daughter of former Mayor and Mrs. Henry E. Needham, of 27 Jackson avenue, became the wife of James Herbert Case, of Westervelt avenue. The wedding was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents at 5:30 o'clock in the presence of about sixty relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated. A very impressive and pleasing feature of the occasion was the rendering of the wedding march by Howard Case, brother of the groom, who presided at the piano, and P. Ludwig Conde, who played the violin.

As the march was being perfectly executed, the groom and his brother, Samuel P. Case, who was the best man, entered the parlor and took positions in the northwest corner of the room, where the officiating clergyman stood waiting to receive the bridal party. Following, came the bridemaids, Miss Bertha Needham, sister of the bride, and Miss Lenora Williams. The last to enter the room was the bride accompanied by her father, who gave his daughter away. A semi-circle was formed, and surrounded by beautiful floral decorations consisting of palms, ferns and ivy, the ceremony that made the happy couple one, was performed. During the ceremony soft strains of music were heard and this added not a little to the event.

Immediately after the bride and groom reversed their position and were the recipients of hearty congratulations from those present.

The bride was richly gowned in white organdie, trimmed with lace and ribbons. She also wore a veil and carried a beautiful bouquet of bridal roses. The bridesmaids were also gowned in white organdie, with trimmings of lace and ribbons, and they carried pink roses. Their appearance was an occasion for great admiration on the part of those present.

Following congratulations a wedding supper was served to the guests and this part of the affair was complete in every respect. The home was prettily decorated throughout, and the prevailing color was pink. In the dining room this color was brought out to perfection.

As already stated the guests included only the near relatives and friends, but an exceedingly pleasant feature of the event was the presence of Willard Case, brother of the groom, who is a member of the 5th Cavalry, U. S. A. Mr. Case was obliged to return home on account of illness, but was able to attend the marriage of his brother.

Mr. and Mrs. Case were showered with handsome, costly and useful gifts from their many friends, including silverware, cut-glass, furniture, china and many other gifts too numerous to mention.

Early last evening the bride and groom left the city for the Berkshire Hills, where they will enjoy their honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside at their new residence, 83 Duer street, which has been remodeled and now awaits their occupancy.

The groom has been for many years associated with the Market and Fulton Bank, of New York, where he is a valued employe. His wife was formerly an efficient and valuable member of the corps of teachers in the Borough Public High School. They both have the best wishes of their many friends for success and a happy married life.

SELECTION OF SCHOOL BOOKS.

Committee Who Work Under a New Law in the Borough.

Under a new law the selection of books for public school libraries has to be done by a committee consisting of the county superintendent of schools, two teachers from the school and two citizens, to be selected by the local Board of Education, who have to be residents of the district in which the school is located.

This law has been complied with in the borough and the following compose the committee: County Superintendent J. A. Metz; Superintendent Wightman and Miss Glass, of the borough school; Rev. J. O. McKelvey and J. B. Joy, representing citizens in the district. They will in the future select books for the library.

THIRD WARD G. O. P. IS OPPOSED TO FOWLER.

But They Will Probably Vote for Him, Though.

HAVE NO OTHER CANDIDATE.

RESULTS OF REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES MONDAY NIGHT.

Third Ward Men Feel Sore Over the Postoffice Appointment, but the Lack of Another Congressional Aspirant Will Prevent Their Taking a Stand—Results of Voting in All the Wards.

A queer state of affairs exists with the delegates selected from the Third ward. It is known that every delegate selected not only signed J. Fred MacDonald's petition for postmaster, but also worked for it. These men naturally feel the "turn down" given to them by Congressman Fowler when the appointment of postmaster was made. It was openly stated last Monday that if another man besides the present Congressman is presented the delegates from this ward will support him. If Mr. Fowler is the only candidate the delegates will very naturally stand by the nomination.

FIRST WARD.

In this ward George W. Moore acted as judge, William B. Ayres as inspector and J. B. Coward was clerk. There were 120 votes cast, and the following delegates were elected: H. C. Van-Emburgh, 119; R. T. Polles, 114; C. J. Newman, 110; L. M. Dunavan, 108; E. J. Ollsen received 18 votes.

SECOND WARD.

The contest in this ward was quite lively. In all seven candidates were in the field to be elected as delegates, although the ward is only entitled to four. There were 32 votes cast, divided as follows: C. S. Foote, 32; Robert Guttridge, 31; J. E. Keely, 31; Louis L. Croop, 31; John Venable, 1; C. A. Bayno, 1; O. H. Goddard, 1. The first four mentioned were elected. W. H. Drayton was selected as judge, while William P. Spangenberg was inspector and R. A. Frey was the clerk

THIRD WARD.

There were fewer votes cast in this ward than in any other, and there was no contest whatever worth mentioning. F. E. Marsh acted as judge. The inspector was J. Smith Garretson and A. J. Littell was the clerk. The delegates selected are Alexander Gilbert 26, J. Frank Hubbard 26, F. W. Runyon 20, F. E. Marsh 23. H. G. Runkle received 11 votes, while W. S. Lowry and Spencer Conway each received one vote.

FOURTH WARD.

This was the banner ward of the city for attendance, as there were 79 more people present than in all the other wards together, 249. Abe Angleman was elected judge, H. C. Runyon inspector and W. H. Abbott clerk. The straight Republican ticket for delegates was elected throughout. This ward being entitled to five delegates the following were chosen: William Newcorn, 186; H. C. Runyon, 187; William R. Abbott, 187; C. Shelton, 186; William Jeter, 186. The opposition ticket and the vote is as follows: Jacob Kriney, 62; Joseph Chapot, 62; George Rogers, 61; James Connett, 61; W. Downs, 61. There was one blank ticket and one split ticket.

RETURNS TO HIS HOME, HIS MIND IS A BLANK.

Sad Condition of Thomas K. Leslie, of Front Street.

ABSENT FOR FOUR DAYS.

FOUND HIMSELF WANDERING AIMLESSLY IN NEWARK.

Former Sheriff Kyte Advertised for News of His Whereabouts in Sunday's Herald—Appeared at a Fanwood House Sunday in a Pitiable Condition—Unable to Explain Where He Has Been.

MISSING since Sept. 27th, Thomas K. Leslie, aged 60; height 5 ft. 8 in., weight 175; gray hair and mustache, florid complexion, irregular teeth, one lower front incising; back shoes and Derby hat; rather portly ging. Address GEORGE KYTE, Fanwood, N. J.

Thomas K. Leslie, a resident of West Front street, and a New York business man, now lies at his home in this city in a dazed condition, and perfectly unable to give any account of his life during the past week.

Last week Tuesday Mr. Leslie was in New York and went out to dinner with a friend. After dinner the two men parted at the corner of Fourteenth street and Fifth avenue. That was the last seen of Mr. Leslie until Sunday morning when he stopped at the home of Mr. Palmer, of Fanwood. His mind is a blank and he cannot tell what took place during his absence. He remained at Mr. Palmer's house during the day and was brought to his home last Sunday. Mr. Leslie has been questioned, but all he can tell is that he found himself in Newark and that he walked from that city to Fanwood.

When Mr. Leslie disappeared every effort was made to get a trace of his whereabouts without advertising the matter in the papers, but a small advertisement as above appeared in the New York Herald Sunday morning. Mr. Leslie is a relative of ex-Sheriff George Kyte, of Fanwood, and the latter devoted much time in searching for the missing man.

Mr. Leslie is engaged in the embossing business in New York, and has always stood high among business men. His mind has always been sound, and his relatives cannot account for his strange actions. It is hoped that within a few days his mind will return to him and that he will be able to tell something of his experience.

A Bicycle Party.

A bicycle party was given by Clarence and Orra Rogers Saturday evening to some thirty of their friends. The party gathered at the home on Central avenue and enjoyed a very pleasurable moonlight spin out Park avenue to Pumptown and return. Friends who do not ride awaited their return at the house where the remainder of the evening passed very enjoyably with games, music and refreshments.

Patrolmen Elect.

The following officers have been elected by the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association of this city: President, William Mattox; vice-president, Patrick Flanagan; secretary, G. W. Lunger; treasurer, James Saunders; financial secretary, J. Watson; sergeant-at-arms, Nick Myers.

HIGH NOON WEDDING AT GRACE CHURCH.

Fashionable Nuptials of Miss Dryden to Mr. Nolting.

EPISCOPAL SERVICE USED.

FLORAL DECORATIONS WERE ELABORATE AND PRETTY.

Rev. Dr. Rodman Tied the Nuptial Knot—Fair Members of the Bridal Party Were Exquisitely Gowned—Father Gave Away the Bride—After the Church Ceremony a Reception Was Held.

Grace Protestant Episcopal church was thronged Tuesday noon with fashionable society folks from this city, Virginia and Maryland, who were present to witness the marriage of Miss Fanny Rutherford Dryden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Dryden, of Watchung avenue, to John Paul Nolting, of Richmond, Va. The wedding was one of the prettiest of the season and was performed by Rev. Dr. Rodman, pastor of the church. The Episcopal service was used throughout and was very impressive. Mrs. William A. Freeman presided at the organ, and while the guests were being escorted to seats by Robert W. Dryden, W. J. R. Thiers, Meredith Dryden and Frank Whitney French, ushers, she rendered a programme of choice classical music.

The church decorations were beautiful and around the altar there was arranged palms, rubber plants, and white myrtle. The latter was from the bride's sister, who resides at St. Michael's, Md. There were other decorations equally as beautiful and attractive.

Precisely at high noon the wedding party made its appearance and as the time favored wedding march from Lohengrin was being played, the party proceeded up the centre aisle. First came the ushers, then followed the bridesmaids, Miss K. Elise Nolting, sister of the groom, of Richmond, Va., and Miss Ethel Carey Green, of this city. They were exquisitely gowned in white-striped taffeta silk, and they wore black chip hats and gloves. They carried white carnations tied with pink silk ribbons.

Following the bridesmaids came the bride, accompanied by her father, who gave her away in marriage. She was gowned richly in white satin trimmed with very old family lace. She also wore a rule veil and carried a pearl covered prayerbook.

At the altar the party was met by the officiating clergyman, the groom and the best man, W. G. Nolting, brother of the groom, of Baltimore, all of whom entered the church from a front door. The ceremony was then performed while soft strains of music were being played on the organ. Upon leaving the church the Mendelssohn wedding march was played, and as Mr. and Mrs. Nolting proceeded down the aisle they bestowed gracious smiles on their admiring friends.

After the ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents, to which only the relatives were invited. During the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Nolting left for a bridal trip through the south. On their return they will reside with the bride's parents on Watchung avenue. During the reception a delightful and dainty wedding dinner was served to the guests.

The bride's gifts to her bridesmaids were stick-pins of four-leaf clover and wish-bones, while the groom presented the ushers and best man with scarf pins of dragons set with pearls. The groom's gift to the bride is a close secret and would not be divulged by the giver. The costly and elegant gifts received by the bride and groom evidenced the very high regard in which they are held by their many friends. They included everything that is useful, ornamental and pretty.

Mr. Nolting's business is in Boston, and he prefers residing in this city so that he will be near his business and can give his attention to it.

Corner Stone to Be Laid.

In about two weeks the corner-stone of the new Calvary Baptist church (colored) on Central avenue will be laid. The pastor, Rev. Scott Wallace, says he will invite all the pastors in the town to participate in the exercises, the Masons, Knights of Pythias, etc., and intends to make the occasion a memorable one.

Father Murphy Transferred to Cranford.

Rev. Father Murphy, formerly an assistant to Rev. Father P. E. Smyth at St. Mary's church, this city, and later of St. John's church, Paterson, has been appointed to the rectorship of St. Michael's church at Cranford, to succeed Rev. James P. Smith. Father Murphy assumed his duties Tuesday.

ASPHALTED STREETS IN BUSINESS CENTER.

Important Work to be Undertaken by Common Council.

WORK WILL COST $24,000.

BONDS TO BE ISSUED TO PAY FOR THE IMPROVEMENT.

Ordinance Authorizing the Improvement to be Introduced in the Council Friday Evening—Councilman Buckle Wants to Protect Positions of Men on Police Force—Other Matters Considered.

In the absence of City Clerk MacMurray from the Common Council meeting last Monday, Geo. B. Wean was chosen to fill his place. The meeting was called to order after the usual hour, owing to the holding of the Republican city primaries. All of the members were present except Mr. Andrews, and the business of the evening was closely watched by a good sized audience in the lobby.

On a motion offered by Mr. Barrows, an opportunity was given to all present to make remarks for or against the extension of the trolley. There was no one present who desired to be heard on the subject, and further hearing was adjourned to Friday evening of this week at 8 o'clock.

Mr. VanHerwerden at this time made a motion that the collector's books be examined to see whether certain changes ordered had been made, and that the books be returned to Collector Martin attested correct.

Mr. Barrows made a motion that when Council adjourn it be to meet Friday evening, October 7th, at 8 o'clock.

A communication was received from W. H. Moore and other residents of West End Park, asking the Council to erase from the map of that property the lines which provide for the opening of a street through the same, and the petitioners therefore asked the Council to vacate the property, as a street would be a detriment. The matter was referred to the Street committee and later the request was granted by the introduction of an ordinance, which provided for the vacation of the property.

A communication was received from the Town Improvement Association, in which the members asked the Council to append a section to the city ordinance which will impose a penalty of $1 on anyone who is guilty of stepping or leaning refuse into the streets or on sidewalks. The matter was referred to the street committee.

Residents in the West End in the neighborhood of Grant avenue and Lee place petitioned the Council for four electric lights. A petition was received from T. O. Doane and others, asking that James Bulmer be appointed a special police.

Street Commissioner Gavett reported the granting of thirteen sewer permits, and Building Inspector Doane reported that nine building permits were granted during the past month.

The monthly report of City Judge DeMeza showed that 114 persons were before His Honor, and $165 was received from fines.

Special Patrolman Michael McCarthy tendered his resignation.

Mr. Runyon stated that the Corporation Counsel does not care to give the Council an opinion regarding the legality of changing the salary of First Assistant Chief J. W. Murray, unless the Council requests it by a resolution. Mr. Runyon then offered a resolution as requested by Mr. Marsh. The resolution provides that Mr. Marsh's opinion be presented next Friday evening.

On a motion of Mr. Runyon two fire hydrants were ordered to be located in the eastern part of the city in the vicinity of Leland avenue.

At this time Mr. Suckle presented an ordinance which provides that no members of the police department shall be removed from office for political reasons, or so long as such members behave themselves, remain residents of the city, and do not violate stated rules as provided for the government of police. Mr. Buckle desired that the ordinance be adopted last evening, and expressed an opinion that the police are entitled to as much protection as the firemen in the city.

Mr. Hetfield took exception to to present adoption of the ordinance and questioned very much the legality of such action. He had conferred with the Corporation Counsel and was not sure that the ordinance could be legally adopted. He desired that the ordinance be laid over till the regular November meeting.

Mr. Hetfield's objection was overruled and the ordinance will be introduced next Friday evening for adoption.

The long looked for question of asphalting Park avenue, Somerset street, Front street and Watchung avenue was introduced by Mr. Barrows. He quoted figures for doing the entire work at $24,395, and $2,945 for an adequate storm sewer for Park avenue and Somerset street. He recommended that the money for building the storm sewer come out of next year's tax receipts and that bonds be issued for asphalting.

Mr. Hetfield objected to carrying over an indebtedness to the next Council, and said that he would not vote for that measure. President Baker agreed with Mr. Hetfield, and advised the issuance of bonds for the entire work. Mr. Hetfield, however, favored the permanent improvement of streets, and thought that the people of Plainfield need educating along the lines of securing permanent pavement. He did not think it policy to spend $15,000 or $20,000 every year and have nothing to show for it.

In connection with the above figures given by Mr. Barrows for asphalt work, it is understood that the Plainfield Street Railway Company shall pay their share for the work on Front street where their tracks are located.

By a vote of the Council it was unanimously agreed that the ordinance to provide for asphalting the streets already named should be introduced next Friday evening.

Mr. Barrows introduced three ordinances which provide for the macadamizing of East Ninth street, between Park avenue and Watchung avenue; East Sixth street, between Watchung avenue and Richmond street, and Franklin place, between Fifth street and LaGrande avenue. The ordinances were adopted, ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Barrows offered a resolution requiring property owners to lay sidewalks and curbing where they have failed to do so according to law. The resolution was adopted, as was also one which leases to Wm. Golabury a city property on West Third street for the sum of $5 per month.

Mr. Barrows called up the street railway extension ordinance and it was placed on its second reading. Then, by a unanimous vote of the Council the ordinance was rejected section by section. This action was taken so that a new ordinance can be introduced whereby the Council will be able to obtain more advantageous terms from the Plainfield Street Railway Company.

The Council then adjourned.

TO TEACH IN Y. M. C. A.

FORMAL OPENING OF EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT LAST NIGHT.

Addresses Made by H. C. Munger, W. S. Huson and I. W. Travell—Branches of Instruction and Instructors.

The formal opening of the educational department of the Y. M. C. A. was held last Monday. H. C. Munger, chairman of the committee, presided. A short programme, consisting of violin selections by P. Ludwig Conde and recitations and readings by F. O. Bristol, was rendered, after which I. W. Travell, of the committee, in a few words presented the work of the department.

W. S. Huson, who is in charge of the three-year course in mechanical drawing, also spoke. At the close of the address expression opportunity was given to the men to meet and confer with the instructors and enroll their names in the classes.

The instructors of the various classes are as follows:

German—Rev. Geo. Hauser.

Bookkeeping and commercial course—Messrs. Max Moraller, Edwin H. Beckman, Clifford Braider.

Stenography—George Weeks Sanford.

Mechanical course—Messrs. W. S. Huson, Fletcher Hallock, Clarence Wilson, Joseph F.T. Fuller and Albert B. Meredith.

Spanish—To be announced later.

CALLED FOR TWO PLACES.

Misunderstanding Over the Eighth District Congressional Convention.

Through a misunderstanding, two conventions have been called by the Democrats in the Eighth Congressional District. Last Thursday James E. Martine, as chairman of the last convention, issued a call for a convention to be held in Bayonne Oct. 17th, to nominate a Democratic candidate for Congress in the district. Saturday J. J. Lane, W. F. Hamilton and Andrew Donnelly, a committee appointed at the last convention, issued a call for the convention to be held in Elizabeth at the Armory building, Oct. 12th.

There will be 145 delegates in the convention—75 from Union county; 19 from Bayonne and 51 from the Essex county townships as follows: Belleville, 4; Bloomfield, 5; Caldwell, 2; Millburn, 2; Montclair, 7; Orange, 17; South Orange, 5; West Orange, 4; Franklin, Glen Ridge, Livingston, Vailsburgh and Verona, 1 each.

Has a Distinguished Relative.

Elvin W. Crane, the Democratic nominee for Governor, is a brother-in-law of C. E. Sage, the milkman who serves a large number of Plainfielders. That's the reason why Mr. Sage is wearing such a pleasant smile nowadays.

Anniversary of Y. M. C. A. Organization.

The local branch of the Y. M. C. A. will celebrate its anniversary in the churches of this city Sunday evening, October 16th. Special services will be held in the form of platform meetings,

SCENE IN A PORTUGAL WINERY.

Speer, of New Jersey, Uses Rollers instead of Feet.

In the mountains, at the Quinto do Sexio, Portugal, a famous Port Wine district where the custom of treading the grapes for Port Wine is still in vogue. From ten to a dozen men or women for each gang in turn continue the treading, day and night, during the four or five weeks vintage. Some of the treading vats are large enough for three separate rows of ten men each, who with their white breeches well tucked up, their arms on each other's shoulders, raise and tread their feet alternately, with song and shouts to keep the lazier ones up to the work, and a band with string instruments enlivens the hours.

It is from this district the vines were imported over forty years ago that now fill the vineyards of the Speer Wine Co., at Passaic.

At Passaic the same kind of grapes are crushed between large rollers of rubber, revolved by steam. This is the only place in this country where the real genuine Port Wine is made from the Oporto grape—and they are grown right in SPEER'S VINEYARDS.

These vineyards extend over ⅓ of a mile along one of the Main avenues of Passaic, and comprise fifty six acres. The soil being rich in iron makes the wine most valuable for Medical use.

SPEER'S WINES

Are well known to be of the highest character, the oldest and most refined Wines in America, equal if not superior to any wines in the world. They consist of Port, Sherry, Burgundy, Claret, Sauternes Wines, and ★★★ Climax Brandy. Mr. Speer has some Wine in his cellars that he made over thirty eight years ago. All of Speer's Wines and Brandy are very old, rich, well rounded, soft and delicate. Every family should have a bottle or two of each variety of Speer's Wines and Brandy always in the home, for sickness or family use.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a world of good—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked: "Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of them, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, paid a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans-Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $5 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would gather without hesitation if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview these were present two daughters who specially objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should parade her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There may be others besides myself who need it, and I am sure I take great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the notice about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly affected to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS. RIPANS ONE GIVES RELIEF

A new style package containing TEN RIPANS TABULES packed in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at most drug stores—TEN FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced style is for the accommodation of those who do not feel able to pay forty-eight cents for the larger family bottle (containing 60 tabules), but it is not intended that the cheaper style shall be substituted for the forty-eight cents in the Ripans Centennial Chest, as the latter is the only one that contains the Ripans Tabules in the form in which they are now so widely and favorably known. Ripans Tabules may be had of druggists, or by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the Ripans Chemical Company, No. 10 Spruce street, New York. Send for the booklet.

TO PLAY FOOTBALL ON ELECTION DAY.

Plainfield Team Will Gather for That Occasion.

A VERY STRONG LINE-UP.

WILL MEET THE SAN REMOS, OF THE NEW YORK A. C.

A Brief Sketch of the Eleven That Will Represent Plainfield in the Game—The Same Management—The Game to Be Played on the Martine Field—A Strong Team Picked Out.

While football is attracting lots of attention throughout the country, there has been little of it in Plainfield. The announcement that the Plainfield team could not be gotten together this season was discouraging indeed, and so far no other team has taken the lead. Now, however, the management of the local eleven comes forward with the glad news that there will be a game here Election Day, and that Plainfield will be represented by one of the strongest teams that has ever played on local gridiron.

While the boys found that they could not get off to play regularly every Saturday afternoon, all were anxious to get together again on the holidays. Of course, it will necessitate some practice and training. That will begin next week and continue up to the time of the game, Tuesday, Nov. 8th.

The same committee that looked after the interests of the team last year will take charge for the Election Day game which will be played on the Martine Field. The opposing team will be the San Remos from the New York Athletic Club. As the N. Y. A. C. has no regular team in the field this season, the San Remos practically constitute the representative team from that well-known athletic organization. The team has been changed somewhat and considerably strengthened. Most of the players are old college men and they are particularly anxious to meet their old rivals from Plainfield.

So far there have been three games between the San Remos and the Plainfield team. Each team has secured one victory while the third game was a tie. The coming Election Day will be the deciding one and consequently will be particularly hard fought.

The eleven that will represent Plainfield will be very strong and will average 170 pounds. Thomas A. Cuming will be back at his old place at centre. Cuming is rather light for the place, but the fact that he will have Ed Brown on one side and "Shorty" Milne on the other will make the centre trio a strong one. Cuming is particularly quick and makes up in that what he lacks in weight. The guards have already been mentioned. For ends, W. L. McClure and Fletcher Hallock will fill the places very ably. Louis Waring will return to his original place at end, where he is at his best, while Edgar I. Serrell, who showed up there so well last season, will look after the other end.

Behind the line "Ted" Freeman is going to try his luck at quarter, where his speed will be appreciated. George Colbert is not to be excelled as a fine-bucking half and will be in place. Thomas U. Smith will act as half back and do much of the running. At full back, Henry L. McGee will be particularly valuable. He is a good all-around back while he has the faculty of punting a long and low ball which is exceedingly difficult to catch. With such a line-up, Plainfield will be well represented and need have no fear that her boys will not look well to her honor on the gridiron.

BEST KEPT BACKYARD.

Prizes Awarded by the Women's Town Improvement Association.

The following prizes were awarded today by the Women's Town Improvement Association for the most improvement in the keeping and decorating of dooryards along West Third street and Plainfield avenue: First prize of $5 was divided equally between Mrs. Lawrence Kane, 836 West Third street, and Mrs. Wallace, 508 West Third street, it being impossible to choose between them. The second prize was received by Mrs. Brown, 305 Plainfield avenue.

Real Estate Exchanges.

E. C. Mulford has consummated an exchange of properties between A. Vanderbeek for his present place of residence, Second place, and Mrs. C. O. Bolce's new house, No. 940 West Front street. Mr. Vanderbeek will take up his residence on West Front street November 1st. The Second Ward losses a good man, but the Fourth Ward will gain a good one.

DON'T WAIT FOR WINTER.

MANUFACTURE OF ARTIFICIAL ICE IN PLAINFIELD.

Water Congealed to Thickness of Five Inches at the Hygeia's Plant—A Demand Made for the Product Already.

The plant of the Plainfield Hygeia Ice Company is now in full working order and ice to the thickness of five inches has thus far been made. The plant was started Saturday last and everything from the start has worked satisfactory. It is expected that by the last of this week ice will be harvested. It is not to be expected that the first crop of ice will be as clear as that which will be made afterward. The finishing touches about the place are now being made and by the last of the week everything will be completed. A number of visitors have called at the place and have been surprised to see what an industry the company has established. The interior as well as the exterior presents a neat and attractive appearance. The machinery is getting down to fine working order and considering that everything is new it works remarkably smooth.

Owing to the fact that the company is anxious to see how the first crop of ice will turn out, the process of freezing is being pushed rapidly. Tuesday afternoon DeWitt C. Ivins and H. G. Runkle, of the company, called at the plant and expressed great satisfaction over the working of the plant.

As soon as the first crop is harvested the work of filling the storage houses will commence and the ice not sold will be placed away as a surplus stock. There is already a demand for the ice.

DEATH CAME SUDDENLY.

RACHAEL ANN McCLINTOCK DROPPED DEAD MONDAY NIGHT.

Her Body Found Lying on the Floor in Her Bedroom by Mrs George Moore, With Whom She Resided.

The brief notice went around Tuesday that Mrs. Rachael Ann McClintock, of Elm place, was dead. Death occurred Monday night at about 11 o'clock, and was due to apoplexy. The funeral services will be held this afternoon from the house. Interment will be in the Westfield cemetery.

Mrs. McClintock was a sister to Mrs. George W. Moore, and made her home with them. She was about 78 years of age.

Monday evening Mr. Moore went home at about 11 o'clock. There was a light burning in Mrs. McClintock's room, but no sound was audible. Mr. Moore, thinking that something must be wrong, sent his wife inside to find out. As soon as she had entered the room Mrs. Moore sent a call for her husband. When he answered he found Mrs. McClintock's body lying flat on the floor. She was lying near a large rocking chair, and at first it was thought she had fallen out of it. This was an error, for on the chair stood an empty teacup which Mrs. McClintock had evidently placed there just after rising to call for help or to get something from a table.

Dr. Jenkins was sent for and said the death had occurred a half hour before. Dr. Westcott, the county physician, viewed the remains yesterday noon and said that death was due to apoplexy.

Mrs. McClintock was born in Bound Brook, but has lived in this city for eighteen or twenty years. She was married twice. Her first husband was Richard Calvalier, of Somerville, and her second Robert McClintock, of Westfield. He died twenty-three years ago.

By her two husbands Mrs. McClintock had eight children, who are living in Westfield, Cranford and New Market. Only one granddaughter, Mrs. Joseph Plumb, lives in this city.

The second husband was an old soldier, and served with the nine months men in the 30th N. J. Volunteers. Mrs. McClintock was a faithful attendant at the Crescent Avenue church.

Will Send for the Deserter.

Captain John Wehrly, of Co. H, 3d Regiment, has sent word to Chief Wilson, of the borough, that he will send to the borough for Private Charles J. Sprague, who is now confined in the lockup on a charge of desertion. It seems to be the general opinion that Sprague will get at least two or three years on Governor's Island at hard labor as a penalty for his crime. The soldier's parents called on Mayor Wilson Tuesday and tried to get His Honor to intercede in behalf of their son. The Mayor stated clearly that the case is out of his jurisdiction and that he can do nothing for the young man.

—The first session of the boys' class at the Y. M. C. A. was held Tuesday afternoon. There were about 30 boys out, which was considered a good attendance.

DID METZ ONCE POSE AS "JOE RAYMOND."

Evidence That He Stopped at McVey's Under an Alias.

HIS WIFE WAS WITH HIM.

ONE DAY THE COUPLE DISAPPEARED, LEAVING UNPAID BILL.

"Raymond" Claimed to be a Pia o Tuner and Also Possessed a Music Box That He Wanted to Sell—Left Postal Cards and Note Book Behind—Memorandum of Articles Supposed to Have Been Pawned.

Was Paul Metz and his wife in this city last January? From evidence in possession of J. H. McVey, the North avenue hotel keeper, it appears that they were and that they stopped at his house under the name of "Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Raymond."

It all happened in this way. The day Metz was arrested at Benner's Hotel, Fanwood, and was brought to Plainfield, a young man residing in the centre of the city saw the piano tuner and remarked to a representative of The Daily Press that he was the same man that stopped at McVey's Hotel several months ago. At the time the stranger had his wife with him. He also had a music box which he wanted to sell Mrs. McVey. He said that he was a piano tuner and wanted to tune the piano at the hotel.

The couple registered as "Joseph Raymond and wife," and remained at the hotel long enough to run up a board bill of about $30. Nothing more was thought of the couple until last Monday when a Press reporter called on Mr. and Mrs. McVey and inquired concerning the strangers. Mrs. McVey immediately recalled "Raymond" and his wife, and gave a very accurate description of them, which tallies with Metz and his wife.

One afternoon Mrs. Raymond" started from the hotel for the purpose of shopping. She told Mrs. McVey that if anyone called for her to tell them that she would be back soon. That was the last seen of "Mrs. Raymond," or her husband.

While the couple were at the hotel Mr. Raymond received two postal cards addressed to Joseph Raymond, McVey's Hotel, North avenue. These cards together with some pieces of piano wire, two memorandum books and catalogues of the Hardman piano, were left behind at the hotel and were presented to the reporter Tuesday. Both postal cards are from New York. One dated January 26th, 1898, is as follows:

Sir—I expected to return to Paterson, but got fooled. You know what is happening here. Well, I am taking care of my end, as I have nothing else on hand. Friday is my day off. Let me know by return mail if you will be in Plainfield and I'll come and see you if possible. If you come here don't fail to send at once. Love to Millie and yourself. Bill.

Across the face of the card was written very faintly these words "——received at this institution——this M, and was assigned to Ward. Please call, bring this card. Respectfully."

The other card reads as follows:

Jan. 29, 1898.

Say Bill—Impossible to break away on account of unforseen obstacles. Something has made me hustle in another direction. Send me your add here as soon as you can and I'll explain fully when I see you.

Faithfully, Bill.

In the memorandum books there is a list of clothing consisting of coats, vests and pants, and opposite each is, presumably, the amount received at some pawnbroker's shop for them. There are also several names of different people, including Mr. Brown, "Chickering piano, Ridgefield; also the names of J. A. Hegeman and Mrs. Wright, J. C. Moore, Nutley; I. Waasmaker, H. D. Mills, station agent, Walwick; Dr. DeNoye, Walwick; A. Lawrence, Mrs. Watts, Mrs. Marsey, Mrs. Voight, Demot avenue and 2 street; Mrs. Mosey."

It is the intention of Mr. McVey to go to Elizabeth the day Metz is called for trial, for the purpose of identifying him if possible, for he feels sure that Metz is the same man that stopped with him last January.

Arlington Hotel Changed Hands.

The Arlington Hotel has changed hands. The transfer was effected Monday evening when Charles Jensen, of Cranford, bought out Mrs. Christina Wedemeyer. The license has been properly transferred and the new proprietor began yesterday. F. J. Blatz, of the law firm of Murphy & Blatz, looked after the interests of Mrs. Wedemeyer in the sale while City Judge DeMeza represented the purchaser.

Borough Primaries.

Next Friday evening the Republicans of the borough will hold their Congressional and county primaries in the basement of the Borough Public School.

SOMETHING WORTH WHILE.

Novel Entertainment at Trinity Reformed Church This Evening.

A real genuine birthday social will be held in Trinity Reformed church this evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society. It will not only be a social, but an entertainment will be provided which will be furnished by Miss Mary Luckey, who will recite; Councilman Wm. N. Runyon, who will sing, while the guests will be entertained by S. C. Baker, who will exhibit his Edison phonograph. A feature of the affair will be the exhibition of an exceedingly large cake. It will be well-worth seeing, and after everyone has admired it the committee in charge will cut it up and serve it with other refreshments to those present. The affair is to be a birthday celebration of the church and the members and friends. Each person who has been provided with a sack will be expected to place therein an amount of money equal to their age, and this money will be used by the Ladies' Christian Work Society to pay off the church indebtedness on the upholstering. It is expected that there will be a large attendance and everyone will be welcome.

ALL WILL BE WELCOME.

Soldiers of '61 and '98 to Mingle as Guests of G. A. R.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 72, G. A. R. met last evening and formulated plans whereby at the next post meeting to be held on Tuesday evening, October 25th, an enjoyable time will be had. It is the intention of the members to have every soldier in Plainfield at the meeting, also every sailor and the members of the Sons of Veterans. This applies to the soldiers and sailors of the last war as well as to the war of '61-'65. A programme, to consist of music, recitations, and excellent speeches, will be presented and it is confidently expected that the affair will be one of great pleasure to all. The committee in charge consists of Wm. Hand, M. C. Dobbins, William Day and Samuel Terry.

—Patrolmen Mattox and Higgins are now looking after the business part of the city every night.

SAD NEWS BROKEN TO MR SALTZMAN

Met on the Dock of the Red Star Line in New York.

HAPPINESS TO SORROW.

HE DID NOT EVEN KNOW HIS WIFE HAD BEEN SICK.

When He Saw One of the Party Who Had Come to Apprise Him of the Terrible News He Was Full of Joy, But Soon After it Was Dispelled by the Shock of Hearing That His Wife Was Dead.

A pathetic scene was witnessed on the dock of the Red Star Line in New York yesterday on the arrival of the steamship Weatherland from Antwerp, when a party of Plainfield gentlemen met Auguste Saltzman, who has been in Switzerland during the summer to receive treatment for his health, and conveyed to him the sorrowful news that his wife, whom he had expected to welcome on the dock, was dead and only awaited his arrival before interment of the remains would be made.

Mr. Saltzman broke his knee cap last winter and early this summer sailed for Switzerland to receive treatment at one of the mineral springs in that country. While he was absent his son, Auguste, Jr., enlisted in the navy from the New Jersey Naval Reserves, and Mrs. Saltzman decided to spend the summer with her daughter, Mrs. J. T. Fritts, of Hawley, Pa. Three weeks ago she was taken ill, but it was not considered serious enough to notify Mr. Saltzman, who was then about to sail for home. Mr. Saltzman sailed for home October 1st, and a day later Mrs. Saltzman's condition became precarious and on Thursday last she died. Her remains were brought to this city and the funeral held Sunday while her husband was still upon the ocean totally unconscious of even the fact that she had been in anything but the best of health.

The most painful incident in her death, of course, was apprising Mr. Saltzman of it upon his arrival in this country. Last Friday it was decided that a committee from the Royal Arcanum, consisting of D. W. Littell, T. A. Beguelin and Charles Burnett, should perform the sad duty. Accompanied by Dr. Fritts and Auguste, Jr., they awaited the landing of the steamer yesterday. As the boat glided into her slip Mr. Saltzman was on deck scanning the dock for a sight of his family, whom he expected would be there to welcome him back home. The first familiar face he spied was Mr. Littell. Mr. Saltzman waved his cane, then his hat, and a broad smile spread over his face. As soon as he could he spoke out a merry welcome. As he came down the gangway, Mr. Saltzman greeted Messrs. Littell, Beguelin and Burnett, but none of them by word or look betrayed the news they had to impart.

After the baggage had been arranged for Mr. Beguelin broke the news first by telling Mr. Saltzman that his wife was not at Hawley, but in Plainfield and that she was quite ill. After preparing his mind for worse tidings the real news was told to him. Mr. Saltzman was dumbfounded for a moment, and then he broke into tears. He recovered his composure in a few moments and was told of the sad circumstances of the death.

The afflicted husband, together with the rest of the party, then went to the Liberty street ferry and took a train for Plainfield, arriving here at 11 o'clock. On the way out from New York Mr. Saltzman broke down a couple of times, but he bore up under the terrible news remarkably well.

PLAGUE OF DIPHTHERIA.

One Child Dead and Four Others Sick in Edward Baker's Family.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Baker, of West Front street, are sadly afflicted. Tuesday afternoon their eight-year-old daughter, Laura, died from diphtheria. That is not all, for four more children, Florence, aged ten; Charles, six; Clarence, four; and Harold, ten months, are also ill with the same disease, and fears are entertained for their recovery.

The epidemic first made its appearance in the family Monday, October 3d, when Florence, the oldest, was taken. She is better, but one after another the others have caught it. Charles is quite bad, but the others may recover. Laura, who died, was only taken Saturday. Edward the sixteen-year-old son, is living away from home.

The funeral services were held yesterday at three o'clock, and took place in the hall. Dr. Tomlinson is the attending physician.

WILL NOT LEASE OVAL.

RIVERDALE FIELD CLUB WILL GO ELSEWHERE NEXT YEAR.

Robert C. Wood, the Promoter, Has Notified J. T. Vail That He Will Not Lease Crescent Oval for Next Year.

After a renewed lease of life there is every prospect that the Crescent Oval will return again to quietude and rest. The middle of the season the Oval was leased by Robert C. Wood, of New York, the head and promoter of the Riverdale Field Club. It was Mr. Wood's intention to make this city the home of the crack baseball team he had on the diamond and play here every week if the support of the local cranks would make it pay. There were a few of the old reliable ones that you couldn't keep home from a baseball game unless you tied them. They came, but the crowd that Mr. Wood was led to expect would turn out, never showed up.

Mr. Wood leased the Oval through the agency of J. T. Vail for the rest of the baseball season. He had an option on the Oval for next year, for he was considering the advisability of playing here next year. The lack of support, however, decided him and he has notified Mr. Vail that he will not continue the lease.

WEDDED AT HIGH NOON

YOUNG PEOPLE IN BOUND BROOK SOCIETY MARRIED.

Miss Clara Powelson the Bride—John R Hall the Groom—Ceremony Performed in a Floral Bower—Many Guests Present.

Bound Brook, October 12.—A charming home wedding was held here yesterday at high noon when Miss Clara Thompson Powelson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Powelson, of Union avenue, was united in marriage to John Richard Hall, a rising young man of this place. The marriage took place at the home of the brides parents which was handsomely decorated for the occasion with a profusion of flowers and potted plants. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Owen Jones, pastor of the Congregational church, in a floral bower. Two hundred guests assembled to do honor to the newly-wedded couple.

The bride was prettily gowned in white Liberty silk. The maids of honor were Miss Helen Hall, of Nohsanic, and Miss Gertrude Cornell, of Bound Brook, a cousin of the bride. Her bridesmaids were Miss Jennie Cornell, a cousin, Miss Minnie Powelson, a cousin, Miss Lou Kirkland, and Miss Elizabeth Deane, all of Bound Brook, Miss Ida L. Hampson and Miss Olive E. Hampson, of Newark.

Harry D. Powelson, of Bound Brook, brother to the bride, was the best man. Frederick Corlell and William Cornell, a cousin of the bride, both of Bound Brook, were the ushers.

After an informal reception, Mr. and Mrs. Hall left on the Royal Blue Line at 2:43 o'clock for a southern trip. They will reside in Bound Brook on their return. Mr. Hall is in the employ of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in New York. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hall are prominent in local society.

ECHO MEETING ARRANGED.

Local Endeavorers to Hear of Their State Convention.

The monthly executive meeting of the Christian Endeavor Local Union was held Tuesday at the home of the president, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, of LaGrande avenue. Arrangements were made for the local union convention echo meeting which is to be held Thursday evening, October 20th, probably in the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

The speaker of the evening will be Rev. L. R. Dyott, of Newark, vice-president of the New Jersey State Christian Endeavor Union. Rev. Mr. Dyott will speak upon the convention. In addition to this three five-minute talks will be given by Plainfield people upon the musical, social and spiritual sides of the convention.

The next executive meeting of the local union will be held the last Tuesday in November, when a question box will be conducted by a prominent State Christian Endeavor worker. The local union pledged $10 towards the expenses of the State Union.

A movement is on foot to make Miss Sarah Curry, matron of the Westfield Fresh Air Camp, an honorary member of all the societies in the local union.

Barn Burned; Loss $1,000.

Bound Brook, Oct. 12—The barn and stable in the rear of the residence of William Boss, Jr., of West Main street, was destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. The origin of the fire is unknown. The barn was full of hay. The loss is estimated at $1,000, which is partially covered by insurance.

CITY FATHERS TALK ABOUT THE TROLLEY.

Local Reporters Interview Them On the Subject.

VARIOUS OPINIONS GIVEN.

NO ABATEMENT IN THE GENERAL INTEREST IN FRANCHISE.

Councilman Hetfield Has Facts and Figures to Back His Statements—W. N. Runyon Has Another—Others Favor Plenty of Discussion—Much Interest Shown By Members of the Council.

Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, of the First Ward, was prepared with some facts for the local reporter to explain why he favored the present contract. From his point of view, the present contract with the Plainfield Street Railway Company is a better one than the one granted to John Kean by the county authorities. He went on to explain that the county would get $250 000 from Kean but that it would have to pay that and as much more to complete the boulevard. Kean, in return, gets the lease of the road for a term of 75 years without any more expense. According to the terms of the contract with the local company, the city will get $100 for every mile of track every year, and $75 for each car every year. Then the company, he continued, agrees to macadamize Second a street and perform several other conditions regarding sprinkling and repairs which will easily cost the company $10,000. Another provision of the contract provides that when the gross earnings of the company reach $80,000 a year, the city is to receive five per cent of it. According to Mr. Hetfield's reckoning, this would take place in ten years at the extreme limit. Then comparing it with the terms of lease that John Kean secured. In the following 65 years, Mr. Hetfield said that $150,000 would be a low estimate of the gross earnings of the company. This would amount to $7,500 a year or $487,500 for the length of time the Kean lease will last. Computing it at compound interest, it would reach up in the millions. For these reasons, Mr. Hetfield said that he believed that the present contract was eminently satisfactory to the city and far better than the agreement that the county had made with the corporation of which John Kean is the head.

Councilman William N. Runyon, of the Second ward, realized the full value of the franchise that Plainfield was to grant the Plainfield Street Railway. It was utterly wrong, he said, to look at the value of the line in Plainfield alone. It was to form part of the trunk line and in that lay its value. He did not think the argument that the Plainfield Street Railway had not paid any dividends amounted to anything. He believed that the capitalists did not really expect it to, but that their hope for profit lay in the through line of which the Plainfield line was to form a part. This franchise was now the key to the situation and was consequently very valuable to the company. He believed that the city should secure all the benefit possible from it. He also believed that the corporation would concede a great deal before it would abandon the attempt to get the franchise. As he understood it, the company had fought almost every concession so far and only gave in at the last moment. Mr. Runyon was in favor of getting full value for the franchise. The present contract, he explained, was an excellent one and gave the city much. If any more concessions could be secured, he thought that it would be of far more interest and benefit to the city and its inhabitants if, instead of compelling the company to asphalt the principal streets, the trolley company agreed to build an extension through the southern section of the city. Such a line could go south on Arlington avenue from West Fourth street to Randolph road and thence across by the Oval and open up all that section of the city now practically unimproved. Such a line, while it would not be of much value to the company, would develop that part of the city, increase valuations and thus taxes, encourage building there and generally add to city's welfare. He believed that it would help the city more than if the company asphalted the streets.

Councilman Henry Liefke, of the Fourth ward, believes that it is the duty of the Common Council to secure as great concessions from the Plainfield Street Railway as possible. He does not believe that they would be asking too much if they followed Councilman VanHerwerden's suggestion. In his opinion, however, it is now pretty late to do anything of that

WILLIAM CLINTON.

It was about five o'clock one Saturday afternoon, a time when the east end doctor, sometimes, but not always, gets a few minutes' rest.

The inner door was pushed slowly open, and the head of a thorough little gutter urchin appeared. He was a capital specimen of the London "Arab"—naked feet and legs up to the knee, ragged trousers, a thin cotton shirt, open at the chest, a ragged coat and no hat. He was grewsomely dirty, but his thin, almost delicate fingers told me at once that he was a pickpocket.

"I want Dr. Prebble," he said, in a hoarse voice.

"Well, you've got him," I answered. "Bill's fell down and hurt 'iself," he said, slowly.

"Who is Bill?" I asked.

A shade of disappointment passed over his face. I had evidently fallen in his opinion. My not knowing Bill proved conclusively that I had not mixed in the choicest society.

"E's our lodger," he said cautiously, "an' I ain't a-goin' to tell you no more."

"Why didn't he go to a hospital?"

"I dunno," he said. "E was at work and fell off of something. So 'e come 'ome. That's all."

Luckily, a medical man is safe in almost any neighborhood. Moreover, I was well known, and as I went along I heard the gossips saying,—

"There goes the doctor. He's come to see Bill Smith."

Clearly Bill was a celebrity.

At last my guide stopped at a house, and, nodding to a woman, who stepped on one side to let us enter, said,—

"It's all right, old gal."

I found at once subsequently that the "old gal" addressed was the young gentleman's mother. Respect for parents is not a leading feature in that neighborhood.

Without wasting a minute I knelt on the floor to examine Bill's injuries. I found that he was bruised—a dislocated shoulder, two ribs broken and internal injuries, which might prove more serious still.

On his fingers were the marks of oakum picking, which showed that Bill was an inmate of a jail, and in the corner of the room stood a suspicious looking bag, out of which peered a jimmy. It was then fairly safe to assume that Bill had met with an accident while engaged in his professional duties as a housebreaker, which was educated. One could see that at once by the development of his brow. In his face, too, there were some lingering traces of refinement.

I looked up at the boy, who was watching me carefully, and, I have no doubt, taking in every detail.

"You ain't a-goin' to tell no tales, gov'nor?"

"My business is to cure him if I can," I said briefly. "Now I want your help."

With some difficulty I managed to get his shoulder back into position. Then I set his ribs. Beyond that I could do nothing until he recovered sufficiently to answer a few questions.

It was necessary to find a nurse. The man ought to have been in hospital, but it was impossible to move him. Indeed, it was almost a miracle that he had ever reached home in such a mangled condition.

Not far from my dispensary there was a number of institutions, supported by some ladies, who devoted their time and money to nursing the poor in their own houses. The matron was a splendid woman, who never stopped to inquire whether a case was deserving. The fact that a man or woman was ill was all that she cared about. Their crimes and shortcomings she left to other people.

Miss Shepherd listened to my story with her usual sympathy.

"There is only one young lady I can send to you at present," she said, "she has not had much experience. However, we must do something. I'll introduce her to you and see what you think."

It is a curious thing that on first seeing that girl she did not strike me as at all good looking. Since then I have learned to like her well, and I think her one of the most beautiful women in the world.

In these years of work among the poorest of the poor I met no woman of such a radiant, glorious nature as the pale-faced girl whom I saw for the first time that Saturday evening.

To my great disappointment on reaching the sick-room her composure quite gave way. I had hoped she would be strong enough to maintain her self control, instead of which she trembled like a leaf, and finally burst, looking almost inclined to burst into tears.

"Come, come, Miss Clinton!" I said. "You must get accustomed to scenes of distress. If you break down, you won't be able to help me at all."

"I beg your pardon, Dr. Prebble," she stammered, hastily. "It was only the first shock. Everything is so horrible. You may depend on my doing what you require."

Then I explained the case to her carefully and thought her the duties of a nurse as well as I could in such a short time.

Miss Clinton must have nursed her patient better than I expected she would, for he passed a fairly good night, and when I saw him at eleven o'clock on Sunday morning the fever had abated somewhat, leaving him, of course, very weak and in a more or less precarious condition.

The nurse whom Miss Shepherd had sent to take charge of the case during the day was a highly experienced woman, whom I knew well.

"It's a bad case, doctor," she said, "will you pull him through?"

"I can't say yet," I answered. "Ask me to-morrow morning. What time did you relieve Miss Clinton?"

"At eight o'clock. She didn't like to go away, but I insisted on her having a rest. I can't help thinking that Miss Clinton takes something of a personal interest in the case," said the day nurse. "Have you read the morning paper?"

"Not yet. Is there anything in it?"

She produced a Sunday paper and pointed to a paragraph headed "Daring Attempted Burglary." The burglars had entered a window on the first floor by means of a ladder, but they were disturbed in their work and had been forced to escape hurriedly, leaving their booty behind them. It struck me at once that in all probability Bill was one of the burglars. In making his escape he had no doubt fallen from the ladder.

But there was another feature in the case which was more striking still. The owner of the house which had been entered was named Clinton.

On first seeing the sick man Miss Clinton had lost her composure to an extent that surprised me. What was the link that bound these two people together—a waif of the streets, a young lady devoting herself to work among the poor, and a broken down ex-convict lying sick, perhaps dying, in an east end slum?

On returning to his bedside at five o'clock in the afternoon I found Miss Clinton was again on duty. She was quite calm and self-possessed and without a trace of nervous excitement.

The progress which had been shown in the morning was all lost and a change had set in for the worse. A brief examination told me that he was in a state of collapse, which was the one thing I dreaded. Within a few hours he would be a dead man.

"When will it be?" she said in a steady voice.

"Before midnight," I answered. "Would you like me to stay with you, or shall I ask Miss Shepherd to send somebody in your place?"

"I will watch alone."

"Are you a relative of the Mr. Clinton whose house was entered Saturday morning?" I asked, leading her to the window.

"He is my uncle," she said.

"And who is Bill?" I asked.

"He is my brother."

She spoke in the same steady voice.

"He went wrong as a boy of nineteen," she continued, "and no one might have saved him, but refused to. That is why I have taken up nursing. I knew he had sunk, but I didn't know he had come to this. I hoped I might find him if I mixed with the poor."

In one little matter I was able to save her some pain.

At the door I met an officer in plain clothes whom I knew by sight.

"I'm after a man for the Forest Gate robbery. I hear he is in this house."

"He is up-stairs," I said, "but you are too late. He is dying."

The detective hesitated.

"I will give you my word as a physician that he will be dead before midnight. If you arrest him, he will certainly die on the road to the station. Do you know the real name?" I asked.

The detective looked at me sharply.

"No; what is it?"

"William Clinton, a nephew of the man he tried to rob. At the present moment his sister is watching by his bedside."

The officer made a note of it in his book.

"I shall have to keep an eye on him, doctor," he said kindly, "but you may depend I shan't interfere for the sake of the poor lady."

And so William Clinton passed through the gate of life in peace.—Answers.

HANDINESS OF ELECTRICITY.

Its Convenience Shown by a Novel Application in the Elevated Road.

One of the cleverest uses to which electricity has been put recently was in drilling thousands of holes through the webs of the rails of the South Side Elevated Railroad, in Chicago, while the motive power was being changed from steam to electricity. One hole several inches in depth in each rail was needed in each end of every rail, and altogether there were 20,000 holes to be drilled. The work had to be done while the road was in operation, and the space for operating drills was only the nine inches between the wheel rail and the heavy wooden guard rail. The work would ordinarily be done with ratchet drill stocks, operated by hand, but with these progress would have been very slow. Instead of this electric motors were called into use.

Each motor was mounted on a little car which ran upon the wooden guard rails, and drove a flexible shaft ten or twelve feet in length, which in turn ran the drill. The drill for each machine was mounted in a compact frame, with a screw at the upper end. and the whole thing, drill, frame, and screw, was just of a size to fit in between trains, and these often ran under two minutes headway. The outfits proved to be so handy for the purpose and the men working them became so expert during the entire progress of the work not a train was delayed for more than ten seconds by the drillers.—New York Sun.

BIRDS OF PEACE IN WAR.

How the Homing Pigeon Is Used to Bear Messages from Our Warships.

A series of most interesting experiments has been made during the past five or six years with the pigeons at the Naval Academy. There has been no appropriation for this work, and the latest series conducted by private contributions from officers at the Naval Academy, and has been managed entirely by several officers and professors at Annapolis, who have given over their time and their labor in the hope of convincing the people at Washington of the desirability of the service.

Prof. Marion, an instructor in French at the Naval Academy, who has studied the habits of homing pigeons most carefully, has had most to do with this work, and to him perhaps the greatest credit is due for the ultimate success of the scheme. Lieut. Austin M. Knight, United States Navy, and Edward W. Eberle have also devoted some time and attention to the question, and have published papers in the proceedings of the Naval Institute which have called the matter to the attention of the officers in the service, most of whom have through this means been shown the value of the plan. During last Summer 18 pigeons made a total of 110 flights.

Lieutenant Knight writes concerning them:

"Let us consider the case of a fleet entrusted with the defense of that part of our coast from Block Island to the capes of the Delaware. Whatever position might be taken up by such a fleet, there would be thrown out many miles beyond it a line of light, swift vessels as scouts, and upon the rapidity with which these vessels could communicate with the inner line and with the shore would depend, in a large measure, the success of the defense.

"Suppose a vessel of this outer line to discover an enemy's fleet standing to the westward; she would hasten toward the squadron of defense or toward the nearest point of the coast from which it might be possible to communicate with the squadron with Washington and with the cities threatened, and if not overtaken by the enemy's cruiser or by a shell from a battleship, and if she did not break down, she would evidently communicate facts the fact that at a certain time—already long past—the enemy's fleet, of unknown strength, was standing in from some unknown point on the coast. Now, suppose, now, that instead of hastening off herself she could dispatch a number of pigeons, with the certainty that they would carry the news quite as surely as she could carry it, and far more quickly; and that holding safe enemy in view, she could follow his movements, and from time to time send off new messengers with particulars of his strength, his course, and his apparent intentions. It is not difficult to see the immense value of a system which promises the possibility of such service as this."

In view of these facts it will be interesting to note some of the over-water possibilities of the homing-pigeon. They have been taught to regard a ship as their home, and thus their services can be utilized both ways; but their greatest usefulness for naval purposes will be in carrying off messages from ships to the shore. The distance one of these birds will fly over the water to the land is still uncertain; but it is thought to be about one hundred and fifty miles. During a series of experiments one bird was kept over three weeks in confinement on board a ship, and when liberated was some two hundred miles from its cote; yet it returned in good time and condition. This was an important test experiment, inasmuch as it showed that homing-pigeons can be kept on board a ship for several weeks at a time; and yet retain their strength of wing and ability to find their way home. During the experiment very few birds were lost, which establishes the practical certainty of their messenger service.

In speed they are excelled only by the telegraph and the telephone. One hundred and fifty-one statute miles have been made in three hours and fifty minutes. In Belgium one bird covered a distance of two hundred and fifteen miles at the rate of over seventy miles an hour. The average speed, however, is much lower than this; forty-five miles an hour, for short distances, being usually considered good time.

The messages are fastened to the leg of the bird or tied lengthways underneath the tail feathers.

During the siege of Paris, 1870-71, as many as forty thousand messages were safely borne into the city by a single pigeon on its journey. When the messages reached their destination they were enlarged by photography and read.

The ability of the pigeon to find its way home is commonly supposed to be due to instinct. This is only partly true, for the greater part of this homing faculty is developed by careful training. When the bird is about three or four months old and has become thoroughly familiar with its home, it is taken a mile from the cote and "tossed." The next time it will be taken about three miles. The different training stages are usually one, three, six, twelve, twenty-one, thirty-five, fifty, seventy-five and one hundred miles from the bird's home. At the end of three years careful training a bird can be "tossed" five hundred miles from its native cote with some prospect of its finding its way back. However, only about one bird out of fifty can be trained to return home from a distance of five hundred miles.

Though the Cubans in 1875 were seven years in arms the President was persuaded that they had not the elements of belligerents and that this country could not do so without incurring vast responsibilities for the nation which undertook to recognize them. In his message Grant briefly stated his views of the Cuban question transmitting at the same time a despatch to the Spanish Government, written by Fish, and which was sent to the other Powers inviting their co-operation with the United States in putting an end to the cruel war then raging in Cuba.

The Powers to whom the despatch was sent snubbed Secretary Fish and the President's message was also received coldly by Congress, being considered as against our well established principles to keep aloof from foreign alliances. The invitation to the other Powers was regarded as opening the door to negotiations that might give these Powers an excuse to infringe on the Monroe Doctrine. This passage indicates how the sympathetic cry of the President went unheeded. "Our own civil conflict is too recent for us not to consider the difficulties which surround a government distracted by a dynastic rebellion at home, at the same time that it has to cope with a separate insurrection abroad." And Congress also acted to consider was the belligerency of the Cubans and the butchery of American citizens in the Virginius case.

Neither the despatch of Secretary Fish nor the response of the European Powers, by the way, was ever published in American diplomatic correspondence, and the entire precedent is divested of that authority with which it would otherwise be invested through the sympathetic circumstances under which the message was written. Spain therefore escaped the terrible crisis of the second Carlist rebellion by almost as fortunate a chance as she had saved Cuba twenty years before on the advent of the Crimean war. She therefore got over the Virginius affair by having a Castelar ready at hand availing herself of the same leniency extended to Great Britain in the Alabama award.

A TERRIBLE BATTLE.

The Night Battle of Wei Hai Wei Revolutionized Modern Warfare.

The battle of Wei Hai Wei revolutionized those notions of naval warfare that have come down to us from the days of Nelson and Trafalgar and demonstrated that the fortunes of war depend upon rather uncertain conditions and minor tactical advantages. The Chinese came out of that campaign with a loss of thirty-four protected cruisers and men-of-war. Of these twenty-two were destroyed—the greater proportion in the single engagement—and twelve were captured. On the other hand the Japanese lost but one gun vessel and one torpedo boat throughout the operations, capturing the fort of Wei-Hei-Wei and its commander and utterly routing the Chinese forces both afloat and land.

Five suns out at sea the Japanese fleet was visible on that fatal March evening as it kept its armed vessels under steam ostensibly waiting an opportunity to attack the Chinese fleet which lay at anchor in the bay and protected by armed forts on either side. The Japs awaited the cover of darkness and then quietly sent a flotilla of fifteen small torpedo boats towards the East entrance of the harbor. They stole past the line of torpedoes and booms protecting the harbor of Wei Hai Wei, and, before their presence was discovered they were in the midst of the Chinese fleet, each deadly torpedo tackling one of the fourteen ironclads, cruisers, gunboats or other naval craft lying at anchor. Two torpedoes were directed towards the more powerful "Ting-Yuen" and the great explosions that followed in the midst of greatest consternation reigned in the harbor; and men were screaming and ships going to the bottom in all directions. Ironclads partly keeled over and forts now combined opened a wild fire, while the speedy wasps of war let terrible havoc loose, firing salvos upon every object bearing the Dragon flag with which they came in contact. Having caused havoc to the Chinese fleet the swiftly moving torpedoes all shot back around the point from which they came, having sustained a loss of one boat with its crew of eight men. The more powerful vessels of the Japanese squadron did not lift an anchor, though some of them steamed over next morning to exchange congratulations with the brothers who had also silenced the guns of the forts, or to view the beached vessels of the Chinese fleet stranded and crippled in the water.

A Painful Custom.

When ladies go to buy a dress in Japan they tell the shopkeeper their age and if they are married or not, because there are special designs for the single and double relations of life, as well as for ages. The consequence of this painful custom is that you can tell the age of every lady you meet, and know whether she is married, provided, of course, she were labelled or you were a census taker.

Not a Very Good Boy.

Sammie had just returned from Sunday school. His mother asked him if he had been a good boy.

"No, not very," was the truthful reply.

"Then you didn't get a good behavior card?" queried his mother.

"Oh yes, I did," replied the precocious youngster, "because every time you gave me for the heathen and bought two from the other boys."—Troy Times.

IN THE SUEZ CANAL.

HOW THE SHIPS ARE SENT THROUGH THE GREAT WATERWAY.

A Simple System of Signalling—The Entire Length Lighted by Electricity—During Peace or War All Vessels Allowed to Pass.

Among the great canals of the world the one through the Isthmus of Suez stands absolutely alone as the example of a certain type of construction. While it is a wonderful piece of engineering work, it seems almost an error to call it canal, since it has no locks, gates, reservoirs or pumping engines—in short, it has nothing in common with other canals except that it affords a short cut for vessels passing from one body of water to another. It is an artificial strait connecting the Mediterranean and Red seas, and because these two seas are on nearly the same level the particular kind of construction of the Suez canal became possible.

The entire length of the canal is eighty-eight geographical, or about one hundred statute miles. Of these eighty-eight geographical miles, sixty-six are actual canal, having been formed by cuttings; fourteen miles consist of dredging through the various lakes which lie in the path of the work, and eight miles required no labor at all, since the natural deepth was at first twenty-six feet, but the canal was widened and deepened about ten years ago so that now vessels of twenty-six feet draught can pass the way, as ever pilot with something to spare. The surface width is 325 feet for most of the way, but in the deeper cuttings this width decreases to 196 feet. The lakes which the canal traverses—Lake Menzaleh, near the Mediterranean; Lake Timsah, about half way across, and the Great Bitter lakes, near the Red sea—were merely dry depressions before the cutting of the canal, but the inflow of water at once converted them into large inland lakes.

Everything along the entire length of the canal is controlled from the main office, in a place locally known as Terreplein, a part of the old town of Suez. No such name as Terreplein appears on most maps of the canal, but to those who live in Suez, the main land, the Great Bitter lakes and the chains of islands which project into the gulf nearly two miles from the main part of the city are known not by their official names, as Port Tewfik or Port Ibrahim, but as Terreplein.

In the large office in Terreplein there is almost perfect silence, though the employes are working steadily, each at his especial task. Sometimes there are as many as forty ships in the canal at one time, and the slightest mistake in signalling between the stations might lead to serious consequences. All these vessels, whether they are in the narrowest cutting, whether they are moving along at full steam through the 23 miles of deep water in the Great Bitter lakes, or are merely entering the canal at Port Said, are under the direction of the man who sits at his desk in the office at Terreplein.

The method of working the canal is ingenious, yet comparatively simple. At one side of the room against the wall, is a narrow shelf, along which runs a groove. At intervals this groove has deep recesses, which in two places are much larger than they are elsewhere. The groove represents the canal and the recesses the sidings, the two large ones being the Great Bitter lakes and Lake Timsah. When a vessel has been signalled and is about to enter the canal—at the Suez end, for example—a toy boat or model, about four inches long, is chosen to represent her. A group of these little models stands ready near the mouth of the canal, and each one is furnished with a flag to denote its nationality. The English flag is naturally the predominating ensign though all countries are provided for. As the real steamer approaches and her name becomes known it is written on a slip of paper and placed on the toy boat.

The number of ships actually in the canal can thus be seen at a glance and also the exact positions in which they are situated for, as the telegraphic signals give notice of each vessel's progress, the toy representative is moved along, placed in front of the moored, or shown crossing one of the lakes.

Signals are sent from this office to the various "gares" or stations, naming the siding at which each ship must stop and wait to let another pass it. The official can tell exactly how many, according to his dispatches, and when two vessels going in opposite directions are both nearing the same siding, he warns their pilots by means of the signal balls and flags at each station, which are visible from one station to the next, indicates which of the two is to give way to the other.

The arrangement, except in the case of occasional accidents, works perfectly. The clerk can tell in a moment the name, nationality, tonnage, draught and precise position of every ship in the canal; he knows who her pilot is, how fast she is moving, her breadth of beam and various other details, and he has absolute control of her every movement. Most of the Suez pilots are of Greek origin, though Englishmen and men of other nationalities are occasionally met. The pilot's chief duty is to prescribe the rate of speed, as the officials at each end have really no difficulty in taking her through the canal without guidance. In the narrow cuts the speed is limited to six miles an hour, but vessels may proceed much faster in the lake sections. Two pilots are always employed, for one goes off and a second goes on at Ismailia, on Lake Timsah.

The average time of transit for the 4,495 ships which passed through the canal in the year ending in June, 1897, was 15 hours and 33 minutes. About two-thirds of these ships were English, the remainder being divided among the other European nations. The canal tolls at this time were nine francs a ton for laden passenger or cargo vessels and for ships of war; six francs fifty centimes a ton for ships in ballast and without passengers; ten francs for each adult passenger and five francs for each child. Mail steamers and warships are generally able to secure some reductions from these rates. By a convention signed on October 29, 1888, the Suez canal was exempted from blockade. It was agreed that it should be neutral at all times, and that no part of it should be fortified. Vessels of all nations, whether armed or not, and whether belonging to nations at peace or war, are allowed to pass through it.

There are quarantine regulations which compel every vessel entering the canal to be medically inspected.

In the last few years the entire length of the canal has been lighted by electricity, and the vessels can proceed as well by night as by day. Formerly no passage was allowed after sunset.

The cost of constructing the canal, including the fine harbors at Suez and Port Said, is said to have been about $100,000,000. Although built by French capital, it has passed more and more into the financial control and political protection of Great Britain, which owns a large part of the stock of the company.—New York Tribune.

AMERICAN PRESIDENT'S FLAG.

Can Our Chief Executive Leave the Country During His Term?

"The president's flag which has been designed for President McKinley is not exactly a new thing," remarked an ordnance officer of the army, "though it is new as far as the idea of a general flag is concerned. The navy got up a president's flag for President Arthur, but he used it but once. He wanted to take an ocean trip up to New York on the presidential yacht, the Dispatch, and the question was raised that under the provisions of the constitution he could not do so, for the reason that the constitution forbids that the president leaving the United States while he is president. It was urged on him that if he flew a presidential flag on the Dispatch he would be in the United States, in a legal sense; that is, he would not violate the constitutional provision. He sailed under it, even if he did go out on the ocean. General Arthur, who was a lawyer himself, was not exactly wedded to the idea, but he let the opinions of others prevail and he made one trip, but that was all that he ever made. Since then the presidential flag has never been used, and I am not exactly clear what has become of it. I am very clear, however, in the opinion that no president will ever make an ocean trip under it, unless there is some change made in that particular clause of the constitution, which is not very likely to happen.

"While at Newport President Arthur had a talk with Justice Miller, then of the United States supreme court, and Jeremiah Black of Pennsylvania, who was one of the leading constitutional lawyers of the country. They both told him that it mattered not what kind of a flag he flew, or who made it, it was a dangerous proceeding in every particular, and it would be better that it should not be repeated. That settled the presidential flag as far as ocean trips were concerned. During the same evening Jeremiah Black told President Arthur that Andrew Johnson, when he was president, once consulted him on a question which involved the same principle. It seems that President Johnson, during a visit to Niagara Falls, took a carriage ride, and without thinking much where the driver was taking him, found himself on the Canadian side of the river. He remained there but a short time, and returned immediately to the American side. A paragraph got into the newspapers of the ride, which annoyed the president so much that he personally requested a number of newspaper writers to refrain from mentioning it. The result of this request was that little publicity ever given to the incident, though I recently conversed with a newspaper man who saw President Johnson on Canadian soil, but who, at his solicitation, never made any publication of the matter. Judge Black told President Arthur that he had to tell President Johnson that, although he did it unwittingly, he had violated the constitution, and that a departure of one foot from the American shore, under a flag or not, was as much violation as ten or more leagues out to sea."—Washington Star.

NEEDS OF OUR NAVY.

CONSTRUCTOR HICHBORN WRITES ON LESSONS OF THE WAR.

Oregon and Brooklyn Are the Most Effective Types. Foreign Nations Are Likely to Model After Our Best Battleships and Cruisers.

The war has taught us what some of us has already held, that the torpedo-boat is not the formidable engine of war which it has been credited with being. The naval battles of the future, as of the past, will be fought by the most powerful engines of naval warfare that can be constructed. The battle-ship, in spite of its great cost, will continue to occupy the prominent place. The torpedo boat will have its uses, but they will not be the important uses of a naval engagement. During the war just closed the torpedo boat was practically of no use at all. Just before the outbreak of hostilities there was a great scare on account of the flotilla of torpedo-boats and torpedo-boat destroyers which was said to be on its way across the Atlantic from the Cape Verde Islands. When the war actually came, we heard nothing of the scare, and what they were destroyed. In fact, torpedo-boats were not used by either combatant, except occasionally for dispatch boats, a duty to which other craft might be more advantageously assigned. The Winslow, it is true, was sent into the harbor of Cardenas to reconnoiter, but this was gunboat service and not the work for which a torpedo-boat is intended.

As for the Spanish boats, there was really nothing to fear from them. Signals made quite soon after the battle of San Juan, although the St. Paul which he commanded, was exactly the kind of a vessel, unarmored, and presenting a full side, that torpedoes might be expected to inflict damage on.

The Furor and the Pluton were among the very best and the most modern of the destroyer class, and yet the Gloucester, which is merely a converted yacht, defeated them both.

The war has taught us to rely on our great battle-ships and cruisers with absolute confidence, and the question has been open to fair discussion in the absence of any practical illustration of their work in actual warfare. But now we know what they can do.

The war vessels which, as ships-of-war, have given the best accounts of themselves, without regard to the manner in which they were handled, although that, of course, was above criticism with all our ships, are the Oregon and Brooklyn, and these are types of vessels which are likely to become more and more in vogue, not only in the American navy, but in the navies of foreign powers. The Brooklyn, for instance, with only four inches of armor on her sides, was far more than a match for the Cristobal Colon, a twelve-inch armor belt. This type of vessel combines speed with efficiency to a most desirable degree.

As for the Oregon, she combines great strength of armament with a reasonable amount of speed and coal carrying capacity in a proportion which seems to be eminently desirable. Battle-ships will be built more and more on the Oregon plan, with greater speed if possible, without interference with their effectiveness as fighting machines.

The navy will have to be supplied with vessels particularly adapted to the work for which, at the beginning of the war, we were compelled to buy all sorts of vessels at all sorts of prices. When the war broke out we were practically without ships suitable for auxiliary service. We had no patrol-boats and hardly any dispatch-boats. So that steam yachts, tugboats, and even ocean steamers had to be bought or chartered for the use of the navy. The result was highly gratifying when it is considered with what sort of material we had to deal. But in preparing for the possibility of another war, the United States will have to build ships especially adapted for this auxiliary work. Some of the ships which were bought for this emergency can doubtless be made to answer the purpose permanently very well, but as a rule the auxiliary fleet ought to be constructed from specially prepared plans.

Perhaps the most important lesson which we have learned is the necessity of making our fighting ships fireproof. You remember that at Manila and at Santiago the Spanish ships took fire and they suffered as much or more from this cause as from the impact of our shells.

The war has demonstrated also the value of the rapid-fire guns and the eight-inch guns as compared with the guns of larger caliber. At Santiago the secondary batteries of the Brooklyn and the Oregon are reported to have been more effective than any other portion of their armament. The Manila and Santiago battles also have shown that smokeless powder is an invaluable part of a ship's equipment.

It is rather curious that no good demonstration has been given during the war of the value of the experimental craft which the government has been interested in. The ram Katahdin has had no opportunity to display its merits and the submarine boat has been ignored. The Vesuvius, it is true, had a chance at Santiago, but it does not appear that the results were at all decisive as to its surpassing value in naval operations.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

A WONDERFUL COUNTRY.

There is a country that I know
Where all the year the roses grow,
And when it rains outside I play
In that fair country all the day.

And often in the evening, too,
Among the roses, pink and blue,
I gather 'round me all my band,
For I'm the King of Carpet Land.

Sometimes I build a fort of books
And from its wall my army looks,
To bravely meet its awful doom
When Fido charges down the room.

And auntie says she doesn't know
Another place blue roses grow,
And when she sees my sword so bright
She says I am her carpet knight.

JAMIE'S BEAR TAMING.

His Unsuccessful Attempt to Follow the Story Book Method.

There was once a small boy who had a perfect passion for taming bears. Not that he ever tamed any, as he was only seven years old; but his interest in bears began when he was only five, and to please him he was fitted out with a little hunting-suit when the family went to the country for the summer. Almost as soon as they arrived Jamie would take his bow and arrows and begin to look for a bear. He also began an eye out for Indians, but so far he had seen neither bear nor savages.

No one told him that he would never find one, because he seemed to take so much comfort in looking for them; but when he had been hunting for three summers without seeing even the shadow of a bear, let alone an Indian, it appeared to him to be quite time for something to happen.

Papa and mamma and Jamie, who were all the family, went to Maine that summer, and it looked so delightfully wild all around the country hotel where they were to stay that the young hunter felt quite sure of finding a bear this time. He intended to tame one, and lead it home in triumph. It was getting a little tiresome to be asked so often, "Found a bear yet, Jamie?"

Besides, Jamie had formed some very clear notions of his own during these years of hunting of just what he intended to do with the bear when once it was caught and tamed. Whenever story-telling time came around in the past winter he would always coax his mamma to tell him over and over again from the Jungle Book the story of the big black bear that was so kind to Mowgli; how it taught him to hunt, and guarded him while he slept.

Now, if an untamed jungle bear could be so good to a little forest boy, Jamie reasoned, what wonders and docility could be shown by his bear after it understood he meant it no harm, but only kindness. He would teach it to draw his blue-wheeled cart next autumn when he went a-nutting, and when school days came Bruin could trot along beside him and carry his book-satchel between his great long teeth. Then to think of the fun he would have when the snow fell, with Bruin hitched to his double-runner sled! While planning these good times Jamie fell fast asleep the night they arrived at the hotel.

Bright and early the next morning, before any other member of the party was up, Master Jamie went out to explore the premises. All the ground in the country seemed to belong to that one house. But he was not dressed 'fit for hunting, and when he came suddenly upon his long-desired bear it was something of a shock. Not so much so, however, as if the bear had come upon him.

Fortunately the bear was chained. But he was not a pleasant creature to meet. A shambling, hump-backed, pointed nose, dull little eyes and short ears were the reverse of pretty, and his clumsy body made him look like a great brown pig, except for the thick, strong paws.

The animal's low growl as Jamie approached him was rather threatening, for he had eaten nothing since the middle of the day before. He did not seem to know how to live on his own fat, as the bears in books do, and he glared ferociously at what he believed to be his breakfast coming toward him. But Jamie was a boy not easily discouraged, and he made up his mind quickly that if the bear was not as handsome as the bears he had read about, yet it might be made as pleasant a playfellow.

It was a brave little fellow, though, who was venturing into the jaws of danger, and thinking that the bear was chained there to be tamed, he reminded himself of what he had read, that the first step toward doing this was to look the creature steadily in the eyes and approach it very slowly. The bear did not mind being stared at, and he just stared steadily back. But while Jamie said to himself that he was getting almost near enough to pat his head and make him his friend forever, Bruin was gloating over the attractive meal before him.

Fortunately the pat was never given, for a startlingly loud voice called Jamie to come to his mother at once, and dropping the bear (figuratively speaking, as he had not picked him up) he flew to the house to see what had happened to his beloved parent. The hungry animal was furious as his anticipated prey vanished from his sight, and he tried to break his chain; but his keeper, who was leading him about the country in a half-tamed condition, now appeared upon the scene and silenced him for the time with a blow on the head.

There was nothing whatever the matter with Jamie's mamma, but the hotel-keeper, who saw the boy's danger, had summoned him in this way as most likely to bring him quickly. There was a great deal of fun made with Jamie, though, for in his haste he fell and sprained his *ankle, and this acci*dent kept them all at the country tavern much longer than they had expected to stay.

But during all that time the little hunter never got a glimpse of a bear, except the one he didn't tame.

The Balanced Pail.

To support a pail of water by a stick, only half of which, or less, rests upon the table. Let A B be the top of the table, and C D the stick which is to support the bucket. Place the handle of the bucket on the stick in such a manner that it may rest on it in an inclined position, as H i, and let the middle of the bucket, F, rest within the edge of the table; to keep this apparatus properly in its situation, place another stick, E F G, with the end resting against the bucket at the bottom, its middle, F, resting on the opposite top edge of the bucket, and its other extremity, E, against the first stick, C D, which a notch must be cut to retain it. The bucket will thus be kept in its situation, without inclining to either side, and, if not already filled with water, it may be filled with safety.

How Monkeys Are Caught.

In capturing monkeys it is said that their curiosity is the thing that makes them an easy prey. Nearly all of the monkeys that we see in this country come from Gornona, a little village situated a short distance from the Panama railroad.

The inhabitants of this district are mostly native negroes, for few white men could bear the climate. The whole region is marshy, and covered with tropical vegetation. At night there arises a thick vapor laden with fever, which hangs over the woods like a cloud.

This region of woods is the paradise of the monkeys. They travel in troops, led by an older monkey. When the people receive information that the "traveling monkey troops" are near the village they go to the woods in crowds to chase them.

Their plan is very simple. They cut a hole in a cocoanut large enough for a monkey's paw to enter. The nut is then hollowed out, and a piece of sugar then fastened to it, and it is placed in the road of the approaching monkeys.

It is well known that monkeys are very inquisitive. When they see the cocoanut in the grass they hurry to examine it. It does not take them long to find out that the inner part contains a piece of sugar. One of the boldest and greediest sticks a paw into the nut to get the sugar, and grasps it as firmly as he can. But his fist is so large that he cannot draw it out of the hole again with the sugar, to which he holds fast, cost what it may.

The natives now pull the string until nut and monkey arrive in the vicinity of their ambuscade. In the meantime the other monkeys wonder what is the matter with their comrade. They hurry to see where he is being pulled to with his paw in the cocoanut. They crowd around him, chattering and gesticulating, and the natives, who have a large net ready, cast it over them suddenly upon his long-desired bear it was something of a shock. Not so much so, however, as if the bear had come upon him.

Fortunately the bear was chained. But he was not a pleasant creature to meet. A shambling, hump-backed, pointed nose, dull little eyes and short ears were the reverse of pretty, and his clumsy body made him look like a great brown pig, except for the thick, strong paws.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Dame Fashion continues her onward march, and although the change from last season's styles came on so gradually as to be hardly noticeable, they have not obtained a strong foothold and the close fitting skirt and skin tight sleeves are in marked contrast to the modes of former years, while rumors from over the sea declare that the popular blouse bodice which has so long held a high and favored place in the feminine wardrobe, has been superseded by long basques and jacket effects which tend to show every outline and curve of the figure and give the long-waisted effect so becoming to many figures. But in spite of this decree it is safe to say that many models of the round, blouse waist in guises innumerable and attractive will appear on many of the toilettes, especially those designed for evening wear.

While all the latest skirts fit closely to the figure at the top, the lower portion will have the proper flare, and the best means by which to obtain this effect is the circular flounce, which promises to continue in popular favor in every shape and form throughout the fall and winter. Other skirts are made perfectly straight and flaring about the feet. Soft finished taffetas are employed exclusively when a silk lining is desired, as clinging effects are now all the rage, the rustle of a stiff, silk petticoat being a thing of the past. Elaborate trimmings play an important part on fall and early winter costumes, even the strictly tailor made being rarely seen without some form of ornamentation.

Over-skirts are now seen on many of the newest models, and when made in such materials with a combination of two contrasting colors, form a pretty dress. This style, however, is more suited to the tall, slender maiden than to her short, plump sister and should therefore be carefully avoided by the latter.

At this season visiting and afternoon receptions are the general order of the day, and for these occasions many handsome gowns have been turned out by the fashionable couturieres for their swell patrons, many of the recent importations being beautiful creations of the dressmaker's art.

A lovely gown of silver gray silk and embroidered velvet is made with a tight fitting corsage cut double-breasted in front and princesse in back. Embroidered velvet is employed for this garment, while the yoke, collar and upper part of the sleeves are of embossed silk. Jewsied buttons adorn the front.

The corsage is worn over a silk skirt, cut with a flounce and lined throughout with soft finished taffeta, and is trimmed with a wide band of rich embroidery, a charming little hat and muff and black straw, adorned with feathers and long drooping plumes gives the finishing touch to the elegant costume.

Another handsome gown, built of bellotrope silk, is elaborately trimmed with velvet and lace. The circular skirt is mounted over a foundation skirt of the same material, has a band of cream insertion about the foot, outlined with two narrow ruffles trimmed with velvet ribbon. The bodice made perfectly tight-fitting, fastens in the back and in front is trimmed with lace and ribbon to simulate a bolero, while five bands of narrow ribbon encircle the waist. Folds of black velvet drape the top of the corsage beneath the pointed collar of rich guipure lace, which latter textile also forms the top of the close fitting sleeves down to the elbow, the lower portion being of velvet, finished with a ruffle of lace. A dainty capote of black velvet, made very full and adorned with rosettes of bellotrope colored silk and a curling black rosette, accompanies this fetching toilette.

Very effective are the frocks of black or white lace net mounted over bright colored taffetas linings and trimmed with lace. A charming gown of white lace net, over an underskirt of turquoise blue taffeta is elaborately trimmed with insertions of fine lace. The waist is made with a shirred vest, outlined with the insertion and is worn over a lining of plain blue silk, while the tight fitting sleeves are of the net adorned with bands of insertion. Turquoise blue taffeta forms the stock collar and girdle belt.

Pawn colored broadcloth is the material employed for a stylish autumn frock designed recently. The skirt cut with the popular circular flounce is trimmed about five inches from the bottom with a wide band of guipure insertion. With this is donned a short Eton jacket, with embroidered velvet revers, which is worn over a dainty vest of chiffon and lace. The sleeves are slightly fulled at the top.

A GREAT NAVIGATOR.

HOW DE GAMA, OF PORTUGAL DISCOVERED INDIA.

He Ranks Next to Columbus Among the Great Discoverers of History — More Worthy of Commemoration Than the Heroes of Great and Decisive Battles.

The world would be poor without the records of its great soldiers, scientists and navigators. And the latter though they are seldom emblazoned with those national glories which are the rewards of war are frequently more worthy of commemoration than the heroes of great and decisive battles. Among navigators the name of Vasco De Gama, holds a prominent place. He ranks next to Columbus among the great discoverers of history. To sail forth now-a-days aided by chart and compass is not considered a feat of enduring renown because the extension of knowledge has made us familiar with nearly all parts of the universe save perhaps those immediately around both poles. But in the days when the Mediterranean sea was believed to be the center of the world, and when the science of navigation was less understood than at present, a man seized by the inspiration that there existed such places as India or America was a more sublime being than he who to-day discovers the North Pole.

Such a pioneer was De Gama. It was he who first sailed from Europe to the East Indies and thus opened the way for that lucrative commerce which has followed in the wake of his discovery. The feat required more intelligence, resolution and more courage than any man had ever previously manifested, and certainly more than Columbus could fairly lay claim to. In short Vasco De Gama deserves to be regarded among the first of great navigators. He was not a Spaniard; he was a Portuguese and came to be celebrated in this way:

Manuel, King of Portugal, was sitting one day in the window of his palace, overlooking the courtyard and thinking who among all his subjects was best equipped to lead an expedition to explore distant lands. The king had built four strong vessels for this purpose, the largest of which, however, was only the size of a modern fishing smack, being only about 120 tons. But such a vessel was in that early age considered a triumph of nautical science, and King Manuel was and was sorely perplexed in an endeavor to discover the best man in his service of all his many sailing flotilla; kingdom to take charge of the expedition. While the King was thus turning over events in his mind it chanced that Vasco De Gama passed across the courtyard in the presence of King Manuel.

The King of Portugal knew his character well enough to entrust to De Gama the expedition upon which he had set his heart, and having conveyed his instructions to the great navigator, De Gama set sail from Lisbon, July 8, 1497. After three months and twenty-six days they sailed into the Bay of St. Helena near the Cape of Good Hope. There they went on shore and found a race of men very ignorant and savage and who welcomed them at first, but later hurled upon them a shower of stones and javelins. The quarrel was precipitated, it is said, through one of De Gama's sailors evincing a disposition to go away fith the newly-found savages, the Portuguese not being particularly attracted to one of the colored Venuses who was in the party. De Gama insisted upon the amorous sailor rejoicing his expedition, and so a battle began in which De Gama and four of his men were wounded before the natives succeeded in rescuing the impudent sailors. Nine days later they landed in the Bay of St. Bras after rounding the Cape and suppressing a mutiny on board which latter incident tried the patience of Vasco De Gama and the disciplitue of the crew. Here they first learned of the existence of the elephant. Later they went ashore on the island of Natal. Here again the sailors who were always bent on exploring the shore fell in with two richly laden merchants of India and who turned out later to be Mahomedan merchants who traded the rich fabrics of India to the Kaffirs, and with their assistance he reached the island of Madagascar. India, however, was told him, lay beyond the islands of Madagascar some two thousand miles, thus giving to the drooping heart of the navigator the first real assurance that the object of the expedition would be accomplished.

Continuing their journey for fifteen days of pleasant sailing De Gama and his crew approached Mozambique. When they saw on shore the tall spires and minarets of a city they at once concluded that they had reached a country of civilization as civilization was then what they had left. And the Mahomedans of Mozambique also regarded the light-complexioned Portuguese in an equally friendly and appreciative light. They offered De Gama a pilot who knew the local seas and who would point out the way to India. There was great rejoicing between the representatives of both civilizations, but ah! there was one awful barrier to their permanent friendly intercourse. The Portuguese were Catholics, who were infused with a spirit of hostility to all religions but their own. The Mahomedans upon their part were no less fanatical, believing that through unbelievers' blood lay the surest way to Heaven. Thus at the very start these two parties each friendly disposed towards the other, were made mutually distrustful and antagonistic; and as soon as this petty religious rivalry was discovered the Mahomedans lay in ambush for De Gama's sailors or sent false pilots to steer their ships into dangerous places.

Accordingly they sailed away, and on May 17, 1498, Vasco De Gama pursuing the course that had been indicated to him and which for over two centuries in subsequent navigators have followed, cast his anchors in view of the south coast of India of the city of Calicut. The rajahs of India were, however, so rich and powerful and so highly civilized at that time that they regarded De Gama and his Portuguese caravels in much the same light as the Chief of Police of a Western city would now regard an invasion of Eastern tramps. They would not allow any one to approach their courts who could not bring presents proportioned in value to the rank and importance of the personage to whom they were offered. De Gama possessed nothing; was unable to speak the language, to enter into the religious spirit or to understand the customs of India.

So after for endeavoring for five months in vain to gain a footing in India he set sail for Portugal and informed the King that he had solemnly taken possession of India in the name of the King of Portugal.

Triumphant, however, in the homage of the Portuguese and the admiration of Europe and of the world have rewarded Vasco De Gama for the fatigues and the adventures of his historic voyage, the quadri-centennial of which will be celebrated in May 17. That world was won first for the Portuguese, who for later were driven out by the French and who in turn gave way to the English, and who since Clive's time have held a tight grip upon India and confined to a single nation the immense wealth and advantages which mankind would otherwise derive from the enterprise and adventures of De Gama.

One Way of Catching Them.

An enterprising photographer has lately completed a system by which his pictures of babies have become famous. He has discarded all the familiar expedients of his profession to persuade very young children to submit to the camera, and his success has been completely successful. One part of his gallery has been fitted up like a nursery. Around the room at convenient points are situated cameras, and these are in charge of his assistants.

When a baby promotes his attention to the baby. He tries all the toys in turn, gets on as intimate terms as possible with the baby after such short acquaintance, and gradually lures the unsuspecting infant into looking his way. When pose and expression satisfactory he gives a signal to one of his assistants at the cameras, and the trick is done. Mothers bring their babies from all quarters to this tactful photographer. It would be a difficult matter to find a child who would not, after ten minutes' session with toys, exhibit some expression that his parents would be proud of. The artist catches that expression, and as many other agreeable ones as possible.

The final delight comes to the mother when she receives the proofs, not sent as proofs usually are, but mounted on a large piece of cardboard, which makes it possible for her to compare them simultaneously. This wise man has left nothing undone which could strengthen his hold on the babies and their photographs.

Amer[illegible] Arms.

The success of the Colt experiments, and which John Quincy Adams described as "impracticable and even if practicable no fair or honest warfare," was now complete. The idea upon which they were based was later developed by the A[illegible]ans in the war with Venezuela in such a manner as to be of general application with other nations.

But to America and particularly to Colonel Colt are due the credit of first conceiving and carrying out through State investigation the project of submitting deposits of powder placed in harbors for submarine defence. The cable used by Colt for this purpose was the first submarine cable ever invented for conducting the electric fluid, and also accomplishing the explosition of a vessel upon water so as to be able to touch off the apparatus at the precise time when the moving boat entered within the destructive orbit of the submerged torpedo. The certain trifling alterations in the Colonel Colt system and inventions that are still used in American Coast and Harbor defenses.

A Tombstone Problem.

A man who went away from home some time ago to attend a convention of church people was struck with the idea that he could kill two birds with one stone. The convention was going to be a dinner cheaply. So he plays about it awhile, as the Lophius or 'loafer,' as we had better call him, watches the little fellow through half-shut eyes. Then the little fish rushes at the bait, but going to eat it, when Frog Fish jumps forward and catches the little fish in his big mouth, and devours him, while the mud stirred up at the bottom spreads in a yellow cloud through the water and hides the murder."

It Never Pays to Be Bad.

There was a little boy
By the name of Le Roy—
Oh, what a handsome little fellow!
But, alas! one day,
While he was at play,
He stole an apple large and mellow
And he ate it and he ate it,
Till the apple was all gone,
And then he got a very bitter pain;
And I know the little boy
By the name of Le Roy
Will never steal apples again.

Our Young Folks

HUNTING THE FAIRIES.

I've hunted the fairies the whole day long,
In wood and valley and brook;
I've listened to hear the hulder-song,
And the Elf-king pass where the alders shook;

But I never saw even a troll or a fay,
Or a naughty elf that had lost his way,
Though I hunted the livelong day.

Perhaps it was only the wind that stirred
The rustling leaves and the grass;
Perhaps it was only the song of a bird
That called to me as I tried to pass
The tangled path where the branches meet;
But it seemed like the tripping of fairy feet,
And elf songs, silvery sweet.

And so I hurried and came at last
Out on an open space
To the brook that rushes and babbles past;
And there I caught a glimpse of a face.
So I clambered in haste on a rocky shelf,
And looked in the waves again for the elf—
But the face was only myself.

I think it is funny that boys like me
Can't find where the fairies go;
And I really think I would like to be
A boy with the boys of the long ago;
When all the wonderful tales came true,
The magic lamp and the little glass shoe,
And the awful bug-a-boo.

But though they could fly to the moon and stars
When the fairies gave them wings,
They hadn't the train nor electric cars,
Nor Christmas and lots of other things;
And so I guess it is better here,
And I think I'll stay at least this year,
Since Fourth of July is near.

A FISH THAT FISHES.

The Fishing Frog and the Manner in Which He Secures Food.

"Would you think, Tommy, that a fish would be cruel enough to fish for other fishes?"

"Why not, mother, he has got to make a living?"

"But why does he not catch worms and bugs and snails and live on seaweeds, instead of catching little fishes?"

"How does he catch them, mother, and what is his name? I never heard of such a fish."

"One thing at a time. There are many things, Tommy, that you know now, that you did not know a year ago. It is very silly thing to say, as many girls and boys do, when they are told anything, 'I never heard of that before!' Why should they have heard of it? If they don't inquire and read, and use their eyes, how are they to learn anything they did not learn before."

"Yes, mother, but do not many fish catch and devour other fish?"

"Yes, Tommy, but this fish that I was about to tell you of, is a fisherman, and does not chase fishes, but catches them as you do."

"What, does he go out with a fish-pole, and an angleworm to fish?"

"Pretty nearly! He is called the Lophius or Fishing Frog, or by some the Frog Fish. It is a sea-fish, which is shaped like a bull's head, or catfish, and sometimes grows to the length of two feet, but its head is more than half the length of the fish. Its broad mouth is armed with sharp, curved teeth, and it catches its food in a very curious way. It will settle down at the bottom of the sea, where the water is shallow, and lie in wait with its mouth wide open. On the front of its head are antennae, or 'horns,' I suppose you would call them, being long flexible spikes, shaped like a whip, which end in a silvery ornament like the cracker on the whip. Then, as he lies there, almost invisible in the mud, he sees with his half shut eyes, a small fish come playing along, like a boy going to school and looking in the window to find goodies.

"Mama, does he go to a school of fishes?"

"Tommy, you must listen; when the little fish sees this silvery bait dangling in the water, he thinks it must be something good to eat, and says to himself, 'O here is a chance to get my dinner cheaply.' So he plays about it awhile, as the Lophius or 'loafer,' as we had better call him, watches the little fellow through half-shut eyes. Then the little fish rushes at the bait, but going to eat it, when Frog Fish jumps forward and catches the little fish in his big mouth, and devours him, while the mud stirred up at the bottom spreads in a yellow cloud through the water and hides the murder."

GIRLS, DON'T USE SLANG.

It Shows a Lack of Intellect and Is Unpleasant to Hear.

I have often had to blush to hear girls use slang, or at least attempt to, catching up the bye-words of the street, and using them as if they were the familiar speech of home. It shows first, that the person is not accomplished in speech, and has a limited range of words, which does her no credit. The use of right words comes from the association with other minds, either in books or in society or home. A girl's mind can be judged by her choice of words, and that choice is influenced by her associates largely. But the great and overwhelming reason for the girl's not using slang is, that often, perhaps one should say generally, slang originates in some anecdote, oftentimes exceedingly vulgar, and of evil intent. I have heard girls use slang phrases, that if a stranger heard, he would conclude that they were familiar with obscene and vile stories, so vile that gentlemen would not repeat them to each other. Yet they had heard men use these expressions, and had used them themselves, entirely unconscious of their meaning. They would have shrunk back with horror from the use of such words, if they had known in what they originated. The language of concert halls, saloons and low resorts, of the vilest places oftentimes filters into the public speech, and is taken up by the press, and girls are apt to adopt these expressions, when, if they knew the origin of them, they would not for the world make use of them. Good, clean, clear, wholesome English, as musical as Irving and Goldsmith and Addison could write, is the proper language of girls, and whenever they use slang to brighten language with, they tread on dangerous ground. I once heard a pretty girl, as good as she was pretty, use some slang phrases, very much in vogue with certain people, at that time. After she had stepped aside, a young man said to another: "Is it possible that she has the slightest comprehension of the origin of the words she has been using?" The other said: "I know she has not, she is a clean-minded girl, and will be shocked if she were told that she was using the familiar talk of places of low resort." Suppose she had been so kind friend to thus apologize for her. Girls, don't use slang.

Stories of Alfonso.

All sorts of stories are now being told about the little King of Spain, who, according to Queen Victoria's proclamation of neutrality, is the actual person at war with the United States. His little Majesty is daily informed, and in language fitted to his comprehension, the exact condition of the state of affairs. He amuses himself by drilling a company of guards in the grounds of the palace, and in one of the apartments are top models to the extent of a hundred or more of men and officers of the various regiments of the Spanish forces. These are placed in formations by two or three veteran officers, detailed to impress the delights of warfare upon the young monarch, and often they are presented as fighting troops and practice various maneuvers and perform sham battles against another crowd of toy soldiers supposed to be Americans, and which, of course, have to suffer severe defeat at the hands of the baby King. He has also models of different war ships floating in one of the palace fountains. In fact, every possible means is being taken to instill into the mind of the royal child that his mission is to defend, and some day, if possible, avenge his country.

When the little King becomes fractious, and even royal boys can be naughty, he is punished by being forced to witness the American dummy soldiers inflict a thrashing on the Spanish, carefully arranged, of course, by the aforementioned veterans in attendance. The little King also likes to trot at the head of a company of boy soldiers sent from time to time to play with him in the palace grounds, and he *is happiest when permitted, as a spe*cial concession, to beat a drum as they march past.

Value of a Trolley Franchise.

The demands which Councilman VanHerwerden would make of the Plainfield Street Railway Company in return for granting a franchise for the extension of their tracks from the corner of Fifth and Richmond streets over the latter thoroughfare to East Second street and thence to the eastern limits of the city, are not by any means unreasonable. Mr. VanHerwerden's proposition is to compel the company to asphalt the streets in the business centre of the town at a cost of about $25,000. A great many people regard such a demand as prohibitory. Now let us see.

This eastern extension of the local system is wanted principally by the capitalists as a final connection in the line which they propose building from Elizabeth to Plainfield. The right of way has already been secured through Scotch Plains, Westfield, Cranford and Roselle.

The proposed line has exactly the same territory to draw business and profits from that the proposed county trolley will have when completed. For all practical purposes of determining the value of the franchise the same conditions and same arguments apply to both projects alike. John Kean, as astute and shrewd a business man as there is in New Jersey, says that such a franchise is worth $250,000 to him. If Kean is willing to pay such a sum of money for the franchise it certainly cannot be denied that it is not worth as much to the great trolley interests back of the private enterprise.

To all the towns except Plainfield we will say that the franchises thus far secured have cost the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company (the same thing as the Plainfield company) $60,000. We think this is a very liberal estimate of the compensation or amount of benefits Scotch Plains, Westfield, Cranford and Roselle are going to get out of the franchises they have already granted.

Councilman VanHerwerden's proposition to demand benefits to cost $25,000, in addition to the stipulations already embodied in the proposed ordinance granting the franchise, would bring Plainfield's demand to perhaps $35,000.

Add to this $35,000 the $60,000 that it will cost the capitalists to get through the other towns and we have a total of $95,000 for identically the same franchise that John Kean is willing to pay $250,000 for. Compel the Plainfield Street Railway Company to submit to Councilman VanHerwerden's idea and they will be getting a franchise dirt cheap.

Some of the Councilmen profess to think that the trolley will not be built if such a demand is made of them. Don't believe it. The trolley people have got more favors to ask of Plainfield than Plainfield has got to ask of them, and this air of injured innocence that some of the capitalists and promoters assume in looking upon the proposed demands is but a thin veneer for concealing their own knowledge that the franchise is worth far more than they are willing to concede.

If the Council grants this franchise without getting a fair price they will do so with open eyes.

The Democratic ship is sailing around in the Eighth Congressional district without a single man who will say that he will venture the job of steering her into port on election day. Why is it thus? In years gone by the ship has not always gone up Salt River.

A Matter of Assessment.

Over in Bergen county the assessors have been on the tip-toe of uncertainty for several months as to what the Grand Jury was going to do to those who did not place actual values on their assessments. The Grand Jury returned Tuesday and brought in four presentments, the text of which was as follows:

"That the various properties have been assessed for the taxes at less than the actual value, and not by uniform rules as provided by the Constitution, which improper assessments have worked manifest injustice and hardship to taxpayers of other boroughs and townships in the county of Bergen, who have been assessed at actual value, and to persons where property has been assessed at actual value, which improper assessment is due to the fact that the assessor did not properly view the properties possessed as required by law."

This action of the Grand Jury created a sensation among the taxpayers, while those assessors who escaped this censure are patting each other on the back.

From time almost immemorial it has been the custom of assessors to estimate values for taxable purposes at a point far below the actual worth, but very recently a number of Supreme Court Judges, among whom Judge Dixon seems to have taken the lead, have taken it upon themselves to call the attention of the grand juries to the fact that such action was a violation of the oath of office on the part of the assessors. It will be remembered that Judge Dixon advised a previous Bergen county grand jury to that effect, and soon after there was a general skurrying of assessors throughout the State to get within the strict lines of the law. Those assessors are four Bergen county assessors who failed to do so, but now wish that they had.

At the best, an assessor's job is a thankless one on the part of the public they serve.

The Soldier Vote.

Secretary of State Wurts has finished preparations for securing the votes of Jerseymen in the service of the army and navy, whose duties keep them from being present in their home election districts this year. The voting will be done through blanks authorizing a person in the State to be selected by the voter to cast one ballot.

The absent voter can send his proxy to a person in the election district in which he would be entitled to vote were he at home. The proxy must be sworn to before a field officer or a commander of a vessel. The absent voter is also furnished with a blank ballot, which must be filled in by the voter. No provision is made by the law to inform the absent voter of the names of the candidates. His vote must be inclosed in a sealed envelope and sent to the elector in the district, to be delivered sealed to the election officers.

Those young men who drive the ambulance would show far better judgment if they would not ring the bell on the vehicle when there is no need for it. The mission of going on the ambulance is to warn people and other vehicles to get out of the way, but when the ambulance is being driven along a deserted street at midnight there is not the slightest need of constantly pounding the resonant bell to awaken and startle people. East Second street residents were thoroughly provoked last night by the constant clanging of the gong as it passed up the street at midnight.

There is still a chance for this country to go deeper into political affairs than prevail at present. It seems that in New South Wales political stump speakers swing around the circle accompanied by a huge poultry net, from which they address their audiences. Some cruel critic says that the net is used to prevent over-ripe vege tables and bombs of flour from descending upon the person doing the speechmaking in the English colony.

According to present plans, the Republican campaign in South Jersey will be "whooped up" by Candidate Voorhees next week. He is down for a "whirlwind" tour of the First Congressional district, beginning with a visit to Camden on Monday, and the other four counties during the balance of the week.

The Trolley Franchise.

In the news columns of this paper today a number of interviews with members of the Common Council are published concerning the agitation to secure greater benefits from the Plainfield Street Railway Company than are now included in the ordinance pending before the Council.

In reading the statements made by the various Councilmen it appears that they look upon the franchise, which they are about to grant, as something possessing only local value to the corporation securing it. This is a narrow view of the subject. It cannot be denied that the Plainfield Street Railway Company is owned and controlled by the same capitalists that are back of the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company, and it is the project of these men to secure a cross-county trolley through identically the same territory as the so-called county trolley will run.

The trolley capitalist are slyly holding out the terrible bug-a-boo of entirely forsaking Plainfield if they do not get what they want at their own price. They threaten to branch off at Scotch Plains and swing around up into the borough somewhere and come into the city over Somerset street, thus depriving the city of even a little bit of its benefits. They promulgate such stuff under the presumption that the borough officials will play into their hands. If we know the temper and ability of the borough councilmen we think the trolley magnates will be greatly mistaken in their ideas of finding the borough so "easy."

The whole thing in a nutshell is this: The local system was not built with the view of its paying profitable dividends on the local business. Neither have the franchises in Scotch Plains, Westfield, Cranford or Roselle been secured with such a view. The trolley capitalists are in the business for the purpose of securing a number of links that taken separately are not of great value, but when connected together are of far greater worth than they are willing to concede. Plainfield holds the key to the situation. Why should we unlock a coffer that is going to make the men behind the scheme wealthy by over-reaching a paltry little present from them?

These trolley manipulators, who have been hoodwinking the people of this and other sections of New Jersey for several years past into giving them valuable franchises for almost nothing, appear in innocent garb in Plainfield proclaiming their desire to extend the local line for what benefits they will attain locally, when, as a matter of fact, they are striving to get this link principally for its worth to them in completing a line from Elizabeth to Plainfield. While ostensibly salesming to Plainfield they are winking their eyes at each other over the prospect of getting a golden egg by a good deal of cackling.

Next Friday evening at the adjourned meeting of the City Council, for one Councilman Spangenberg will have something to say regarding the first trolley franchise granted to the Plainfield Street Railway Company by the "Big Six." He will refute the statements published by the News on the subject last Monday evening. Mr. Spangenberg says that he knows more about that trolley franchise than anyone else in the city and that he will open somebody's eyes Friday evening.

The Elizabeth Journal throws mud at Plainfield by speaking of the municipality as a "borough." We're just as good as Elizabeth any day in the week, and trot right along in the same class with her, too.

Why should Plainfield provide the completing link to a trolley line for benefits worth about $10,000 when such an act will make a franchise worth not less than $250,000.

THE TROLLEY FRANCHISE

kind. But for a clerical error of trifling importance, the franchise would have already been granted and by the vote at that time, it looked to Mr. Liefke as if the Councilmen were rather bound by it.

There are several things in the present franchise that Mr. Liefke said that might be changed to the betterment of the community. He expressed himself as not believing in the granting of a perpetual right to any trolley company. He thought that there should be a time limit on it all, as in the case of the county trolley. Then he felt sure that if the ordinance was passed as it stands at present, there will surely be trouble with the county authorities. All this he believed could be avoided if a clause was added compelling the Plainfield company to grant the city the right to give another company permission to run its cars over the tracks of the Plainfield company at designated points. That, he said, would prevent the anticipated trouble and stop a long and expensive law suit before it was begun.

Mr. Liefke said that the Common Council could secure anything it wished from the trolley corporation if it put on a determined front. The company, like any good business man, was not going to grant any more than was necessary. It was a business transaction and should be regarded as such. Mr. Liefke believed that the Councilmen were making a mistake in not getting together and holding an informal discussion of the matter. The street committee had talked it over, but the rest had been given no chance to express themselves in an informal discussion. Mistakes could far easier be corrected before the ordinance was passed than afterward. This was a very important question for the Council to look after and it needed a fair and impartial discussion. It should not be rushed through.

The trolley franchises, he continued, are growing more valuable every year and what might be considered good terms for the city may not be looked on that way afterwards. He thought that the city should go slow and secure all the concessions possible. As to the trolley company going by the way of Mountain avenue, he did not believe it. They wanted to keep close to the line of John Kean's company and would not go so far out of their way except as a very last resort.

MANY WANTED TO BATHE.

MIODOVNIK HAD 336 DISAPPOINTED CUSTOMERS.

He Would Have Charged Twenty-five Cents a Piece, and Now He Wants Plumber There to Pay for His Loss.

Justice Smalley spent the greater part of Monday hearing the case for damages of David Miodovnik, the West Front street barber against A. B. Thorn, a plumber. The suit was for $300 damages.

Some time ago Thorn placed a heating apparatus in Dave's barber shop. Dave refused to pay for the work, claiming that the furnace was not what the plumber agreed to put in. Thorn sued Dave in Justice Morsher's court and secured a judgment against him for the full amount of the claim.

Instead of settling this, Dave turned around and sued Thorn, claiming $900 damages, setting forth his claim on gas pipe, carpenter's work, painting and 336 baths at 25 cents apiece, which he was not able to accommodate his customers with because the bath tub was not in order. It seems that every time a customer came in for a bath Dave would put down his name and the date, and count it as 25 cents loss.

The plaintiff was represented by Counsellor W. K. McClure and the defendant by Counsellor W. S. Anglesum. The trial lasted from 10 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, with a recess for luncheon, and after hearing the evidence the Justice reserved his decision for a week.

BIBLE THEOLOGY WANTED.

A Sermon in Reply to the Thoughts Expressed by Rev. Mr. DuCosta.

The series of meetings which have been conducted in the tent, corner of Somerset street and Linden avenue, during the summer by Elder S. B Horton and associates, were brought to a close Monday. A large attendance was present to hear the discourse from Jude 3. The speaker maintained that the only cure for the ills and woes of Christendom from which Dr. DuCosta, of New York, and many other leading religionists are asking deliverance, is to return to original Christianity — not traditional nor creedal doctrines and instruction—but Bible theology. This will involve a return to the Bible Sabbath, Bible baptism, Bible plan for converting sinners, (in place of the dancing academy, church game and billiard hall auxiliaries to the church), and Bible plan for supporting the Gospel.

A cottage meeting was held Wednesday night at Elder Horton's home, 128 Grove street, and Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock Sabbath services will be held in the Christian church.

DESERTER ARRESTED ACROSS THE BROOK.

Private Sprague Has Been From Camp Twelve Days.

CLAIMS THAT HE WAS SICK.

HAD BEEN REFUSED A FURLOUGH BY CAPTAIN WHERLEY.

Benjamin Scribner Also Accused of the Same Offense, but Before He Could be Arrested He Went Back to Camp —Sprague is Borough Lockup Awaiting Arrival of a Guard to Take Him.

The first cases of desertion from the volunteer army from this section are reported today. They are Charles J. Sprague, and Benjamin Scribner, both residents of the borough, and privates in Company H, Third Regiment.

It was just twelve days ago today that these two privates left the camp at Pompton Lakes without leave of absence. They had complained to Captain Whereley that they were ill and wanted to come home for treatment. The captain refused them thier request and told them that they could be taken care of in the hospital tent. This did not suit the soldiers and very suddenly they disappeared from camp.

In a short time they were missed by the officers, and Captain Wherley at once telegraphed to Chief Marshal Wilson, of the borough, and instructed him to arrest the soldiers, as he supposed they had come to their homes.

Chief Wilson investigated and went to the homes of the soldiers, and in both cases he found Sprague and Scribner in bed. They both claimed that they were sick and could not be moved. Chief Wilson telegraphed this information back to Captain Wherley. This brought forth a letter from the captain. He stated the facts in the case and said that both soldiers were expert fabricators, and that no doubt they would complain about treatment, food, etc., received while in camp. He also instructed Chief Wilson to arrest the men and hold them for further instructions.

Private Scribner acted a little more sensible and he returned to camp on the eleventh day. Sprague stayed here, and today he is confined to the borough lockup awaiting orders. It is true that Sprague was under a Plainfield physician's care for rheumatism. He claimed he was troubled with the disease in his knee and then in his hip. He also claims that he contracted the disease since enlisting, May 13th last.

Chief Wilson telegraphed to Captain Wherley and told him that Sprague was being held, and he asked for instructions. Just what will be done done with Sprague is hard to tell, but he will probably be severely dealt with.

When Sprague was seen by a Press reporter this morning he had very little to say, but admitted that he had done wrong in leaving camp without permission.

BOARDS OF REGISTRY.

Organized to Make a Canvass in the Borough Tuesday Morning.

The borough Boards of Registry met last Tuesday and organized for their work of making a canvass of the borough for the coming election. In the first district A. D. Pope was chosen chairman, Chas. Emmons, inspector; W. W. Bolwey and D. J. Carney, clerks.

The second district organized with John Goodwin, chairman; David Bodine, inspector; J. E. Bailey and Edward Schenck, clerks. The members started out this morning to make a canvass of the borough and the work must be completed by Friday next. Next Tuesday the Boards will meet to fix the registry.

SCHOLARS ARE ACTIVE

SENIOR CLASS IN BOROUGH SCHOOL REGULARLY ORGANIZED.

Royal Purple and White Chosen for the Class Colors—The "Autocrat" to be Remembered and "The Sun" Substituted.

The senior class at the North Plainfield High School, more properly called the class of '99 is preparing for a year of activity. There are eleven young people in the class, seven young women and four young men. While the various improvents in the school and course promise better work and a more complete system, the members of the class are early preparing for activity along the lines of class fellowship and fraternal feeling.

Friday afternoon, the class was called together and regularly organized. Arthur Smith was chosen president, Miss Emma Line secretary, Fred Overton treasurer, and Miss Rita Ford historian. The other class officers will be selected later in the year when the fitness of the different members for the various positions will be better known.

Royal purple and white were unanimously chosen as the class colors. As to the selection of a proper design for a class pin, Fred Overton, Arthur Smith and Douglass Drake were appointed a committee to secure some suitable ones. The Misses Katherine Dwight and Rita Ford and Douglass Drake were appointed a committee to select a motto.

The "Autocrat" of the North Plainfield High School is no more. Instead that little scholastic publication will this winter appear under the name of the North Plainfield High School "Sun." A meeting of the people interested in the paper was held sometime ago and it was decided to run it on a different plan from that of the preceding two years when the publication has been in existence. Four numbers will be issued during the year, the first by the primary department, the second by the grammar classes, the third by all the High School except the senior class and the last by the graduating class.

At the meeting of the class of '99 held Friday, the Misses Grace Emmons, Grace Codwise and Emma Line were appointed a committee of three to take charge of the fourth number of the "Sun" which is to come out under the direction of the class. All members of the class will be expected to contribute, however.

TALLYING VOTES.

Another Scheme for Politicians Devised by Roger Murray.

The election officers of the city, together with the prominent politicians, have been invited to meet at the Republican headquarters Friday evening, to listen to an explanation by Assemblyman Roger F. Murray as to a new system of keeping tally of the votes that he has originated. The new scheme has its object to prevent many of the errors that sometimes creep into the tallying, no matter how efficient the election officers. The system is a modification of one used in other towns, has several advantages which Mr. Murray has added. Friday night he will explain the system in all its details and will advocate its use by the local election officers. Those who have heard it explained pronounce it a decided improvement.

Many New Houses.

David Eastman, on Crescent avenue, has sold a large property on Front street, formerly owned by Mr. Felix Marx, and also the property on Somerset street, formerly owned by Mr. R. F. M. Chase. He has sold both of the properties to a Brooklyn builder, who will proceed to erect from thirty to forty first-class houses on these properties, which will make a great improvement for Plainfield.

CROSSING THE SEA TO HEAR SAD NEWS.

Sorrowful Return of Auguste Saltzman to This Country.

WIFE READY TO BE BURIED.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD AT DR. FRITTS' HOUSE SUNDAY.

Dr. Rodman's Remarks Touched Upon the Pathetic Fact of Husband Returning Home Unconscious Even That His Wife Has Been Sick—A Kindly Tribute to Her Character by the Clergyman.

The funeral service over the remains of Mrs. Auguste Saltzman were held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Dr. J. T. Fritts, of Park avenue. They were very simple. Rev. E. M. Rodman officiated, and two hymns were sung by a male trio, Elmer E. Runyon, Wm. N. Runyon and George Schoonmaker. The clergyman's remarks were short, but comforting to those whom the dead wife and mother had left behind.

The casket stood in the parlor and was literally covered with flowers, principally roses, which were arranged in a lattice-work over the casket. There were pieces from the daughter, Mrs. A. S. Fritts, from the son, Auguste, and from friends and neighbors who had been intimately associated with the deceased.

Rev. Dr. Rodman used the Episcopal burial service, and went through it with feeling and reverence. His prayer was inspiring and uplifting, and the brief remarks conveyed more to his hearers than the spoken words described. The minister spoke of the dead woman's charming personality, her interest in other people's welfare, of the quiet life she had led, how she was never found identified with anything questionable or not just and right, and of the suddenness with which death overtook her.

Mr. Rodman touched upon the husband, rapidly nearing his home, still unconscious of the news that awaits him here. When that husband left for a trip of pleasure this summer his wife was enjoying the best of health. Not only is the husband unaware of her death, but doesn't know that she has been ill, as the family thought her sickness of so little importance that they refrained from notifying Mr. Saltzman of it for fear he would worry and cut short his trip. Then when they would have told him, it was too late. The vessel had sailed for America.

The hymns sung were two favorites of Mrs. Saltzman's. "Abide With Me," and "Rock of Ages."

The interment will be at the convenience of the family, and will not take place until Mr. Saltzman's arrival.

OBSTRUCTED THE DRAIN.

Branching Roots of a Tree Caused a Great Deal of Trouble.

The Street Commissioner has had men for the past few days excavating in Third place beyond Ninth sereet, it having been discovered that the underdrain was not working properly.

This drain is a six-inch pipe which is laid near the sewer in East Ninth street, and carries the underground water through Third place to Cedar brook.

The cause of the difficulty was found to be a growth of roots which had found their way down to the pipes and completely filled some of them.

Street Commissioner Gavett has a section of the growth in his office, and it is quite a curiosity. The joints of the pipes were left open to allow the ground water to enter, but they will be connected in the place where the trouble occurred; in East Ninth street the pipes are deep enough to be safe from invasion by roots, and the main sewer itself is tightly cemented.

The occurance shows the need of great care in laying sewer connections to houses, as these often run quite near the surface and among trees.

He Was Led Astray.

James Egan, of this city, a skilled mechanic, was led astray last Saturday night and became intoxicated. He was arrested on Somerset street by Marshal Wise, and Sunday he was released from the borough lockup to appear for trial Monday morning at 9 o'clock. The offender appeared on time and Mayor Wilson imposed a fine of $5. Mr. Egan assured the Mayor that he would not give His Honor a chance to deal with him again for such a cause.

Want The Rate $150.

Great preparations are being made at the Mt. Olive Baptist church for the celebration of the thirty first anniversary of the church the last of this month. Pastor Jackson hopes to be able to raise $150 on that occasion. His address is 218 Liberty street, and anyone wishing to see him can call at that address.

Look Out, Boys.

Boys using sling shots and breaking valuable stained glass windows in the Crescent Avenue church are known by the sexton, and if they do not stop they will be arrested.

NO EVADING OF LAW.

IF PROPERTY IS IN WIFE'S NAME IT WILL NOT BE ACCEPTED AS EXEMPT.

Important Attitude of Mayor Wilson and Borough Council in Reference to Relieving Firemen and Soldiers of Tax Bills.

Mayor Wilson and the members of the Borough Council have decided that regarding the collection of taxes on property in the borough for 1898, that no soldier or fireman shall receive $500 tax exemption where the property in question is in the name of the soldier or fireman's wife. There are a number of just such cases in the borough and for sometime past this sort of thing has existed.

One case was reported to the Mayor recently where a property owner residing in the borough was receiving $500 exemption on property, while in Plainfield he owned property in his wife's name and there was also $500 exemption on that property. His Honor is now taking steps to see that there is a proper adjustment of not only this case, but all similar ones.

'TWAS MURRAY'S WHEEL.

After It Was Found H. F. Murray Discovered He Had Lost It.

The wheel that was so unceremoniously dropped near Stelle avenue Sunday evening and was afterwards taken possession of by Patrolman Vanderweg, has proved to be the property of Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, of Madison avenue. The wheel was left in a shed at the rear of Mr. Murray's residence and the door to the shed was left unlocked. When Mr. Murray looked for his wheel Monday morning it was not there.

By comparing notes with the police, however, it has since been shown that Mr. Murray's missing wheel and the unclaimed one found by the policeman were all one and the same. The officer saw it in the possession of the stranger at about 5:30 o'clock, so it seems that the bicycle thieves began their work early in the evening.

Residental Changes.

Within the past few days Ira L. LaRue, the well-known real estate agent, has made a number of deals. He has rented A. J. Brunson's house on Crescent avenue to Charles W. Eoff, of West Hoboken. Possession will be taken next week. The house has been entirely remodeled. J. A. Layton, of East Second street, has rented David Arthur's new house on West Fifth street, and Miss Marriott's house on East Second street to T. L. Maloney, of Richmond street. The Brady farm situated on the New Market lake has been leased to J. F. Holden, of New York. J. Warren Brown, of Westfield, has leased the J. P. Homan house at 118 West Fifth street. All of the above deals have been made through Ira L. LaRue.

Another Livery Horse Hurt.

Four well-known young men of this city hired a horse and two-seated wagon from Liveryman George Cole, of West Second street. They drove to New Brunswick and were to be home by 6 o'clock. They did not return until 10 o'clock owing to an accident. They claim that they were riding through one of the streets in New Brunswick, when a trolley car ran into them. The wagon was a complete wreck and the horse was severely injured, and is now under medical treatment. The matter now rests pending a settlement.

A Distinguished Speaker.

Rev W N Grosvenor, rector of the Church of the Incarnation, in New York, is said by The Philadelphia Press to be one of the clergymen mentioned for the rectorship of Holy Trinity Episcopal church in Philadelphia. Dr. Grosvenor will address a meeting to be held in Grace P. E. church Sunday night in connection with the anniversary of the local Y. M. C. A.

A Christening Party.

There was a christening party at the home of Nicholas Kelly, West Fourth street, Sunday afternoon, Kelly's young son was christened in St. Mary's church, and then the party adjourned to the house where refreshments were served and a good time enjoyed. John Hogan was the child's Godfather and Mrs. Deady his Godmother.

Death of a Young Woman.

Miss Bertha B. Johnson, of West Third street, died Sunday after a long illness of a complication of diseases. Deceased was twenty-six years of age. The funeral services was held from Reform Hall Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Suing for a Liquor Bill.

CITY IS BEATEN IN MARTIN ACT CONTEST.

Important Decision is Handed Down By Judge VanSyckel IN CIRCUIT COURT MONDAY.

TAXES MORE THAN TWENTY YEARS DUE NOT COLLECTABLE.

Except in Cases of Where the Properties Have Been Continuously Owned by the Same Person—In Case of Bona Fide Purchaser After Lien Has Expired, the Land is Free From Back Taxes.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

In circuit court last Monday morning Supreme Court Justice VanSyckel announced his decision in the matter of the contest of certain property owners in Plainfield against the findings of the commissioners of adjustment appointed under the Martin Act for the collection of back taxes. The principal points of the decision are as follows:

"The Court decides that taxes more than twenty years past due are presumed to have been paid and advised the commissioners that they should not include such taxes unless there is evidence to overcome the prevention.

"The Court decides in the third place that as to taxes assessed upon property which still remains in the hands of the original owner they may be reassessed even though the lien of the taxes may have expired.

"The Court decides in the third place that in case of a bona fide purchaser of land after the lien of the land expired, the purchaser takes the land free from the tax."

Corporation Counsel Marsh advised the Common Council to the same effect before the commissioners were appointed, with the exception of the payment of the twenty years' non-payment. Judge VanSyckel continued as to that that the presumption did not apply against the State or against the city representing the State, and that the statute declared that nothing but actual payment should relieve the land from re-assessment.

In other words the view was that the common law maxim "that time does not work against the King" was not applicable to this case.

The court in this respect follows previous decisions of Justices Abbott and Lippincott, and refused to follow the decision of Chief Justice Savage cited by the city.

The court stated that if either side desired to review the decision of the court, the court would be glad to facilitate any proceeding looking to that end.

W. B. Codington, of this city, and R. V. Lindabury, of Newark, represented the contestants in the matter.

The decision is regarded as favorable to the contestants, though in the cases of those who have owned properties continuously since the back taxes have accrued it is unfavorable. As for instance, the case of the Martine estate. Under Judge VanSyckel's decision Mr. Martine will have to pay the back taxes unless he carries an appeal.

Corporation Counsel Marsh will prepare an order embodying the decision, to be served upon the commissioners of adjustment, who are J. Frank Hubbard, of this city, and Frank Bergen and City Comptroller Carlton, of Elizabeth.

Went to War Instead of Gold Hunting.

After being absent from Plainfield for over a year, seeing the great west, experiencing the cold of Montana and the heat of Louisiana, W. G. Hicking and Alfred Montjoy, two young men who started for the Klondyke eighteen months ago have returned. They didn't get as far as the Klondyke, but headed south and brought up in Louisiana where they joined the 1st Louisiana Regiment of Volunteers. They were kept in the United States for garrison duty, and a few days ago were discharged. They came north and are looking around a little before settling down to hard work.

Pension for Dunellen Woman.

Justice Nash has just received word from Congressman Howell that he has succeeded in obtaining a pension of $8 a month for Mrs. Cynthia Smalley, of Dunellen. The matter has been in the Justice's hands only about three months and considering the complications he had to go through is considered a quick work. The back pay will amount to about $100.

MURDERER ROESEL TRIED TO BREAK JAIL.

Warden Dodd Discovers Cell Bars Had Been Cut in Two.

HELPED BY A SWINDLER.

WILSON SECURED NECESSARY TOOLS FROM A CONFEDERATE.

Then Took the Slayer of Farmer Pitts Into The Scheme—Careful Plans Laid For Securing Outside Help—The Men Placed in Separate Cells and Are Being Closely Watched.

Elizabeth, Oct. 11.—A second attempt at a wholesale jail delivery from the Union County Jail, within the last six months, has ended in failure through the watchfulness of the authorities. Warden Dodd yesterday made publi; the plot which was to have been carried into effect last Friday night. The ringleaders were Louis Roesel, the condemned murderer of Pitts, who is under sentence to be hanged October 28, and Thomas Wilson, who defrauded many Elizabeth business men by means of forged checks.

Wilson, through the aid of a discharged prisoner, communicated with a confederate, telling him to send saws, and explaining that by gaining an entrance to the Presbyterian cemetery, adjoining the jail, a window on the side of the jail could be reached. Wilson directed that saws be pushed through the grating in the window, when they would drop either into the cell of Roesel or his own. Wilson's instructions were carried out, and had not Warden Dodd noticed Friday morning that Wilson was nervous the plan would undoubtedly have been successful. Suspecting that something was wrong, the Warden had Roesel and Wilson brought into his office, where both were searched. On Wilson were found two fine saws, and Roesel had four and a file.

These was taken away, and in addition a note in Wilson's pockets asking the confederate to send a dollar so that they might take a car and escape after getting out.

Both men were placed in new cells, and their old ones were inspected. Two bars in each cell had been sawed top and bottom and they could have been easily pushed out. The holes in the bars were filled with soap.

Wilson when confronted with the evidence admitted the plan to break jail. He said it was the intention of Roesel and himself to saw the bars in the window, and that they intended to reach the window, which was twelve feet from the floor, by climbing on the table.

He said that Roesel and himself had talked the plan over, and had come to the conclusion that saws with handles would have to be sent. They were waiting for these handles when their plot was discovered.

Roesel and George Manschanda, who was arrested with him for complicity in the murder of Mr. Pitts, a farmer, were the ringleaders in the first plot to break jail. Their plans were revealed to the warden by a prisoner. They had sawed through the bars of their cells, and their intention was to surprise the warden in his office, take his pistols, kill him if necessary, then secure the keys to the street from the safe and walk bodily out.

TRIED TO DESTROY HYGEIA ICE PLANT.

Stranger Attempted to Blow Up Great Boiler.

DISCOVERED IN RIGHT TIME.

FIREMAN AND WATCHMAN LOST HIM IN THE DARKNESS.

No Clue to the Visitor—He Unscrewed Valve in the Blow-off and Tried to Let All the Water Out of the Boiler—The Engineer, Mr. Benson, Saw That the Steam Was Escaping.

A few minutes more and the great plant of the Hygeia Ice Company for the manufacture of ice, on North avenue, near Berckman street, might have been wrecked or, at least, seriously impaired. As it was, the watchfulness of the men employed at the works prevented a dastardly attempt to wreck the place from succeeding. It happened Saturday evening close to the hour of midnight.

For several days the fires under the great boilers to the freezing plant have been going. The steam was up and everything was being prepared to start work Monday. Saturday evening there was a rousing fire in the furnaces, but the pressure was not high, for they were reducing it to connect with the other boiler when that was started. The steam guage showed a pressure of 80 pounds.

George Apgar is the fireman there. An Italian named Antonio Penasteno has been acting as watchman. Saturday night Engineer Benson, of the Westinghouse Company, was at the works looking after the plant until he should be well started. Early in the evening, Apgar and the night watchman saw through the open door a man wandering about the yard. When they approached the door he disappeared into the darkness. Several times at different intervals through the evening they saw the shadowy form again and again, but it always slunk away in the darkness as soon as they made any movement in its direction.

It was nearly midnight when Engineer Benson saw a cloud of steam coming from somewhere in the rear of the boiler. A glance at the waterguage showed that the water in the boiler was decreasing rapidly. It was very evident that there was a leak somewhere. The engineer started to investigate when Apgar and the night watchman saw a man bound out of the open door of the engine room and dash into the outer darkness. They started in pursuit at once.

The stranger further dashed around a pile of lumber and his pursuers lost him there. They hunted about the yard and notified the police who also hunted, but there was nobody around.

When Engineer Benson went to the rear of the boiler he found that the stranger had been at work. The valve to the blow-off had been unscrewed and the water from the boiler, together with a little steam, was rushing out of the opening. In a few minutes more, the tubular boiler would have been emptied of water and an explosion would have followed which might have wrought great distruction to the plant. It was only the work of a few minutes to shut off the water and prevent any accident.

After the vain hunt for the culprit, a thorough investigation was made to see if the miscreant had done any other damage to the plant but none could be found. His foot prints were to be seen distinctly in the soft earth where he had wandered about seeking to gain entrance.

From the manner in which the stranger went to work, it was evident that he was pretty well acquainted with boilers and the construction of that kind in particular. A man from Newark was discharged by the company a week ago and the acquaintanceship with the place and boiler would look as if he sought revenge for his alleged injuries.

Didn't Return to the Justice.

Mrs. Theodore Wilson, of New Market, who came to Justice Mosher last Thursday with a request that he compel a Mrs. Wilson, of the borough, to give up two children belonging to Mrs. Theodore Wilson, did not return Friday afternoon as she said she would, so nothing has been done towards securing the custody of her two little ones for her. It is probable that the two women, wife and mother-in-law, have come to some kind of an agreement themselves without the aid of the law.

Plaintiff Gone to Virginia.

Lillian Jones, colored, of West Third street, came before City Judge DeMeza with a serious charge against Olmstead Jackson, also colored, of Sanwood, a few weeks ago and the case was set down for Thursday afternoon for trial. Jackson was on hand at the appointed hour, but the girl was not. Inquiry showed that she had gone to Virginia last week to spend the winter, so Jackson was allowed to go on his own recognizance to appear Oct. 30th. By that time the authorities hope to have the plaintiff back in town.

JR. EPWORTH LEAGUE.

GRACE CHURCH SOCIETY READY FOR THE WINTER'S WORK.

Rev G. W. Gardner Pleasurably Surprised by the Little People Who Presented to Him a Reception Chair.

The Junior Epworth League of Grace M. E. church, after a vacation of three months, resumed its sessions Friday afternoon. There were forty-three members present, and all entered upon the fall and winter campaign with great enthusiasm.

A short literary programme was rendered under the direction of Mrs A. A. Taft, one of the assistant superintendents, and all who participated did themselves credit. At the conclusion of the programme the superintendent, Rev. G. W. Gardner, was treated to a pleasant surprise. Miss May Fairchild, on behalf of the Juniors, presented to the pastor and wife a reception chair, which was greatly appreciated as a token of regard from the little folks.

The pastor then outlined the work for the new term, and named the following committees:

Entertainment—Jessie Farley, Grace Gaddis, Eva Titus, Carrie Pangborn, Earl Pope, Jennie DeCamp, Tillie Uhrahahn.

Mercy and Help—Eva Doeringer, Stella Vermeule, Ethel Noe, David Fairchild, Reba Kline, Ira Pangborn, Mabel Stevens.

Social—Mary Woolston, Edith Major, Edith Taft, Ida Waterson, Grace Titus, Willie Morton, Flossie Conroy.

Literary—May Fairchild, Mabel Farley, Nettie Weiss, Harry Gaddis, Irene Woolston, Rachel DeCamp.

Missionary—Winnie Carroll, Grace Powell, Sadie Winckler, Norman Ammerman, Jennie DeMott, Belle DeMott, Alice DeMott.

NO OVERCOAT NEEDED.

ALBERT CHAMPION WON'T BE OUT TILL THE WINTER IS OVER.

City Judge DeMeza Imposed the Full Penalty of the Law on Him—His Lawyer Says he Will Set Him Free, Though.

Albert Champion, the colored man, who was found guilty Friday in the City Court of using profane language toward Grace Davis, also colored, calling bad names, and striking her with a club, came up for sentence last Saturday and received the full penalty of the law, $100 fine and 59 days in the county jail. This will keep Champion in confinement for five months. By the time he gets out spring will be here.

In sentencing Champion, City Judge DeMeza said that he had given the case careful consideration, and thought that he owed it as a duty to the city and to the State to put Champion away somewhere. Champion took his sentence coolly and was led back to his cell.

William G. DeMeza, Champion's counsel, declares that he will have the prisoner out of jail in a few days on habeas corpus proceedings. He claims that Champion was illegally tried, being arraigned and tried on two complaints at the same time. He also claims that he was found guilty against the weight of evidence.

A NINTH ANNIVERSARY.

AN AUSPICIOUS OCCASION FOR MIANTONOMOH TRIBE.

Red Men Entertained Pale Face Guests With Dancing—A Number of Visiting Chiefs—Assisted by the many Ladies.

The ninth anniversary of Miantonomoh Tribe, I. O. R. M., was celebrated last Friday in Red Men's Hall and there was a very large number of members and friends present. The feature of the affair was dancing. This was started early in the evening, and it was early this morning when the guests departed for their homes. The music for dancing was furnished by Bert Naylor.

There were present a number of visiting chiefs and members of tribes from nearby cities. The committee in charge, of which William A. Westphal was the chairman, did all in its power to give everyone a good time, and they succeeded. The other members of the committee were William Holstein, Charles Fulmer, J. Allen, Joseph Newman, Thomas Leahy and Harry Dreier. George Houseman was floor manager. The committee from Iona Council, Degree of Pocohontas, who assisted the Indians, consisted of Mrs. Holstein, Mrs. Westphal, Miss Ella Sebring, Mrs. David Allen, Miss Dunlap and Mrs. Rudolph Speigel.

At 12 o'clock a bountiful supper was served by the committee in charge, after which dancing was continued. This tribe is one of the most prosperous in this State and during its nine years of existence has accomplished a great deal of good for its members. The finances are in excellent condition and the tenth year is started with bright prospects.

A Distinguished Visitor.

Major George Hobart, who was on Gen. Keiffer's staff during the recent Cuban war, was a guest over Sunday at the home of John Willis, 19 Prospect place, North Plainfield.

LEFT WHEEL BEHIND AND DISAPPEARED.

Patrolman Hailed Suspicious Acting Stranger.

WAS LEADING A WHEEL.

WHEN OFFICER SPOKE, THE STRANGER FLED DOWN STREET.

The Bicycle Now Awaits Its Owner in Jail—Frank Denckla's Wheel Disappeared—It Was a Different Make From the One Found—No Clue to the Theft—Was Taken Saturday Night.

"Hey there, I want to speak to you," called Patrolman Vanderweg last Sunday at 8:30 o'clock, as a man passed by on the other side of the street leading a wheel. It was out nearly to the end of the officer's beat, close to Stelle avenue, and he had noticed the man whose actions aroused his supicions. The man showed an evident desire to avoid the policeman.

The moment the officer made the remark, the stranger dropped the wheel he was leading and bounded away. The officer followed for a short distance but the place was dark and the stranger disappeared.

Vanderweg then returned and took possession of the wheel. It was a Patee wheel, upturned handle-bars, and equipped with lantern, bell and cyclometer. The wheel had been well cared for and looked quite new.

Judging from the man's actions in deserting the wheel, Vanderweg was quite sure that it had been stolen and so brought it down to the city jail where the wheel now awaits its owner.

Saturday night a bicycle disappeared from in front of Hall's pharmacy. It was not the same kind of a wheel as that found, however. Frank Denckiau is employed at Hall's. As is his usual custom he left his Eldridge wheel standing in front of the store in the rack Saturday evening after returning from supper. When he went to get it later in the evening it was gone, and not a trace of wheel or thief was to be seen. At first Denckiau thought that some of his friends were playing a joke on him, but when it didn't show up Sunday he has decided that the wheel is gone.

Denckiau's wheel was an Eldridge, No. 2044, model 3, 22 inch frame and with olive green finish. The wheel had upturned handle-bars.

A NEW SUPERINTENDENT.

First Baptist Teachers Unable to Choose a Leader.

The officers and teachers of the First Baptist church Sunday-school met last Thursday for the purpose of electing a new superintendent, but this purpose was not accomplished. George H. Batchelor, who is now acting superintendent, was nominated for the position, but absolutely declined. Other names were mentioned, but not one could be elected. The matter was finally laid over for two weeks. One other matter of business was transacted. It was to receive the report of the music committee. It was decided to do away with the Sunday-school orchestra for the present. No other business was taken up and the meeting adjourned for two weeks.

BURIED IN THE CITY PLOT.

No Friends of the Late William Smith Could be Found.

After keeping the remains of William Smith over a week, and sending off to all kinds or places on all kinds of wild goose chases Morgue Keeper Patrick Casey finally buried him Friday afternoon in the city's plot. Smith died in Muhlenberg Hospital a week ago last Thursday. No one knew anything about him at all, where he came from or who his friends were, so pending an investigation the body was turned over to Casey.

It was reported that Smith had relatives on Long Island and again that he was a discharged sailor from the navy, but both of these clues failed to develop into anything definite, so Friday County Physician F. W. Westcott ordered the burial.

Must Pay According to Age.

On the evening of Thursday, October 13th, the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church will give a birthday party in the parlors of the church. The object is to raise a sufficient amount of money to pay the balance due for the new upholstering in the church. Each member of the church has been remembered with an appropriate verse in rhyme together with a sack in which they are supposed to place an amount of money to tally with their age.

Will Have Quartette Singing.

Deacon T. T. Runyon, who has led the singing at the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school for many years, has asked to be relieved, and the superintendent, Mrs. Alice S. Runyon, and the assistant superintendent, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, are arranging for a quartette. Four voices will be selected, if possible, and these will lead the singing of the hymns.

DR. LEWIS HEARD AGAIN.

HE DISCUSSED THE SABBATH OBSERVANCE QUESTION.

Occupied the Pulpit of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church and Claimed That Protestantism is on the Decline.

The stormy morning did not prevent a good attendance at the Seventh-Day Baptist church to hear once more a sermon from Rev. D. A. H. Lewis. The question of Sabbath reform, from the Seventh-Day Baptist point of view, formed the topic of his address.

Sabbath reform is a church question, not a question of politics or economics. It is the Sunday question not the Sabbath question; the world as a mass cares nothing for the Sabbath; today is the day when the world, instead of getting ready to meet God, is busier than any other day of the week.

Protestantism started with the idea that the Bible was supreme. Roman Catholicism that the church was supreme. But on the Sabbath question the Protestant church did not accept the Bible. Some of the dangers from this are a loss of love and trust for the Bible, and a loss of the idea that any time is sacred. There is a tendency among Americans to say that the lack of observance of Sunday comes from immigration. But all Roman Catholics have been taught that the Sabbath was a Jewish institution, and the church can make its own holy days. They say that any one who follows the Bible must keep the Sabbath. The strongest organization in the world today if the Church of Rome. It makes no open opposition to Protestantism ;it has learned better. It seeks to work with it, and the influence is doubly dangerous. Steadily, though the United States, the relative number of Romanists is increasing. On the Sabbath question the Protestants are swinging around to the Roman Catholic point of view,that the church is the supreme authority.

The growth of the Seventh day Baptists as a denomination is a secondary matter with us. The question is of the power of a few to make a great truth felt. It is wholly with Christian people that we are to work. We are to awaken people to the great truth that lies at the foundation of Christian civilization. It is not a denominational question, it is a question of Christianity, of Protestantism, of the Bible.

COURTED HIS OLD GIRL.

BUT NOW SHE IS MARRIED AND THERE WAS TROUBLE.

George Henderson Claims That William Swalm Paid to Much Attention to His Wife—Both in Court Today.

East Front street last Friday was the scene of quite a little excitement early in the evening which was created by two colored men and a woman. One of the men, William Swalm, was found by George H. Henderson, the other, in company with his wife. Henderson sent up a yell, the woman ran, Swalm tried to explain, Patrolman Mattox came, and both men found themselves in the lockup.

They were released later in the evening and told to appear last Saturday. Henderson was the complainant, and wanted the court to "make Swalm keep away from his wife." That was all the complaint Henderson had to make, for he said he had no grudge against Swalm.

It seems that Swalm and Mrs. Henderson used to be old friends before she married Henderson, and when she was married her husband gave Swalm a cordial invitation to "call round any time." Swalm has accepted this invitation too many times, Henderson claims, and grew jealous.

After the fuss on East Front street last night, Henderson claims his wife left town and has not been home since. City Judge DeMeza, after warning Swalm to keep away from Henderson's home after this, let him go.

RELIEF ASSOCIATION OFFICERS.

Election Held Friday and Mrs. J. K. Myers Chosen President.

At the annual meeting of the Plainfield Relief Association held Friday in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. J. K. Myers; vice-president, Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph; secretary, Miss Mabon Dumont; assistant secretary, Miss Grace Cooley; treasurer, Mrs. Lapsley. The meeting was chiefly devoted to the giving of reports of the work for the past year. The finances of the association are in good condition and during the year a large amount of work was accomplished.

Prize Choristers.

The prize choristers of the Grace P. E. church for the month of September are: Messrs. Beg. Chandor, D. Murphy, R. Cohen, H. Egan, and the Misses E. Noe, M. Collier, C. Woodward and E. VanDeventer. The Misses C. Woodward, E. Noe, and Messrs. Regmold Cahandor and Harris Egan received the Grace church cross, and Douglass Murphy the prayer-book and hymnal.

MAYOR'S ACT CAUSED COUNCIL'S CRITICISM.

Lively Discussion About Salary of First Assistant Chief.

FINALLY FIXED AT $100.

STREET RAILWAY ORDINANCE LAID OVER FOR A WEEK.

Councilman Barrows Criticised Mayor Fisk for Having Made an Agreement About a Salary to be Fixed by the Common Council—Ordinance in Reference to Police Positions Was Laid on the Table.

Contrary to the general expectation, there was a great deal of important business considered by the City Council at the adjourned meeting held last Friday and it was late when the business was concluded.

Among the important things decided upon was the question of First Assistant Chief J. W. Murray's salary. It was fixed at $100, and not $200 as was the wish of certain members of the Council. The opinion of Corporation Counsel Marsh on the subject, as asked for by a resolution, was to the affect that Mr. Murray has no right to collect from the city the salary paid the first assistant, which is $600. The question of fixing this official's salary rested entirely with the Council to determine the facts as to whether Mayor Fisk and Mr. Murray made any agreement for the latter to serve as first assistant for $100 or $200. On the strength of this Mr. Marsh suggested that a resolution be adopted fixing the salary at $200, and Mr. Runyon offered such a resolution in view of the fact that he believed that the agreement between the Mayor and Mr. Murray was for $200.

This resolution brought forth plenty of opposition. Mr. Hetfield said that he did not think it was the proper thing for any man to dictate to the Council what he would do for a certain price as in the case under advisement. He thought all agreements were out of order. He favored giving second assistant Mr. Jennings the position of first assistant and paying him the salary, and let Mr. Murray stay where he was as second assistant.

Mr. Barrows spoke strongly on the subject and stated that it was very annoying to have to contend with such a question. He said that he was surprised at Mr. Murray in his actions, and that he was also surpised that the Mayor should place the Council in such a position. It is the Council's place to fix the salaries, the Mayor can only recommend, stated Mr. Barrows, and this is a very aggravated case which goes against the grain.

Remarks on the subject were made by Messrs. Buckle, Newman and Moffett against the increase, and each one stated that it was generally understood that when Mr. Murray was promoted to the position of first assistant that he should have the salary of the second assistant. Mr. Runyon spoke in behalf of the resolution and supported the same for the salary of $200 on the ground that an agreement was made by the Mayor and Mr. Murray. When the question was voted upon there were nine members who voted for $100 and Mr. Runyon voted alone for $200.

Another important matter that came up for consideration was the new police ordinance giving the local police a life-berth. There was a great deal of discussion on the subject, but the ordinance was finally laid on the table to be called up at the pleasure of the Council. This action was taken at the suggestion of Mr. Barrows, after remarks made by Mr. Hetfield. The latter stated that Mr. Andrews, a member of the laws and ordinance committee, had left town for Omaha, and he was not sure when he would return. He also stated that the other member of the committee, Mr. Runyon, disagreed with him regarding the ordinance and that no report could be presented last evening. He also stated that there was no great rush about the adoption of the ordinance, and that there is plenty of time to put it through. Mr. Hetfield's motion to postpone the matter till November was amended to lay on the table as already stated. All the members voted for amendment except Mr. Runyon, who desired that action be taken last evening. In the meantime copies of the ordinance will be sent to each member of the Council.

Still another important matter that engaged the attention of the Council was that granting the Plainfield Street Railway Company a franchise to extend their tracks. Early in the meeting a public hearing was given for or against the extension, and no one present having anything to say on the subject, Mr. Barrows moved that a further hearing be postponed for one week. He then moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet next week Friday evening.

Later in the evening Mr. Barrows stated his reasons for the delay in the extension matter. He stated that it was the intention of the Council to adopt the new ordinance last evening, as the corporation counsel had drafted a suitable one. It was the wish of Mr. Marsh, however, that Mayor Fisk have an opportunity to examine closely the new ordinance before adoption, hence his motion to postpone action for one week. Mr. Barrows then went on to cite incidentally the advantageous terms obtained from the trolley company in addition to those already secured. The new contract provides that the company shall pay the city five per cent of its gross earnings in the city and borough, and that a per cent of 2 1-2 for adults and 1 12 for children be paid the city for through traffic, that Richmond street from Fifth to East Second street, and East Second street from Richmond street to the county line, be macadamized by the trolley company from curb to curb at their own expense. The new contract also provides for the proper sprinkling of the streets over which the trolley runs and for the quick removal of snow from the streets and crosswalks, as well as many other minor details. Mr. Barrows said that an important matter had also been looked after, that of protecting the city in case the trolley company should decide to lease their road to another company, and thus bar them out from receiving their proper per cent.

In favor of all these terms secured by the city from the Council, Mr. VanHerwerden offered a resolution which provided that the trolley company enter into a contract to asphalt Front street, Somerset street, Watchung avenue to Fifth street from Front street, and in fact about all the streets which the city have about decided to asphalt as stated a week ago. This resolution fell like a heavy thunder clap on the Council, and Mr. Runyon was the only member that voted with Mr. VanHerwerden to attach those conditions to the contract previously made.

Mr VanHerwerden strongly supported his resolution and said that if John Kean could offer $250,000 for the county trolley, the Plainfield company could well afford to asphalt the streets mentioned. He did not believe in giving the trolley franchise for mere nothing and thought that more should be obtained for the city. Another provision included in his resolution was that the company should issue forty tickets for $1 for working people to be used between 6 and 7 o'clock in the morning and the same hours in the evening.

Mr. Barrows stated that he was sure that the company would not extend their tracks if the Council should demand such provisions as contained in Mr. VanHerwerden's resolution. Other members of the Council were of the same opinion, and on the vote all the members voted against the resolution except Mr. VanHerwerden and Mr. Runyon.

The last matter of importance considered was the one in relation to locating a storm sewer through Park avenue. Mr. Barrows introduced the ordinance, but Mr. Hetfield took exception to it on the ground that the Council ought not to at this time issue bonds for the work, that Park avenue is now no worse than it was twenty-five years ago and would carry off all water in a satisfactory manner.

Mr. Barrows stood firmly for the ordinance which provides for the issuance of bonds to the amount of $2,250 to do the work. He cities the work of laying storm sewers through Plainfield avenue, East Second street and other streets in the city, and he thought that in a permanent pavement was to be laid on Park avenue a first-class storm sewer should be laid first.

After much debate on the subject the ordinance was finally adooted on its first reading and a public notice will be advertised giving the citizens a chance to have their say for or against it at a meeting to be held October 24th. The vote on the ordinance stood eight for and two against, Messrs. Hetfield and Moffett voted in the negative.

Mr. Barrows introduced an ordinance in request of the Town Improvement Association, providing a penalty of $1 for all persons who are found guilty of sweeping refuse, etc., into the street or on the sidewalk. This request was made of the Council one week ago. Mr. Hetfield expressed an opinion that he would like a little more time to consider the matter and the ordinance was laid on the table until the next meeting. In the meantime copies of the same will be sent to each member.

Mr. VanHerwerden offered a resolution providing for the borrowing of $800 on account of the fire fund. This concluded the business of the evening and the Council adjourned.

ACCUSED OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS

Fred Bowden Gave $100 Bonds to Appear at an Examination.

William N. Pangborn, agent for the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, arrested Fred Bowden, of Grant avenue, this morning on a charge of cruelty to animals. Mr. Bowden was arraigned before Lawyer Newcorn and was held in $100 bail for his appearance next Saturday before Justice Storms, of New Market. The charge in question is in relation to the time that Mr. Bowden engaged a horse at the livery stable of Dan Roberts, and while on the road riding the horse fell down and eventually died.

F. H. BALL NOW IN BOROUGH COUNCIL.

Elected to Succeed T. J. Carey, Who Resigned.

CHANGES ON COMMITTEES.

COUNCILMAN BURTIS MADE HEAD OF LICENSES AND MARSHALLS.

Chance for the Borough to Secure a Public Park—Money Spent on the Streets—Somerset Place Accepted as a Borough Street—Relief for Delinquent Firemen—Other Matters Transacted.

The meeting of the Borough Council Friday night was a short one. The members present were Messrs. Rogers, Woolston, MacLaughlin and Burtis. One of the first items of business taken up was the resignation of Councilman T. J. Carey, which was read and accepted, and F. H. Ball, a well-known resident of the borough, and a popular club man, was nominated and elected to serve in Mr. Carey's place until the next election.

Mr. Ball, who sat inside the railing, was called to the Mayor's desk and sworn in. He was given Mr. Carey's seat, and made chairman of the laws and ordinance committee. Councilman Burtis was made chairman of the committee on licenses and marshalls.

A communication was read from Elston M. French relating to a strip of ground running along Greenbrook between Water street and Elm place, and which Mr. French said the heirs of the late Robert T. Curry were willing to donate to the borough upon consideration that they would eventually connect the strip into a park.

Councilman Woolston reported that this last month $345.57 has been spent on Rockview avenue, and that the total amount expended for labor on the streets was $430.65. Rockview avenue is not yet finished, but the gutters will need scraping and a little more rolling.

Quite a little discussion arose when the question of accepting Somerset place as a street was introduced. Some members of the Council thought that a new map of the street should first be secured so that the borough could see what it was doing, but acting on the advice of Counsel Reed, who sent his opinion, the street was accepted, the phrase "as per surveyor's map" being incorporated in the resolution. The street is only a block in length, and has a fire hydrant and electric light.

There are a few people who knew it did not belong to the borough. The Mayor said that he himself was ordered some men to stop laying a board walk in front of a house on the street, not knowing that it was private property.

Mr. Rogers, for the committee on license and marshals, recommended that a claim of Peter Hansen for money claimed by him for doing police duty in 1895 be not paid. Mr. Burtis moved that the Mayor and Council be empowered to borrow $2,000 from any one who would loan it. Carried.

Mr. Rogers introduced a resolution empowering the Council to relieve a number of firemen who have not attended 50 per cent. of the fires, as the ordinance provides, during the year. Many of the delinquents were among the best firemen of the borough; some were away to war, and others had similar excuses, so the resolution was adopted.

The Clerk's financial report is as follows: Paid to county and State, $2,383.61; cash balance, $79.03; balance, $2,462.64. $37.10 has been collected during September. The total receipts were $4,350.82, disbursements $2,906.45. Balance, $1,344.37

The subscription for Rockview avenue, $797.66. This was levied as follows: Estate Jane Tappin, $277.66; W. J. Buttfield, $215.70; C. W. McCutchen, $69.68; J. F. Wilson, $51.75; estate William McCutchen, $35.40; W. W. Howland, $20 41; estate William White, $24.00; Hughes Fawcett, $16 45; W. O. Worth, $15 00; E. A. Overton, $11.26; J. T. Harrison, $10.56; E. F. Hooley, $22.91.

BAD USE OF A SLING SHOT.

Mrs. Frank Putnam Struck With a Missile Fired From One.

While Mrs. Frank Putnam and child were being driven home from Scotch Plains Thursday by her brother, some miscreant hidden in the bushes near Netherwood avenue fired a small missile from a sling-shot, striking her in the face. The missile made a stinging sensation that frightened Mrs. Putnam for a moment and she uttered a scream. Her brother whipped up his horses and was some distance away before he understood what was the cause of the trouble. It is said that there are a number of boys who use sling-shots recklessly in that vicinity and it may be that one of these days they will get themselves into serious trouble.

A New Residence.

J. B. Mills & Co., of this city, have just purchased a choice property on Sandford avenue, and work will soon be started on a fine residence, thoroughly up-to-date, to cost about $6,000, Oakley & Son, of Elizabeth, are the architects.

TROLLEY LINE WAS TO BE BUILT AT NIGHT.

Everything Was in Readiness For the Work.

BUT COUNCIL STOPPED IT.

A PLAN TO OUTWIT THE BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS.

It Was Expected to Pass the Ordinance Granting the Street Railway Company a Franchise Over Richmond and East Second Streets—If Plan Worked Road Would Have Been Built at Night.

If the Common Council last Friday had passed the ordinance granting a franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company to extend their tracks over Richmond street from the corner of Fifth to East Second streets, and thence up East Second street to the city limits at South Plains, as it was planned to do, it is more than likely that this morning would have seen the trolley tracks over this new route well under way.

This is the extension that the Board of Freeholders are trying to prevent the city from granting a franchise for, claiming that it seriously interferes with the county trolley project, for which John Kean has paid $10,000 for the franchise. It was planned to have the Common Council adopt the proposed ordinance last night, and immediately afterward the street railway company would put a large force of workmen at work pushing the road before the Freeholders could resort to any court to prevent the consummation of the enterprise.

It is known that the street railway company had everything in readiness to do the job with dispatch. Several hundred Italians were at Bound Brook and the paraphernalia for doing the work hastily at night was close at hand, and all the magazines waited for was the passage of the ordinance. At the last moment, however, Councilman Barrows decided that it was not best to put the ordinance through. Action on it was postponed till next Friday night, but it is thought that by that time the Freeholders and those interested in the county trolley project will take aggressive steps to prevent the Plainfield Street Railway Company from taking snap action.

Scotch Plains, Oct. 5.—Scotch Plains' curiosity has been aroused by the coming of about seventy Italians who arrived in town Thursday evening and took up their abode in the old Hunter house on Front street, which has been the headquarters of the Italian colony for several years. Friday an Italian contractor arrived in town from New York and made inquiries for the Hunter house and a gang of laborers he had shipped out the day before. After being directed he was drawn into conversation and was asked the usual question: "What does it mean the large addition to the Italian colony?" He readily answered that he had the contract to begin breaking ground for the electric street railway, and that he intended starting at once. This made Scotch Plains people jubilant and the usual "I told you so" was given and taken, but there are some who do not believe in being too jubilant until they see something more substantial than a crowd of sixty or seventy laborers.

To Give a Benefit.

Greenbrook Council, Royal Arcanum, met last Thursday in regular session and received one application for membership. The Council has decided to give an entertainment for their own benefit in Washington Hall on the evening of October 25th. The committee who has the affair in charge consists of C. C. Davis, chairman; F. L. Cobb, George O. Stevens, Charles Wines, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges. At the meeting last evening the members enjoyed a visit from the district deputy, Mr. Drummond, of Bound Brook.

Installed an Officer.

Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., held a meeting Friday. One proposition for membership was received and R. Y. Dewey was installed as overseer. At the next meeting of Grand Master Judd and staff, of Trenton, will be present. A committee consisting of Messrs. Nash, Dunham and Ulrich, was appointed to provide for an entertainment for them.

An Absconding Debtor.

Justice Mosher of Isselin issued an attachment on a horse, wagons and other goods belonging to Charles Lines, of West Front street, Friday. The attachment was made at the instigation of Wallace Corlell, who claims Lines is an absconding debtor, and owes him $71.30. The hearing is set down for October 27th.

Death of Mrs. Silvers.

Word has been received in this city of the death of Mrs. Arthur Silvers in Dubrique, Iowa. Mrs. Silvers lived in New Providence, where she was born and brought up. When she married she and Mr. Silvers lived in Plainfield for two years, then moved west, where they have been for the past six years. Death was due to hasty consumption.

CLUB WOMEN TO MEET

ANNUAL MEETING OF STATE FEDERATION OF CLUBS AT ELIZABETH.

List of Those Who May Be Chosen for the Offices—The Subject to be Discussed by the Women is "Sociology."

The annual meeting of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs will be held in Elizabeth Oct. 27th and 28th. The subject under discussion will be sociology. The evening session will be in the form of an evening reception at the home of Mrs. Emily E. Williamson.

The nominating committee, of which Miss Eleanor Jenkinson is chairman, has prepared the following list, to be presented at the October meeting. In making out the list of combinations for officers and directors, it was found that there were two vacancies in the required number of vice-presidents, one vacancy in the office of recording secretary, and one also in the office of treasurer. The chairman explains that these vacancies occur either because all the nominees are ineligible or refuse to serve. Mrs. Mary W. Butler, not having served a full term, was by unanimous vote of the board declared eligible for re-election.

The list is as follows: President, Miss Mary McKeen, of the Woman's Club, Camden; Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, of the Woman's Civic Fed eration, Elizabeth. Vice-president, Miss Elizabeth Vermilye, of the Woman's Club, Englewood; Mrs. Kate B. Horton, of the Wednesday Morning Club, Cranford; Mrs. Fannie J. Taylor, of the Monday Musicale, Newark; Mrs. Francis W. Kitchel, of the Woman's Club, Perth Amboy; Miss C. B. Yates, of the Woman's Parliamentary Club, Plainfield; Mrs. Jennie DeWitt, of the Current Topic Club, Newark. Corresponding secretary, Miss Ellen Mecum, of the Woman's Club, Salem; Mrs. Minnie H. Magee, of the Charlotte Emerson Brown Club, East Orange. Recording secretary, Mrs. Mary W. Butler, of the Wednesday Afternoon Club, Montclair. Treasurer, Mrs. Madge Smith McClary, of the Home Reading Club, Rahway. Auditor, Mrs. Joanna Hartshorn, of the Reading Club, Short Hills; Miss Mary M. Welch, of the Kalmia Club, Lambertville. Directors, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of the Monday Afternoon Club, Plainfield; Miss Bella Snyder, of the Pen and Point Circle, Caldwell; Mrs. Emma W. Newbury, of the Woman's Club, Jersey City; Mrs. Cornelia Foote, of the Philliticipoma and Ray Palmer Club, Newark; Mrs. E. H. Denton, of the Clio Club, Roselle; Mrs. R. F. Hauxhurst, of the Ladies' Political and Social Advancement Society, Bayonne.

Anniversary Committee.

The directors of the Y. M. C. A. met Thursday. The most important report rendered was that of the anniversary committee which was given by the chairman, E. L. Bonny. The thirty-first anniversary of the Y. M. C. A., in this city, will occur October 28th, for on October 28th, 1867, the branch here was organized. The exercises this year are to be held in the various churches Sunday, October 16th. A speaker will be provided by the Y. M. C. A. for each church, and one of the directors will be in attendance and read the annual report.

Collected the Assessments.

Collector George Brown, of the borough, is in high feather owing to the fact that he has succeeded in collecting all the assessments from the residents of Mountain avenue to pay for the macadamizing of that thoroughfare. The amount collected is $834.79.

Hair Hints

It is much easier to keep the hair when you have it than it is to restore it when it's lost. If your hair is "coming out" it needs instant attention. The use of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR will promptly stop the hair from falling, and stimulate it to new growth.

"Some years ago my hair began to fall out and I became quite bald. I was advised to try and had used it but a short time when my hair ceased to fall out and a new and vigorous growth made its appearance. My hair is now abundant and glossy."

REGULAR LOVE FEAST IN EIGHTH DISTRICT.

Congressman Fowler Renominated by Acclimation.

BAYONNE WAS SOON IN LINE.

NOT AN OPPOSING VOTE TO THE PRESENT REPRESENTATIVE.

Plainfield Did Not Figure Conspicuously in the Convention—Mr. Fowler Nominated by William T. West, of Roselle —John Kean's Boom for the Senate Pushed Along—The Platform Adopted.

For the third consecutive time the Republicans of the Eight Congressional district have chosen Charles N. Fowler, of this city of Elizabeth, for the nominee in the House of Representatives. The nomination made at the convention held in the Lyceum Theatre Thursday afternoon, was by acclimation, as had been anticipated.

Previous to the convention the Union county delegation met in the surrogate's office to hold a caucus. Charles N. Codings, of Westfield, presided, and George A. Squire was secretary. The county's honors were disposed of as follows:

Vice-president, Major George P. Edgar, of Rahway; secretary, Henry C. VanEmburg, of Plainfield; committee on rules, Frank E. Marsh, Plainfield; F. Bliss, Rahway; Charles H. Denman, Westfield; Geo. Wilcox, resolutions, George Hoyt, Westfield; Charles Foote, Plainfield; John D. Barr and George A. Squire, Elizabeth; credentials, William T. West, Roselle; J. W. Cliff, Summit; John W. Long, Elizabeth; Dr. Hough, Rahway; permanent organization, E. W. Austin, Cranford; Joseph N. Potter, Rahway; James W. Higgins, Union; W. H. Donaldson, Linden.

Dr. C. R. Holmes, of Rahway, was re-elected member of the congressional committee.

Mayor Holmes, of Rahway, called the convention to order at 3:30 o'clock, and suggested Postmaster Frank H. Melville, of Bayonne, for temporary chairman. The convention unanimously affirmed the choice.

T. Morris TenBroeck, of Bayonne, was made secretary.

It was decided to appoint one vice president, one secretary and one member of the Congress committee from each county, and four members from Union, four from Essex and one from Hudson on each of the committees on resolutions, credentials, permanent organization and rules.

John Kean, ex Mayor John C. Rankin and Amos Clark were invited to the platform, and were greeted with applause when they were escorted to the stage by a committee of the convention.

The committees were formed as follows:

Permanent Organization—E W. Austin, Joseph N. Potter, James W. Higgins and W. H. Donaldson, of Union; Robert Ward, H. L. Johnston, E. B. Taylor and C. W. English, of Essex, and Chas. H. Hosford, of Bayonne.

Credentials—Wm. T. West, J. W. Cliff, John W. Long and Dr. Hough, of Union; John Wander, W. J. Allen, F. B. Oaks and George Washburn, of Essex, and Alphonso S. Osborne, of Bayonne.

Rules—Frank Marsh, F. Bliss, Chas. H. Denman and George Wilcox, of Union; J. S. Speer, J. P. Ennis, L. P. Taylor and Amos Harrison, of Essex and John C. Boyer, of Bayonne.

Resolutions—George B. Hoyt, Chas. Foot, John D. Barr and George A. Suire, of Union; E. F. Baskford, Edward Cheethem, George W. Peterson and C. H. Turrell, of Essex, and Samuel Graham, of Bayonne.

Congressional—Dr. C. B. Holmes, of Union; S. C. Martin, of Essex and Samuel Graham, of Bayonne.

The committee on organization reported the following permanent organization:

Chairman—Albert F. Skinner, of Essex.

Vice-chairman—Major George P. Edgar, of Union; Paul C. M. Barrett, of Essex, and C. I. Roake, of Bayonne.

Secretaries—H. H. VanEmberg, of Union; George B. Sherman, of Essex, and T. M. TenBroek, of Bayonne.

George B. Hoyt, of Westfield, reported the platform from the committee on Resolutions. It re affirmed devotion to the principals of Republicanism as enunciated in the national convention, approved of President McKinley's administration and endorsed the Republican State platform. It noted with pride the place the Congressman Fowler had taken in Congress and commended his courageous and persistent efforts to secure financial legislation.

Upon the call of townships, towns, boroughs and cities, Bayonne announced that its poll had resulted in a vote of 13 for Fowler and 4 blanks. After that each response was "Fowler!" the municipalities falling into line as rapidly as the secretary would call the roll. When Roselle was called William T. West took the floor, and was called to the platform. He made a speech rehearsing the party principles and achievements, and closed by nominating Mr. Fowler.

There was vigorous and prolonged cheering, and when order was restored Robert Ward, of Essex, moved that the rules be suspended and that Mr. Fowler be nominated by acclamation. He said that, although from Essex, he took great pleasure in crowning Mr. Fowler with his county's entire approbation.

Charles E. Annett announced that in the interests of harmony and goodwill Bayonne cast its whole vote for Mr. Fowler.

Mr. McConnell, of Bayonne, made a speech in seconding the nomination of Mr. Fowler.

The motion was then carried with a cheer.

After John Kean had been called to the stage and delivered a few remarks Mr. Fowler appeared and was given an ovation by the delegates. He thanked the delegates for the renomination and expressed appreciation of the intelligence and influence of the people who made up the Eighth district, and after promising to his best if elected again he devoted some time to the State campaign and ended by advocating the election of John Kean to the United States Senate in place of James Smith.

The convention then adjourned.

The VIIth District includes all of the county of Essex except Newark and East Orange, the County of Union and the city of Bayonne, in Hudson County. In 1894 Mr. Fowler was elected by a plurality of 6,236 over Dunn, and in 1896 he defeated Willey with a plurality of 11,644.

CHOSE THEIR OFFICERS.

MRS. W. S. LOWRY PRESIDENT OF PARK AVENUE BAPTISTS.

Nominating Committee's Selections Approved by the Members of the Society—Committee Members Appointed

The annual meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held Thursday at the home of Miss Florence Giles, 113 Netherlands avenue. An election of officers and committees was first held after which an informal sociable followed with refreshments and games.

Several weeks ago a nominating committee, consisting of Miss Laura Runyon, Miss Adelaide Runyon and Arthur Heath, was appointed to nominate the officers and committees, and last night the report of this special committee was received and adopted.

The officers elected are Mrs. W. S. Lowry, president; Miss Anna Wycoff, vice-president; Mrs. W. S. Lowry, corresponding secretary; Miss Myra Runyon, recording secretary; Miss Henrietta Cuming, treasurer.

The committees chosen are as follows: Lookout committee, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, Miss Cora Brokaw, Miss Mary Giles, Miss Julia Wyckoff, Miss Lizzie Runyon, Walter Pool and Arthur Heath.

Prayer meeting committee, David M. Runyon, Miss Ada Runyon and Rev. J. W. Richardson.

Missionary committee, Miss May Thompson, Nelson VanWinckle and Miss Lilla Livezey.

Social committee, J. W. Hawkins, Miss Bessie Giles, Miss Adelaide Runyon, Miss Caroline Livezey, Clarence Rittenhouse and Miss Helen Cuming.

Flower committee, Miss Lissa Livezey, Miss Jennie Giles, Miss Libbie Joseph, Hervey Doane and Aaron Thompson.

Good citizenship and temperance committee, Frank Clarkson, Fred Borman, Miss Nellie Bockafellow, Miss Florence Goldsack and Miss Lizzie VanWinkle.

Good literature committee, Miss Emma V. Fish, Miss Mabel Treadwell, Miss Martha Wagner, Bert Brokaw and George Poole.

Music committee, Miss Adelaide Runyon, Miss Laura Runyon, Miss Henrietta Cuming, Miss Cora Brokaw and Miss Ada Runyon.

Welcoming committee, David M. Runyon, Thad Doane, Miss Anna Wyckoff, J. M. Hawkins, Rev. J. W. Richardson, Mrs. W. S. Lowry and Miss F. G. Hawkins.

By unanimous vote of the society, Miss Sarah Curry, matron of the Westfield Fresh Air Camp was elected an honary member of the society. She will send a message each consecration meeting to be read in respone to her name at roll call.

The Missionary committee reported having sent a box containing jellies, canned fruit, and interesting reading matter to some of the soldiers of the Fourth Regiment, Camp Voorhees, Sea Girt.

Following the business various chairmen met in conference with members of their committee, after that refreshments and then singing closed evening's exercises.

Good Interest at the Start.

There was a large attendance of members at the meeting of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, yesterday afternoon. This was the first fall meeting and the members have commenced their work in a way that bespeaks success.

DR. BRETT'S TALK TO THE ENDEAVORERS.

The Thirteenth Anniversary of Trinity Reformed Society.

DO A GREAT DEAL OF GOOD.

THE ADDRESS PUNCTUATED WITH MANY BRIGHT REMARKS.

The Young Christians Form an Important Part of the World's Christianity—Advised the Trinity Endeavorers to Put Forth Their Best Efforts for Next Year—Officers' Reports.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church observed its thirteenth anniversary Thursday. As the officers and members look back to the time when the society was organized they experience a feeling of satisfaction, and congratulate themselves on the society being one of the largest and most stirring, as well as one of the oldest, in the local union.

The anniversary exercises were held in the lecture room. They took the form of a sociable, but before the time for shaking hands and conversation had come, Rev. Dr. Brett, of Jersey City, the genial State president of the Christian Endeavor, made a short address upon "What Do People Say About Us?" referring to the Christian Endeavorers.

Dr. Brett said that people are always talking about something, and just now it is as much about the Christian Endeavorers as about anything else. They should be proud of it, the speaker asserted, because the Endeavorers as a whole are well worth talking about.

Dr. Brett quoted a remark made by a good elder of a church, a man who, he said, is noted for his piety, and is a person whom all know, and would recognize at once if they heard his name. This elder remarked that "Christian Endeavorers in our church are just good to consume coal and gas which the trustees have to pay for."

Dr. Brett thought that they must have a queer kind of a Christian Endeavor Society in that church, and expressed the wish that the elder could have seen the gathering of young people at Asbury Park last week, for he thought then the elder would change his mind.

The speaker said that people are putting Christian Endeavorers in books and magazines, and that he could hardly pick up a novel today but what the hero or heroine attends an Endeavorer meeting. The great magazines and papers are controled by the reading public, and if they want Christian Endeavor literature, they will get it, said Dr. Brett.

Dr. Brett heard of a certain writer who considered the Christian Endeavor movement a mystery because there was a man wearing a C. E. badge who got intoxicated at the time the great convention was held in New York City. This writer thought it strange that all those 30,000 Endeavorers did not cease their hymn singing and rush down to the jail to bail their brother out.

In closing, Dr. Brett urged the young people of Trinity's Society to make the fourteenth year a glorious one, and to keep in view the spiritual end of the society. Although each one may feel himself an insignificant member of that society consisting of a million and a quarter, who belt the globe, yet he assured them that each had a part to do in the work, very important, although perhaps very small.

The president, Horace J. Martin, had charge of the exercises, and the secretary and treasurer both read short reports of the year's work. The roll now shows 110 active members, and the attendance at the meeting during the year averaged sixty.

The treasurer's report was as follows: For the general fund, the receipts for the year were $61.46, disbursements, $57.31; balance, $4.25. For the sinking fund, $6.05 had been collected. $60.50 had been collected for missionary purposes. Of this, $63.44 has been expended, leaving a balance on hand of $17.06.

This society is the outcome of the Young People's Society which was started in Trinity Reformed church by Frank Morse, now of Garwood. Upon the suggestion of Rev. Dr. Raymond, then pastor of the church, the Young People's Society was organized as a Christian Endeavor. Among the charter members were H. E. Gayle, Daniel VanWinkle, E. E. Anthony, Miss Ella C. Benedict, Miss Emma Gillam and Mrs. Fred Dunn. There were about twenty-seven members when the society was first organized, and of these Miss Benedict, Miss Gillem and Messrs. Gayle and Anthony were present last night.

The anniversary was in charge of a special committee consisting of Miss Mabel Wilson, chairman; and Mrs. J. M. Tier, Mrs. F. C. Adams, Edgar Sheppard and Henry Seader. They were responsible for the good time and the pretty decorations, simple but effective, around the platform and reading desk. They were assisted in passing coffee and cake by the members of the social committee, Mrs. H. J. Martin, Miss Bertha Richards, Miss Corinne Young and Miss Jennie Rose; the reception committee, E. E. Anthony, A. L. Force, Miss Grace Berg, Miss Lottie Wilson, Miss Lillian Force, H. J. Martin, Jr., Edgar Sheppard and Hiram Hunze; and the flower committee, Miss Maud VanDyke, Miss Martha Anthony, Miss Minnie Berg, Miss Nettie Young, Miss Gertrude Tier and Fred Rose.

Invitations were sent to all the societies in the local Union and the invitations were generally accepted. There were many strangers present. A stage load came from Marconier chapel and another from Washingtonville. There were also Endeavorers present from New Market and Dunellen. Among them was Rev. Mr. Jones, from Marconier, who offered prayer.

DR. PROBASCO MARRIED.

MISS GERTRUDE EDMAN, OF WATCHUNG AVENUE, THE BRIDE.

The Event Celebrated at the Home of the Groom on East Front Street—Bride's Mother Present from Paris.

The marriage of Dr. J. B. Probasco, of East Front street, to Miss Gertrude Edman, of Watchung avenue, took place Thursday, October 5 at 2 o'clock at the doctor's home. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated.

The wedding was attended only by the immediate relatives of both parties. Among the guests were the bride's mother from Paris, who came across the water to attend the event, and the bride's sister from New York. The mother gave away the daughter in marriage. The groom's sister, Mrs. Tustin, of Philadelphia, and his brother, of Bridgeton, this State, also witnessed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of the late Frank B. Edman, of Stockholm, Sweden, and her grandfather was the late Hon. Samuel Shirley, of England. The doctor made Miss Edman's acquaintance at the Muhlenberg Hospital, where she served in the capacity as nurse. She graduated from one of the leading classes, but soon left the hospital and took up her residence on Watchung avenue.

After a short trip the couple will return and take up their residence on East Front street.

THE SEWER BEDS.

Dunellen Has a Few Words to Say About the Subject.

The North Plainfield township board of health have appointed a committee, consisting of Charles Sebring, William H. Smith and Robert Clark, in connection with the health inspector, to visit Plainfield's sewer beds and investigate them as to their being a nuisance. Should they find them detrimental to health so far as the residents of any portion of that township is concerned, they will report the matter to the state board of health and inaugurate measures to abate the nuisance.

We might say in this connection that the officials of Plainfield have, in the past, denied that the sewer beds were a nuisance in any sense of the word, but they have admitted that they were inadequate to accommodate the sewerage of the city, and have given notice to discontinue making connections. This is not just to the citizens, but so long as they are willing to pay taxes from which they receive no benefit it is doubtful if any outside community can get any redress on account of their being denounced as a nuisance.—Dunellen Call.

Sentence Suspended.

Sentence was suspended on Sebastian Miller and his wife in the City Court last Saturday. They were arrested several weeks ago for thumping Mrs. Lida Levine, of Cottage place, their neighbor, over the head with a dish pan.

FRANKLIN COUNCIL ELEVEN YEARS OLD.

Anniversary Celebrated Pleasantly Thursday Night.

NO FAIR ONES FOR GUESTS.

JUST A SOCIAL AFFAIR AMONG THE COUNCIL'S MEMBERS.

Whitfield France Entertained the Members With a Phonograph Exhibition—Thousands of Dollars Have Been Expended for Sick Benefits and Now There is $900 to Their Credit in Bank.

The eleventh anniversary of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., was celebrated last Thursday in the rooms on West Second street, in an appropriate and enjoyable manner. Contrary to the general rule, the affair was arranged for the members alone and there was an absence of the fair sex.

The regular order of business was transacted first, and the celebration took place in the good of the order. The principle feature was a phonograph exhibition given by Whitfield Frazee, a member of the council. He had a large number of excellent records and the members enjoyed them very much. While the ear was being pleased with music, the good sick welfare committee provided refreshments for the inner man, consisting of cake, lemonade and cigars. The affair took the form of a social gathering and everyone enjoyed themselves fully.

This council was organized eleven years ago in a room over the City National Bank and started out with bright prospects. Since that time there has been a steady growth, and today there is a membership of nearly 200. The council has expended for sick benefits thousands of dollars, yet at the present time there is in the Dime Savings Bank $900 to the credit of the council. The finances of the council are in excellent condition and reflect credit on those who have them in charge.

Just at present the members are organizing a mutual benefit association for any member of the order. Thus far twenty-five members have joined. The association will pay, after it has reached a membership of 100, a death benefit of $100 twenty-four hours after the death of a member or his beneficiary, who must be a relative of the deceased. The association has already become very popular and in a short time it will be fully organized. There is no limit to the membership, but the benefit is limited to $100.

In the absence of the councilor, Geo. Bolsterle, last evening, David Bodine, vice-councilor, filled the chair in a creditable manner. There was a large attendance of members and the eleventh anniversary was celebrated in a way that the members will not soon forget.

A NEW CHURCH BUILDING.

Redeemer Society Will Soon Start Work on Their New Edifice.

In the course of a short time the members of the Church of the Redeemer will commence the erection of their new church home at the corner of Grove street and Prospect place. The main part of the building will be of stone, with brick trimmings, and will be one of the finest churches in the city. Messrs. Audsley, architects, residing in the borough, have drawn the plans for the new church, and in a few days they will be ready for the contractors to bid on. The new church will front on Grove street and be an imposing structure. The estimated cost is about $25,000.

A Temperance Debate.

A debate war started at the meeting of the Reform Club Thursday upon the attitude of the Bible in regard to the use of liquor. The subject of the debate was "Resolved, That the Prohibition Party Has an Ally in Bible Truths." John H. Sayres took the affirmative side and Noah W. Pike the negative. There was a large audience present, and the debate will be continued next week.

When the children are hungry, what do you give them? Food.

When thirsty? Water.

Now use the same good common sense, and what would you give them when they are too thin? The best fat-forming food, of course.

Somehow you think of Scott's Emulsion at once.

For a quarter of a century it has been making thin children, plump; weak children, strong; sick children, healthy.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

STILL STAND BY TROLLEY COMPANY

Councilman Who Wouldn't Ask For Better Terms.

A LOCAL POINT OF VIEW.

ACTUAL WORTH OF FRANCHISE S EMS TO BE LOST SIGHT OF.

Councilman Buckle Believes That the Business Interests of the City Demands That the Franchise be Granted —Councilman Barrows Fears Trolley Might Go By Way of the Borough.

Press reporters Monday interviewed a number of the members of the Common Council in reference to the securing of more advantageous terms from the Plainfield Street Railway Company in return for the franchise it is proposed to grant them, and below will be found their opinions.

The present concessions granted by the Plainfield Street Railway Company are satisfactory to Councilman J. P. Homan of the Third Ward. When interviewed by a Press reported yesterday afternoon, he stated that he thought that Mr. VanHerwerden wanted too much from the trolley company. The city was getting all that it could reasonably expect, he thought. The present reading of the franchise gave the city some valuable concessions that made up according to his way of thinking for all that was granted the company. He did not believe that it was worth to the company any quarter of a million dollars to get through. He believed that Plainfield was getting far more out of the company than any other city had done.

Councilman J. F. Buckle, of the First Ward, was very free to say that he did not agree with Mr. VanHerwerden in his scheme to get that trolley company to asphalt the business streets. According to his idea, the city was getting its full value for the franchise it was giving to the Plainfield Street Railway. The route of the new extension, he continued, was through a section of the city practically unimproved. The thoroughfare selected was one that was almost unknown except to those who lived on it. The trolley corporation was to macadamize it from curb to curb from Richmond street to its end, converting it from a mud hole to a good thoroughfare. Then the property in that section would be vastly benefited by a railroad running there while the valuations on Front street would also be raised. It would build up a part of the city heretofore almost untouched. The city needed a trolley line through there, Mr. Buckle said, and ought to have it. The present terms, he believed, were all that anyone could reasonably expect.

The concessions now agreed to by the Plainfield Street Railway Company would cost that corporation nearly $8,000, he continued. If the route was through a densely-populated section then he, too, would be in favor of asking more for the franchise. The Plainfield Company had not paid any dividends on its stock as yet, and he could not see how they expected to make anything for years to come. The distant future, however, had very bright prospects when the through line might be completed. Under the circumstances, Mr. Buckle did not believe that the company would grant any more, and had been told as much by one greatly interested in it. A pretty picture it would make, he said, if the city should demand greater concessions than the company would grant and then have to reduce them and virtually beg the company to take the franchise for even less than is now offered.

Mr. Buckle also pointed out the fact that all the Councilmen, Mr. VanHerwerden included, had practically voted for the franchise when the discovery of a trifling legal irregularity had made it necessary to vote over again for the final passage of the ordinance.

Councilman Moffett has not changed his views on the subject since the meeting of the Council last week Friday. When seen by a Press representative yesterday, and was asked what his views were regarding increased demands from the Plainfield Street Railway Company he said that he did not think it right to ask too much. He seemed to realize that the extension is an important matter and means a great deal to the company, but he could see no reason why the Council should be so exacting. He thinks that the city will receive a great deal from the company under the present agreement, in fact more than other places have received. After he read Monday's Press editorial, he remarked that he saw no reason why he should change his mind, and he stills thinks the way he did before Mr. VanHerwerden introduced his resolution.

Mr. Barrows expressed himself strongly against the resolution as offered by Mr. VanHerwerden. He said that he thought the scheme unreasonable and too much to ask. Regarding the John Kean scheme he said that it would probably cost Union county all of $600,000 to follow out the plans for the county boulevard, and after the county has complied with the requests of Mr. Kean, then the latter will pay $250,000 to the county for the franchise to locate and operate a trolley between Plainfield and Elizabeth. As regards the Plainfield Street Railway Company franchise he said that the people in the eastern part of the city and at Scotch Plains are now clamoring for the trolley, and they want it. For this privilege the company is willing to pay about $8,000 to macadamize the streets, over which they want to extend the tracks, from curb to curb, in addition to a number of other agreements. The company, Mr. Barrows thinks, is willing to do anything that is fair and reasonable. It was also intimated that if the city asked too much of the company they might change their plans and connect with the end of the Somerset street trolley line. This would not take them much further out of their way, and the company claim that they could handle the traffic equally well over that route. In view of all this Mr. Barrows can see no reason why he should change his mind or vote.

DIVORCE IS DENIED HER.

A FAVORABLE DECISION FOR DR. GEORGE W. ENDICOTT.

Vice-Chancellor Stevens Declares That There is No Legal Proof of Infidelity Charged Against Mrs. Endicott's Husband

Trenton, October 11.—Vice Chancellor Stevens yesterday announced his decision in the suit for divorce instituted by Mrs. Lillie C. Endicott against her husband, Dr. George W. Endicott, of Plainfield. The decision denies Mrs. Endicott's petition. In brief the Vice-Chancellor declares that there if no legal proof of the infidelity charged against Dr. Endicott.

Two of the five correspondents are referred to as "Mrs. W." and "Agnes." The Vice-Chancellor is of the opinion that "Mrs. W." was not guilty and the charge by Mrs. Endicott should never had been made.

In regard to "Agnes" the Vice-Chancellor says that she manifestly perjured herself on the witness stand in her charge against the doctor.

The complaint in connection with Miss Wells, in his opinion, is entirely unsustained.

The Vice Chancellor makes this comment:—

"It is remarkable that Mrs. Endicott, who appeared to be ever on the watch for indications of her husband's infidelity, saw no evidence of it at the time she now thinks he must have been faithful."

The conduct of Francis Ford, in going to the doctor's rooms and upbraiding him for his intimacy with Miss Wells, and her taking laudanum, the Vice Chancellor thinks is enough to arouse suspicion, "but suspicion," he observes, "is not proof, and the evidence is not strong enough to support the complainant's charge."

MAY GO TO CUBA.

Officers Pleased, But Enlisted Men Don't Like it One Bit.

Pompton Lake, Oct. 11.—Rumors prevail that the Third Regiment will remain in the service until next year, over which great joy is expressed by the officers. It is believed that the regiment will be ordered within a day or two to Athens, Ga., or South Carolina, where it will be sent to Cuba.

The enlisted men, however, do not altogether like the idea of going to Cuba to do police duty, in which they see but little honor and no glory. They say they enlisted to fight, not to act as policemen.

It may be, however, that the Third and Fourth Regiments will be kept in New Jersey until after election, as the republican managers do not fancy the idea of losing the "soldier" vote, which they confidently count upon and which influence they have worked for several months for all it is worth. The hospital corps, application for which were received a month ago, is now complete. Clarence E. Powell, of Company L, was selected Oct. 11 as the last man.

A Surprise Party.

A surprise party was given to Miss Nettie Bauersachs, of Grandview avenue, Friday evening, in honor of her fifteenth birthday. The evening was pleasantly spent with games and music. An out-of-town couple was visiting her. The others present were the Misses Lucetta Clark, Florence McDonald, Minnie Nitchwitz, Mabel Stevens, Katie Bodine, Belle Williams, Ada VanHorn, Estella Brooks, Ida Gieder, and Fred Martin, Joseph Farlee, Arthur Jeffrey, Ray Stevens, Walter Hamilton, Harry Woodland, Will McCullough, Charles Windham, Robert Hand and Albert Utzinger.

Mr. Marsh's Legal Victory.

Craig A. Marsh has long been recognized as one of the ablest lawyers in the State, and the public have come to expect him to win cases which he undertakes, but the Endicott divorce case has, perhaps, more than any other, put his powers to a supreme test and gained for him a reputation beyond the State lines.

CARRIED OUT GRIM THREAT OF SUICIDE.

While Intoxicated Michael Ettinger Shot Himsel.

WOUND PROBABLY MORTAL.

DEED COMMITTED ON FRONT PORCH OF MICHAEL COYNE'S HOUSE.

Ettinger Had Been Drinking Heavily and Was Despondent—Had Also Threatened to Kill Michael Kane, With Whom he Had Had Trouble—Now in Muhlenberg Hospital—Second Attempt at Suicide.

While intoxicated Monday Michael Ettinger, a laborer, of 413 Cottage place, shot himself with the intention of committing suicide. The ball entered the head through the right ear, and whether Ettinger will be successful or not in his attempt remains to be seen. The hospital authorities think the wound will prove fatal.

Ettinger is a widower, and about 55 years old. No good reason can be assigned for the deed, except that Ettenger was under the influence of liquor, and not in his right mind. He has had considerable trouble recently over a couple of law suits, and this doubtless preyed upon his mind and made him despondent.

All day Sunday, it is said, Ettinger was at one of the hotels in Scotch Plains intoxicated. Several times he referred to the uselessness of living and remarked that he was going to shoot himself. Those who heard him supposed it was only the mumblings of a disordered brain and gave Ettinger no more attention. As it was afterwards shown the man did mean what he said, but evidently couldn't get up courage enough to do the act that day.

He was down town Monday morning and talked again about committing suicide. John Goff, in whose saloon he was, told him to go home and go to bed. Ettinger carried a pistol with him all day Sunday and had it in his pocket Monday.

Monday night about 11:30 p. m., after Michael J. Coyne, of East Third street, had gone to bed, he was awakened by his wife, who said she had heard a pistol shot, and said she thought that Ettinger had followed up his threat, and shot himself.

Coyne did not want to go down stairs, so opening the window he shouted for the police. Patrolman Saffron had heard the shot from his beat on Front street and was on his way to the house when Sergeant Coyne call. Roundsman Frederickson came up too, and when they met they found Ettinger lying on the front piazza of Coyne's house with a thirty-two calibre revolver in his right hand and the blood streaming from a wound in the right ear.

Coyne hurried over to the freight-house and telephoned for Sergeant Kiely and the ambulance, and the man was then removed to the hospital.

No one knows how long Ettinger had been on the piazza, or why he chose Coyne's yard as the place to do the deed. When the officers found him he was conscious. He lay on his back and had placed the muzzle of the revolver close to his right ear before pulling the trigger. It was his intention to make a sure job of it, for when the police found him he was trying to get his arm up into position to shoot again, and when the revolver was taken away from him he cried out in anger that he wanted to shoot again.

Dr. Endicott attended to the man's injuries at the hospital. The ball is embedded somewhere inside the skull, where it is hard to get at.

Ettenger and Coyne were sued as executors of Mrs. Ettinger's estate by Charles Kane, of Philadelphia, last summer, for $100 which Kane claimed he loaned to Mrs. Ettinger. Judgment was rendered against the defendants. Coyne is Ettinger's brother-in-law. Another cause of worry to Ettinger was Alexander Kane, who lives in the house with him. Kane says that Sunday he threatened to shoot him. Officer Mattox, who is on that beat, kept a close watch on the man all through the night.

About four years ago Ettinger took some rough on rats, but didn't get enough to cause death.

Plain Mike's Remarks.

Plain Mike O'Reilly, a converted Bowery saloon-keeper, spoke Sunday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. meeting before a large number of people, who listened to his earnest words of warning to the unsaved and his gentle Christ-like invitation to accept Christ and be kept from further sinning. He is a very plain spoke, uneducated man and has engagements ahead to speak every Sunday from now until the last of March, next year.

A Convention Report.

At the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church held last Saturday afternoon, Miss Ida Spicer made her report of the recent State Christian Endeavor convention held at Asbury Park.

SALOON ELEMENT MAY OPPOSE HIM.

Elizabeth Politicians Fear Ackerman Will Weaken Ticket.

JUDGE CROSS MORE LIBERAL

MR. ACKERMAN VOTED AGAINST LICENSES WHEN IN COUNCIL.

This Action, the Friends of Judge Cross Claim, Will Make Him Unpopular in Certain Sections of Elizabeth — Plainfielders Are Persistent, However, and Want Him on Ticket.

There is yet two weeks before the Republican convention and there is no telling just what may arise in that time. At present, however, an active campaign is going forward to secure the Republican nomination for State Senator for Ernest R Ackerman, of this city. Unless some dark horse makes a sudden appearance, the race for the G O P nomination seems to lie between that worthy Plainfielder and Judge Cross, of Elizabeth.

Down at the county seat it is given out that Judge Cross is meeting with but little opposition Nevertheless, the Elizabeth leaders realize that Mr. Ackerman has a strong backing. Elizabeth has, or will have, about her share and Plainfield is entitled to her share in the division of the spoils.

Just at present considerable pressure is being brought to bear on the friends of Mr. Ackerman to withdraw him and allow Judge Cross to run. Of course it is the friends of the Judge who are doing it but they have what they consider a strong argument. It looks as if the coming election was going to be decidedly close and the politicians are very anxious to do everything to win votes. Mr. Ackerman has the reputation of being a temperance man and being directly opposed to liquor licenses in this city at least. This, some of the Elizabeth politicians claim, will injure his candidacy in that section.

It is well-known that in certain parts of the county seat, the brewers and liquor dealers play a prominent part. Judge Cross has made no determined stand on the subject and these politicians argue that it would be better to put up the Judge rather than antagonize the elements already mentioned by putting up a man who was outspoken against them. It has been hinted that for this same reason, Mr. Ackerman would not make such a good run in his own city as some other man.

Despite these arguments, however, the friends of Mr. Ackerman are as determined as ever to put him on the Republican county ticket if it lays in their power. They think that Plainfield is entitled to the nomination and that she will receive the support of the rest of the county outside of Elizabeth and perhaps a part of her delegation. Mayor Fisk was considered as a candidate early in the race, but he has positively stated that he does not want to go to the Senate any further, that he is not going. There seems to be no other Plainfield candidate in the field and Mr. Ackerman has the strongest backing among the local G. O. P. workers that could be wished.

John H. Worth, of 87 Grove street, is quite ill.

HE CAME TO WOO; HE WENT TO JAIL.

She Tried to Save Him But She Failed.

FOUGHT IN THE STREETS.

HER LANDLORD CAME AND TRIZD TO END THEIR LITTLE GAME.

Her Eye Was Black, Her Dress Was Torn—The Police Came and They Were Borne to the Lockup to Spend the Night—It Proved Quite an Expensive Fight For the Sentence Was Not Very Light.

He was a well dressed colored man and he came up before City Judge DeMeza last Tuesday looking spick and span despite the fact that he had spent the night amid the creeping and the crawling things in a cell. He only had one arm, the other was broken in a fall from a horse on a southern race track and so had to be amputated He was once a jockey but lately has been earning his living by selling newspapers and blacking shoes in the great metropolis.

She was not a very prepossessing character. Her right eye was black, her dress was torn and there was a disordered air to her that did not suit the fastidious eye of the Court.

The couple lined up before the rail and the Judge began to interrogate them. She was Miss Ella Williams, from Newark. Had been in the reformatory once, she remembered. He was Walter Fields, late of Baltimore, and more recently of New York. They had been lovers once.

Monday Fields came out to see his dusky queen who was boarding at Tom Smith's house on East Fourth street. Mrs. Smith wouldn't take Fields in and then the lovers betook themselves to the sidewalk. There they came to high words and were in the midst of a fiery encounter when Tom Smith appeared. He told the Judge that Fields' solitary fist was going like a trip-hammer. He requested Fields to let up for a little while and Fields promised to settle him as soon as he finished with the girl. Then Mrs. Smith yelled "police" and "fire" and ran for an officer.

Patrolman Mattox came in a hack and Sergeant Kiely on a wheel. Fields and his dusky queen were arrested and locked up.

Last Tuesday she tried to shield him but their cries last night had attracted all the neighbors who testified as to the combat. The Judge gave the dusky Ella thirty days in jail and sent her beau up for sixty days besides fining him $50. Tears rolled down his dusky cheeks when he heard the sentence.

Alleges Extreme Cruelty.

Harry C. Runyon, as a Special Master, took testimony Monday in the divorce case of Caroline Clipper against her husband, Herman. The woman is Justice William Newcorn's client, and sues for a divorce on the grounds of extreme cruelty. The plaintiff has established her residence in North Dakota, and has applied for her divorce there, as the law in New Jersey does not grant an absolute divorce on those grounds. Both parties formerly lived in New York.

SCENE IN A PORTUGAL WINERY,

In the mountains, at the Quinto do Sexio, Portugal, a famous Port Wine district where the custom of treading the grapes for Port Wine is still in vogue. From ten to a dozen men or women for each gang in turn continue the treading, day and night, during the four or five weeks vintage. Some of the treading vats are large enough for three separate rows of ten men each, who with their white breeches well tucked up, their arms on each other's shoulders, raise and tread their feet alternately, with song and shouts to keep the lazier ones up to the work, and a band with string instruments enlivens the hours.

Speer, of New Jersey, Uses Rollers instead of Feet.

It is from this district the vines were imported over forty years ago that now fill the vineyards of the Speer Wine Co., at Passaic.

At Passaic the same kind of grapes are crushed between large rollers of rubber, revolved by steam. This is the only place in this country where the real genuine Port Wine is made from the Oporto grape—and they are grown right in SPEER'S VINEYARDS.

These vineyards extend over 1/3 of a mile along one of the Main avenues of Passaic, and comprise fifty six acres. The soil being rich in iron makes the wine most valuable for Medical use.

SPEER'S WINES

Are well known to be of the highest character, the oldest and most refined Wines in America, equal if not superior to any wines in the world. They consist of Port, Sherry, Burgundy, Claret, Sauterne Wines, and ★★★ Climax Brandy. Mr. Speer has some Wine in his cellars that he made over thirty eight years ago. All of Speer's Wines and Brandy are very old, rich, well rounded, soft and delicate. Every family should have a bottle or two of each variety of Speer's Wines and Brandy always in the home, for sickness or family use.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked:

"Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constantly increasing, due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them especially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any cases of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning the particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. If it is worth a dollar." At the time of this interview there were two dozen or more of them in the house, and I was told by the lady that they had been a saving of $3 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them per se if it was worth a dollar." At the time of this interview there were two dozen or more of them in the house, and I was told by the lady that they had been a saving of $3 a call. objected to their mother giving a testimonial which should publish her name in the newspapers, but to do this the elder lady argued: "There may be other cases just like mine, and I am sure I take a great pleasure in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly afflicted to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXI. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1898. NO. 42.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

MR. SERRELL WRITES OF COUNTY TROLLEY.

Holds It Up as a Monstrous Expense to Taxpayers.

KEAN HAS A GOOD BARGAIN.

DOESN'T MENTION THE PLAINFIELD STREET RAILWAY'S CHANCES.

He Wonders How It is That the Newspapers Have Been Hypnotized—Tries to Make a Comparison That Will Make Taxpayers Believe That They Are to Be Taxed to Death.

As the newspapers of Union county seem to be hypnotized by the size of John Kean's so-called munificent offer of $250,000 for a trolley franchise between Elizabeth and Plainfield, that they seem incapable of analyzing the same, and as the tax payers of Union county are likely to be led into error in judging of the merits of this offer through lack of knowledge upon the subject, it seems incumbent upon me at this time to advise them what it means.

Mr. Kean's offer of $250,000 is for about 12 miles of road between Elizabeth and Plainfield, and to bring this matter home let us suppose that Mr. Kean applied the county act to Park avenue and that he would like to secure a franchise through Park avenue from Front street to the city line, this distance is about 1-10 the distance covered by his offer from Elizabeth to Plainfield, and he should offer the city of Plainfield $25,000 (a proportionate sum) in cash for a franchise upon Park avenue, upon the following terms and conditions.

The city shall widen Park avenue to a width of 100 feet. Shall at their own expense acquire all the land needed for this purpose, move all the buildings back, and pay all damages occasioned by this work. Shall leave the macadamized drive where it is; shall build a dirt driveway, or bridle path, a cycle path, curb the street and build in the centre a graded right of way through which the railway company can lay its tracks. When the city has accomplished all of the above mentioned specifications we turn the road over to Mr. Kean completed from one end to the other, he will pay the city the sum of $25,000 upon the condition that the railway company shall thereafter be exempt from paying anything to the city for the use of the street. If the city fails to carry out this work complete from end to end then the railway company does not have to pay the city anything for the work it has done, unless it is so elect. Mr. Kean offer to the county is not different from this city.

The advantage to the Railway Company in having a graded right of way prepared for them and no paving of any kind to do will be fully $1.50 per lineal foot, which, in Mr. Kean's case, would save fully $100,000 in the cost of construction over a road laid in an ordinary highway.

Mr. Kean can well afford to make the offer he has, as the county cannot collect one cent from him unless they accomplish the entire work. It is not Mr. Kean's money the Freeholders spend, it comes from the pockets of the taxpayers, who must foot all bills until the entire work is completed, when pay all loosee if the Freeholders fail to make good a delivery of any portion of the street so sold, and must pay all costs above $250,000. Mr. Kean has very kindly agreed to pay interest charges for ten years upon the cost of the work above $250,000, showing that he believes it will cost more, but the taxpayers must pay the principal. I do not believe the avenue can be widened for less than $600,000. The necessity of appointing commissioners to condemn land has already become apparent, and when lawyers get their hands into the county pocket there is no telling where the cost will stop.

And I believe that when the taxpayers find that they go down into their own pockets to pay for carrying out the scheme of Mr. Philanthropist Kean, there will be thousands of them join the Protective League, already formed in Cranford and Union townships, to fight the payment of these taxes and to hold the Freeholders personally responsible for all debts so incurred.

Lemuel Wm. Serrell.

Arranging to Entertain.

A special meeting of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., was held last Tuesday to make arrangements for the meeting next Friday evening, when New Brunswick Lodge, K. of P., will be their guests. At the meeting last Tuesday the initiatory team practiced their work and a committee, of which Joseph Blimm is the chairman, was appointed to look after the details of the entertainment.

AN INDUSTRIAL CHANCE

A BIG FIRE ARMS FACTORY WOULD LOCATE HERE.

Proposition to be Made by the Board of Trade by Which 300 Skilled Mechanics Can be Brought to This City

Charles H. Hand, chairman of the manufacturers' committee from the Board of Trade, has received a letter from a well-known firm of brokers and bankers doing business on Wall street, in which they state that they would like to consider propositions from the Board of Trade with an idea of locating a factory in this city.

They manufacture guns and fire arms of all descriptions and are desirious of locating their factory in a city where they can have good shipping facilities. At present their factory is located in one of the eastern states, but they are anxious to make a change.

It now remains with the Board of Trade as to whether this concern can be brought to this city. They employ about three hundred men of a good class. If the Board of Trade would interest themselves sufficiently there is no doubt but what this industry would come here. There will be a meeting of the Board of Trade this evening and this matter will be brought up at that time. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance of the members.

JUDGMENT REOPENED.

Further Legal Complications Over a Suit to Recover Wages.

Five times the case of John E. Naylor against Frederick O. Smith and Andrew R. Steven has been before the court and yet it does not seem to be any nearer settlement now than when first tried, several months ago. The suit is for $40.50 on a lien claim, Naylor is a painter and claims that amount is due him for work.

Naylor is represented by Counsellor W. S. Angleman, while Codington & Swackhamer and Charles J. McNabb are the defendants' counsel. Friday the last act in the legal squabble took place when Judge Magie agreed to open the judgment given some time ago if the defendants would pay the costs which now amount to more than the original claim.

The judge agreed to re-open the judgment if the defendants will file their plea before November 1st, and be ready for trial during the December term.

HER LAST LESSON.

Miss Julia Shinn Will Soon Depart for Foreign Mission Fields.

The regular meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union was held in the Y. M. C. A. building Monday afternoon. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Powlison. Miss Julia Shinn taught the lesson which was on a missionary subject. Miss Shinn told the members of her intended departure to foreign lands about the first of next month, and she said that it would probably be the last time that she would teach the lesson in the union. After the lesson was taught Mrs. Baker led the discussion which was on a subject regarding Sunday-school library books. There was a large attendance at the meeting and great interest was evidenced.

A SERIES OF TEAS.

Church of Redeemer Women Aim to Aid the Building Fund.

The ladies of the social and sales committee of the Guild of the Church of the Redeemer will inaugurate a series of teas, to be held at intervals during the winter in aid of the building fund, as well as to promote social intercourse and a unity of interest in the parish. The first of the series will be given at the rectory, 18 Sycamore avenue, Thursday, October 20th, from 4 to 6 o'clock. Cakes, confectionery, and a few dainty fancy articles will be for sale. Rev. and Mrs. Downey, as well as the ladies of the committee, extend a cordial invitation to all well-wishers of the church.

Dunellen Man Missing.

Dunellen, October 19—Allan Wilson, of this borough, has disappeared and his friends are wondering what has become of him. He was seen going towards Plainfield a week ago Saturday, but since then his whereabouts has remained a secret. Wilson had just been paid about $125 by the School Board for work done around the schoolhouse yards, and when last seen was on his way to Plainfield to cash the check. Foul play is suspected.

A Soldier Nurse Sick.

Mrs. M. H. Lyons, of Orange, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Vanderhoof, of this city, has gone to Jacksonville, Fla., to see her son, Charles Lyons, who is very ill with typhoid fever. Mr. Lyons enlisted as a nurse, and while attending to his duties was taken ill.

BAD BOY'S CLEVER FRAUD

BOUGHT MEAT AND HADIT CHARGED TO WEALTHY PEOPLE.

Young Britton's Mother Gave Him Money to Buy Meat But by Working His Scheme He Was Able to Appropriate it.

A young lad named Britton residing with his parents on East Second street, was arrested yesteaday in Fred Endress' meat market on Front street. It appears that Britton's older brother has been in the habit of going to the market for meat for the house, and the contrived a scheme whereby he was able to appropriate the money for himself. He received money from his mother for the meat, and then told his young brother to go to certain markets and get the meat and tell the proprietor it was for some well-to-do family. By doing this the meat would be charged up to the family named and the boys would keep the money.

Monday last the boys worked their scheme all right on Mr Endress. The youngest brother got the meat and told the butcher it was for Mrs. Paul on Central avenue. The day afterward Mrs. Paul called to settle her bill and found several charges for meat which she had not received. It was then that the scheme was exploded, and a lookout was kept for the boy.

Yesterday the youngster went to Mr. Endress's market for the purpose of playing his trick, and he was caught. The mother of the boy was sent for, and she was able to make things satisfactory with Mr. Endress, but it is not likely that the boys will try the same scheme again.

NOT SUFFICIENT EVIDENCE.

Justice Mosher Could Not Hold Agnes Hall, Charged With Theft.

Justice Mosher did not hold Agnes Hall, the colored girl whom Mrs. Mary Sabert, of East Third street, accused of stealing $6 Sunday, as there was not sufficient evidence to warrant it. The examination was held Tuesday, and then it was shown that Mrs. Sabert had opened her trunk and exhibited the money to her sixteen-year old daughter who soon afterwards disappeared.

The little girl has not been seen since, and the court is inclined to think that she ran away having a good time on the money. Agnes Hall happened to be in the house at the time the money was shown, and Mrs. Sabert's suspicions fell upon her at once.

A HEAVY REGISTRATION.

Results of the First Day's Registration in the City.

There are promises of an unusual interest at the coming State election. One sign was the heavy registration in all the wards Tuesday. It was the first day of the registration and a large number of voters were enrolled. The number in the different districts was as follows: First ward, first district, 493; second district, 212; Second ward, first district, 571; second district, 297; Third ward, first district, 535; second district, 165; Fourth ward, first district, 475; second district, 455; third district, 417.

The Boards of Registry met in the borough Tuesday and there was a very large registry. In the first district 647 names were recorded.

Clothing for Nation's Defenders.

Schepfin & Schultz, the West Front street clothing manufacturers, are finishing their Government contract for 15,000 soldiers' suits, and today Mr. Hard, the Government inspector, is at the factory examining the goods and passing upon them. The firm expect another large order in a short time. The uniforms are for use among the troops in the south and many of them will no doubt be worn by the men who will occupy Cuban soil.

To Confer Grand Lodge Degree.

One week from next Friday there will be a K. of P. district meeting and a meeting of the Grand Lodge officers in the rooms of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., at which time the Grand Lodge Degree will be conferred on several Chancellors. Joseph Blimm is the chairman of the committee having charge of the reception and entertainment.

Location on Thompson Building.

Elston M. French & Co., insurance agents North avenue, carried several policies on the building and stock which was burned out Sunday morning in the Thompson building. On the building they carried $16,000, and out of the $14,000 carried on the Bard Company's stock they held $7,000. In addition to the above they held about $1,000 on other stock.

Six Per Cent. Discount on Taxes.

The reason so many boroughites are now paying their 1898 tax is that Collector George F. Brown is now giving 6 per cent. discount until December 20th. This week Mr. Brown will send out 2,900 tax bills for 1898.

DUAL LEADERSHIP IN SOMERSET G. O. P.

County Convention Divided the Honors Between Leaders.

NOW TO FIGHT DEMOCRATS.

AFTER LIVELY CONVENTION PARTY WILL ALL SUPPORT TICKET.

Details of the Battle Between the Reed and Thompson Factions—Rumors of a Compromise—The Balloting Was Lively, However—VanDoren Made a Good Run—Cooper Opposed for Assembly

(By a Staff Representative.)

Somerville, October 19—The war in the councils of the G. O. P. in Somerset county is over. By the array that he was able to muster, Senator Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, proved his right to be called a leader in county affairs. As the result, Supreme Court Clerk L. A. Thompson was compelled to concede the fact that Reed was no longer a lieutenant but a power of equal importance.

Senator Reed was on the ground early in the day and had something to say to everybody. Encouraging reports were brought in by his workers and it looked like a victory. There was a conference between the two factions. The Thompson faction had to admit that Reed was uncomfortably strong. Exactly what agreement was reached is not known. The rumor went forth, however, that Thompson had agreed to a dual leadership and had conceded the election of Reed's candidate for the nomination for Sheriff.

Senator Reed, in return, was to give up his man for the Assembly and support Thompson's candidate, Edward E. Cooper. Mr. Thompson did not appear until the last moment when he came in all bundled up, suffering from a heavy cold.

At the very start of the convention, it was evident that all the difficulties had not been smoothed over. Lawyer James L. Griggs, of Somerville, assumed the role of speaker for the Thompson faction at the convention, while Former Mayor H. C. Hegeman, Jr., of North Plainfield, took the lead among the friends of the present Senator.

A test of strength came at the choice of the temporary chairman, Mr. Hegeman, of North Plainfield, and Mr. Hope, of Raritan, were the candidates. The North Plainfielder was far better qualified to take the position, but Hope had the support of the Thompson men. The first ballot stood: Reed 24, Thompson 20. Another Thompson delegate came in and Hope was elected on the second ballot.

The two factions met again on the question of nominating the candidates before or after the recess and the Thompsonites won again. The nominations were made before.

After the recess, the convention settled down to business without delay. The reports of the committees were short and the balloting was begun without delay. On re-assembling, the convention had met at Somerset Hall.

Assemblyman VanDoren was well understood to be the choice of Senator Reed for shrevality nomination. Mr. Thompson's wishes in the matter were not so well understood. The rumor that he would support Reed's choice seemed well founded, but when the balloting came, Suydam, of Franklin, had a strong backing. He had been regarded as the Thompson candidate and must have had some support from the direction.

The vote for sheriff by townships was as follows:

	VanDoren.	Surdam.	Grubb.
Bedminster	3	2
Bernards	1	4
Branchburg	4	1
Bridgewater	1	3	1
Franklin	5
Hillsboro		6
Montgomery	4	1
North Plainfield	5

The balloting for Assemblymen by townships was as follows:

FIRST BALLOT.

	Cooper.	McMichael.	Ludlow.
Bedminster	3	1	1
Bernards	3		2
Branchburg	5
Bridgewater	4	1
Franklin	4	1

Hillsboro		5
Montgomery	4	1
North Plainfield	3	3

	25	29

After it was all over, it was evident that Senator Reed had won a partial victory, at least. From the very start

He Was the Choice of the North Plainfield Delegation to Represent Them on County Committee of G. O. P.

(By a Staff Representative.)

Somerville, October 19—One of the chief objects that the victorious faction of North Plainfield sought to obtain was the control of the delegation that was to represent the borough and township at the county convention held here yesterday. While every vote in the convention was needed, they particularly wished for the delegation, as the selection of the county committeeman from North Plainfield lay with the delegates.

It has long been an open secret that the Republicans in that borough who followed the lead of Senator Charles A. Reed have not been in harmony with Surrogate H. N. Spencer. Mr. Spencer has long been the committeeman from North Plainfield. This year his term expires and his friends made an effort looking toward his re-election. The other Republicans, however, opposed him for the office and advanced their candidate, Councilman John G. MacLaughlin, and the battle was fought at the borough primaries last Friday night and resulted in the victory of Senator Reed's party.

Yesterday at the close of the county convention the call was made for the different members of the executive committee from different townships. North Plainfield responded and presented the name of Councilman MacLaughlin as the choice of the delegation. His appointment was regularly confirmed.

"T. K." LEAVES PLAINFIELD.

Mr. Keller Removes to New York to be Nearer His Business.

In the removal of T. H. Keller to New York, Plainfield loses one of its most energetic citizens. The demands of Mr. Keller's business in New York make it necessary for him to be nearer his place of business and consequently today he takes up his residence at 206 West One Hundred and Thirty-third street, New York. "T. K" as he is familiarly known to many in the sporting world, has been closely identified with baseball, football and trap shooting for many years and his removal will be a distinct loss to the people with whom he has been associated in these games. Mr. Keller has sold his East Front street residence to a New Market man.

Everyone Bound to Know It.

Tuesday afternoon after the marriage of Miss Mattie E. Hall, of New street, to George Smith Callard, of New Brunswick, the guests enjoyed themselves immensely. The carriage used by the bride and groom to go to the North Avenue station was attractively decorated, while a large sign "Just Married," occupied a prominent place. At the station the happy couple were showered with rice while waiting for the 2:29 train to take them to Scranton, Pa. The groom is a farmer and owns a large farm between New Brunswick and Stelton.

An Approaching Nuptial Event.

Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Sandberg, of New York, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Sophie Sandberg, to Harry Drier, of this city. The wedding will take place next Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Arlington Hall, Nos. 19, 21, 23 St. Mark's place, New York. A reception will follow. The bride and groom will reside on West Front street, corner of Madison avenue, after a honeymoon.

Two Weeks of Deer Shooting.

Samuel H. Edwards, of LaGrande avenue, left last Tuesday for a two weeks' hunting trip in the Adirondacks. He will go up the Oswegatchie river country with a party of friends and several guides. Mr. Edwards spends his vacation in this way every year, and never fails to return with a good supply of venison.

He Walked Home.

A wheelman turning the corner of Park avenue and East Fourth street yesterday caught his bicycle in the street car tracks and came to grief. He was thrown and when he got up his clothes were mud from head to foot. He walked the rest of the way.

Plenty of Work at New Orange.

Twelve local carpenters are now busily employed at New Orange, a new settlement that has recently sprung up near Cranford. They are employed on the houses that are in the course of erection there.

Telephones All Right Now.

Once more all of the local telephones are in working order and the subscribers are happy. The company deserve credit for the quickness with which they repaired all difficulties.

DIDN'T HEED THE CHILD

LAWYER BIRD SECURED THE PIANO CLAIMED BY ALICE WOOD.

Mr. and Mrs. William Fisher Claimed the Instrument, But While They Were Absent It Was Carted Away.

Sometime ago Alice Wood resided with her sister, Mrs. William Fisher, of West Third street, and included among her personal effects was a piano. When she decided to move away she wanted to take the piano with her, but Mrs. Fisher claimed that she had done so much for her sister that she would not let Alice have the instrument.

In the meantime Alice has been residing on West Third street, about a block from her sister's home. Tuesday she called on Lawyer Bird and to him related her troubles. She asked him if he could secure her piano. He replied that he could, and he immediately secured the services of Wm. Hand, and the two went to the home of the Fishers with a truck.

Mr. Bird went to the door and found that both Mr. Fisher and his wife were out and that no one was home but their little daughter. He asked the girl if there was a piano in the house. She replied that there was, but that her parents had told her not to let anybody touch it.

Mr. Bird did not heed the little girl's words but called Mr. Hand in and they immediately proceeded to remove the piano. The work had to be done quickly for it was not known what minute Mr. and Mrs. Fisher would return. When Mr. and Mrs. Fisher learned what had taken place they became indignant, and they now talk of taking steps to recover the piano.

SURPRISE FOR MISSES PRUDEN.

They Were Led to Think That the Surprise was for Another.

Last Tuesday a few friends of the Misses Edith and Jessie Pruden, of East Second street, gave them a surprise party and the event was one of great pleasure. The guests assembled at the home of the Misses Pruden, and led them to suppose that it was Miss Jessie MacKillop whom they were going to surprise. Instead of that they remained where they assembled and spent an evening playing games and listening to vocal and instrumental music. Miss Mabelle Force favored the guests with instrumental music, which was a feature. At a late hour refreshments were served. Among those present were Miss Jessie MacKillop, Miss Edith Bond, Miss Charlotte Messersmith, Miss Mabelle Force, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hoagland, Miss Evelyn Searing, Miss Lizzie Bittenbender; James Stafford, Frank McDonald, Fred Roes and John Johnson.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION.

East New Jersey Baptist Workers Met at Roselle.

Roselle, Oct. 19—The thirty-first anniversary of the East New Jersey Baptist Sunday-school convention was held in the Baptist church here all day yesterday. At the close of the session a cordial invitation was extended to the convention to meet next year at the Park Avenue Baptist church in Plainfield.

The delegates from the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school in Plainfield were Superintendent Mrs. Alice S. Runyon, secretary, Thomas A. Cuming, T. L. Runyon, Miss Ada Runyon, Miss Adelaide Runyon and Miss Margaret Rand.

Endeavor Echo Meeting.

A local union Christian Endeavor echo meeting will be held in the Seventh-Day Baptist church this evening, at which interesting speakers will make addresses. The hymns used at the State convention will be sung, and it is hoped that Mr. Gilmore, of Newark, will lead.

Suit Against City Postponed.

Owing to the illness of Mrs. Sarah A. Milliken, of Dunellen, her suit against this city for $10,000 damages which was to have come up at this term of court was postponed until the December term. Two witnesses also were out of the State.

Work on New School Building.

Work on the new borough schoolhouse on Mountain avenue is progressing fast. There have been two or three hitches in the work, but now everything seems to be at hand, and nothing will interfere with rapid work.

—Pictures of the North avenue ruins are on sale at the Bard Co.'s store, 133 North avenue.

—The residents of Codington avenue, in the borough, will petition the Council at the November meeting for an electric light to be located at the corner of Codington avenue and Somerset street. The light should be granted.

HEARD HOW THEIR CHURCH WAS STARTED.

Organizer of the Dunellen Methodist Church at Anniversary.

PLEASANT REMINISCENCES.

REV. C. E. LITTLE TELLS WHO SPREAD METHODISM THERE.

The First Sermon was Preached to Gratify a Mr. Biglow Who Wanted to Hear a Methodist Sermon Before He Died—Abner Coriell Lent a Helping Hand and Money was Raised to Build a Church.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, October 19 — The anniversary service of the Methodist church was continued again last night. The reunion with former pastors and friends was taken up. The services was particularly interesting to the old church members, because Rev. C. E. Little, D. D., of Jersey City, who was instrumental in organizing the Methodist society so many years ago, was one of the speakers.

Dr. Little, who is a pleasant gentleman with an interesting address, was the first speaker. In introducing him Rev. Dr. E. S. Jamison said that it is not often that a man who plants a seed is enabled to look upon the full-grown tree. But Dr. Little, who planted the seed of Methodism in New Market thirty-two years ago was permitted to look last night upon the established church which he had planted.

Dr. Little, as he looked over the gathering, could pick out a few people in the congregation whom he used to know. Dr. Little came to Dunellen for his health. When he came here he met a Mr. Biglow, eighty-three years old, who was a strict Methodist, and who expressed a desire to hear a good Methodist sermon again before he died. Dr. Little promised to preach one, but not knowing where to hold the service, Mr. Biglow made arrangements to hold it in the "Academy." It was held Sunday night and the little schoolhouse was packed. Methodistism was something new here.

The next Sunday night Dr. Little preached again, and at that service there was a decided Spiritual feeling, and before long about twenty were converted. Some of them joined the Baptist and Presbyterian churches. One day Abner Coriell, a staunch Presbyterian, said to Dr. Little "Why don't you Methodists build a church?" The answer was that they had no money. But Mr. Coriell offered to help, Presbyterian as he was, and he and Dr. Little drove about the country together, and through Mr. Coriell's efforts enough money was raised to build a church.

Dr. Little referred to various people in his address, (not by name) people who had been converted under his preaching, people who opposed the Methodists, and others who worked hard for the advancement of the church. After the service the members of the congregation stayed for a few words with the old pastor.

Following Dr. Little's remarks Smalley Corriell, of Bound Brook, who was the superintendent of the first Methodist Sunday-school here, was called to the platform by Dr. Jamison, who noticed him in the audience. Mr. Coriell shook hands with Dr. Little, and made a few remarks before taking his seat. Mr. Coriell is superintendent of the Presbyterian church at Bound Brook.

Rev. H. M. Simpson, D. D., of Hackensack, followed Mr. Coriell's remarks. Dr. Simpson was one of the later pastors. His remarks were of an encouraging nature. He spoke highly of the pastor and people who had the courage and faith to establish and organize a church in a new territory.

Rev. S. D. Jones, of Stony Point, entered upon his pastorate here about the time of the panic in 1874. The church was then laboring under difficulties trying to raise money to pay off a debt, $600 of it being interest money. Rev. Mr. Jones related his experience in collecting this money, and the good success he had. The first "penny a day" society ever organized in this locality was established under Mr. Jones, and in various ways money was raised and eventually the church affairs came to be in a good condition again.

Rev. George Angleman, of Junction, was the next speaker. Mr. Angleman's grandfather was a great worker in the church years ago, and so as the elder Mr. Angleman was so well known, the remarks of his grandson were appreciated.

Last night the services closed with a congratulatory meeting which was addressed by the pastors of the churches of New Market and Dunellen. Rev. W. C. O'Donnell and a delegation from Plainfield were present. While the offering was being taken Miss Mabel Jamison sang a solo which was very much enjoyed.

White Nainsook Apron.

Every girl up to the age of eleven or twelve should wear an apron or pinafore. They should be made as dressy as possible and are a very pretty and becoming addition to the costume, being useful either to cover a shabby dress or protect a good one. Muslin, lawn, fine linen or nainsook are suitable materials and fine embroidery or torchon lace the best washing trimmings.

A pretty model of nainsook has the skirt cut in a straight piece, hemmed 2½ inches at the edge, with five tiny tucks above. The bodice is full, the upper part set in a yoke shaped trimming of muslin embroidery, the fullness of nainsook being gathered in the centre back and front.

The sleeves are of nainsook edged with embroidery. The bodice is fastened at the top and waist by worked cotton loops and small linen buttons. A wide band of embroidery finishes the waist.

A Woman's Friendships.

It is a wondrous advantage to a man, in every pursuit or vocation, to secure an adviser in a sensible woman.

In woman there is at once a suitable delicacy of tact and a plain soundness of judgment which are rarely combined to an equal degree in man.

A woman, if she is really your friend, will have a sensitive regard for your character, honor, and repute.

She will seldom counsel you to do a shabby thing, for a woman friend always desires to be proud of you. At the same time, her constitutional timidity makes her more cautious than your male friend. She therefore seldom counsels you to do an imprudent thing. A man's best female friend is a wife of good sense and good heart, whom he loves and who loves him.

But supposing the man to be without such a helpmate, female friendship he must still have, or his intellect will be without a garden, and there will be many an unheeded gap in even the strongest fence. Better and safer, of course, such friendships where disparities of years or circumstances put the ideas of love out of the question. Middle life has rarely this advantage; youth and old age have.

We may say female friendships with those much older and those much younger than ourselves.

Moliere's old housekeeper was a great help to his genius; and Montaigne's philosophy takes both a gentler and loftier character of wisdom from the date in which he finds in Marie de Gourney, an adopted daughter—"certainly beloved by me," he says, "with more than paternal love, and involved in my solicitude and retirement as one of the best parts of my being."

Female friendship is, indeed, to man the bulwark, sweetener, and ornament of his existence. To his mental culture it is invaluable; without it, all his knowledge of books will never give him knowledge of the world.

Doyley With Lace Border.

Dainty doyleys are at all times in demand and novel and pretty designs are always welcome to the artistic needleworker.

A miniature of a dainty dessert doyley is shown in the illustration and is made of a very fine Indian grass lawn bordered with point lace, which is of muslin braid, worked with linen threads, 2½ yards of braid and 2 skeins of thread. This would make a very dainty addition to the table and will undoubtedly prove popular after the long rage embroidered doyleys have had.

The deaf and dumb waggon-maker picked up a hub and spoke. The blind carpenter reached for his plane and saw. The deaf cowboy went out with his dog and herd. The elephant inserted his trunk into a grate and flue.

White Kilt Suit.

White is undoubtedly the children's color and they should be dressed in this spotless fabric as much as possible. For cool days there are many varieties of thin woolen goods, and even the small boy may have his kilt suit of serge or alpatross.

A natty little kilt suit of white flannel for a boy of three, has the plaited skirt made in two breadths, fastening invisibly with buttons and buttonholes on the left of the front box pleat. The skirt is secured to a lined belt which also holds the blouse—a back and two fronts, the broad trimmed box pleat fastening like the skirt. The turned down collar is trimmed with lace and insertion and the belt is of white kid, fastening with a silver buckle.

The Largest Wedding.

On the day that Alexander the Great was married no fewer than 20,262 persons in one ceremony were made husbands and wives. This seems impossible, but the event really took place, as historical records tell us. This monster wedding occurred upon the conquest by Alexander the Great of Persia, which was then ruled over by King Darius.

Alexander married Statira, the daughter of the conquered King, and decreed that 100 of his chief officers should be united to 100 ladies from the noblest Persian and Medean families. In addition to this, he stipulated that 10,000 of his Greek soldiers should marry 10,000 Asiatic women.

When everything was settled a vast pavilion was erected, the pillars of which were 60ft. high. One hundred gorgeous chambers adjoined this for the 100 noble bridegrooms, while for the remaining 10,000 an outer court was inclosed, outside of which tables were spread for the multitude. Each pair had seats, and ranged themselves in a semi-circle round the Royal throne. Of course, the priests could not marry this vast number of couples, so Alexander the Great devised a very simple ceremony. He gave his hand to Statira and kissed her—an example that all the bridegrooms followed.

Thus ended the ceremony, and that vast number were married. Then followed the festival, which lasted five days, the grandeur of which has never been equalled since.

The Separate Waist Question.

The usual yearly, also semi-annual, question again presents itself regarding the adoption of the separate waist for both day and evening gowns. There are invariably changes and rumors of changes about this garment, which for many seasons has proved a saving grace with women of modest means and a dainty inborn taste for dressing well, and no end of satisfaction and comfort to those who delight in varied, easy changes of the toilet. In some respects waists of this sort are an absolute necessity to women of this class, and their name is legion. No doubt the very smartest, most recherche tailor-made and other elegantly finished "dress" gowns have waists matching the skirts, and these will constitute the costumes par excellence for two seasons to come; but there will, let all women be assured, be no wholly complete feminine outfit prepared by any noted dressmaker in this country, or sent out from any celebrated importing house of this city, which does not include among its elegancies, waists for both day and evening wear which do not match any one skirt, but which can be worn with many.

Extra Sleeves.

The substitution of transparent sleeves for those of heavier material, or the supplying sleeves to an evening toilet that one may suddenly wish to render somewhat less dressy for afternoon use, is not uncommon, and certainly economical practice. White satin sleeves, covered with cream or black lace or figured silk net, transform a waist whose sleeves were originally plain black. Supposing color is introduced on the bodice, that same color will supply a foundation for the undersleeves of chiffon net or lace, and now that we cannot count on the permanence of any fashion, it is absurd to purchase many gowns at one time, for, by a little trouble and attention to detail—remembering that trifles make as well as mar matters sartorial—one can always compass that variety which every dainty woman likes to introduce into her attire.

Smart Gray Serge Jacket.

A jacket turned out by a fashionable courturiere, for a dainty blonde, combines both style and originality and is certainly worthy of mention.

This smart little coat is built of serge in a pale gray shade. The back, made tight fitting, and with a short basque, overlaps the front with a stitched seam and two tabs. The fronts are long and loose fitting and roll back with collar and revers of white taffeta, striped at regular intervals with black velvet ribbon. This is worn over a soft silk blouse with a scarf of white mousseline de soie about the neck, tieing in a four in hand in front.

Puncture Yarns.

The manager of a comparatively small but very comfortable and celebrated seaside hotel averred the other day to the writer that in his opinion bicycle-tyre "puncture" yarns have quite superseded angling stories as an exercise for vivid smoking-room imaginations.

"Guests here often go on till two and three o'clock in the morning telling bicycle stories, and how they have miraculously mended impossible punctures miles away from anywhere. One begins about how many miles he travelled on a stony road after using a bit of postage-stamp edging; then another extols, with a yarn, the virtues of court-plaster; and after that a third tells how he won a race with a tyre that he had mended with a gelatine jujube. Someone else effected his purpose—all details given—with a bit of chewing gum that his little girl was using; then a quiet man speaks up as to his having discovered the virtues of Hungarian pomade for waxing his moustache, which he happened to have in his pocket.

"By this time their blood is up, and an elderly man tells how, having to travel on as a matter of life or death, he tore a bit of skin from his arm; then another man happened to be passing a cherry orchard, mending a puncture with the gum from the trees; but he is transcended by a gentleman who passed a hive of bees and mended up with beeswax. I once heard a man tell, just before the meeting broke up, about having a rent in his tyre, but the latter the next second picked up a three-penny-piece edgeways that filled up the hole for hours."

Up-to-Date Medicines.

Persons addicted to medicines must appreciate the advance in the preparation of drugs. In the old-fashioned way, prescriptions were pounded up in a mortar, and the mixture divided into the portions designated; but this by no means insured that the safe proportion of some powerful drug was in each pill or powder. Nowadays, however, so accurately is the process managed that a tablet of morphine, for example, contains to the fraction of a grain just what is stated of it. The condensation of disagreeable liquid concoctions into tablets or capsules that can be instantly swallowed is another interesting story. Castor oil has been reduced to its lowest terms of disagreeableness, and is no longer the bete noire of the sick person. These merely by way of the illustration of what modern pharmaceutic skill has accomplished.

The Complexion.

The complexion depends largely upon the general health, and systematic exercise, with good, nourishing food, will do wonders toward giving a bright, healthful hue to the skin. The daily bath is also one of the best skin medicines. If the skin has no tendency to greasiness a little cold cream or other emollient rubbed well into the skin, after the bath, will destroy the tendency to wrinkles or roughness.

Fancifully shaped yoke backs are seen upon some of the newest shirtwaists.

BRIDAL AND BRIDESMAIDS' GOWNS.

The Attendants Dressed in Pairs, Each Couple in a Different Color.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun.)

Materials for bridal toilets, bridesmaids' gowns, and wedding reception costumes were never before so rich and varied as they are to-day. Ivory satin duchesse is still the favorite material for bridal gowns, though a rich, heavy, white gros grain silk, such as our grandmothers took their marriage vows in, is bidding for favor. White satin is exceedingly unbecoming to a plain woman and not at all suited to a very young bride unless draped with lace chiffon or tulle. Gros de Londres is an old weave returned under a new name and is being utilized to some extent, and so are heavy corded silks in rep and bayadere effect.

Bridesmaids' dresses change so constantly in fashion that it can rarely be said that any one style is the thing. Usually bridesmaids' gowns depend upon the individual taste of the bride, who decides this question. Just now it is the proper thing to have the bridesmaids dressed in pairs, each couple being in a different color. Gros grain silk, which is softer and wears better than taffeta, has to a large extent superseded this material, and of course the delicate shades are the ones usually selected. At noon and afternoon weddings, the attendants do not wear decollete gowns, though they not infrequently appear in transparent yoke and sleeves. Big picture hats or poke bonnets covered with feathers or flowers or short veils of tulle or lace are worn as a headdress.

Black silk gowns will be more worn than they have been since the time when the black silk gown was considered the swellest of all. This calls for a return of jet, which promises to be also much used on gowns other than black silk. As a matter of fact trimmings for evening gowns and other elaborate toilets are a match for fashionable materials when it comes to magnificence. Garnitures, in blouse effects, handsomely spangled or embroidered with dazzling jewels are employed on both day and evening gowns, and the bands of trimming to match are so exquisitely wrought that they cost almost as much as if worked with precious stones.

Tailor-made gowns will be rendered less severe by means of braid and cloth applique trimmings and some very handsome garnitures made entirely of mohair or silk braid are assigned to cover stripes of cloth, silk or velvet. Black chenille, with jet, or with black or colored spangles, is quite effective on dressy black gowns of a wool and silk mixture, and perhaps no color is more generally introduced into trimmings of all sorts for gowns of every style than national blue, which, strange to say, in most cases has a decidedly purple cast about it.

A Mother's Mistake.

A mother makes the most grave mistake when she speaks of the faults of one of her children to another. It is disloyalty in the first place, and in the second, the child to whom the complaint is made must naturally think that in her absence her own faults are complained of to the others. Children resent treatment of this kind, and it helps to shake the trust and confidence they have in their mother, and at the same time damages their own self-respect.

Another mistake is often made in allowing the children to tell her tales of each other. It is a most contemptible habit to allow a child to get into, and immediate steps should be taken to check the little mischief-maker.

The surest way to do this is to punish the tale-bearer every time he carries tales of another's wrong-doing, explaining to the child at the time why you punish him. Mothers often create this fault themselves by asking the children questions as to each other's doings. It should never be done, it is not fair, either to the one who tells or the one of whom the tale is told, and is the most sure way to destroy a child's sense of honour.

Publicly rebuking a child is another great mistake. When he is doing wrong he may be checked in public, but the wise mother will reserve the scolding and threat of punishment till she gets the little sinner in private. There he will listen to her, and ponder over what she says; but rebuked in the presence of others he is apt to be defiant and harden his little heart. It is by little mistakes of this kind that mothers lose the love and respect of their children.

Lace Over Blouse.

An over blouse is a useful article to be worn over a bodice of silk or light material which has become slightly soiled. All trimming must be removed from the old bodice and it should be cleaned and pressed to look as fresh as possible.

The lace bodice is made without lining, and may be fastened up the back or on the left shoulder and under the arm. A little fullness is allowed in the center of the back at the waist and in the front it is fulled at neck and waist. The collar is a band of silk, covered with lace, with frills at the sides, and the epaulets are of lace, three and a half inches wide on the shoulder, gradually growing narrow at each end.

To Prevent Cakes Sticking.

Take up a small quantity at a time of good lard, or butter, with a piece of kitchen paper, and rub a cake tin (which has been warmed) very evenly with it, then lightly dust it with sufficient flour to form a coating over the butter. Turn the tin up and knock it against the pastry-board to get rid of the superfluous flour, and then pour in the cake mixture. If a rich cake is to be baked, the tin should be lined with buttered paper. Turn the tin up, place a sheet of white paper over it and crease it so as to get the size of the bottom, cut this out, and then cut a paper band for the sides of the tin, letting it come an inch or two higher than the top. Warm the tin and grease it, and then grease the paper and fit it neatly into the tin so that it is entirely covered.

See to the Straps.

Mothers should be careful to see to the straps when sending the baby out in his perambulator or mail-cart in charge of the nurse. If the little one is too young to sit up properly, the joltings and joggings will probably cause him to slip down from the seat, and get into a most uncomfortable and cramped position, because the strap is too loose. When the mother goes out with her baby herself she is quick to notice anything which goes wrong, but the eye of the nurse is not so watchful, and under the coverlet the baby's limbs may be rolling about in a cruel fashion, which a little tightening of the strap would remedy.

Queer Tastes.

Occasionally in a French recipe the addition of a few drops of cologne-water is given as one of the ingredients. Among other flavors that seem odd to the American cook is that used in the for Must—camphor in infinitesimal quantities. In Afghanistan saffron is the most popular seasoning, and in all hot countries ginger is freely used. A few drops of Jamaica ginger added to a glass of ice water make it a much safer drink in hot weather. The spices, in which list ginger takes high rank, are antiseptic, and for that reason a joint of spiced meat served occasionally in the summer is a valuable variety in the diet.

Scientists assert that the fly can make 600 strokes a second with its wings, but it prefers to loaf around on the bald man's head and tickle him.

Soft, White Hands.

There are some hands which are so sensitive to outside influences that they flush almost like the face, becoming moist with fear or excitement, and causing their owners much inconvenience and discomfort. For hands of this description make a wash as follows: A teaspoonful of borax, a teaspoonful of glycerine, and a teaspoonful of eau-de-Cologne. Mix these ingredients thoroughly together, and put into a little china pot with a lid. Anoint the hands with the wash after performing the last ablutions of the evening, and allow it, as far as possible, to dry on. It will render the flesh firm, and prevent it cracking or flushing.

For clammy, moist hands, rub lemon juice, eau-de-Cologne, or any spirit thoroughly into them, both inside and outside, after washing, and use oatmeal instead of soap occasionally. Vinegar is also a useful astringment in such a case.

When gloves are used for sleeping in, it is better to slit down the centre of the palm, or even cut it away entirely. These remedies will be found equally good for the complexion as for the hands or the body generally.

When the hands have been very badly stained wash them first in hot water, then rub the stains with lemon juice and salt, and apply the pumice stone. If the stains be very deep, and refuse to move after several washings, go to your chemist and ask him to make you up a lotion or wash, with oil of vitriol in its composition. This should only be done as a last resource.

A slow circulation is a great enemy to a white hand during the cold weather. For this reason it is good to rub the hands and arms gently, especially after washing, and under-vests of wool with long sleeves should be worn.

However white a hand may be, its appearance is utterly spoiled if the nails do not receive proper attention. They should be cut neatly with the knife, and rubbed back with the towel, and cleaned every time the hands are washed. If the scarf-skin be pushed gently down hangnails will not put in an appearance, but if they do, on no account bite or pull them off: a sharp pair of scissors must be used for the purpose. The tips of the fingers should be pressed between the thumb and finger upwards to give them a good shape.

Biting the nails will spoil them without a doubt, as well as witner the tips of the fingers. Cut the nails at regular periods; they should never be too short or too long, and do not clean them with a sharp instrument. Very short nails cause the tips of the fingers to spread and look clumsy; it is difficult to keep them clean, they are unsightly, and often sore. A mere rim beyond the flesh is sufficient, which should be cleaned with an ivory instrument.

Dainty Fan Bags.

The mounts of fans are so easily broken that it affords a great protection to carry them to and from a place of entertainment in a bag. The pretty model portrayed may be made in any length desired. The foundation of pale pink satin is lined throughout with sea green silk and the whole is edged around with a satin frill and is finished with a double ruche of ribbon and a bow at the bottom of the bag.

The arabesque design running the length of the bag, is worked at the edges with buttonhole-stitch with two strands of floselle. The top design is filled in with beads; the next is filled in with cross-stitches, with one bead in the centre; the third is filled in with a lattice pattern worked with silk, fastened down at each corner with a cross-stitch. The flowers and foliage are worked with china ribbon, and the stalks with cording-stitch in silk.

An Austrian professor estimates that only 900 persons out of 1,000,000 die from old age, while 1,200 succumb to gout, 18,400 to measles, 2,700 to apoplexy, 7,000 to erysipelas, 17,500 to consumption, 48,000 to scarlet fever, 35,000 to whooping-cough, 30,000 to typhoid and typhus, and 7,000 to rheumatism. These averages, of course, vary according to the locality. Small-pox does not even get a place in the list. Was this Austrian professor an anti-vaccinator?

A RAGE FOR VELVET.

All Sorts of Costumes Made From It. Velutina Also Worn.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun.)

Velvet is to be much used this winter. The present styles demand the employment of this rich fabric, and both plain and fancy velvets are far finer than ever before and more artistic in design and coloring.

For several seasons two-toned or changeable velvet has been fashionable for gowns, but it is no longer considered good style except in a few very light shades, such as apricot, where a blending of two colors is necessary to get the desired opalescent effect.

As to color, browns, blues, purples and greens promise to be the vogue.

The always popular greens shade from emerald to hunter's green, and from hunter's to myrtle. Gowns of plain velvet show trimmings of magnificent passementerie or lace; oftentimes, strange to say, coarse cotton lace embellishes the richest silk velvet.

Not every woman can afford a gown of silk velvet or even one of half silk, but much need not despair. Velveteens are to be made into smart frocks, and they are of such excellent quality that only experts can distinguish them from the real thing if they are well cut, well made and fitted. By the way, this material is known as velu-tina this season and is brought out in all the new shades.

By far the handsomest of all the velvet novelties is a material known as antique or satin soleil degrade. This comes in nine different shades, such as petunia, mordore, sea green, cornflower or blue, Capucine, gray and Russian blue, and the tints in each piece run from very dark to light. The fabric is used in millinery as well as for bodices and trimmings, and is quite expensive enough not to become common.

Most of the new skirts are being made so tight in the upper part that it will be almost impossible to wear petticoats. A skirt buttoned down the back in the prevailing mode certainly has one decided advantage—it obviates any possibility of the open placket hole. A skirt slightly raised on the left side has also made its appearance, and the outlook for its popularity is good.

FINDLAY S. DOUGLAS.

He Is the Amateur Golf Champion of the United States.

Findlay S. Douglas, the Scot, who gained the right to be called amateur golf champion of the United States by his defeat of Walter B. Smith, the young Onwentsia man and Yale champion, learned his golf in the ancient old town of St. Andrews, where he was born twenty-two years ago. Thus having every advantage to become an expert, he improved his opportunities so as to become scratch man at St. Andrews and also at other clubs. While a student in the university in his native town, he was for two years captain of the golf team. Shortly before his departure for America in the spring of 1897 he won the St. Andrews medal, with seventy-eight strokes. Coming to this country he soon became established at the Fairfield County Golf Club, Greenwich, Conn., as scratch man, and his fame grew so rapidly that he was regarded as the east's most promising candidate for championship honors in the fall of 1897. But after qualifying third among the sixteen and reaching the semi-finals, he was disposed of by Whigham, six up, five to play. Later Douglas defeated Whigham in the Lakewood tournament. Douglas has an easy, graceful style, is a very good uphill player, and has a remarkable amount of nerve. He plays long iron shots especially well. His good work at Morristown, qualifying fourth at 158, and disposing of young Curtis, A. H. Smith of Huntington Valley, Stillman, Travis, and lastly, Smith, besides his remarkably good score play eliminated Whigham as a likely winner. His card of seventy-six, made in his match with Stillman, is evidence of his perfect play, and the card is one that is likely to stand for some time. The best previous record was seventy-nine, made by the professional, Willie Anderson, of Baltusrol.

DEVIL AN EARTHLY LANDLORD.

Spot in Finland Handed and Willed to His Satanic Majesty.

There is only one spot on the earth's surface that has actually been willed, deeded, and bequeathed to his Satanic majesty. This spot lies four miles and a half south of Helsingfors, Finland.

A few years ago Lara Huilariense died in the little town of Pielisjarvi, in the above named country, leaving considerable property in the shape of landed estate. How he had come into possession of so much land no one seemed to know, but as he was a very bad citizen it was generally admitted that he was in league with Wintainen (Satan), and that they had many business deals with each other.

This somewhat startling opinion was verified when on Huilariene was found a certified warranty deed, giving to Satan all his earthly possessions.

The will was to the same effect. The family have repeatedly tried to break the will, but so far have been unsuccessful. Thus the records plainly show that his sulphuric majesty has a legal right and title to some excellent grounds in the near vicinity of Helsingfors.

The simple people of the neighborhood have changed the course of the road which formerly skirted the Huilariene homestead, and declare that they would not enter the possessions of Satan & Co. for all the money that the three estates would bring.—Pearson's Journal.

A Polite Young Barberian.

Somebody over near Dupont Circle owns a small boy who is unmistakably destined for greatness. He was playing in the circle the other day, and a sale of a girl, presumably his sister, was annoying him mightily. Finally she tried him too far and he gave her a push that sent her head long to the pavement. Her screams attracted the attention of everybody except her nurse, who was gossiping with another nurse some distance away. The usual woman who reproves other people's children was on hand, however.

"Oh, little boy," said she, "what made you strike your little sister? Don't you know it's very, very wrong to do so?"

The boy went on with the hop-scotch diagram he was drawing.

"Oh," he remarked, unconcernedly, "that's all right. I'll feel sorry by and by, and then I'll ask her pardon like a little gentleman. That'll fix it."—Washington Post.

The First People's Telephones.

It appears that something like the telephone is in use among the Catuquinaru Indians in the valley of the Amazon. Each habitation occupied by the tribe is supplied with a cambaryzu or telegraph, which enables them to communicate with each other. The machine consists of a hollow piece of hard palm wood filled with sand, rubber, pieces of wood and hide, and fixed in a socket of sand, hide, resin, and rubber. This is struck with a piece of wood coated with rubber and hide.

There is one of these instruments hidden in each malocca, and the malocas are about a mile distant one from the other, and all on a direct line north and south. It appears that the instruments are in rapport with each other, and, when struck with a club, the neighboring one to the north and south, if not above a mile distant, respond to or echo the blow. To this an Indian answers by striking the instrument in the malocca with which it is desired to communicate, which blow in turn is echoed by the instrument originally struck. Each malocca has its own series of signals. So enclosed is each instrument in the malocca that, when standing outside and near the building, it is difficult to hear a blow, but, nevertheless, it is heard distinctly in that neighborhood, a mile distant, in the manner indicated. The Tuchau gave me an example of signalling. With a prolonged interval, he struck the instrument twice with the club, which, as I understood, was to indicate attention, or that a conference was desired. This was responded to by the same instrument, as a result of a single blow given by some one on the next apparatus, nearly a mile distant. Then commenced a long conversation, which I could not comprehend.

So, long before we had our telephone connecting house with house, these remote Indians of South America had got what served something of the same purpose!

To Keep Poultry Fresh.

If poultry has to be hung for a day or two in the summer, it is advisable to wash it before putting into the larder in borax and water, and to remove the liver and gizzard; then dry and flour it, and place a little powdered charcoal inside. A fowl which has a "gamey" flavor will be unpalatable, and a careful cook will detect such a defect before cooking the bird. To remove the taint use permanganate of potash and cold water (using sufficient of the former to colour the water a deep pink), pouring it through the bird several times till all trace of the unpleasant odour is removed; if this should not be the case after repeated rinsings the bird is not fit for use.

To keep poultry or any other kind of stock from "turning" in the hot weather, remove the grease as soon as it is cold, and let the stock be boiled up every day; vegetables should not be added until the soup is required.

For the Kitchen.

A porcelain sink is the ambition of every cleanly housekeeper. But it is the wise suggestion of an expert in such matters that until she can provide careful kitchen-girls to work at the sink the housekeeper had better make a choice of a good galvanized iron one. There is less of the jar of the dish-washing. A marble-backed sink becomes before very long an unsightly thing from much spattering of greasy dish-water. For the same reason, namely, the want of care in use, faucets of bronze or brass are better than those of nickel-plate, unless the latter be of very heavy quality.

Dumb Bells for Children.

As soon as a child is able to manage them, he should be given a pair of light dumb-bells and taught how to use them. He should exercise with them night and morning, this will expand the chest and improve the figure. Girls need constantly watching that they carry the body straight and the head erect. A child that is given to loiling about should be encouraged to lie rather than sit, the former position will do much to keep the body straight. But nothing is so good for a child's health and proper development as plenty of exercise in the open air.

A Novel Jacket.

A rather unique costume turned out by a fashionable courturiere combines both style and originality. The material is a gich Cuban red ladies' cloth, trimmed with narrow black braid.

The novelty lies in the jacket, which is made with a bolero effect in the back and tabs reaching below the waist in front. Double revers adorn the top of the jacket, the under one of the ladies' cloth and the other of white satin, caught in place by a large fancy button. The sleeves are close fitting.

Etamine waists in pale colors have the yoke finished with a ruching of etamine, edged on both sides by a narrow ribbon ruffle of the same color. The yoke is finished on either side of the waist by a large rosette composed of narrow ribbon set on in clover pattern. The centre of the rosette is a circle of the same ribbon ruching filled in with lattice checking.

Included in an extensive estate at Muswell-hill, England, to be let for building purposes is a cottage known as "Lalla Rookh," where Thomas Moore, the poet, lived, and wrote at least part of the poem of that name, which was published in 1817.

"Clerk: "I believe you said, sir, that after the first of the month you would raise my salary."

Employer: "You are mistaken. What I said was that after that date you would be worth more to us."

AUSTRALASIAN CORAL REEF.

Twelve Hundred Miles Long, It Is One of the World's Wonders.

That great barrier reef which fringes the coast of Queensland north of Brisbane, in the direction of Torres Straits, must always rank among the wonders of the world. For 1,200 miles the coral animalcula have raised a solid protection against the rage of the ocean swell at a distance varying from twenty to 150 miles from the shore, leaving a comparatively safe and calm inner passage, suitable for navigation by the largest steamers on their voyages north and east. Sundry channels penetrate the reef at intervals, and whole fleets of trading schooners are regularly engaged amid the intricate labyrinth of coral islets.

Those who have seen the skeleton madrepores and branching corals on the shelves of a museum can form no conception of the surpassing beauty of the living organisms, vigorous at or near the surface of the translucent seas. On the ebbing tide we find every description of animated coral growth exposed, from the rounded masses of brain coral to the stag's horn madrepores, those of corymbose form, and a variety too numerous to mention. The brilliant coloration of the myriads of polyps includes every shade, from the more sombre brown of the fungis tribe to delicate lemon yellow, lilac, pink, rich green interspersed with golden hues, apple green stippled with violet, bright red, chocolate, purple and even blue. The various aggregations of minute vivacious animals assess all modifications of radiated incrustance; some have club-headed tentacles, others expand in a feathery fringe, while the number of rays to each organism varies according to the families and genera of coral classification.

These gardens of the sea are too beautiful for words. By subtle transitions the lime-secreting corals pass into the uncovered sea anemones of resplendent kinds, and the reefs swarm with numberless echinoderms, nudibranch molluscs, and parti-colored fishes of most extraordinary shape and size. Everything in th tropical sea assumes a striking brilliancy of color, and the twenty or more kinds or holothuria are not the least interesting among the organisms which abound. As the beche de mer, or trepang, these marine animals constitute esteemed gastronomic dainties in the Celestial marts, the importance of the export trade to the government of Queensland being proved by statistics. Over a hundred vessels are engaged in the industry. The value of the prepared article is quoted from thirty pounds sterling to a hundred and fifty pounds sterling per ton, according to its quality and kind, and good annual returns have exceeded thirty thousand pounds sterling for the beche de mer alone.—London Standard.

OUR TRADE EXPANSION.

Significance of the War as an Aid to Natural Conditions.

The country never was in a better condition for substantial business advancement.

The credit of the Nation is accepted throughout the whole civilized world as second to none of the enlightened and progressive governments; the balance of trade never was so largely in our favor; the gold reserve in the National Treasury is higher to-day than any previous high-water mark; the crops of the year are bountiful; our long depressed industries have very generally been quickened into activity; labor as a rule finds steady employment at fair wages, which are likely to improve, and the necessaries of life have never been as cheap in the markets as they are to-day.

The war has opened up new and permanent demands upon our industries. More than 100,000 men will be drawn from farms and shops and business places of the land to enlarge the army, and fully $500,000,000 have been or will be expended by the Government in prosecuting the war and maintaining the provinces we have conquered, every dollar of which is paid to our own people. We are to-day buying much less than usual from abroad; while we are selling more in foreign markets than at any time in the history of the Government. Indeed, there is not a single feature that goes to make up National wealth and prosperity that this country does not possess to-day in a conspicuous degree.—Philadelphia Times

A stern look came over the face of the hitherto friendly policeman.

"My friend," he said, "I am sorry to disturb you, but I must do my duty. Come with me."

SCHOOL BOOK FACTS.

CHANGES IN HISTORIES AND GEOGRAPHIES CAUSED BY THE WAR.

Printing Presses Working Night and Day Create a Supply That Would Make the Capitol Look Almost Like a Mole Hill In Comparison.

So far, this year has been a busier one among those who write, edit and publish school histories and geographies than since the close of the civil war. For this has been a year of history making and the history has been of the sort that changes maps.

The publishers began to see the probability of a busy summer in midwinter. When the Maine was blown up these probabilities became certainties. That disaster required no change in geographies, however, and, in the circumstances, none was made then in the histories. But the ship's destruction came at the beginning of a regular school year, however, instead of near its close, there would have been a great overhauling. As it was, nothing was done till the breaking out of the war. Then the plates of every one of the United States school histories were revised to suit the facts.

The expense was not excessive in the case of any one history, since it involved as a rule the preparation. type setting and electrotyping of as more than a page or two of "matter," and in some elementary histories only a few lines. But in the aggregate the outlay must have been considerable, for there are more than 100 United States school histories on the market, a single publishing house in New York having 25.

As soon as the beginning of the war had been tacked onto the end of the histories the plates were put on the presses and the printing of the regular summer editions was begun. This is the ordinary custom with school book publishers, who must, of course, be well stocked up with thousands of new books for the beginning of every fall term. But the course of events was hardly expected to run as smoothly as usual this summer, and instead of starting the presses for a straight-away run until near the close of August, it was generally understood that yet another edition might need to be made.

When Santiago fell the presses were stopped, and the plates taken off. The additions and corrections then to be made were considerably more important than the earlier ones. In some cases several pages had to be entirely recast. By being inexpedient to increase the size of the books—this would involve great inconvenience and a disproportionate additional expense in paper, press work, etc.,—there had to be much compression in order to get this matter in and that, of course, set a small army of editors and condensers at work.

They worked rapidly, however, and when a week had rolled round the history presses were grinding again. Thousands of books had been printed and bound in the meantime, however, in which no mention was made of the surrender. For these books the publishers printed single additional sheets per supposition, which were afterward pasted in, thus bringing all the summer's output so far up to date. Owing to the delay that had been experienced, the presses when started again were driven rather harder than ordinary. But the rush of press work did not last long. Spain cried for mercy sooner than the publishers expected, and when that cry came the presses were stopped again and the editors and condensers addressed themselves anew to the task of revision. At the same time new supplements had to be prepared, to take the place of those inserted a few days before which now were destroyed by the thousand.

Some of the publishers got a little nervous while the negotiations that resulted in the protocol were pending, for fear that the war might be so great as to render it impossible to complete the third edition in time for the opening of the schools and some were obliged to continue printing without any revision. In most cases, however, the second edition was all that was necessary until the protocol was signed. Tens of thousands of pupils, therefore, found a complete, though much condensed synopsis of the Spanish war in the body of their histories when they began work this fall, and hundreds of thousands found virtually the same synopsis pasted in at the back. At least one concern furnishes the additional information to all requesting it who own old copies of the United States histories it publishes.

Changes in the geographies seemed necessary when Santiago fell, but they were slight, and related only to the wording of the spelling of ladies. When the protocol was signed and Spain virtually gave up both Cuba and Porto Rico more extensive changes were necessary both in the color blocks and the text, the latter altering somewhat that these islands now belong to the United States.

In the aggregate the geography changes involved more expense than the history changes, for as well as maps having to be revised in all save the most elementary books. Besides there are many more geography text books than histories, a single New York house publishing nearly 100 works in which map changes had to be made.

Map-changing is much less expensive now-a-days, however, than it was in the sixties. Then, although all geographic maps were printed from lithographic stones, they had first to be laboriously engraved on copper. After a map had been engraved a careful "proof" was taken and it was transferred to the stone for printing, the copper plate being kept from which to take new and fresh proofs when the lithograph wore out. When changes were necessary they were always made in the plate, it being impossible to alter a lithograph.

The old combination of engraving and lithographing is still adhered to by most English and European map publishers, but in the United States the "wax process" is now employed almost universally. This process is simple, quick and comparatively inexpensive. A smooth plate of metal is coated evenly with wax, the lines of the map are scratched through the wax, exposing the metal, the lettering is stamped through with steel type and the plate is suspended in a regular electrotyping bath. The result is a "shell" showing lines and lettering in raised relief lines. The shell, "backed up," makes a plate which can be used alongside of type in an ordinary press. When changes are necessary the part to be changed is cut away and a new section of plate is made and soldered in. Unless the changes are too extensive, is is possible to revise a map by this process in a single day, and thus map revision may be introduced in the middle of an edition without any great or annoying delay.

No data are at hand from which to compute the cost of the changes in histories or geographies which have been made necessary by the Spanish war, but it has certainly run up into the thousands, and there is likely to be more history making soon, more changes will probably be necessary before the end of the year. Some notion of the total expense involved may be gained from the statement that the publishers of a well known encyclopedia had to expend $30,000 in the typographical correction made necessary to bring the statements in the work into line with the figures of the census of 1890.

It should be understood, however, that little of the expense of the recent changes in school histories and geographies falls on the purchasers. It has to be borne by the publishers, whose charge for a revised text book is necessarily the same as for one not brought down to date. In some cases old books will probably be discarded for new editions, but the total percentage of geography and history sales from this cause is expected to be only a small percentage of the whole.

Although this year's changes have been and will be more extensive than usual, there is no year that school book publishers are not put to some extra expense of this sort. Big concerns keep a staff of men constantly on the watch for news from all over the world. Whenever an explorer finds a new mountain, lake or river; whenever there is a straightening of a boundary line due to war or diplomacy; whenever some Arctic traveller makes a new "furth est north" mark, the maps and histories are overhauled. Whenever a presidential election is held or a sweeping change is made in the currency laws, or an important treaty is negotiated, the histories have to be revised. The discovery of gold in the Klondike region changed the maps of the Northwest America. The annexation of the Hawaiian Islands made it necessary to insert the line "Belong to the United States" in the maps and to interpolate a few lines in all the histories.

The people of the United States spend about ten cents a year for each man, woman and child in the country on school books. In 1897, then, the outlay was about $7,500,000. In two years enough is said for school books to build a Brooklyn bridge. In one year the outlay would equal the expense of building two battle ships.

CLYDE FITCH'S NEW PLAY.

A Strong Society Drama Interpreted by the Kelsey-Shannon Combination.

The Kelsey-Shannon Company are presenting this season a new society drama by Clyde Fitch, entitled "The Moth and the Flame." The play tells an ingenious story, possessing sharp contrasts of emotion and comedy. It is said to be a striking as well as a delightful combination of the serious as well as lighter sides of American society life, mainly as it is observed in New York. It is a story of deep heart interest, brightened with delicate touches of comedy.

EFFIE SHANNON.

The story of the play deals with a love affair of Marion Wolton, the daughter of a supposedly wealthy New Yorker, and Edward Fletcher. The former is a rather serious young woman, who devotes herself to severe duties in life, even though she is very fond of the gay world of society. The latter is rich and handsome, but certain events in his past have made him the subject of somewhat extensive unpleasant gossip among society people. This very gossip in regard to his past attracts the interest of the young woman, and she defends him against those who accuse him. She does not believe the stories of his past, and thinks, at any rate, that she may reform him. The beautiful moth flutters in the flame. He proposes to her and is accepted on the night of the fancy dress party in her father's home, at which the guests dress in the picturesque costumes of the children in nursery tales, fiction, etc. This episode is said to have been suggested by the famous Beckwith party about a year or so ago, which excited so much comment and which was the forerunner of the numerous costume parties which have since been so much in vogue among New York's four hundred. In the midst of the festivities the father of the heroine, who is supposed a wealthy man, kills himself in his own room to avoid the exposure which is threatened on the morrow for his misuse of large sums of money which have been entrusted to him.

Fletcher proves a friend in need to the family, and a year later leads Marion to the altar. The wedding is interrupted by a woman who accuses Fletcher of having wronged her in the past. The rest of the story is developed on very powerful and original lines, and the interest is splendidly sustained to the very end in a very ingenious manner.

A Matter of Words.

Few men have been shrewder than Disraeli in detecting the subtle, hairbreadth distinctions which are made to pass muster as essential differences in matters of form or ceremony, says the Youth's Companion.

In the days of the public worship regulation act in England Sir William Harcourt was invited to visit Lord Beaconsfield at Hughenden Manor.

On Sunday, states the London News, which prints the story, the young politician accompanied his host to the village church, and on the way thither was warned that some hints of the high-church movement had penetrated even that sylvan fortitude.

"My friend, the vicar," said the lord of the manor, "will take what I call a collection and what he calls an offertory, and afterward what I call a plate and he calls an alms-dish will be placed on what I call a table and he calls an altar."

GUATEMALA'S CROESUS.

Once a Slave, Now Worth Millions. Employs the Son of a Former Owner.

Don Juan Knight is popularly supposed to be the richest man in Guatemala. He is said to be worth $7,500,000. And yet, previous to our civil war, Don Juan Knight was a negro slave, the property of Daniel Upton, who lived in Dadeville, Tallapoosa county, Alabama.

Born in the bondage of slavery, John Knight never knew his father. His parents were separated when he was sold of slaves before he was born. At the close of the war, when the slaves were declared free, he walked to New Orleans. He was twenty years old and hadn't a dollar to his name. Now his annual income is over $400,000.

And more than this, by the strange irony of fate, he has, in the days of his affluence, befriended those who formerly claimed him as a part of their goods and chattels. The son of his former owner is in his employ as superintendent of his mines. Mrs. Upton, his former mistress, is the recipient of his bounty in her declining years. Thus has the negro slave boy totally reversed the order of things.

Daniel Upton, Knight's former master, was a scholarly man, and his wife was a former school teacher. They had half a dozen slaves, all of whom had been treated well. Knight was born in the plantation one spring month in 1845. Mrs. Upton gave the negro child sufficient attention to get him started on childish studies by himself. Later Mr. Upton became interested in little "Black John" and provided him with common school books. The most promising negro in Tallapoosa county.

Mr. Upton died in 1860, and the smart black boy was auctioned off to a new master, who took him to a cotton plantation in Central Alabama. Here he remained until the Confederate army. Young John became the overseer of a part of the plantation. For four years he superintended the gathering of the cotton and its shipments to New Orleans at the best market prices until the close of the war.

Then he walked to New Orleans and worked as a wharf laborer for a firm which handled fruits from Central America. He saved his money. In 1874 he was sent by his employer to Yucatan, in Central America, and live there as boss of the packing and shipping of fruits to New Orleans. That was practically the beginning of John Knight's millions, says the San Francisco Examiner.

A lively, wide awake person was something unique in those days of siestas and tropical sunshine. A revolution in Guatemala, in which Ramon Sanchez had been deposed, was just at its close. Knight saw what hard work and an opportunity to gain the favor of the new administration would do for himself. He proposed that for a concession of some 20,000 acres of land suitable for pineapples and bananas growing, he would go to New Orleans and sell the wholesale fruit dealers, who ruled the American markets thirty years ago, to agree to buy $2,000,000 a year of Guatemalan fruits. The Guatemala government gladly accepted the proposition. In less than three months the deal was consummated at New Orleans. It was the beginning of the trade in millions of dollars annually.

Knight, now a native young woman in Stapa in 1872, and the union has been a great help to his fortunes.

There are seven children in Juan Knight's home, and all have been educated in the United States. Two of the boys are in a military academy in Mississippi now. One daughter is an accomplished portrait painter in Boston. Once a year the father and mother go on a trip to New Orleans, and from there to New York. They were in Europe in 1894.

Where the Marriage Knot Is Tied.

In India, only, of all the countries in the world, is the much-talked-of marriage knot ever actually tied. Among the Brahmins marriage is a matter of purchase. The father of the bridegroom is liable almost till the last moment to be ousted by a higher bidder; but, if no suitor appears willing to give the father a more valuable present, he gives his daughter to the first to offer himself, saying:—

"I have no longer anything to do with you; I give you up to the power of another."

Then the bridegroom laces the tall, the insigns of marriage, around her neck, and secures it with a knot. The tali consists of a piece of ribbon with a gold bead suspended upon it. The knot it is that legally binds the wife to her husband and makes the marriage indissoluble, for Brahmins do not recognise divorce.

Mule Will Kick, But Never Runs Over.

Touching the protest we occasionally hear against the dangerous practice of driving mules through a thoroughfare, it may be well to assure the timorous that there is no possible danger of a mule running over a child. You may set a baby in the middle of Marietta street and drive a thousand mules at a wild gallop through it and not one would hurt the baby. It is well enough to give a mule's heels a wide berth, but no one ever heard of a child or man being run over by one. You could not drive a mule over a child.—Atlanta Commercial.

Everybody Satisfied.

"Dere's always bound to be kickers," exclaimed Meandering Mike. "Did you ever know a time when de people agreed unanimously dat dey had de right man in de right place?"

"On'y once," replied Plodding Pete. "I was bein' put into jail on de occasion."

A Strong Candidate.

The nomination of Col. E. H. Snyder, of East Orange, as the nominee for Congressman in the Eighth district, meets the need of the Democracy for candidates who have strong elements of strength to make the fight against the Republicans.

Col. Snyder has often been honored with official duties in his own city—East Orange—and his accession to office has been accomplished only after campaigns against Republican candidates who have tested well his popularity with the people.

In whatever positions of trust he has been put, Col. Snyder has shown careful attention to all details that would bring results favorable for the people he served. His record in his own home as an active factor in the local government is one which redounds to his credit and in its way mirrors what his record will be if elected to represent the Eighth district in the House of Representatives at Washington.

There is no question but what many of his own party have become disgusted with Congressman Fowler, whose career as a national legislator has been marked throughout by political deals and moves looking to his further personal advancement in a political way than to the true interests of the people, and that Col. Snyder will attract a large number of these dissatisfied Republicans, besides uniting the whole Democratic party in the Eighth to extraordinary efforts for his success on election day.

A Democratic Victory.

The Democratic campaign is being pushed with a vigor and enthusiasm that promises to put Elvin W. Crane in the Gubernatorial chair to succeed whoever happens to be Governor next January, which, under Republican practices, is a great puzzle to determine.

Mr. Crane has developed a vast amount of strength among all classes of people and there is every indication that the Democracy of New Jersey is climbing back to its old place in the hearts of the people. The people have had enough of the G. O. P.

The Republican record is an odious one, the party's candidates for the last three years going into office on platforms promising almost everything in the way of desirable government, but once elected their official acts have been only of a partisan nature. Submission to influences that are oppressive to the people have marked their course all along.

The Democratic party presents a united front, and that is all that is necessary to put New Jersey back into her old position in the Democratic field.

Republican Weakness.

McKinley's whitewashing commission is the best evidence of the weakness of his administration. The deep and smarting wound to the nation lies in the people being compelled to witness its chief executive descend to the flimsy pretexts of investigating itself. The humiliating memory that a President seeks to shield those whom he should punish, and appointed this commission without any authority in order to forestall a Congressional investigation is a burning disgrace and an open shame.

This commission is but a concession wrung from terror and an effort to purchase safety from an outraged nation's wrath.

In The Third.

There is every good reason to believe that Patrick J. Convery, the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Third district, will be elected. The Third, as now formed, is normally Democratic, and if the party vote is but polled in full, as it is certain it will be, Mr. Howell will retire from the House of Representatives next year.

Mr. Convery is a Middlesex man, and he will stir up the Democrats of that county to special efforts. With the rousing majority he will secure in his home county and the usually Democratic majority in Monmouth, he will more than wipe out any Republican majority in Somerset, if there should be any there. Somerset is the only county in the district that the Republicans have even a show in.

G. O. P. Past Glory.

A liberal reward will be paid for the discovery of any political question upon which the Republican leaders are united. The proposition does not include the war, as that is national and not political. It does not include the offices, for that is financial and not political. They have no political unity, and only claim the past glory of Lincoln Republicanism as a pretext for power. Political degeneracy is the true emblem of McHanna Republicanism.

Corporation Financiering.

The people of Newark are now witnessing a bit of financiering that should be taken heed of by the city of Plainfield in treating with the Plainfield Street Railway Company for the further granting of valuable public rights. The situation that confronts Newark, and will some day confront Plainfield in much the same way, is best described in the following editorial words of the Newark Call:

The Newark Gas Company is to be financed again, by the issue of new bonds, and the stock and bonded liabilities of the company will foot up to double the charge. It is said. The process is one which has become familiar to Newarkers, through experience with the trolley railroads. The electric light company, the breweries and several other large money-making corporations. The companies increase their income enormously, and then proceed to issue more bonds and stock, to represent the increase. Sometimes the change is made with a new owner-ship, and sometimes it is made by the old-owners, who desire to realize cash and still hold control. The time when companies never earned a cent but to be watered, seems to have passed utterly. Nor is their solvency reckoned according to the value of the prop rty above debt. What they are expected to do is to earn interest on their bonds enough to pay 4 per cent. interest, and if this or other seems to be guaranteed by the experience of years, their bonds and stocks will sell at par, or above. To the financier of twenty years ago this would seem to be impracticable, sheer nonsense; but as hundreds of companies find thousands of persons willing to invest their money on this basis, the condition knocks the theory into flinders. Newark has seen fortunes by the score made in the trolley, electric light gas, brewery and similar deals, and the end is not yet, according to the views of many.

In dealing with the Plainfield Street Railway Company the condition of affairs as clearly defined by The Call seems to have been lost sight of by the Common Council. However, such a fault is not one for which this particular Council alone is guilty of, but one in which many previous ones have erred, as is now realized in the inestimable rights that have been granted, with scarcely compensation worth mentioning, to the water, gas and electric light companies.

But if the present City Fathers should persist in following out this line of government in the face of the conditions that are now recognized, it would be almost paramount to a crime. The capitalists and promoters back of these great enterprises, depending upon concessions from the people for their very existence, are very wise about future developments, but it must be admitted that the law makers do not exercise such a perspicuity.

Honest Worth of Trolleys.

Elizabeth as well as Plainfield is seeing the light of honest worth in trolley franchises and as a result there is now pending before the Common Council of that city an ordinance which provides that John Kean's new street railroad provides for a three cent fare to be charged between 5 and 7 o'clock in the morning and in the evening. Of course, such a discrimination in fares between the time mentioned is designed for the benefit of poor workingmen.

In Councilman VanHerwerden's proposition now being agitated for the local common Council to inculcate in the pending ordinance granting a trolley franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company, a similar stipulation is also suggested. It is hardly necessary, however, knowing the methods of trolley promoters and capitalists, to mention that neither the John Kean or the Plainfield company will consent—at present—to such an arrangement.

Mr. Murray's Tally Scheme.

There are comparatively few who thoroughly understand the workings of the election machinery and the counting or tallying of the ballots afterward. It is in some business for the election officers to gather about their tally-sheet after the election is over and count the votes one after another. It does seem rather laborous and the public waits impatiently to learn the result of it all and find out the exact standing of the different candidates. Any scheme destined to shorten the work of the election officers and give the public the returns at an earlier hour, is bound to meet with popular favor. Now when it simplifies matters and eliminates many errors in the count, it becomes decidedly desirable. Such is the place held by Assemblyman Roger F. Murray's new plan for the counting of the votes. The difference is in the tally sheet as has already been explained in this paper.

There are very good reasons why the scheme should be generally adopted through the city while no one has yet found anything in it with which to find fault. Any man of ordinary intelligence can grasp the new system in a very few moments and the amount of time and labor that would then be saved would seem to far more than make up for the little time necessary to put the scheme in operation. Assemblyman Murray is very enthusiastic over the plan and is using his best efforts to have it generally adopted. The effort seems a worthy one and should be crowned with success.

Excellent Work of Firemen.

The fire department deserves unlimited praise for its excellent work in coping with the fire that ravaged the Thompson building Sunday morning. Had it not been for the skillful and willing work of the paid members of the fire department, who were quick to arrive on the scene after the alarm had been sounded, it is reasonable to believe that the flames might have spread to the adjoining buildings and wrought damage that would have been a severe blow to the business interests of this city.

No doubt the splendid work performed by the paid members will have the effect of silencing many of the grumblers and chronic kickers against the action of the City Fathers in the maintenance of the fire department at its present efficiency.

With Middlesex and Somerset already at the point of breaking friendly relations with each other as a result of county bridge and road improvements, we can imagine that the legal machinery between the two bailiwicks is now liable of conflict as a result of the point raised as to whether the Bound Brook murder was committed in Middlesex or Somerset counties. As a rule the expense of murder trials are not welcomed as pleasant or economical adjuncts of modern government.

William Fisher, who in years past has been a faithful follower of the Republican organization, rises to exclaim that he is devoted in the same old way to his old political friends. William says that he has no desire, or, at least, no hopes, of becoming a solon in the city legislature. So far as working with some of his race in trying to "do" the Republican party under cover, William says he is not with them.

The Mail and Express Saturday Illustrated Magazine has a very good picture of former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, president of the Market and Fulton National Bank of New York. The picture, in company with other bank officials, illustrates an article on the New York Clearinghouse, Mr. Gilbert being the chairman of the conference committee in that powerful financial association.

The Democrats of Hunterdon county Saturday nominated William S. Closson, of Lambertville, for County Clerk, and Oliver I. Blackwell and George F. Mattson for members of Assembly. The rock-ribbed Democracy of Hunterdon undoubtedly proposes to "get there" this year as of yore.

DROBENY'S FRIENDS HELD FOR MURDER.

Coroner's Jury Lays Blame on One or the Other.

SPENCER TELLS HIS STORY.

BLOW STRUCK IN MIDDLESEX; VICTIM DIES IN SOMERSET.

The Coroner's Jury Completed Its Work Monday Afternoon, Bringing in a Verdict—Both Men in Jail—Spencer Says Streeter Struck the Fatal Blow—Authorities Can't Agree.

Wm. Drobeny, the young man from Somerville who was found dead near the Lehigh Valley station at Bound Brook with his throat cut, was foully murdered. Such was the decision of the coroner's jury that investigated the matter. The coroner's jury also brought in a verdict that Drobeny met his death at the hands of either Joseph Spencer, Jr., or Warren Streeter, who were his companions that night. The jury decided that the crime was committed in Middlesex county, but that the victim staggered across the county line and died in Somerset. The session of the inquest was continued in the courthouse Monday afternoon, when a verdict was reached.

The Somerset authorities will make every effort to have the trial take place in Middlesex county. The matter will doubtless make surveying and reference to old laws and maps necessary. The murder was committed between two bridges about one hundred yards east of the old stone-arch bridge, which has been in existence more than one hundred years. Some years ago the course of the river was changed so that it runs under an iron bridge built by Middlesex county. The river is the boundary line, and the question is whether this line is to be determined on the course of the river at the time the law was passed or its present course. Upon the decision of this point hinges the place of the trial of the case.

Spencer's version of the affair as made to the authorities shortly after his arrest is that in company with Streeter and Drobeny, he was in Mulvey's roadhouse shortly after midnight throwing dice for drinks. There was a number of colored women in the place at the time, with whom Streeter conversed. Drobeny made an offensive remark to Streeter and said "Stick to your own color." An altercation followed between Drobeny and Streeter, who were finally quieted by a woman of Mulvey's family. Spencer says that in company with Streeter and Drobeny he left Mulvey's place after midnight and walked up the road toward the New Jersey Central Railroad station. On the way Drobeny and Streeter renewed their quarrel and came to blows.

"Drobeny struck Streeter first," said Spencer. "His hat went off into the bushes. Streeter returned the blow. In the dim light it seemed like a sweeping sideswing blow on the side of the face. Drobeny staggered off down the road. I waited two minutes for Streeter to find his hat, and we both started after Drobeny. We found him lying in the middle of the road. I attempted to lift him up and saw blood on his face. I thought Streeter had struck him in the nose and told him that he struck too hard. Streeter replied, 'Well, I can't stand everything from him,' and walked off up the road. I was unable to get Drobeny to his feet. Four men came along, and I asked them to help me. They thought he was drunk and refused. Later on two men passed, and I appealed to them, but they would not aid me. Drobeny said, 'Joe, go on and let me be.' I thought Drobeny was very drunk. I was drunk myself and so gave Drobeny up and joined Streeter further up the road. We then went to the depot, where I fell asleep. Streeter was only slightly intoxicated, but he did not tell me he had cut Drobeny with a knife. There had been bad blood between Streeter and Drobeny for a long time."

Captain Phillips Sued by a Former Servant Girl.

HE IS RETIRED SEA CAPTAIN.

CAUSED HER ARREST AND INDICTMENT BY GRAND JURY.

While Captain Phillips' Family was Away From Home Costly Furnishings Were Stolen From the House, and Miss O'Brien was Charged With the Crime—Couldn't Prove It—Sensational Evidence.

The suit for $10,000 damages instituted by Miss Sarah O'Brien against Captain Geo. M. Phillips, of Plainfield, for slander and false imprisonment, is now settled by the Circuit Court. The case, owing to the prominence and wealth of the defendant, attracted a great deal of interest.

Captain Phillips is a retired sailor and for many years he had charge of an ocean liner. He is quite wealthy and about sixty-seven years old. He lives in a fashionable residence on West Front street, Plainfield, with his wife, who is an invalid, and his niece, who is thirty-eight years of age. Miss O'Brien was a servant in the house for some time.

The family went to Mauch Chunk one day and left her in charge of the house. When they came back some costly rugs and camel hair shawls were missing, and Captain Phillips accused Miss O'Brien of taking them. She was arrested, taken before a justice and held to await the Grand Jury's action. The Grand Jury found an indictment against Miss O'Brien, but after several months had elapsed the indictment was quashed for lack of evidence.

Then Miss O'Brien, through her counsel, Craig A. Marsh, brought the present suit. Miss O'Brien, in her testimony, said the family always treated her well until one day she happened to enter the dressing room and found Captain Phillip's niece sitting on his lap pulling his whiskers. Then there was quite a coolness sprung up toward her on the part of Captain Phillips and niece. Frank Bergen and N. W. Runyon, of Plainfield, were counsel for the defendant.

The trial began on Friday morning and the plaintiff's testimony was all in at the hour of adjournment.

Last Tuesday the defense occupied the court. Witnesses were sworn who testified that Miss O'Brien left the house on the day the rugs disappeared, with a large basket, covered in order to conceal its contents.

Miss Warrington, the niece, testified that she was Captain Phillip's adopted daughter, and it was not an unusual thing for her to sit on his lap, or walk in the garden with his hand upon her shoulder

The jury Tuesday brought a verdict for the plaintiff. H. W. Runyon was associated with Mr. Marsh in the prosecution. The verdict was for $250.

METZ TO PLEAD GUILTY

HE WILL THROW HIMSELF ON THE MERCY OF THE COURT.

He Has Confessed All Concerning His Thievery in This Section, and Also That He Stopped at McVey's Hotel.

Paul Metz, of New York, who is now confined in the Union county jail on charges of thieving, and who has been indicted, will probably be called before the Court in a few days. His plea will be guilty. Metz admitted a few days ago that it was he and his wife who stopped at McVey's Hotel last January, as stated exclusively in The Daily Press. He admitted all concerning his actions in this vicinity and there is no other plea that he can make. Yesterday afternoon County Detective Keron, of Elizabeth, secured the memorandums, etc., which Metz left at McVey's Hotel, and it is barely possible that some of the addresses will lead to the recovery of several articles that evidently have been pawned.

The father of Metz has been seen by the county officials and it is a fact that he cannot furnish a sufficient amount of money to redeem the articles which his son stole from the home of Wm. Stanbery, at Scotch Plains, and from the home of N. Pencleton Rogers, of East Orange street.

From what can be learned it is evident that Mr. Metz's parents have been wholly unaware of what their son has been doing in various parts of the country. They are heartbroken over his acts and cannot account for them. Metz will no doubt throw himself on the mercy of the Court and hope for a light sentence. What will be done with him in other places where he is wanted is hard to tell at present.

SOMERSET ACCUSES DOUBLE DEALING.

Middlesex Freeholders Met With a Sharp Rebuke.

SOMERSET MEN WITHDREW.

THEY DECLINED TO GO INTO A JOINT SESSION OF BOARDS.

Somerset Freeholders Went to New Brunswick to Take Action on the Construction of a Line Bridge, But When a Road Improvement Proposition Was Sprung, They Declined.

The long-deferred connection of the New Brunswick-Bound Brook extension of the Brunswick Traction Company's line with the Bound Brook-Dunellen system met with another setback in New Brunswick, Friday. An effort to hold a joint meeting of the Somerset and Middlesex County Boards of Freeholders to take action over the construction of a new line bridge over Green brook at Union avenue, Bound Brook, the link needed by the trolley, failed, the Somerset County Board leaving the meeting in a body, declaring that the Middlesex County Freeholders had been guilty of double dealing. The Somerset men claimed that the Middlesex Freeholders had invited them to a joint meeting to consider one question and then had sprung another on them.

Freeholder Cease, of New Brunswick, presented a resolution providing that the line road between New Brunswick and Six-Mile Run, the dividing line between Somerset and Middlesex counties, be made a county road and improved under the terms of a recent State act providing for the expense of the macadamizing to be borne equally by the two counties. The Somerset men voted against it solidly and the Middlesex men solidly for it. The vote was 19 to 9 in favor of the resolution.

Director Logan, of the Somerset County Board, said his county could build no more roads without overstepping its appropriation. He said he had understood that the meeting was for the purpose of settling the bridge matter, and that the road question was to be secondary. In bringing up the road matter first, he declared, it was evident that "there was something in the fence."

Counsel Freck, of Somerset, raised the point that as no chairman and secretary had been elected by joint ballot, it was not a joint meeting. Thereupon the Somerset men marched out of the room. "We mean no disrespect to Middlesex, but we will not go into joint session," said Director Logan.

The withdrawal of the Somerset men left the Middlesex Freeholders in a quandary.

The Somerset county men sent a message to the Middlesex Board to the effect that a joint committee of five members from each Board should be appointed to advertise for bids for the bridge on the plans already adopted. This will be done and save the traction companies further delay.

Arrested the Wheel.

When Patrolman Morris Higgins passed the corner of Park avenue and Second street Monday morning about 2 o'clock, he noticed a wheel leaning against the curb. There was no owner in sight so the officer placed the wheel under arrest and took it to jail to spend the night. It now awaits its owner there. The wheel has no name plate on it and has been enameled red. One of the tires was punctured. The police are inclined to believe that the wheel was stolen but that the thief feared to lead it after puncturing the tire and so deserted it.

THE COUNCIL HEEDED POPULAR SENTIMENT.

Did Not Pass Trolley Franchise Friday Night.

TO HAVE FURTHER HEARING

FRANCHISE WILL PROBABLY NOT BE GRANTED ON PRESENT TERMS.

F. H. Kinsman Appeared and Protested Against the Granting of a Franchise Till Better and More Exacting Terms Were Received by the City—Council Decided to Have Another Hearing Oct. 24th.

The trolley was the chief topic of the adjourned meeting of the City Council held last Friday and a hearing was given to the subject by the Council. The result was that the members decided after a recess of fifteen minutes to adjourn further hearing until Monday evening, October 24th, at 8 o'clock.

There was a good-sized crowd in the lobby when President Baker called the meeting to order, and after the regular order of business was suspended, Mr. Barrows moved that all present be given an opportunity to be heard for or against the extension of the trolley. F. H. Kinsman, of the Third ward, was present and he made remarks on the subject. In part he spoke as follows:

"It is only of late that I have learned anything regarding the trolley extension ordinance now under advisement, and noted the several important points. The public is gradually being educated at the present time as to the value of trolley franchises. I am not here tonight to oppose the extension asked for by the Plainfield Street Railway Company, only so far as the city is to grant the same for a small consideration. I don't blame the trolley company for striving to get all it can for as little as possible. I would probably do the same, but that is no reason why the Council should grant such a valuable franchise for a number of years for nothing. Such action would be an outrage.

"During the next few years I expect to see a great reduction in the cost of electricity and this factor has to be considered. In view of this are you, the Councilmen of this city, going to grant a valuable franchise and ask so little in return? You, gentlemen, represent this entire city and it is your duty to do the very best for the interest of the city.

"I don't believe that when the trolley company's office is moved from this city to Jersey City, it will be possible for the Council of this city to learn the amount of business done by the Plainfield Street Railway Company in this city and borough and receiving 5 per cent of the earnings when they reach the figure of $60 000.

"I have no axe to grind, but have only the interest of the city at heart. I know that John Kean, who has offered $250,000 for a county trolley franchise, is not noted from his philanthrophy, especially in this city, but gentlemen I ask you not to pass this ordinance tonight. Don't take the statement of the trolley company that unless they can, go certain ways or do certain things that they will not do anything. If you stand by the city and its interests the trolley company will soon be coming to you with tears in their eyes asking for the right of way."

At the conclusion of Mr. Kinsman's remarks, Mr. Barrows stated that he was surprised to see so few people present at the meeting to take advantage of the opportunity to speak for or against the extension. He then thanked Mr. Kinsman for his interest and for his remarks.

Mr. Buckie made a few remarks in which he stated that he was sorry that the citizens had not appeared before the Council before and discussed the subject. He said that the ordinance was practically passed, and that personally he could not honestly change his vote. He said the same rule that he would apply in his business he would have to apply in this matter, that if he made an agreement to do a certain thing he would live up to that agreement, and that whether the public approves of it or not he would vote for the ordinance as it now stands.

Mr. Kinsman took exception to Mr. Buckie's remarks and stated that it was carrying honor too far when a person will not change their mind even after they have been enlightened.

Mr. Buckie replied by saying that he spoke as he felt, and that by comparison he knew that the city would receive far more benefit under the present or inance than other Councils had received, and that he could not go against his convictions.

Mr. VanHerwerden stated that he was sorry that he voted on the subject when he knew so little about the matter. He said that Mr. Riker of the trolley company made a statement before the State Legislative Committee that he is a dealer in franchises, that is he buys and sells franchises, and who knows but what this road with its extensions may be sold out for $500,000.

At this time Mr. Barrows moved that the Council take a recess of fifteen minutes. This was done and when Council re-convened it was decided to adjourn the hearing on the trolley extension until October 24th as stated above.

The regular order of business was then returned to and communications were received from Mayor Fisk appointing John Gallagher, James Bolmer and Alfred Jacobson as special patrolmen, and John Weizenried as a regular patrolman. These appointments were referred to the police committee for consideration.

Mr. Runyon then introduced a new fire ordinance, which he has been working on for some time. The ordinance was adopted on its first reading and the other readings were deferred until a later date. The new police ordinance was not called up as was expected, and a motion to adjourn was made and carried.

PLAINTIFF DEFEATED

MRS. WILLIAM THOMPSON FINALLY WON IMPORTANT CASE.

She Was Sued by a Real Estate Agent Who Wanted Commissions on a Big Sale of Real Estate on Long Island.

The second trial of W. H. Agricola against Mrs. William Thompson, of Central avenue, took place Friday at Elizabeth before Judge VanSyckel and a jury in the circuit court. The suit was brought by a real estate broker who claimed commissions for exchanging Brooklyn property of Mrs. Thompson valued at $55 000 for Jamaica property, and the defense was that although Agricola brought the parties together and started the negotiations, he never completed them and the exchange was finally brought about by another broker named Woodward.

The first trial resulted in favor of the plaintiff but on the second trial, which was concluded yesterday, Mrs. Thomas was successful. Agricola was represented by Mr. Stillwell, of Jersey City, and Mrs. Thompson's counsel were Nelson Bunyon and Craig A. Marsh.

Like some of the other cases at this term of court considerable asperity was manifested by the parties and their respective counsel. When the foreman of the jury announced the verdict in favor of Mrs. Thompson it was difficult for her friends to repress a demonstration of their pleasure, although the court was then in the midst of another trial.

FIXING UP TH STAETS.

City Thoroughfares in Many Places Being Attended To.

Th rain Saturday was considered by Street Commissioner Gavett as a very good thing for the streets. It was such a rain as cleans the streets and gutters thoroughly, while not doing any damage. The debris accumulated here and there in gutters and at culverts, and the street cleaning gang were clearing up the mess Saturday and Monday.

The culverts at Fifth street and Watchung avenue and at Clark-ton and Watchung avenues were choked and Fifth and Richmond streets the culvert was broken, so that a lantern was displayed all night Friday.

The repair gang is at work finishing macadamizing Belvidere avenue, a job which was begun last spring but interrupted because of repairs being done to the sewer from Ravine road to the hotel.

The street *commissioner has ex*pressed himself as pleased with the job that is being done on Front street where the State Railway Company is having the tracks torn up and in many places new ties laid. Before this the rails were loose, and when a car passed over them would not be solid. The job is such a good one that Superintendent Adelmann says the rails won't have to be disturbed again for five years, that is, unless asphalt is laid.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATIONS.

Mrs. Fisher is Seventy-five Years Old—Mrs. C. L. Force Greatly Surprised.

A dual birthday celebration was pleasantly observed Monday when Mrs. Fisher, of 72 Jackson avenue, and Mrs. Charles L. Force, of Duer street, joined in receiving a number of friends. During the day Mrs. Fisher, who is 75 years of age, was kept busy receiving her many relatives from Elizabeth, East Millstone, Raritan, Plainfield and the borough. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Bertha Richards, Mrs. Fisher's daughter.

In the evening a surprise was given to Mrs. Charles L. Force, of Duer street. She was in attendance at the celebration of Mrs. Fisher, and when she returned home about 8:30 last evening she was completely surprised to see about twenty friends assembled at her home. This affair was arranged by Mrs. Force's husband.

A pleasant fact was the presentation of two handsome chairs, one from the guests and one from the celebrant's husband.

SENATOR REED'S MAN NAMED FOR SHERIFF.

A Big Fight in Somerset County Republican Convention.

THOMPSON IN THE LEAD.

ON FIRST VOTE FOR CHAIRMAN FACTIONS WERE TIED.

One Bedminister Delegate Was Late, but When He Appeared on the Scene Thompson Had a Majority of One—Nominations Made for Sheriff and Assembly—A Compromise Reported.

Somerville, Oct. 18, 2:40 p. m.—After the convention reconvened the balloting on the nomination was com*menceda.*

The result was as follows:

For Sheriff—VanDoren, 24; Suydam, 20; Green 1.

VanDoren's nomination was made unanimous.

For Assembly—First ballot, Cooper, 22; McMichaels, 16; Ludlow, 7.

Second ballot—Cooper, 25; McMichaels, 20. Ludlow withdrew.

Cooper's nomination was made unanimous.

Lewis Reed, of this place, and Henry DeMott, of North Plainfield, were nominated for coroners.

Somerville, October 18—Somerville is today the most important point of political importance in either Somer*set county or the* Third Congressional district, owing to the fact that both Republican county and Congressional conventions are being held here, and that their conclusion Governor Voorhees is to speak. The two conventions present contradictory phases—the Congressional affair being harmonious and settled upon one candidate, while the county delegates are involved in one of the biggest fights that has marked the ranks of the Somerset G. O. P. in a good many years.

It has been a foregone conclusion all along that Congressman Howell, of New Brunswick, was certain of renomination, and the convention really meets to perform but a perfunctory duty. The county convention, however, gathers not only to name the candidates for county offices, but also to put to test the strength of Supreme Court Clerk L. A. Thompson, of Somerville, and Senator Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, as to which is the most powerful factor in the party organization in the bailiwick.

The aspirations of Senator Reed to supercede Mr Thompson as the county leader is an open book, and it is well-known that preliminary skirmishes took place in the township primaries last Friday and Saturday. Just exactly how the delegates then elected would affiliate in the county convention with one or the other factions was an uncertainty until the convention was concerned this morning.

The delegates to the county convention commenced assembling in Speer's hall on Main street before 11 o'clock but it was 11:15 o'clock when L. A. Thompson, as chairman of the county committee, called the convention to order.

The fight for the control of the convention commenced at the very start when B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of North Plainfield, was nominated by N. B. Smalley, also of North Plainfield, for the temporary chairmanship. Mr. Hegeman is Reed's right hand supporter in the fight and his spokesman in the convention. George W. Hope, *of Raritan, was named also for tem*porary chairman by J. L. Griggs, of Somerville, representing the Thompson faction.

At that time there were forty-four or forty-five delegates present, the missing one being in the Bedminister delegation. The first ballot showed twenty-two votes each for both Hegeman and Hope. Just before the second ballot was commenced, however, the missing Bedminister delegate turned up and when the second ballot was counted it was found that the missing man was Thompson follower and that Hope had twenty-three to Hegeman's twenty-two votes. With a majority o one the Thompson faction looked triumphant and prepared to go ahead with more confidence.

Charles Bateman, editor of the Somerville Unionist-Gazette, was then chosen as secretary without opposition, the Reed faction realizing that it was useless to oppose.

In the announcement of the other convention officers the name of N. B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, for a member of the committee on permanent organization, was heard. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., was chosen chairman of the committee on resolutions.

It was evident that the Thompson people feared to risk a recess before the nominations were made, and so Lawyer Griggs, who acted as the spokesman for the Somerville leader, moved that the convention proceed at once to the nomination of candidates. This was opposed by the Reed delegates, but they were defeated by one vote.

The nominations for the office of Sheriff were then called for. Bridgewater nominated Henry A. Green, Franklin C. V. N. Suydam, and Hillsboro H. P. V. VanDoren. Mr. Hegeman seconded the nomination of VanDoren in a rattling speech, and John C. Cooper, of Warren, seconded the nomination of Suydam. The voting will not be commenced till after the recess.

For the Assembly nomination Joshua Ludlow, of Bedminister, nominated C. McMichael, of Bernards, and Robert M. Clark, of North Plainfield, nominated E. E. Cooper, of Warren.

Lewis Reed, of Somerville, and Henry DeMott, of North Plainfield, were nominated for coroners, there being two of these officers to be chosen.

By this time it was 12:45 o'clock, and the convention adjourned to meet in Somerset hall at 2 o'clock, when the voting will be commenced.

During the recess there is all sorts of wire pulling taking place.

It is believed that Reed and Thompson have come to some kind of an understanding, and that VanDoren will be named for Sheriff and Cooper for the Assembly, and that the leadership of the county will be shared between Reed and Thompson.

MEN OF TALENT TO TALK

SPEAKERS SECURED FOR UNIVERSITY EXTENSION LECTURES.

Prof. Smyth to Discuss Subject of American Literature in First Course—Prof. W. H. Mace in the Second Course.

The committee in charge of the University Extension lectures, which are announced in another column, have been very fortunate in securing for the first course Prof. Albert H. Smyth, professor of English language and literature in the Central High school of Philadelphia.

Prof. Smyth is a man of splendid presence, an easy, graceful speaker, who has a fine grasp of his subject and who concentrates the attention of his hearers. He will lecture on American Literature, covering in his course "The Colonial Period," "The Revolutionary Period," "Washington Irving and the New York writers," Emerson and the awakening of New England, "Hawthorne," "Poe" and "Lowell."

The second course will be delivered by Prof. William H. Mace, professor of history in Syracuse University. Prof. Mace has had a large reputation as a public lecturer. He has been so well liked in Rochester that they have engaged him year after year.

The secretary of the Extension Society of Greater New York says of him that "He is without doubt the most brilliant philosophical, and inspiring extension lecturer in his line of study in this country. He has a genius for teaching the principles of history vividly and he possesses the rare gift of stimulating his hearers to become students and do personal work in reading, thinking and writing. He is certain to arouse enthusiasm on the history of our country wherever he speaks."

Prof. Mace will lecture on the "Development of the Nation," and he will guide us through the various stages of nationality, Democracy, the union of the two, then the struggle against slavery, with the process of denationalization and the movement for secession.

G.O.P DUAL LEADERSHIP

he has been backing VanDoren strongly and his selection by the convention meant that Reed had accomplished his purpose. It seems likely, however, that the story of the compromise was true to a limited extent for Cooper the Thompson candidate for the Assembly, was chosen. It will be noticed, however, by examining the foregoing votes, that McMichaels' support came chiefly from the townships in which Senator Reed was the strongest. It may have been a coincidence but it looked peculiar.

Summed up, briefly, the convention put Reed and Thompson on a nearly equal footing in relation to county affairs for each secured one candidate's nomination. It may not be all over yet and the contest for the leadership may result in a split in the county committee. The ticket, as selected, however, will undoubtedly give the strong support of both factions.

Home From War.

H. C. Smith and wife, of Prospect avenue, went to New York Friday to see their son whom they have not seen in several years. He has been living in the west, where he was employed in a good business. When the war broke out he enlisted, and Monday together with the rest of his company he arrived in New York en route to their starting place, where they will be mustered out.

THE FATEFUL DOUBLE SIX.

Property Worth $60,000 Destroyed By Flames Early Sunday Morning.

BIGGEST FIRE IN EIGHT YEARS IN PLAINFIELD.

Building Owned By A. D. Thompson, and Occupied By Bard Company and Corle's Livery Stable, Destroyed By Flames That Threatened Far More Serious Results at One Time—Origin of Fire Is a Mystery—Started in Bicycle Repair Shop—The Loss Partially Covered By Insurance.

Thousands of dollars worth of valuable property in the very heart of the city went up in flame and smoke Sunday morning, to greet the rising sun. The large building, reaching from North avenue to East Second street, occupied by the Bard Company and the boarding stables of C. V. D. Corle, caught fire in some unknown manner and was completely gutted. The total loss will amount up to $60,000. By almost superhuman exertions the fire department prevented the fire from spreading to the brick Plainfield fire department and all other aid possible. The last time it was blown was at the destruction of the Boice, Runyon & Co. lumber yard eight years ago.

Chief Doane found his force a small one, indeed, as only one or two of the volunteers had arrived and he only had the drivers and paid employes of the department available. The heat was so intense that the men were driven to the opposite side of the street. Out of a window above hung Eugene O'Reilly, the well-known musician, yelling forth direction regarding the progress of the fire. The Chief ordered the men forward and they went, playing the streams on each other at intervals.

The flames curled around the cornice to the buildings across the street and one stream was kept busy there. The handsome brick structure belonging to Woolston & Buckle, next door to the headquarters of the Bard Company, was looked after. The cornice and window casings caught fire at once.

Meanwhile, Sergeant Kiely, Patrolman Mattox and Higgins had stretched the fire lines keeping the crowd off North avenue from McVey's Hotel to the telephone central office. The network of wires and cables strung on poles along North avenue soon began to snap and fall, making progression there very dangerous. Superintendent McClurg had the current shut off in that district as soon as he arrived, thus extinguishing the lights but preventing any trouble with "live" wires.

The police broke in the door leading to the flats in the Woolston & Buckle building and warned Edward Maynard, the colored barber, of the impending danger. His wife was overcome by excitement and had to be carried to a place of safety. The rest of the family watched the progress of the flames from the street. A line of hose was dragged up to the third floor and so saved that building. Lacking firemen, Chief Doane was compelled to press the spectators into service, and it was with difficulty that he could get help enough to drag the heavy hose upstairs. Had that building caught fire, there is little doubt but that the whole block would have gone as there were large quantities of paint, varnish, turpentine and various oils stored in the cellar.

On the right of the burning building are several one story wooden structures which would burn like tinder if they ever caught. Sergeant Kiely had considerably difficulty in waking Ted Clevely who sleeps in his store there. He and his principal valuables were hurried away to a place of safety. The firemen turned a stream on his and the adjoining buildings and the little barn and woodshed in the rear saving them from destruction. It seems wonderful now that they were not all burned as the heat was intense. The side of the little office of the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company caught fire but the flames were extinguished before serious damage was wrought.

The efforts of the Plainfield department were mainly directed toward the North avenue end of the building. No. 2 engine was stationed by the hydrant at the corner of North and Watchung avenues. Lines of hose were also run from all the neighboring hydrants, making nine in all furnished by the Plainfield department. Chief Doane and Assistant Jennings were in command on that side.

The Alert Hose Company ran its lines from the second street side and fought the fire from the yards west of the building. The barn, belonging to Karl Kaerth, next door in the rear of the stable, was ablaze. Gus Sergeant, Charles Smith and Ephriam Compton handled one of the streams for the Alert company and put out the flames after the roof and side were partially burned. The horses and wagons were taken out by Mr. Kaerth and others.

The attention of the North Plainfield department was turned to Corle's stable on their arrival. Chief Fairchild was brought over in Chief Doane's wagon and directed the work of his men while Foreman Roger Murray commanded Alert's men.

William H. Greenwood, of McVey's Hotel, was the first to think of the horses in Corle's stable. He had his valuable animal there. He could not gain entrance to the place until Harry McDonald came to his assistance and suggested an axe. They both went for one and Greenwood returned first and forced open the door. At that time the stable was filled with smoke and a faint light could be seen in the rear.

The crowd gathered quickly and the work of rescuing the horses who were plunging and snorting within, was begun at once. The entrance was blocked with wagons and it was necessary to remove some of them before the horses could be led out. There were twenty-four of them in all. Blankets and coats were thrown over their heads and most of the equines were led out without trouble. The last two tried hard to return to the flames which were then burning fiercely in the elevator shaft. One broke away and rushed back and it took the united efforts of eight men to push it out of the stable.

The flat above the stable was occupied by Eldridge Kline, a colored man, and his family. He expected to move out Saturday and had all his goods packed up, but the day was so stormy that he waited. With him were his wife, little son, mother and sister-in-law, Robert Kline, was the first in the family to discover the fire. It was only after repeated calling, however, that he impressed the fact on the rest. Mrs. Anne Kline, the aged mother of Eldridge Kline, fainted in the excitement and the rescuers had to carry her down stairs in a cot.

The wagons on the first floor were drawn out, some of them badly burned. The delivery wagon of Morey & LaRue was nearly destroyed. On the second floor were two carriages, consisting of four traps and sundry runabouts, buggies, surries and closed carriages, and nine sleighs. Some were the property of Mr. Corle and others were kept there for his patrons. All were destroyed. The delivery wagon of the Plainfield Beef Company was also destroyed.

William Chamberlain was on duty at the nozzle of a line in the stable when some burning woodwork fell in his back, badly burning him. Johnson Young, working with Dan Petrino of the chemical, in the Woolston & Buckle building, had his hands burned and blistered by the intense heat.

After the first great explosion, there was a second smaller one. William Addis, Jr., was standing at a nozzle on North avenue when the puff of flames surrounded him and burned both his hands.

Chief Doane says that the great explosion was caused by the sudden contact of fresh air and super-heated smoke. The combination is very explosive and is commonly known among firemen as the "back-draft." At the time, it was thought that a keg of powder had exploded but there was none there.

The Chief's theory is that the fire had been burning in the second floor for an hour at least before discovered. At 3:37, Patrolman Mattox passed by and tried the door but he saw no sign of fire then. The only practicable theory for the origin of the fire is spontaneous combustion. There was one gas jet burning in the centre of the first floor, but the fire apparently started in the second. The second explosion may have been caused by the explosion of a gallon of benzine in the bicycle repair department.

The general alarm had its effect for the people of the city were thoroughly aroused. They came, men, women and children, in all sorts of attire and stood and watched the efforts of the firemen. But for the fire lines, the work of the firemen would have been sadly impeded. There must have been several thousand people gathered in the neighborhood before it was all over. The crowds increased as daylight came on and almost all the police force was utilized in keeping the crowd in check. Thus, too, there was a big delegation of the exempt firemen who turned out and lent a hand.

As soon as the members of the firm of Woolston & Buckle arrived, they sent orders that all firemen should be given coffee at their expense at McVey's Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. McVey kept open house for those three hours after the alarm sounded and furnished hot coffee to hundreds, firemen and other workers, and refused to take a cent for it. They appreciated that but for the wonderful efforts of the firemen, they would have been burned out of house and home. Judge V. W. Nash circulated among the firemen with a pail of coffee and a dipper. At fire headquarters and the Alert house, coffee and sandwiches were served. Karl Kaerth also had hot coffee for the firemen as did a number of the other neighbors.

The fire in the North avenue end of the building was first brought under control. Then the rear succumbed to the efforts of the firemen. After two hours of hard work there remained only a little fire here and there. An hour after that the recall was sounded. During the morning the ruins began to smoulder and Chief Doane kept a stream on the debris for a half hour.

The loss occasioned by the fire it is impossible to estimate with any degree of certainty as yet. It will amount in the neighborhood of $60,000 as near as calculation is possible at present. The building itself is owned by A. D. Thompson. While it cost the Day Brothers $33,000, Mr. Thom [illegible] values it at between $30,000 and $35,000. As near as can be ascertained it was insured to the amount of $15,000.

Mr. Colgate, manager of the Bard Company, did not learn of his loss until nearly 7 o'clock when young Harry Thompson aroused him and told him that his store had burned down. Mr. Colgate resides on Kensington avenue. He hurriedly dressed and went downtown at once. He was half-stunned by the shock for some little time. The Bard Company had a large stock in hand. It consisted of sporting goods of various kinds, including some ammunition for shotguns. These shells sounded like a small battle when they exploded during the first part of the fire. There was also a large line of phonographic and photographic goods. There were 10,000 records, valued at 50 cents each. There were also several new phonographs of particular value. Everything was destroyed. An inventory had been completed last week and laid on Mr. Colgate's desk ready to go up in smoke. The loss on the stock will reach $17,000, while there is only $13,000 to cover it.

Carl Kaerth places the damage to his barn at $100. It was fully insured. Kline lost all, and had no insurance. He had just completed the purchase of his household effects on the installment plan. He places his loss at $500

Mr. Corle could not tell a Press reporter what he had lost. Everything was so scattered that it will take several days to find out just what is missing. He was not insured, however, and his loss will undoubtedly reach several hundred.

The damage to the Woolston & Buckle building will amount to $1,000 or more. It was fully insured.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company was one of the heaviest losers. Eight of their cables passed right in front of the building. They were all broken, together with hundreds of single wires. There were 250 subscribers whose service was interrupted, but communication to the west was suspended.

As soon as Manager C. W. Runyon reached the scene of action, he telephoned to Newark for a repair gang and at 6:20 o'clock, yesterday morning, trucks laden with the necessary material and a gang of twenty-two men were en route for Plainfield. Four of the cables are now to go underground, together with 120 independent wires, making 320 wires in all in the conduits. The work was begun yesterday morning and continued all night. The damage is now pretty well repaired and Manager Runyon expects that all will be in working order tonight or tomorrow morning. It will cost that company $1,500.

Some of the other adjacent buildings were slightly scorched but the damage is slight. There was also some damage done by the torrents of water that were poured into them.

As soon as the fire department arrived, Chief Doane telephoned to the pumping station of the Plainfield Water Supply Company telling Superintendent Andrews that there was a big fire to deal with. There was 133 feet of water in the stand pipe. The small pump was in use then and was started at full speed. The water was raised a foot when the twelve streams were connected and the water was lowered twenty feet before the fire was extinguished.

Rheaume's lumber yard had a narrow escape from joining the conflagration. F. R. Stevens, of Park avenue, and Walter L. Long, of Park avenue, discovered that several sparks had lodged in the piles of lumber. Securing a fire-extinguisher from one of the apparatus, they put out the little blazes and patrolled the lumber yard extinguishing several more until the rain of sparks ended and the danger was over.

It has been ascertained this morning that there were three bicycles stored in the Bard Company's establishment for customers. They belonged to John Valiant and A. L. C. Marsh. The owner of the other is not known as yet.

Lamp Exploded.

A lamp exploded in a second floor bed room at the home of Mrs. Case, of Church street, last Thursday at 6:50 o'clock. A still alarm was sent in to fire department headquarters but Al Dunavan and Hiram Hume extinguished the flames with pails of water before Second Assistant Engineer arrived. The damage to the rug and carpet was slight.

ROGER F. MURRAY'S NEW TALLY SHEET.

Its Workings and Advantages Explained in Detail.

SAVES MUCH ELECTION TIME

IT WILL ELIMINATE MANY MISTAKES AS WELL.

It Also Gives the Results of the Election Showing the Party Vote and Gain or Loss of Each Candidate—Explained to Election Officers Last Night by Assemblyman Murray.

There was a gathering of local election officers in the Republican headquarters last Friday to listen to the explanation of Assemblyman Roger F. Murray's new tally sheet for elections. The rain kept a number away but those who were present were greatly pleased with the new scheme.

Its advantages were very evident from the start. It will prevent a great many errors that are bound to creep in and it will also reduce the time and labor required of the election officers. Instead of continuing the counting of the ballots until two o'clock in the morning as has frequently been the case in the past, the work will all be completed and the returns en route to the city clerk's office by eleven o'clock.

By the old method it was necessary to call off the names of each office and each candidate on every ticket and then to have each candidate tallied on the sheet. As there will be eight candidates to be voted for this year, it would be necessary under the old method for the election officers to call out sixteen words, the names of each office and the candidate voted for, besides the usual tally for the ticket and the party. This all takes time.

In the new way the ticket will first be tallied as usual. Then the election officer holding it will announce whether it is a straight ticket or scratched. If "straight" the party will be tallied on the sheet which will end with that ticket. If "scratch" the losses and gains will be credited in the proper columns. At the completion of the count the party vote will be obtained by adding the straight and scratch tickets voted. Then the gains and losses of each candidate will be added and it will be learned whether the candidate ran ahead or behind his ticket and how much. Then by adding or subtracting, as the case may be, the exact vote of the candidate can be ascertained.

Everyone has always been anxious to know how the party vote runs and how the candidates run in comparison to the ticket. This scheme will make that easy, besides giving the total vote of the candidate, and does it in such a way that much time is gained and the chances of many mistakes eliminated.

PART OF STOLEN BICYCLE FOUND.

Frame of Mrs. VanName's Wheel Was Lying in a Dooryard.

The Spalding bicycle owned by Mrs. Henry VanName, of Elmwood place, which was stolen last Thursday evening on Watchung avenue, was found Friday afternoon—that is, all that was left of it—in the yard of Stephen Cahoone, on Watchung avenue. There was nothing left of the wheel but the frame. The wheels, tool bag, handle bars, etc., were removed and taken away. Mr. Cahoone found the frame and reported it to Chief Grant, who in turn reported the matter to Mrs. VanName. The frame was secured and is now in possession of the owner. There seems to be little chance of securing the remainder of the wheel. This makes the third or fourth occurrence of the kind that has happened on Watchung avenue and it is about time the practice was stopped.

COMPLAINT WAS DISMISSED.

Charge Made Against Powers Couldn't be Proved.

Michael Powers, of South avenue, appeared before Justice Nash Saturday night to make a complaint against his son, Garrett Powers, whom he charges with abusing him and threatening his life. Justice Nash took the complaint and issued the warrant, and during the evening Garrett gave bonds before Justice Mattison for his appearance before Justice Nash for trial Monday morning.

When the case came to trial this morning, Powers was not able to prove the threats and abuse. Part of the alleged trouble occurred in Somerset county across the brook, and over that Justice Nash has no jurisdiction. The complaint was therefore dismissed.

Verdict for Plaintiff.

Justice Smalley has given his verdict in the contract case of David Mlodownik against A. B. Thorn and he allows the plaintiff $197.64, which includes costs of court. Lawyer Anglesman, representing Mr. Thorn, has given notice of appeal.

The regular monthly handicap will be played on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club links next Saturday afternoon.

MR. MARTINE REGRETS TURN DOWN OF DALY.

He Calls it Poor Policy for the Democratic Leaders.

GREAT ADMIRER OF DALY.

SAYS HE IS A DEMOCRAT THAT CAN BE DEPENDED UPON.

Mr. Martine Voted for Daly in the Gubernatorial Convention Because He Thought He Would Make a Splendid Candidate—Mr. Daly Indulges in a Rather Frank Sort of an Interview Also.

James E. Martine, known throughout New Jersey as the "Farmer Orator," and one of the old school of Democrats, was seen by a reporter Friday morning and asked what he thought of the "turning down" of William D. Daly, of Hoboken, by Chairman Daly, of Hoboken, by Chairman Gourley of the State committee.

"From my standpoint as to political and fair treatment," said Mr. Martine, "I deem it unwise. I personally esteem Mr. Daly. He is fearless and able, always defending the cause of the people. He is a Democrat in sunshine and storm alike. His vote in the Gubernatorial contest attests I the hold he has on the New Jersey Democrats."

"Do you believe Mr. Daly will be luke warm or apathetic," was asked of Mr. Martine.

"No, no, Mr. Daly is too loyal to be that I would as soon doubt myself as to believe such a course of him. I voted for Mr. Daly in the convention, because I believe him to be a Democrat of Democrats and would have made a splendid candidate for us to make a fight for."

"What do you think of the outlook?" was asked.

"Good! I believe we will elect Mr. Crane. New Jersey has not left the Democratic cause for good."

A reporter met Senator William D. Daly at Hoboken Thursday morning as was about to take a train for Newark, and asked him if it was true that he had written a letter to William B. Gourley, chairman of the recent State Democratic convention, in regard to his (Daly's) "turndown" as a member-at-large of the State committee.

"Most certainly I wrote to Mr. Gourley," replied the Senator in a decidedly suave way, and with a bow that was nothing if not Chesterfieldian.

"It was in the nature of a protest against ignoring you, I presume," ventured the reporter.

"That was the intention, to be sure," returned the Senator, as he grasped the handrail of the car.

"Mr. Gourley says that it was a very mild letter, indeed, remarked the reporter.

"Well, the letter itself can best tell that story. At least, I hope it can," was the Senator's reply as he stepped inside the car.

"You kept a copy of that letter, of course?" hazarded the reporter.

"Indeed I did. It is an invariable rule with me to take copies of all letters, business or personal."

"Would you mind giving out that letter for publication?" was the reporter's next remark.

"I most certainly would mind and do mind," and here the Senator settled down in a seat and proceeded to become interested. "The letter was written to Mr. Gourley, addressed to Mr. Gourley and mailed to Mr. Gourley. As a matter of courtesy to Mr. Gourley I do not think I should reveal its contents. It may be a mild letter and then again it may not be. But I say to you that Mr. Gourley has my full and free permission to give that letter to the press for publication."

The train was making tracks toward the Bergen tunnel by this time and the reporter, not having any particular business in Newark, bade good day to the Senator and left the train.

TO ENFORCE A CONTRACT.

Scotch Plains and Netherwood People in the Supreme Court.

A case in which Netherwood and Scotch Plains people were interested, was tried Friday in the Supreme Court of New York. It was brought by one Nathan Hirschbein against Mrs. John Johnston, of Netherwood, and Mrs. John Marsh, of Scotch Plains, to enforce a contract claimed to have been made on their behalf by Thomas M. Paff, Sr., a real estate agent. The defendants claimed that the alleged contract was unauthorized by them, and the same view was taken by Judge Cohen, who dismissed the complaint. David Prescott Hall, of Plainfield and New York, tried the case for the defendants. The property in dispute is situated in New York city.

S. J. Moore, a former resident of Plainfield, but now of Poughkeepsie, spent Sunday and part of Monday in Plainfield. He has so many friends here that he was compelled to spend but a few minutes with those he was able to call upon. He and Mrs. Moore and their charming little daughter, Evangeline, left for home Monday afternoon.

CELEBRATED ITS OWN ANNIVERSARY.

Delightful Entertainment at Trinity Reformed Church.

'TWAS A BIRTHDAY PARTY.

THE GUESTS BROUGHT BAGS OF PENNIES FOR THE CAUSE.

Birthday Party in Honor of Trinity's Eighteenth Year—Arranged by Ladies' Christian Work Society—A Handsome Birthday Cake—The Committee Who Had the Worthy Affair in Charge.

The eighteenth birthday of Trinity Reformed church was celebrated last Thursday, and incidentally the good folk who came were asked to celebrate their own by a proper donation to the treasury of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the church. The proper observance of the affair was taken in hand by the members of that active organization and a most delightful "birthday party" was the result.

The general plan of the birthday party is too well known to need explanation. Small bags were sent out to all the congregation, while the elders and deacons received large ones. Accompanying each was the following invitation:

This Birthday Party is all your own,
Nothing like it ever was or ever known;
Your very best friends will entertain,
And feed you well while you remain.
With this we enclose a little sack,
We hope you'll bring or send it back
With cents as many as years you're old;
You needn't be scared, it will not be told.
Best wishes we send with these greetings today,
And hope you will attend your own Birthday Party.

The "party" was held in the lecture room which was crowded with the guests. An entertaining programme occupied the first part of the evening. It included well-rendered readings by Miss Mary A. Luckey. The first was "The Jealous Wife" and the second a favorite portion from "David Copperfield." Councilman William M. Runyon was present and was a general favorite from the start. He sang several negro dialect selections. "The Tattooed Men," his famous little ditty about the parrot, and the ever-popular "Irish Jubilee." He was recalled again and again. The remainder of the programme consisted of various selections on S. C. Baker's phonograph. It was unusually loud and clear and was managed by its owner.

Then the birthday bags of the elders and deacons were called up. Elder G. L. VanEmburgh had his donation and his partner's side by side in a pasteboard case.

E. E. Anthony acted as master of ceremonies and had something funny to say on each and every occasion. He next called for the remainder of the bags according to the months on which the donors were born.

There were 307 bags in all sent in, the contents of which amounted to $92.71, which was afterwards increased by voluntary contributions to $97. The money raised was for the upholstering fund of the church.

There was an immense cake, handsomely frosted, with "1880-1898," on top of it. Around it were eighteen candles which burned most of the evening. The cake was afterwards cut and served as refreshments with coffee. The room was prettily decorated. The principal decoration was a huge motto, "Many Happy Returns," in letters of evergreen and white. It was made by Mrs. J. C. VanDyke and Miss Mary VanEps.

During the latter part of the evening the phonograph was kept going. Councilman Runyon remained until the affair closed and sang several selections more that were received with enthusiastic applause.

The affair was arranged by Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle, president of the society, and a committee, chairmaned by Mrs. E. H. Bird. The other members of the committee were Mrs. F. M. Demarest, Mrs. F. A. Church, Mrs. H. W. Marshall, Mrs. Seaman Williams, Mrs. John Krymer, Mrs. Robert Clark, Jr., and Mrs. S. C. Baker. They also looked after the serving of refreshments that followed the entertainment.

Took an Unwelcome Bath.

While Thomas DeMesa and David Demarest, of this city, were sailing in the former's canoe in the pond at South Plainfield, last Saturday afternoon, the wind capsized the little craft and threw both boys into the water. They were obliged to swim to shore which they did with great difficulty. They then hastened home and changed their clothing. The canoe was recovered by an employe of Mr. Smith, of South Plainfield. Neither of the boys appear to be any the worse for their unpleasant experience.

Plainfield Colored Man a Bicycle Thief.

Plainfielders who were in Newark Sunday witnessed the arrest of a colored man who formerly lived here and went by the name of "Gambling John." John rode off on another man's bicycle, on Market street, and was pursued by the bicycle policemen and a big crowd, and when caught narrowly escaped rough handling.

WEDDED IN CHURCH AT THE EVENTIDE.

Miss Adeline B. Parsons and J. A. Robinson Married.

BOTH ARE PLAINFIELDERS.

CEREMONY PERFORMED IN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

...church Was Charmingly Decorated with Flowers and Potted Plants—Spiritual Service Used—Informal Gathering at House Afterwards—Jolly Send Off Given to Mr. and Mrs. Robinson.

One of the prettiest of autumnal weddings was that of Miss Adeline Beebe Parsons, of 730 Watchung avenue, daughter of the late P. Nelson Parsons, of Philadelphia, and Joseph Alexander Robinson, of 307 East Fifth street, which took place Wednesday, Oct. 13, at five o'clock, in the Congregational church. The pretty little church was crowded to the utmost with the many friends of the couple, and was very artistically decorated in green and white, the plants forming a pyramid effect about the pulpit, and being banked on either side of the white altar rail. At five o'clock the bridal party entered the church. The four ushers, Louis Irving VanAlstyne, John G. McLaughlin, Charles Burdette Mann and George E. Fuller, led the procession, followed by the maid of honor, Miss Mary E. Robinson, sister of the groom, dressed in white organdie over white taffeta, and carrying pink roses. Then came the bride, leaning on the arm of William VanAlstyne, of Watchung avenue. Miss Parsons was dressed in a white satin gown, en train, trimmed with chiffon and duchesse point. She wore a tulle veil, fastened with lilies of the valley, and carried white bride roses. At the same time the groom, accompanied by the best man, Seymour L. Smith, of Brooklyn, and the clergyman, Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, pastor of both bride and groom, entered the church by another aisle, meeting the bride at the altar. The impressive Episcopal marriage service was used. The bride was given away by Mr. VanAlstyne, the solemn vows were said, and then Mr. and Mrs. Robinson walked together up the aisle, to the joyous strains of the wedding march, followed by the maid of honor and best man, and the four ushers.

The organist at the church was Harvey Wickham, of Middletown, N. Y.

After the ceremony, the relatives of the couple gathered at the VanAlystyne home to congratulate them. It was a small and informal, but very pleasant gathering, and Mr. and Mrs. Robinson received many warm good wishes. At the close of the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson took the train for two weeks of pleasant journeying, reaching a jolly send-off as they left the house. After their return, they will reside on East Fifth street.

During the evening, the guests at the house had an opportunity to view the many beautiful gifts bestowed upon the newly-married pair, by their many friends. The house, as well as the church was artistically decorated with flowers, the decorations at both places being the work of Mrs. Dunn.

There was the usual distribution of rice over the couple on their departure. They then drove to the Fanwood station, a party of friends accompanying them in a wagonette for a final farewell when they boarded the train. Colored fire, cannon crackers and rice were used as a parting salute.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES.

Borough Delegates Elected to Somerset County Democratic Convention.

The Democratic primaries in North Plainfield were held Friday night and were well attended. The primary for the first district was held in Boyce's Hotel and came to order at 8 o'clock. J. A. Blair was made chairman and David Keasey secretary. Half a dozen delegates were nominated, so the vote was by ballot. John Emmons and Charles Lyman were the tellers and the election resulted in the choice of Richard McCullough and Andrew Love as the two delegates, the former receiving 13 votes and the latter 8.

D. D. Smalley was made chairman of the primary in the second district, and Walter L. Linbarger, secretary. Lewis R. Bird and Lambert Bodine were the delegates selected, Bodine receiving 18 votes and Bird 11. Harry M. Cooke was the teller.

Bridge Foundation Weakened.

The heavy rain a few nights ago came very near causing serious damage to the foundations of the bridge on Girard avenue. The water rushed through the twenty-four inch storm sewer pipes and threatened to carry away the foundations of the bridge. Street Commissioner Gavett discovered the trouble and at once had a load of large stones placed in position at the brook and thus further trouble will be prevented. When the water rushed out of the pipe it struck the bed of the brook with such force that great damage was likely to result.

FIRE OVERPOWERS FOUR GOOD HORSES.

Large Barn and Contents Utterly Destroyed by Flames.

OTHER BUILDINGS SAVED.

Mr. POWERS DECLARES IT THE WORK OF AN INCENDIARY.

Alleged Traces of Oil Found About Burning Structure—One Horse Almost Reached Freedom, But was Overcome—Heavy Loss and But Little Insurance—Reward Offered for Information.

A bright light in the eastern sky and an alarm from box 63, corner of Berckman street and South avenue, last Thursday at 7:05 o'clock, led to a general belief that the enemies of the Hygeia Ice Company had been at work again. Instead, it proved to be the large barn belonging to Michael Powers & Co., near their office on South avenue, above Berckman street. When the fire was first discovered it was too far under way to be extinguished, and the structure was utterly destroyed.

Mr. Powers and one of his employes were in the office addressing some envelopes. Mr. Powers had returned from downtown and unhitched his horse by daylight. There had been no lamp or lantern in the barn that day. As they sat in the office, it was suddenly lighted up. Looking out, they saw the flames bursting out of the barn. The employe hurried to the corner to send in an alarm, but Charles Smith, of No. 2 Engine Company, who lives nearby, had already sent in one.

Mr. Powers and his neighbors rushed to the barn to save as much as possible. When the door was opened, the flames burst out so that it was almost impossible to enter. A portion of the harness stored there was saved. Those who were there at first claim that they saw burning oil about the door and could plainly distinguish its odor. They also declare that it would have been impossible for the fire to have gained such headway unless it was started in several parts of the barn at once, using inflammable materials.

The fire department arrived but the barn was then nearly destroyed and their efforts were mainly directed toward saving the adjacent buildings. The carriage shed was ablaze when they arrived but was soon extinguished.

There were four horses in the barn and all were burned to death. Three broke loose. One kicked down the side door and attempted to rush forth but fell dead on the threshold within a few feet of freedom.

The loss on the barn will amount to $900 It was insured to the amount of $300. The horses, harness, a sleigh and other contents of the barn are valued at $800, on which there was no insurance.

Outside of the testimony of Mr. Powers and those who were first on the scene, there is no other cause apparent for the origin of the fire. Mr. Powers is very sure that the conflagration was the work of an incendiary and has offered $500 reward for apprehension and conviction of those setting fire to his barn.

DEATH OF LEWIS DUNN.

Had Been Sick for a Long Time—Died at the Hospital.

The death of Lewis Dunn, aged fifty years, of the borough, occurred last Friday at Muhlenberg Hospital, after a long illness. During the past six weeks he was confined to the hospital and death was due to infl mmation of the colon. Mr. Dunn was a well-known resident of this city, where he was born. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Dunn. His father has been dead a number of years, but his mother still lives and resides on West Front street. He also leaves three sisters and one brother. The latter resides in Philadelphia. The deceased was by trade a druggist. He was first employed by a man named Brown, who kept a drug store on Front street, where L. W. Randolph now is. Later Mr. Brown moved to Rahway and Mr. Dunn continued with him as manager. Later Mr. Dunn was in the drug business at Babylon, L. I., for a number of years.

During the past few years Mr. Dunn has been in bad health and he gradually failed. In addition to those already named he leaves two daughters, one of whom is married.

The funeral services were held from his mother's residence, 116 West Front street, Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Rev. C. E. Herring officiating. Interment was in North Plainfield cemetery. The bearers were Wm. VanWinkle, Daniel VanWinkle, Edward T. VanWinkle and Carman Dunn. Interment was in North Plainfield cemetery.

Firemen Thanked.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Maynard wish to thank their friends who stood by them in the hour of need, and the firemen who so bravely assisted in their rescue at the fire Sunday morning.

COL. SNYDER TO MAKE FIGHT AGAINST FOWLER

East Orange Man Named by Eighth District Democrats.

HARD WORKER FOR PARTY.

BAYONNE ALSO HAD A CANDIDATE FOR THE HONOR.

Union County Didn't Know Where They Were at for a Few Moments—Thomas Lane Chairman of Convention—Platform Denounced Congressman Fowler's Record—Col. Snyder Addressed Convention.

At Elizabeth, October 12.—Col. Edward H. Snyder, of East Orange, whose name previously had not been talked of in connection with the Congressional fight against Congressman Fowler—at least, not to the extent that other than a few of his own neighbors knew of his aspirations—was the choice of the Democrats in the Eighth district convention yesterday afternoon. The convention was held in the Zouave Armory hall, and while typically Democratic in some respects it lacked the old-time vigor that used to prevail when the Democrats of the Eighth got together to select their standard bearer in the Congressional canvass.

The delegates gathered slowly at the convention hall and it was nearly 3 o'clock before the various counties went into caucus, but the work of distributing the convention honors and deciding as to the choice of candidates was quickly done and it was 3 o'clock when the convention was called to order.

The Union county delegation met in one of the front parlors to hold their caucus. It was called to order by John Crowell, chairman of the Democratic county executive committee. Dr. Jackson, of Springfield, was made chairman of the caucus, and John Lane, of Summit, secretary. The choice of the delegates for the convention honors were as follows:

Committee on Permanent Organization—J. W. Hughes, Summit; Dr. E. G. Putnam, Elizabeth.

Committee on Rules—B. J. Mooney, Summit; H. C. Wilson, Elizabeth.

Committee on Credentials—Ira G. Hulburt, Plainfield; J. J. Potts, Elizabeth.

Committee on Rules—Dr. E. B. Silvers, Rahway; Peter Egenolf, Elizabeth.

Chairman, Hon. Thomas F. Lane, Summit; vice-presidents, Elmer D. Moffett, Plainfield; Jacob Bruckbacher, Elizabeth; secretaries, M. J. McKernan, Orange; A. B. Cook, Rahway.

The convention was called to order by Mr. Crowell, and Thomas Lane, of Summit, was named for temporary chairman. One secretary from each county was chosen as follows: Joseph Gilliger, of Hudson; M. J. McKernan, of Essex; and Alfred Cook, of Union.

After calling the roll of delegates by districts and the presentation of credentials, the convention took a recess to allow the various committees to transact its work. After thirty minutes the convention reconvened and the temporary organization was made permanent.

The committee on resolutions presented the platform of the convention, which, after endorsing the State candidates and the Democratic ideas in the State campaign, attacked Congressman Fowler's record. It accused him of making an appeal for votes two years ago on a non-partisan argument, and then after election going against his promises and voting for all partisan legislation. It also paid heed to the charges that Congressman Fowler had appointed postmasters in his district at the behest of politicians who were distasteful to the patrons of the offices they were selected for.

Nominations were then declared in order. Samuel J. Klauber, of Essex, nominated Col. Snyder, telling of his good record in his own town and his sterling Democracy. Mayor Edward Sey mour, of Bayonne, read a letter from former Judge Thomas J. Noonan, in which he declined the honor for the nomination. Mayor Seymour said, however, that Bayonne had another candidate, and that if he was chosen by the convention the Democrats of that city would send him out of there with 1,000 majority on election day. He then nominated Edward A. S. Man.

Union county's choice was called for and Dr. Jackson said that Union had no candidate. As is almost always the case with Union, there was some sort of a misunderstanding and two or three delegates immediately moved that Union county be given a five-minute recess to confer about delegates. This motion was defeated, but it did not deter William Emery, of Scotch Plains, from saying that since Judge Noonan had got out of the race it put a different phase on the situation. While the delegates were quibbling over this point it was shown that Col. Snyder would be nominated and so Mayor Seymour announced that Hudson changed her vote to Snyder. Union county followed suit, and the nomination was made unanimous.

A committee was appointed to escort Col. Snyder to the hall, and upon his appearance he was greeted enthusiastically. He was introduced to the convention and then delivered a short speech, in which he expressed thanks for the honor and promised to do his best to be elected, and if elected to serve the district faithfully in Washington.

After further routine business the convention adjourned.

WEDDED UNDER AN ARCH

MISS AMY HYER BECOMES MRS. JOHN BOLSTERLE.

Ceremony Performed at the Home of the Groom's Parents, Which Had Been Tastefully Arranged For It.

The marriage of Miss Amy Hyer, of East Fourth street, to John Bolsterle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Caspar Bolsterle, of Watchung avenue, took place Oct. 12th, at 8 o'clock p. m. at the home of the groom's parents in the presence of the relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties.

The marriage was performed under an arch from which was suspended beautiful smilax, and surrounding the bridal party was a pleasing display of palms. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiated.

The bride was gowned in white silk, and carried a bouquet of white roses. She was attended by Miss Emma Bolsterle, sister of the groom, who wore a gown of white organdie over green and carried pink roses. The best man was George Hyer, of Brooklyn, cousin of the bride.

Maude and Florence Disbrough, nieces of the bride, were the flower girls. One was gowned in pink and the other in blue. They both carried baskets of roses.

The decorations of the house were green and white, while pink was the prevailing color in the dining room. Following the ceremony congratulations were offered after which a reception was held. A bountiful supper was served to the guests at 9 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Bolsterle left town to spend their honeymoon in Brooklyn. On their return they will reside in their new home on Oxford place, recently built and furnished by the groom.

The groom is a valued employe of V. L. Frasse, the Front street grocer, while his wife was for many years the efficient cashier at J. Fred McDonald's grocery. Both Mr. Frasse and Mr. MacDonald remembered the bride and groom with handsome presents. In addition they also received a large collection of useful and ornamental gifts from relatives and friends.

Among those who witnessed the ceremony were the following: Former Councilman and Vincent L. Frasse, Assemblyman and Mrs. Roger F. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Hetfield, E. W. Brokaw and family, Peter V. Weaver, Miss Addie Weaver, Mrs. Disbrough, Miss Cortwright, Miss Clara King, Miss Flora King, Mr. and Mrs. George S. McGinnis, Miss Nellie McGinnis, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Scheneck and child, Mr. and Mrs. Caspar Bolsterle, Miss Dollie Bolsterle and George Bolsterle, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Bolsterle and son, of Elizabeth; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Woolley and daughter, of Westfield; Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Coddington, of Newark; Edward Myers, Jr., of Raritan; Miss Jennie Hyer, Miss Nellie Hyer, of Keyport; Mr. and Mrs. McGee, Mr. and Mrs. George Corner, of Mattawan.

A Croup Cure

is what many a mother is looking for; something absolutely safe and reliable, that will disarm her terror of that dread rattling, strangling cough, so fearful to the mother, so fatal to the child. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a croup cure that can be relied on. Thousands say so.

Mrs. W. J. Dickson ("Stanford Eveleth") writes from Truro, N. S.:—

"That terror of mothers, the startling, croupy cough, never alarmed me so long as I had a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house."

"We have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in our family for years. Once when our boy had a severe attack of croup, we thought that he would die. But we broke up the attack by using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."

A COUNTY COMBINE CHOOSES CONVERY.

Democratic Nomination in Third Congressional District.

SOMERSET MAN DEFEATED.

ANDREW LANE, OF NESHANIC, ASPIRED FOR THE NOMINATION.

Third District Convention Held at Freehold—Middlesex and Monmouth Combined and Selected a Middlesex Man for the Honor—Somerset Hoped for a Split Among Monmouth Delegates.

The Democrats of the Third Congressional district sent their delegates to Freehold, Wednesday, October 12, to meet in convention and select their candidate for Congress man. Patrick Convery, of Perth Amboy, former sheriff and county clerk of Middlesex county, was the final choice. Besides the delegates, there were a number of prominent Democrats present from this section, all filled with enthusiasm.

In the morning the delegates of the three counties held separate caucuses. There had been a lively movement in favor of Senator Keys, of Somerset, the night before, but he refused to run, as did also E. H. Radel, of Middlesex, the well-known trolley magnate. The Somerset delegation settled on Andrew Lane, of Neshanic, as their choice, and gave him their united support. Middlesex and Monmouth combined, however, in favor of Convery.

Up to the very last, the Somerset Democrats counted on a split in the Monmouth delegation with sufficient support for Lane to carry him through.

The convention was called to order by Henry Reimer, of Somerville, chairman of the Congressional committee. Aaron F. Johnston, of Monmouth, was made temporary chairman. He made a glowing speech with a bitter arraignment of the Republican party. After the appointment of the convention committees and officers, the convention adjourned until 1:30 o'clock.

After re-assembling the reports of the committees were received. By recommendation of the proper committee, the temporary organization was made permanent. The rules of the last convention were adopted. The platform presented rejoiced in the harmony in the Democratic party throughout the State and promised to bring it into line once more. Hearty support was pledged to Crane, the candidate for Governor and the principles of the convention that nominated him endorsed.

The maladministration of the Republican party in the treatment of the soldiers was condemned. The resolutions were greeted with cheers and unanimously adopted.

Nominations were then called for. James Wight, of Perth Amboy, spoke for Middlesex county and named Patrick Convery as their choice for candidate. John Frick, of Somerville, made the nominating speech for Somerset's candidate, Andrew Lane The voting then began. Somerset cast its 71 votes for Lane, while Middlesex cast 67 and Monmouth 78 for Convery. Before the result of the ballot was announced, the vote of the Somerset delegation was changed from Lane to Convery and the election was made unanimous at the motion of Mr. Frick Convery was then declared the choice of the convention. After the usual closing business, the convention broke up.

BRIDE AND GROOM FOOLED SERENADERS.

A Wild Goose Chase After a Married Couple.

CHASED THE WRONG HACK.

THEN MR. AND MRS. CASE TOOK A TRAIN QUIETLY.

Wedding of Bessie Blair to Samuel Pyatt Case at the Home of the Bride's Parents—A Simple Ceremony—Two Pastors Officiated—Young Friends Planned Much Fun, But They Got Disappointed.

The marriage of Miss Bessie Elizabeth Blair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey Blair, of 306 East Second street, to Samuel Pyatt Case, son of Mrs. Susan P. Case, of Westerveit avenue, took place last Thursday at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of the relatives and very intimate friends of the bride and groom.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, pastor of the bride, assisted by Rev Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, pastor of the groom. The couple were married in a music room just off from the parlor, and the decorations were unique and pretty. Palms, ferns, white roses and carnations were arranged so as to form one large bank almost reaching to the ceiling. In this room, surrounded by admiring relatives and friends, the happy event was consummated. As the couple, unattended, entered the room, the wedding march was played on the piano by Howard M. Case, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony a reception was held, during which hearty congratulations were offered and a wedding supper was served. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Case left the scene of festivities for a wedding tour through the south. They will spend a short time at Richmond, Va., after which they will visit friends on a plantation further south. On their return they will reside at 309 East Second street, where a home has been completely furnished and now awaits them.

The bride wore a brown cloth traveling gown with hat to match. She was not attended by a bridesmaid, neither did the groom have a best man. The affair throughout was one of perfect simplicity and greatly admired.

The house decorations were very pretty. In the parlor clematis, carnations and smilax were used to good effect, while in the dining room the prevailing color was pink and the table presented a scene of beauty.

The groom is an employe of J. B. Stout & Co., commission merchants of 81 Warren street, and this firm remembered Mr. Case and his wife in a substantial manner by presenting them with a complete set of imported china, while the employes of the same house presented a gift of a solid set of silver. Other gifts of use and ornament were showered upon the happy couple.

The bride is one of Plainfield's most estimable young women. She has always been actively engaged in church work, and at present is a member of the choir of the First Baptist church. They start on life's journey with all the signs of prosperity and happiness, and this is wished for them by their many friends.

Among the guests present were Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, of Freeport, L. I., who was a former pastor of the bride. There were about sixty guests present in all.

The friends of the bride and groom had planned to give the newly-married couple a great send off, but they were fooled at the last moment after all their trouble. A coach was stationed on Washington street, and as a couple supposed to be Mr. and Mrs. Case got into it for the purpose of driving to Bound Brook to take a train for Philadelphia, the serenaders commenced their demonstration. Down Second street to Central avenue the coach went, and following closely behind were a procession of bicycles containing guests who were well provided with horns. Streamers bearing inscriptions "We've Just Been Married" and "We Are Off For Niagara Falls," could be seen floating in the breeze. When Central avenue was reached the coach returned to its starting place, and then out walked Dr. Anderson and Miss Agnes Blair. In the meantime Mr. and Mrs. Case had taken a carriage for the North Avenue station, and were on their way to Philadelphia when the guests returned disappointed.

Says Soldiers Are Not Suffering.

Chief Wilson, of the borough, returned from Pompton Lakes Thursday evening, where he went to assist in taking Private Sprague back to camp. He was well pleased with what he saw at the camp and says that the soldiers are all doing well and are not suffering for want of anything. Private Sprague was placed in the guard house together with Private Scribner. They will be tried in a short time.

RECEIVER NEWHALL WON BIG LEGAL CASE.

Bitter Controversy Ended in the Supreme Court.

C. A. MARSH HIS LAWYER.

MR. NEWHALL'S HONESTY AND VERACITY HAD BEEN IMPUGNED.

National Bolt and Rivet Company Sued for a Bill of $1,100, But Mr. Newhall Filed a Counter Claim of $1,382—Lawyers Took a Long Time to Sum up it, and Jury Decided in Favor of Defendant.

Henry B. Newhall, as receiver of the Henry B. Newhall Company, appointed by the Chancellor, as defendant, and a Pennsylvania Corporation, as plaintiff, have been the principals in an exciting trial in the Supreme Court which ended Thursday with a verdict in favor of Mr. Newhall. The controversy was a bitter one and the two New York counsel for the Pennsylvania corporation, the National Bolt & Rivet Works, did not hesitate to impugn the honesty and veracity of the defendant. Craig A. Marsh, who represented Mr. Newhall, told the court and jury that he was glad to be able to meet that issue in a court room and present it for the decision of a competent court and jury, because as he would prove, there could be only one just answer.

The National Company brought the suit for a bill of goods amounting to someting over $1,100. Mr. Newhall admitted the bill to be correct but filed a counterclaim for hardware which he claimed to have sold to the National Company amounting to $1,282. The National Company denied having ordered the goods or having received them and insisted that the transaction was not all with their company, but with a Mr. Heyden. For nearly two years the company, Heyden and Newhall kept up a voluminous and scrimonious correspondence, all of which was produced in court. The court made no restriction as to the time the counsel on either side should take in addressing the jury and the respective counsel took full advantage of this privilege. Judge VanSyckel delivered an impartial charge, reviewing at considerable length the various questions involved and at its conclusion told the jury that the questions had been discussed with great ability by counsel on both sides and he was confident that the jury would reach a just verdict. The jury retired shortly after 1 o'clock and upon reassembling after the midday recess they rendered their verdict in favor of Mr. Newhall for the balance which he claimed due him. The result is that the National Company which brought the suit has its own claim wiped out, and Mr. Newhall, who was sued, obtains a judgment in his favor for the balance he claimed and all costs of suit.

Hopes to Release Champion.

William G. DeMeza, attorney for Alfred Champion, who was committed to the Elizabeth jail last week for nearly five months, on a charge of disorderly conduct, is doing what he can for his client, and hopes to succeed in securing his release in a few days on habeas corpus proceedings. Champion was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and be confined in the county jail for 90 days. Champion's attorney thinks that the sentence was too heavy and has the papers in the case all ready to sign.

Some cough mixcures smother the cough. But the next breeze fans it into life again.

Better put the cough out. That is, better go deeper and smother the fires of inflammation. Troches cannot do this. Neither can plain cod-liver oil.

But Scott's Emulsion can. The glycerine soothes and makes comfortable; the hypophosphites give power and stability to the nerves; and the oil feeds and strengthens the weakened tissues.

FLAMES SAVED HORSE.

BURNED HALTER STRAP, AND THE HORSE ESCAPED CREMATION.

Fire in Stable of John Reed, of Leland Avenue—Of Incendiary Origin—Angry Employes Suspected—Barn Saved.

The third fire-alarm within twenty-four hours was given from Box 28, last Sunday at 10:50 o'clock. A small boy in the family of John Reed, of Leland avenue, had gone out to the stable to get a drink, as the pump at the house was out of order. He found a lively conflagration in progress. The stable is adjoining John Reed's brick-yard.

The family all turned out and had the flames under control when the apparatus arrived. The fire was very evidently of incendiary origin. The odor of kerosene was strong. The oil had been thrown on the ceiling and wall above one of the stalls and allowed to run down into the manger. The light had been applied in the manger.

The halter holding the horse in the stall had been burnt off and the animal backed off into a corner where he was found. The damage will amount to $200. Luckily the hay upstairs did not catch although the floor was nearly burned through.

Mr. Reed has been having some trouble with several of his employes and it is thought that perhaps one of them sought revenge.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE'S LECTURE.

Plainfield Promised a Rare Treat in Her Lecture.

Plainfield is promised a rare treat in the lecture which Mrs. Julia Ward Howe is to give October 24th at the house of her daughter, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall. The subject will be "Personal Reminiscences of Lowell, Whittier and Holmes." Mrs. Howe is one of the last survivors of the "Golden Age of American Literature," and her recollections of the famous men and women, who made Boston so well-known as a literary centre, are full of interest and piquancy.

Although born and brought up in the city of New York, Mrs. Howe has lived in Boston for fifty years, ever since her marriage to the late Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe, the well-known philanthropist. A devoted student of books from her earliest years, the thoughtful atmosphere of her adopted city was very congenial to her tastes, and she soon became identified with it, although she has travelled extensively both in this country and in Europe. The home of the Howe's was a gathering place for authors, statesmen, reformers and the brightest element among society people.

Mrs. Howe is now preparing her reminiscences for publication in the Atlantic Monthly, and the lecture to be given here, her hearers will have a delightful foretaste of these.

A poet herself, and the author of one of our most stirring national lyrics, her recollections of the three poets of whom she will speak—Lowell, Whittier and Holmes—cannot fail to be full of insight and appreciation, while the wit for which she is well-known, puts her thoroughly in sympathy with the trenchant humor of the author of the Biglow papers, and the genial wit of the autocrat of the Breakfast Table.

JOE WAS NOT CREMATED.

WHEN MOURNED AS DEAD, HE MADE HIS APPEARANCE.

Chas. Vail's Barn Near South Plainfield, Destroyed By Fire—Supposed that Farm Hand and Horse Perished.

While Joe Gillespe was supposed to be a charred corpse hidden beneath the ruins of Charles Vail's barn, he appeared Sunday afternoon the same as ever to the great surprise of the family and neighbors who were sure that he was dead.

Compton Vail and Charles Vail both live in Plainfield avenue, near South Plainfield. W. W. Hall, Charles Vail's father-in-law, lives with the latter. They employ a Polander named Joe Gillespe to help about the farm. Saturday evening Compton Vail found Joe in Plainfield. He was sadly intoxicated. Vail bundled him into his wagon and drove him home. It was midnight when Compton Vail left Joe at Charles Vail's home. Then Compton went home and prepared to retire. He noticed a glow in the sky and looking out saw that his brother's barn was enveloped in flames.

Mr. Hall locked up the barn as usual Saturday. He put the three horses in the stalls and fastened them in. He also put up four calves. The cows were turned out in the yard. At 12:30 o'clock, he was aroused by a farm hand of Joel Manning's, who lives near by, telling him the barn was on fire.

When they hurried out, they found two of the horses, which had been securily fastened in the barn, running about the field. The calves were there as well. Joe and one horse were missing. So was the lantern that usually is kept on the piazza.

The fire burnt itself out, completely destroying the barn. The loss was $600, which was partially covered by insurance. It was supposed that Joe and one horse were cremated and such a message was sent to his family. Yesterday afternoon, Joe and the missing horse showed up separately. Joe, who can talk but very little English, could not explain what had happened.

Patrolman Nicholas Myers saw the light of the fire and sent in an alarm from box 37. The apparatus went as far as Sherman avenue but, finding the fire far beyond the city limits, returned.

Among the other things burned was a delivery wagon owned by the Grand Union Tea Company, for whom Vail worked.

ETTINGER IS DEAD.

Unable to Survive Bullet Wound and Died Sunday Afternoon.

The death of Michael Ettinger, of Cottage place, occurred Saturday night at Muhlenberg Hospital. A week ago Mr. Ettinger shot himself with intent to kill. He was taken to the hospital and an effort was made to save his life by an operation. The bullet was removed from his head, but his vitality was so low that recovery was impossible. The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, from the home of Michael Coyne, 508 East Third street.

Resigned as Chief Hello Girl.

Miss Lucy A. Westphal, for sometime past the chief operator at the local telephone office, resigned her position last Saturday. Her place has been filled by Miss Etta Yaeger, who was formerly an operator.

STABBED IN NECK ON LONELY ROAD.

After Night of Carousing Wm. Drobney Was Murdered.

COMRADES ARE SUSPECTED.

WARREN STREETER ADMITS THAT THERE WAS A FRACAS.

Bound Brook Has Another Sensational Fatality Took Place Close to County Line—County Authorities Claim That the Blow was Struck in Middlesex and That the Man Died in Somerset.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, October 17—After an evening of drinking and carousing at "Mulvey's," as the Port Reading Hotel is familiarly called, William Drobney, of Somerville, started to walk to the Bound Brook station with two boon companions. When next seen he was a fast-stiffening corpse, lying face downward on the road with a jagged cut on the left side of his throat. His companions of the evening now rest in jail, suspected of being implicated in the murder of the young man.

A party of three young men, apparently in the best of spirits, took the trolley car from Somerville Saturday evening for Bound Brook. They were William Drobney, who is employed in a brickyard there, Warren Streeter, son of Enoch Streeter, a well-known painter in Somerville, and Joseph Spencer, Jr., whose father is employed at the brickyard as well.

Drobney was twenty-one years old and the others were slightly older. All believed in a friendly glass, now and then, and they had sampled several before they left Somerville. Arriving in Bound Brook they went to the Port Reading Hotel, that lies down close to the Raritan river, just over in Middlesex county. There they spent the remainder after their fashion of enjoyment.

It was nearly midnight when, according to the testimony of various witnesses, they left the hotel with the intention of returning to Somerville. It is said that all three were badly intoxicated. While there may have been several arguments among them they all appeared on good terms when they departed. That was the last time the three were seen together.

Edward Smalley has been driving the stage between Bound Brook and the termination of the New Brunswick trolley. After his last trip he brought his team to the Port Reading Hotel and unhitched them. He boarded at the hotel. After putting up his horses he discovered that some miscreant had stolen his blankets from the stage. Knowing that the theft must have taken place in the last few minutes he decided to take the short cut route to Bound Brook with the hope of finding the thief.

From the Port Reading Hotel and the river roads there are two ways into the town. One is dark and lonely. It leads up between the embankments of the Lehigh Valley and Port Reading Railroads and then passes under the Lehigh and Central tracks. The Lehigh Valley depot is reached just before passing under the bridge. On the road are two bridges over small streams. Somewhere between these two lies the county line between Somerset and Middlesex. The other and more often used way is by the new causeway and East Main street.

Smalley selected the dark and lonely way as being the shorter. As he hurried along the cinder path on the left of the road, at 12 o'clock, he stumbled over a body lying face downwards. Supposing it to be a drunken man, he lit a match. When he rolled the body over, there was a horrid cut on the left side of his neck nearly four inches in length. He had bled very freely and his clothing and the ground were saturated with gore.

Horrified at his discovery, Smalley hastened back to the hotel and told the grewsome news. He recognized the man as Drobney. A colored man named George Lewis, from Bound Brook, was there. He remembered the three young men and started to Bound Brook at once to identify the others if they could be found. Word was also sent to Chief Marshal Sebring, of Bound Brook, about the tragedy.

Lewis came to town and, at the Jersey Central station, found Streeter and Spencer fast asleep in a drunken slumber. Chief-Marshal Sebring was notified and came and put the two men under arrest. At that time, it is alleged, both were intoxicated.

Coroner Stillwell, of Somerville, was sent for and arrived here at 4 o'clock Sunday morning. The prisoners were then detained at the hotel across from the depot. They had not yet recovered from their spree but Streeter admitted that there had been some kind of a fracas, but declared that Drobney had struck him first. Spencer, it is claimed, corroborated the statement.

In the morning, the light disclosed that a trail of blood about fifty feet in length led to the place where the body was found. It was known that the county line ran close by but no one could tell in which county the crime was committed. It will be necessary to make survey to ascertain.

The Somerset county authorities held a coroner's inquest over the remains. A jury composed of Henry Bollinger, William Schure, Walter Beiss, C. L. L. Peeples, George Wyckoff, James T. Terry and F. B. Carr, all of Bound Brook, was sworn in. The inquest began in the morning and was continued in the afternoon. During the afternoon Prosecutor Dungan, of Somerset, and Prosecutor Voorhees, of Middlesex, held a conference, and both prepared to take the case in charge if it is found to be in their respective counties. The place where the body and the trail of blood were found were carefully marked and the earth where the blood had soaked in was taken up and saved. The body remains in the establishment of De-Mott & Edgerton.

A pocketknife with an open blade was found near the body of the murdered man.

After the session Sunday afternoon, the coroner's jury adjourned until 1 o'clock this afternoon when it met at Somerville. The autopsy was performed by Dr. Fisher, of Bound Brook, and showed two cuts, one on the left side of the throat four inches long and the other, a smaller one, behind the left ear. The first cut pierced the jugular vein and caused the victim to bleed to death. The two prisoners were taken to the Somerville jail Sunday morning.

A CHURCH ANNIVERSARY.

METHODISTS HAVE WORSHIPPED IN PRESENT EDIFICE 25 YEARS.

Special Services in Commemoration of the Event Were Commenced Sunday—Many Visiting Pastors Present.

The Methodist Episcopal church began Sunday a celebration of its twenty fifth anniversary, an observance which will be continued more than half of this week. The attendance at the meetings was large and great interest is being shown in the church not only by its own members, but by outsiders as well.

The first service was a love feast at 9:30 o'clock. The leader was Rev. A. M. Palmer, of Newark. The morning sermon was preached by Rev. C. S. Woodruff, of Dover, at 10:30 o'clock.

The young people's rally at 2:30 o'clock took the place of the regular Sunday-school exercises. At this service Rev. G. H. Whitney, D. D., of Plainfield, and an ex-president of Hackettstown Seminary, made an excellent address. Dr. Whitney is just recovering from a severe illness, but despite that there was vigor and strength in what he said. The other speakers were Rev. A. L. Wilson, of Bound Brook, and Mrs. Dr. C. S. Woodruff, of Dover.

Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, D. D., preached the evening sermon. Dr. Snodgrass made a few introductory remarks in which he congratulated the church and organization on the life and growth of twenty-five years. The Doctor ventured the remark that in another quarter of a century this district will be thickly settled, and hoped that the church would be able to meet the added responsibilities. The text was taken from the twentieth chapter of John, twenty-first verse: "As my father has sent me, even so I send you."

Upon the pulpit platform with Dr. Snodgrass were seated Rev. Frank Fletcher, of New Market, and the pastor, Rev. Dr. E. S. Jamison.

The anniversary exercises do not celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Methodist society, but of the building of the present edifice. About eight years before the church was erected Dr. G. H. Whitney, who was then pastor of the First Methodist church in Plainfield, suggested to Rev. C. E. Little, D. D., now of Jersey City, that he organize a society in Dunellen and New Market. The suggestion was followed out and about 1868 or 1869 a little band of Methodists gathered together and organized. Later they built the church in New Market now occupied by the Episcopalians. Dr. Whitney addressed the young people yesterday, and tonight and tomorrow night Rev. Dr. Little is expected to be present at the reunion with former pastors and friends. Rev. C. C. Woodruff, of Scotch Plains, son of an old pastor, will speak tonight, and Rev. George Angleman, of Junction, grandson of an old worker, will speak tomorrow night.

At tonight's service and also tomorrow night several of the old pastors will be present, and no doubt will have many interesting things to tell about their experiences during their pastorates.

The choir is assisting at all the services, and has been largely augmented. Last evening the pulpit was prettily decorated with palms, potted plants and cut flowers. Over the pulpit was displayed the American flag, and against the wall were placed two dates, 1873, when the church was built, and 1898.

Joseph E. Morse, of Franklin place, is out again after being confined to his home for several days with illness.

CONGRESSMAN HOWELL IS RENOMINATED.

Harmony Personified in the Third District.

JUST LIKE A LOVE FEAST.

THE CONVENTION WAS HELD IN SOMERVILLE TODAY.

Convention Called to Order by Chas. Place, of North Plainfield—Monmouth Man Made Chairman—Convention Did Not Take a Recess—Rev. J. H. Clearer Made Nominating Speech for Howell.

Somerville, October 18.—The Republican convention of the Third Congressional District convened in Somerset Hall, on Main street, this morning at 11:30 o'clock, being called to order by Hon. Charles Place, of North Plainfield, chairman of the Congressional committee.

Henry L. White, of Monmouth, was named for temporary chairman, and Benjamin L. Ogden, of Monmouth, and H. C. Suydam, of Somerset, secretaries. Senator C. Asa Francis, of Monmouth, Theodore Strong, of Middlesex, and T. W. Morrison, of Somerset, were chosen to escort Mr. White to the platform. The vice-presidents chosen were Frank Appleby, of Monmouth, Howard Valentine, of Middlesex, and J. Newton Voorhees, of Somerset.

The Congressional committee was appointed to consist of Charles Place, of North Plainfield, and George W. Hops, of Raritan.

After the organization of the convention was perfected, the committee on resolutions presented their platform without taking a recess. It endorsed the State platform and the candidacy of Foster Voorhees, praised the administration of President McKinley and the conduct of the war, and highly complimented the career of Congressman Howell in the House of Representatives.

Nominations were then called for and Rev. J. B. Clever, of Bound Brook, arose and in a glowing speech nominated Congressman Howell for a second term. The nomination was then made by acclamation. Congressman Howell was conveniently near, and he was escorted to the hall and delivered a speech of acceptance.

The whole proceedings were over and the convention had adjourned by one o'clock.

A FORMER PLAINFIELDER INJURED.

Frank Ianson Meets With a Serious Accident in a Railroad Collision.

One of the worst railroad accidents in the west was that which happened recently at Indianola, Neb., in which three railroad employes were killed and several injured.

Among the latter was Frank Ianson, well known to many of our citizens. He lived for years on East Third street, where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Ianson, now reside. Mr. Ianson is at present a resident of Hastings, Neb., and he is employed as an engineer on the B. and M. Railroad.

He was in charge of the second engine of a double-header, (known in railroad parlance as two engines hitched together), that was pulling a stock train, composed mostly of sheep cars, which ran into a freight train at the Indianola depot. The engineer of the freight train, the fireman of the first engine of the double-header and a brakeman on the stock train were killed. The McCook, (Neb.,) Courier says that Ianson was badly bruised and possibly injured internally.

Two brothers of Mr. Ianson are employed on the New Jersey Central Railroad—Jud as engineer of a passenger train, and George as baggagemaster. His father was for a number of years in the employ of the Central as a boss carpenter.

MR. CRANE SENDS $5.

Democratic Candidate for Governor Remembers Catholic Fair.

Monday at the Catholic Club was a repetition of the previous night. The attendance was fair, and the interest unabated. P. Casey, of West Third street, has donated a cane made of wood from the fort at ElCaney, Cuba, which will be given either to the Democratic nominee for Governor, Crane, or the Republican, Voorhees.

The cane has a silver knob on top, and is well worth having. Mr. Casey has written to both Crane and Voorhees, asking permission to use their names in the contest. Mr. Crane has replied giving his consent. It costs a few cents to vote, and last Monday the contest was quite exciting.

Last Tuesday Mr. Casey received a letter from E. W. Crane, Democratic candidate for Governor, in which was enclosed a check for $5. In the letter Mr. Crane says he hopes the best man may win, and the check is to be credited to whoever he may be.

Wesley Abbott, of Yale University, returned from his studies and spent Sunday at his home on Central avenue.

A Prominent Physician.

A prominent New York physician in discussing the merits of Ripans Tabules with a brother M. D. said: "Several years ago I asserted that if one wished to become a philanthopist, and do a beneficent deed—one that would help the whole human race—nothing could be better than to procure the Roosevelt Hospital prescription, which is the basis of the Ripans Tabules, and cause it to be put up in the form of a ketchup and distributed among the poor."

Sales Increasing.

The largest retail drug store in America is that of Hegeman & Co. on Broadway in New York City. A reporter who went there to learn how Ripans Tabules were selling bought a five-cent carton and asked: "Do you have much call for these?"

He was referred to a gentleman who proved to be the head of the department. He said:

"The sale of Ripans Tabules is constant and is increasing. due especially to the influential character of the testimonials in the daily press, and growing out of these, through the recommendation of friend to friend. Satisfaction with them is very general. When once they are begun I notice that a permanent customer for them is made. This, I believe, is through their intrinsic merit, which proves the bona fide character of the advertising. I think them specially useful in the general run of stomach troubles."

An Elderly Lady.

An elderly lady living at Fordham Heights, a part of New York City, and who was known to be a warm advocate of Ripans Tabules for any case of liver trouble or indigestion, said to a reporter who visited her for the purpose of learning particulars of her case: "I had always employed a physician and did so on the last occasion I had for one, but at that time obtained no beneficial results. I had never had any faith in patent medicines, but having seen Ripans Tabules recommended very highly in the New York Herald concluded to give them a trial, and found they were just what my case demanded. I have never employed a physician since, and that means a saving of $3 a call. A dollar's worth of Ripans Tabules lasts me a month, and I would not be without them now if it were my last dollar." At the time of this interview there were in recommending the Tabules to any one afflicted as I was. If the telling about my case in the papers enables some other person similarly afflicted to be as greatly benefited as I have been, I see no objection." The daughters, knowing how earnestly she felt about the benefit she had received, decided she was quite right.

TEN FOR FIVE CENTS. RIPANS ONE GIVES RELIEF

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES packed in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at druggists generally at FIVE CENTS. This low price (5 cents) is for the present only, and is made to introduce the Tabules into many homes where their excellence is unknown. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (72 tabules) can be had by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York. Ripans Tabules may also be had of some druggists, price sixty cents a dozen. Druggists and all some Ripans Tabules, and the price is 60

PLAY GROUNDS FOR THE POOR CHILDREN.

Philanthropic Subject Discussed by Progressive Women.

WHAT NEWARK HAS DONE.

MRS. VANWINKLE DESCRIBED THE WORK IN THAT CITY.

Local Town Improvement Association Would Have Play Grounds Established in This City—Mrs. Malli Gave a Verbal Report of Work of Association for the Coming Year—Those Who Assisted Her.

There was an interesting meeting of the Town Improvement Association in the large hall of the Y. M. C. A. building Tuesday afternoon, when the members discussed the subject of play grounds for poor children. The president, Mrs. Malli, was present and read a number of articles from well-known newspapers regarding the success of play grounds for children in many of the largest cities of this country. The idea originated in Berlin, but now Philadelphia contributes $2,000 a year for the support of these grounds in that city. Brooklyn, New York, Chicago, as well as Newark, have such institutions. In many of the cities mentioned kindergarten departments have been established and instructors are employed to look after and teach the children.

Mrs. VanWinkle, of Newark, who is interested in the work in that city, was present at the meeting and gave the members some valuable suggestions along the line of work suggested by the topic. She said that the Board of Works of Newark had given nine lots to be used as play grounds, and they are all successfully carried on. She said that the chief of police in her city does not approve of women doing anything but to stay at home, and she advised the members to look out for the chief of police.

Mrs. VanWinkle told those present that if they would like to see something real interesting they should visit her city some Saturday evening. It is as good as a circus, the speaker said. She told the members something regarding the cost of maintaining play grounds and about many other things in detail.

The other part of the meeting was devoted to a verbal report by Mrs Malli of the work of last year. She told about the work of placing cans about the city, of the work done at the city park, and also about the work of offering prizes to those who have the best kept back yards. Among those who have contributed benches for the city park are the following: Mrs. Babcock, Mrs. O. T. Waring, Alexander Gilbert, Mason W. Tyler, Rowland Cox and Marion Ackerman. Miss Kenyon, Miss Isabella Tweedy and Mayor Fisk, as well as many others, have contributed money for grass guards at the park.

Mrs. Malli read a short article regarding the curfew bell and an informal discussion followed. The subjects introduced at the meeting will be considered by the members and reported upon later. The members are strongly impressed with the idea that play grounds for poor children can be established in this city with profit.

WORK ON THE STREETS.

Improvements on Belvidere Avenue Were Finished Yesterday.

As the fall advances and cold weather approaches, there is a rapid finishing up of the work on the streets so as to leave them in as good condition as possible when winter sets in.

Street Commissioner Gavett's men finished Belvidere avenue yesterday, and will begin on South avenue and macadamize the block between Belvidere and Woodland avenues along the street railway tracks. When this is done all the macadamizing will be finished for this year except on Central avenue beyond Randolph road, where the gutters will be macadamized at the property owners' expense.

There is also a little grading to be done near the corner of Spooner avenue and West Fourth street, where the gutter will have to be lowered so as to carry away the water.

To Speak On Purity Movement.

Aaron M. Powell, of this city, president of the American Purity Alliance, will address the members and friends of the executive committee of that organization at the United Charities building, New York, Tuesday, on the late London Congress of the International Federation for the Abolition of State Regulation of Vice and the present outlook of the purity movement in Europe and America. Mr. Powell has only recently returned from Europe where he attended the Congress.

Albert Garland, of New Brunswick, is a guest of Plainfield friends.

HYMEN AMONG GERMANS

FIRST MARRIAGE CELEBRATED IN SAENGERBUND HALL.

Miss Teresa Prim and Henry Myer the Happy Couple to Be Wedded—A Social Time Followed Ceremony.

Miss Teresa Prim, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Prim, of Bound Brook, and Henry Myer, of the borough, have the honor of being the first couple to be married in Saengerbund Hall. The happy event took place Tuesday at 9 o'clock in the presence of a large company of friends and relatives. The hall was artistically decorated for the occasion by Frederick Paasch.

Long before the appointed hour the guests arrived and enjoyed a social time among themselves. Just previous to the marriage the guests arranged their seats near the stage and prepared for the approach of the bridal couple. The wedding march was played by Prof. Wendall's orchestra.

The bride, accompanied by Augustus Mobus, entered the hall first. She was gowned in a blue cloth trimmed with yellow silk and lace. Then came two flower girls, Elvira Hoerster and Florrie Scheelein, dressed in white. They were followed by Miss Anna Kunzleman, in a gown of dark colored cloth trimmed with lace, and accompanying her was the groom, Henry Meyer. When the party reached the stage they were met by Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, who performed the ceremony according to the form of the church of which he is pastor. The marriage was performed with a ring and the bride was given away by Mr. Mobus.

Following the ceremony, the singing section of the Gesang and Turn Verein rendered several selections under the direction of Prof. Eichhorn, of Elizabeth. During this time congratulations and rice were showered upon the happy couple by all present.

The rest of the evening was devoted to a general good time, during which dancing was a feature. A supper was served in the basement of the hall, and the members of the Ladies' Circle of the society assisted in receiving and helping the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Myer received a large collection of gifts, useful as well as ornamental. The Gesang and Turn Verein presented a handsome clock, while the Ladies' Circle gave an entire dinner set of china. Other valuable gifts were also received.

Mrs. Myer was a member for two years of Mrs. Hoerster's family on Somerset street. She is very popular among a large circle of friends. Her husband is in the employ of the Plainfield Street Railway Company as motorman on one of the cars. The couple will go to housekeeping at once on Regent street, where a furnished house awaits their occupancy.

FAKIRS IN RAHWAY.

Worked Themselves Off as Representatives of W. Warren Rowley.

Rahway, October 26.—There are a number of Rahway business men who discovered Monday that they had been victimized by two strangers. They found it out on the arrival of G. Warren Rowley, who makes it a business to get up Rowley's framed business directories all through the Eastern States.

Last year Rowley made a Rahway directory and hung copies in the post-office and leading hotels. It was handsomely framed and was very complete. A week ago two men who registered at the Wilson House as O. S. Nichols and Mr. Morgan, of New York, made a circuit of the business men and represented themselves to be Rowley's agents and asked for renewals of the advertisements. They collected over $100 and then brought out a directory very cheaply printed and vastly inferior to the old one. It was so cheap looking that that the postmaster and hotel keepers refused to allow them to remain on the walls of their establishments.

Monday the real Mr. Bowley showed up and then the business men found that the alleged representatives were fakirs. Rowley is now getting up a business directory like the old one.

Sold at Private Sale.

Meeker Brothers did not offer their lots on Hillside and Highland avenues at auction Tuesday, but they sold five at private sale. F. L. Martin bought two on Hillside avenue, P. B. Macintyre bought one on Hillside avenue, and F. W. Perry bought two on the corner of Hillside and Highland avenues. The valuable business property on East Front street was not sold at auction Tuesday, as advertised, but two different persons are figuring with the owners with a view of purchasing the property.

—Repairs are still being made to the street car tracks on West Front street.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB ENTERTAIN.

First of a Series of Monthly Entertainments by That Organization.

A feature of the winter at the Young Women's Club on Madison avenue will be the monthly entertainments, the first of which was held in the club rooms last Tuesday. The entertainment was particularly for the members but there were a number of others present as well.

The programme was a very entertaining one and well enjoyed by those who heard it. It included vocal solos by Miss Hyatt and Miss Katheryn Glen, recitations by Miss Eada Burr and Miss Hoagland, mandolin solos by Wickham Beekman, and piano solos by Master VanArdale.

After the programme was completed, a social time was enjoyed during which refreshments were served. Mrs. L. H. Bigelow, Jr., exercised a general supervision over the whole affair, which was arranged by a committee composed of Mrs. William Gray, chairman, Miss Fanny Hayden, Miss Mathilde Moraller and Miss Nellie Kreger.

TO STUDY A GREAT POET.

Browning Club to Be Organized By Young Congregationalists.

Plans have been laid for the organization of a Browning Circle among the young people of the Congregational church. The movement was headed by the pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, who will explain the different poems of that celebrated author as they are read to the circle at the meetings. The first meeting will be held in the church parlors Friday evening, when a formal organization will be effected and the work of the circle begun. That evening the following poems will be read and discussed: "How They Brought the Good News From Ghent to Aix," "An Incident of the French Camp," "Herve Riel," "The Lost Leader," "The Last Ride Together," "Gold Hair."

ENDEAVORERS STRIVE FOR BETTER RESULTS.

Union County Members Held a Conference Tuesday.

E. E. ANTHONY'S REMARKS.

HE DISCUSSED THE SUBJECT OF EVANGELISTIC WORK.

In the Afternoon an Interesting Session for the Junior Workers was Held—Officers Elected—An Open Parliament in the Evening—Mr. Anthony Told How Evangelistic Work Should be Done.

Christian Endeavorers from all over Union county gathered in the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday afternoon and last night to engage in open parliament, discussions and addresses and thus promote the Endeavor work in this county preparatory for the fall and winter. The afternoon session was given over to the Junior workers, who listened to papers and addresses, enjoyed a couple of social hours at supper, then gathered in the large hall where members of the entire union gathered and took part in two open parliaments.

At the afternoon session Miss Bogart, of Roselle, read a paper on "Enthusiasm in Junior work;" Mrs. Henry Manson, of Plainfield, one on "How to Interest the Mothers," and C. Routzann spoke on "What to do with the Boys."

The election of officers resulted as follows: For president, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, of Plainfield; vice president, F. G. Williams, of Rahway; secretary, Miss Baumgartner, of Rahway; treasurer, Miss Bogart, of Roselle.

During the meeting Miss Minnie G. Morse sang two solos, accompanying herself upon the autoharp.

On the platform in the evening were Rev. Mr. Braker, of Scotch Plains; F. G. Williams, of Rahway, president of the Union county union; E. E. Anthony, Mrs. W. Lowry and Miss Florence G Hawkins. Rev. A. I. Martine, of Dunellen, led the singing and Clifford Braider presided at the piano.

The devotional exercises were in charge of Rev. Mr. Braker, and then Mr. Williams announced that the programme committee had decided upon two open parliaments for the evening, one upon Bible study and evangelistic work led by E. E. Anthony. The attendance at the evening session was large, and endeavorers were present from Westfield, New Market, Dunellen, Washingtonville, Metuchen and perhaps from every society in Union county, and the responses to the queries put by the leaders were prompt.

A good practical way in which the young people can do evangelistic work, Mr. Anthony said, was to go out and invite others to come out to church. Some one suggested that they go into those homes where the people cannot get out and carry the word of God. Several other suggestions on the same line were also made.

Mrs. W. S. Lowry had a few words to say about the junior work of the society, the most important work, she claimed, of any in connection with the Christian Endeavor.

Mr. Anthony gave a little talk on "Finance," as the leader called it. Mr. Anthony was called upon to make these few remarks before taking up the collection because he is blessed with the ability to place before the union in such a clear but pleasant way that the pocketbooks and purses open of their own free will and pour the coppers and silver upon the plates. The offering was large.

The devotional and prayer meeting conference was led by Miss Florence G. Hawkins. There was quite a number of people in the audience who were members of one or both of these committees. A few suggestions made by Miss Hawkins, that the meetings begin on time, that they open with prayer, that the leaders pray, that all the societies encourage sentence prayers, were considered good. The closing exercises, a consecration service, was conducted by Rev. Mr. Martine.

The Washingtonville society won the banner for having the largest percentage of members present. The Washingtonville society consists of twenty four members, twenty-two of whom were out. Marconier, with six members, had five present, and Warren chapel society, with thirty-six members, had eighteen out.

Annual Meeting O. A. A.

The annual meeting of the Organized Aid Association of Plainfield will be held in the lecture room of the Crescent Avenue church, Thursday evening, November 3d, at 8 o'clock. An address will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Amory H. Bradford, of Montclair, N. J.

ARCANUM ENTERTAINS.

SECOND ANNUAL ENTERTAINMENT OF GREENBROOK COUNCIL.

Held in Washington Hall Tuesday Night and Largely Attended—Lengthy but Enjoyable Programme—The Programme.

There was a large gathering of the members and friends of Greenbrook Council, No. 1725, Royal Arcanum, at Washington Hall, last Tuesday, when the second annual entertainment of the council was held. A lengthy but enjoyable programme was given during the evening.

The entertainment opened with an overture, rendered by Emil Adolphi, of New York. The rest of the programme included bird warbling and imitations by Miss Ella Gertrude Gustam, of New York, several selections by the Nonpareil Banjo Trio, from New York, a vocal solo, by E. C. Martin, of this city, zither solos by J. Schwartzwalder, of New York. Miss Etta Krymer was to sing but illness prevented her appearance. Grand Regent W. Holt Apgar, of Trenton, was down to speak on "Why We Work for the Order."

He was unable to be present and his place was taken by Vice-Regent Lightfoot, of Westfield. Mr. Lightfoot apologized for taking the place of a greater attraction, said a few funny things and ended with a short talk on the benefits to be derived from membership in the Royal Arcanum.

The entertainment was given under the direction of Horace L. Bowne, of Hoboken, chairman of the State committee on work of the order. He appeared twice, giving some humorous stories and jokes and then a recitation, "Knee Deep in June," by James Whitcomb Riley. S. C. Baker, of this city, had his phonograph and entertained with several selections.

The committee from Greenbrook Council who arranged the entertainment was composed of Chas. C. Davis, George O. Stevens, Charles M. Wilson, Frank L. Cobb and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges.

Miss Lillian A. Force acted as accompanist for Mr. Martin.

DEATH OF EPHRIAM RANDOLPH.

He was a Substantial Farmer in Piscataway Township.

New Market, October 26—The death of Ephriam F. Randolph, aged seventy-three years, one of the oldest residents of Piscataway township, occurred last evening after a short illness with heart trouble and inflammation of the stomach. Mr. Randolph was a farmer, and has resided in Piscataway for a great number of years.

He was a member of the Baptist church and was an upright and highly-esteemed citizen. He leaves a widow, two sons and one daughter. William D. Manning, of Netherwood, is a son-in-law. The funeral services will be held from his late residence next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the Baptist church, will officiate. Interment will be in the Baptist church cemetery at Plainfield.

SETTLING INSURANCE CLAIMS.

Various Agents are Busy as a Result of the Big Fire.

The insurance companies represented by Elston M. French & Co., of North avenue, have settled the loss by fire on the building occupied by the U. S. Express Company and Stephenson's restaurant. The damage amounted to $106, and was the result of the big fire in the Thompson building opposite.

The insurance on the Bard Company's stock lost by fire has not yet been settled, owing to the fact that the Bard Company has not yet completed the inventory of stock lost.

W. H. Abbott, of North avenue, has settled with John F. McIntyre for the damage to his North avenue property, as a result of the big fire at A. D. Thompson's building. The damage amounted to $125.

Handsome Residence to be Built.

J. B. Mills & Company have given out the contract for the building of a handsome residence on Sandford avenue. The contract was awarded to Herman Hanson, of this city. The cost will be $4,500. Work will be started tomorrow and the house is to be completed by the first of March. Jesse A. Oakley & Son, of Elizabeth, are the architects.

Death of Mrs. Froelich.

The death of Mrs. Augustus Froelich, of Midway avenue, occurred last Tuesday after a long illness from a complication of diseases. She was well known among a large circle of friends and her death will be a shock to many. She was about 52 years of age and had lived in Plainfield for many years. A husband survives her.

WALLER IS NOT GUILTY.

ACQUITTED OF CHARGE OF ROBBING EAST MILLSTONE DEPOT.

The Trial Has Been Going On for a Week and Excited Great Interest—Shine and Wright Declared Guilty.

Somerville, October 26.—Justice of the Peace William N. Waller, of East Millstone, who was indicted for robbing the Pennsylvania Railroad station at that place, was yesterday acquitted of the charge. The two men who were indicted and tried with him on the same charge, Thomas Shine and Thomas Wright, were found guilty.

The trial has occupied the Somerset Court since Tuesday of last week. "Jerry" Washington, a colored resident of Millstone, was indicted with the others, but he turned State's evidence and the indictment against him was nolle prossed. The case has attracted much interest. Prosecutor Dungan was assisted by Joseph M. Noonan, former Assistant Prosecutor of Hudson county, and by former Judge Cowenhoven, of New Brunswick. The defendants were represented by former Prosecutor William V. Steele, Alvah A. Clark and George W. Anderson.

According to the prosecution, the defendants bound and gagged Henry Jones, the night watchman at the station, the morning of September 17th, and then blew open the safe. Some days after the assault Jones died suddenly. The evidence that the State could produce was largely circumstantial.

The jury, after remaining out all night, arrived at a verdict early in the morning.

NO CHANCE TO EVADE THE LAW.

Men Accused of Murder Will Be Indicted in Two Counties

New Brunswick, Oct. 26—The dispute as to where Warren Streeter and Joseph Spencer, Jr., shall be arraigned for trial upon charges of assaulting Wm. Daubney, who was killed near Bound Brook the night of Oct. 15th, has not yet been settled. Prosecutor Voorhees, of Middlesex county, and Prosecutor Dungan, of Somerset county, have agreed to have the accused men indicted by the Grand Juries of both counties.

Then the accused will be placed on trial in Middlesex county. There is doubt as to where they should be tried, because, apparently, the dead man was assaulted in Middlesex, a few feet from the dividing line, and then carried across the county line into Somerset, where he died.

Should counsel for the men question the jurisdiction of the Middlesex court and be successful, the case in Middlesex will be dropped and Prosecutor Dungan will move the trial in Somerset. To prove Middlesex has no jurisdiction the defense will have to prove that Somerset should try the case.

PARK CLUB PRESIDENT RESIGNS.

George F. Dupee Resigns and Mr. Hegeman is Chosen in His Place.

A meeting of the Park Club was held last Tuesday and the resignation of George P. Dupee as president of the club was received with deep regret by the members. Mr. Dupee felt obliged to resign owing to the fact that his business would not permit his giving a sufficient amount of his time to the office. The club accepted Mr. Dupee's resignation, and unanimously elected former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., as president of the club. Mr. Hegeman is one of the charter members of the club, and has served as an officer and member faithfully for many years. He will no doubt infuse new life into the club and thus make the future one of great success for all interested.

COULDN'T GET AT HER BANK BOOK.

It Was in a Trunk That Was Attached by a Creditor.

Justice Nash issued an attachment Tuesday for D. M. Groendyke against Mrs. Forrest Jones, colored. Mrs. Jones' trunk was attached just as she was ready to leave town, and everything, including a bank book, was packed in. As Mrs. Jones couldn't open the trunk to get at the bank book, because of the attachment, she was in a dilemma, for the woman had enough money in the bank to satisfy the demands.

So Constable Mattox brought Mrs. Jones to Justice Nash, and after a deal of figuring on both sides the matter was finally adjusted.

GAVE THE GLAD HAND TO YOUNG SOLDIERS.

Camp Fire Held by Winfield Scott Post Last Night.

PATRIOTIC REMARKS HEARD

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS OF SPANISH WAR WERE THERE.

Rev. William C. O'Donnell and Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph Were Present and Gave Entertaining Remarks—Programme in Charge of Commander E. C. Morse—Relief Corps Served the Banquet.

Under the auspices of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of this city, an open camp-fire was held last Tuesday in their rooms on East Front street. In addition to the members of the Post, there were present soldiers and marines of the present war, members of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., together with old soldiers who do not belong to any Post. The affair was a sort of a reunion and was very enjoyable throughout.

The features of the evening were the two addresses, one by Rev. William C. O'Donnell, pastor of Monroe Avenue church, and a Son of a Veteran, and another by former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, who is an enthusiastic member of the Post. These addresses were full of patriotism and were intensely interesting. They were along the line of the late war, the present war and the Revolutionary contest.

Commander E. C. Morse, of the Post, had the programme in charge and after making remarks of a welcome nature, he announced the several numbers on the programme, which consisted of remarks by Mrs. Ford, Comrades W. R. Mattox, Past Commanders Charles Randolph, W. C. Corlell and I. L. McVoy. There was also a reading by Commander Morse, entitled "The Hero in the Ranks." Miss Jennie Smith favored those present with several piano solos, and Officer of the Day Wm. C. Smith, rendered a popular song, and several cornet solos were given by Mrs. J. D. Anderson, and John Becker gave several recitations. Comrade Forman, of New Brunswick, was present, and also spoke a few words. The programme throughout was listened to with pleasure and each number received cordial approbation.

All present were invited to the banquet room after the camp-fire, where the members of the Woman's Relief Corps had prepared a fine supper for the guests. This part of the affair was in charge of Mrs. Morse, Mrs. W. C. Smith, Mrs. Brokaw, Mrs. Stephenson, Mrs. Nash, Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Dobbins, Mrs. McVoy and several other members of the corps, the young women members of the corps waited on the tables.

FINE LECTURES BY FAMOUS MAN.

Garrett P. Serviss Will Deliver a Series of Three at the Casino.

The series of three pictorially illustrated lectures that are to be delivered in the Casino next month by Garrett P. Serviss form an unusual attraction to the public of Plainfield. Mr. Serviss is an author and journalist of unusual ability, who is well known by all the reading public. As a lecturer he promises to be very interesting. The lectures are to be given the evenings of Nov. 3d, 10th and 17th, beginning at 8:15 o'clock. The subjects are well chosen. They take place in the following order—"William Tell and the Romance of the Alps," "Spain, the Land of the Bull Fight and the Alhambra," and "Peter the Great and the Making of Russia." In the three, history, romance and travel are delightfully combined.

A new feature of the series is that they are by subscription only. The charge for the course is $2. There are still remaining a few subscriptions, which may be obtained by application to Wm. T. Gregg, 104 Fulton street, New York.

REV. A. R. DILTS ACCEPTED CALL.

Former Plainfield Pastor to go to the Lowell Tabernacle December 1st.

Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, for several years the pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church of this city but who went to Northampton, Mass., six years ago, has just accepted a call from the Lowell Tabernacle, Lowell, Mass., where he will enter upon his duties December 1st. Rev. Mr. Dilts has many friends in this city who will be glad to learn of his advancement. The Lowell Tabernacle is one of the principle churches in that thriving New England city and is noted for its activity.

—There will be a meeting of the membership committee of the Y. M. C. A. tonight at 8 o'clock.

PLAY GROUNDS FOR THE POOR CHILDREN.

Philanthropic Subject Discussed by Progressive Women.

WHAT NEWARK HAS DONE.

MRS. VANWINKLE DESCRIBED THE WORK IN THAT CITY.

Local Town Improvement Association Would Have Play Grounds Established in This City—Mrs. Malli Gave a Verbal Report of Work of Association for the Passing Year—Those Who Assisted

There was an interesting meeting of the Town Improvement Association in the large hall of the Y. M. C. A. building Tuesday afternoon, when the members discussed the subject of play grounds for poor children. The president, Mrs. Malli, was present and read a number of articles from well-known newspapers regarding the success of play grounds for children in many of the largest cities of this country. The idea originated in Berlin, but now Philadelphia contributes $5,000 a year for the support of theee grounds in that city. Brooklyn, New York, Chicago, as well as Newark, each have such institutions. In many of the cities mentioned kindergarten departments have been established and instructors are employed to look after and teach the children.

Mrs. VanWinkle, of Newark, who is interested in the work in that city, was present at the meeting and gave the members some valuable suggestions along the line of work suggested by the topic. She said that the Board of Works of Newark had given nine lots to be used as play grounds, and they are all successfully carried on. She said that the chief of police in her city does not approve of women doing anything but to stay at home, and she advised the members to look out for the chief of police.

Mrs. VanWinkle told those present that if they would like to see something real interesting they should visit her city some Saturday evening. It is as good as a dance, the speaker said. She also gave the members some thing regarding the cost of maintaining play grounds and about many other things in detail.

The other part of the meeting was devoted to a verbal report by Mrs Malli of the work of last year. She told about the work of placing cans about the city, of the work done at the city park, and also about the work of offering prizes to those who have the best kept back yards. Among those who have contributed benches for the city park are the following: Mrs. Babcock, Mrs. O. T. Waring, Alexander Gilbert, Mason W. Tyler, Rowland Cox and Marion Ackerman. Miss Kenyon, Miss Isabella Tweedy and Mayor Pisk, as well as many others, have contributed money for grass guards at the park.

Mrs. Malli read a short article regarding the curfew bell and an informal discussion followed. The subjects introduced at the meeting will be considered by the members and reported upon later. The members are strongly impressed with the idea that play grounds for poor children can be established in this city with profit.

WORK ON THE STREETS.

Improvements on Belvidere Avenue Were Finished Yesterday.

As the fall advances and cold weather approaches, there is a rapid finishing up of the work on the streets so as to leave them in as good condition as possible when winter sets in.

Street Commissioner Gavett's men finished Belvidere avenue yesterday, and will begin on South avenue and macadamize the block between Belvidere and Woodland avenues along the street railway tracks. When this is done all the macadamizing will be finished for this year except on Central avenue beyond Randolph road, where the gutters will be macadamized at the property owners' expense.

There is also a little grading to be done near the corner of Spooner avenue and West Fourth street, where the gutter will have to be lowered so as to carry away the water.

To Speak On Purity Movement.

Aaron M. Powell, of this city, president of the American Purity Alliance, will address the members and friends of the executive committee of that organization at the United Charities building, New York, Tuesday, on the late London Congress of the International Federation for the Abolition of State Regulation of Vice and the present outlook of the purity movement in Europe and America. Mr. Powell has only recently returned from Europe where he attended the Congress.

Albert Garland, of New Brunswick, is a guest of Plainfield friends.

HYMEN AMONG GERMANS

FIRST MARRIAGE CELEBRATED IN SAENGERBUND HALL.

Miss Teresa Prim and Henry Myer the Happy Couple to Be Wedded—A Social Time Followed Ceremony.

Miss Teresa Prim, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Prim, of Bound Brook, and Henry Myer, of the borough, have the honor of being the first couple to be married in Saengerbund Hall. The happy event took place Tuesday at 9 o'clock in the presence of a large company of friends and relatives. The hall was artistically decorated for the occasion by Frederick Paasch.

Long before the appointed hour the guests arrived and enjoyed a social time among themselves. Just previous to the marriage the guests arranged their seats near the stage and prepared for the approach of the bridal couple. The wedding march was played by Prof. Wendall's orchestra.

The bride, accompanied by Augustus Mobus, entered the hall first. She was gowned in a blue cloth trimmed with yellow silk and lace. Then came two flower girls, Elvira Hoerster and Florrie Scheelein, dressed in white. They were followed by Miss Anna Kunzleman, in a gown of dark colored cloth trimmed with lace, and accompaning her was the groom, Henry Meyer. When the party reached the stage they were met by Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, who performed the ceremony according to the form of the church of which he is pastor. The marriage was performed with a ring and the bride was given away by Mr. Mobus.

Following the ceremony, the singing section of the Gesang and Turn Verein rendered several selections under the direction of Prof. Eichhorn, of Elizabeth. During this time congratulations and rice were showered upon the happy couple by all present.

The rest of the evening was devoted to a general good time, during which dancing was a feature. A supper was served in the basement of the hall, and the members of the Ladies' Circle of the society assisted in receiving and helping the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Myer received a large collection of gifts, useful as well as ornamental. The Gesang and Turn Verein presented a handsome clock, while the Ladies' Circle gave an entire dinner set of china. Other valuable gifts were also received.

Mrs. Myer was a member for two years of Mrs. Hoerster's family on Somerset street. She is very popular among a large circle of friends. Her husband is in the employ of the Plainfield Street Railway Company as motorman on one of the cars. The couple will go to housekeeping at once on Regent street, where a furnished house awaits their occupancy.

FAKIRS IN RAHWAY.

Worked Themselves Off as Representatives of W. Warren Rowley.

Rahway, October 26.—There are a number of Rahway business men who discovered Monday that they had been victimized by two strangers. They found it out on the arrival of G. Warren Rowley, who makes it a business to get up Rowley's framed business directories all through the Eastern States.

Last year Rowley made a Rahway directory and hung copies in the post-office and leading hotels. It was handsomely framed and was very complete. A week ago two men who registered at the Wilson House as O. S. Nichols and Mr. Morgan, of New York, made a circuit of the business men and represented themselves to be Rowley's agents and asked for renewals of the advertisements. They collected over $100 and then brought out a directory very cheaply printed and vastly inferior to the old one. It was so cheap looking that that the postmaster and hotel keepers refused to allow them to remain on the walls of their establishments.

Monday the real Mr. Rowley showed up and then the business men found that the alleged representatives were fakirs. Rowley is now getting up a business directory like the old one.

Sold at Private Sale

Mocker Brothers did not offer their lots on Hillside and Highland avenues at auction Tuesday, but they sold five at private sale. F. L. Martin bought two on Hillside avenue, P. B. Macintyre bought one on Hillside avenue, and F. W. Perry bought two on the corner of Hillside and Highland avenues. The valuable business property on East Front street was not sold at auction Tuesday, as advertised, but two different persons are figuring with the owners with a view of purchasing the property.

—Repairs are still being made to the street car tracks on West Front street.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB ENTERTAIN.

First of a Series of Monthly Entertainments by That Organization.

A feature of the winter at the Young Women's Club on Madison avenue will be the monthly entertainments, the first of which was held in the club rooms last Tuesday. The entertainment was particularly for the members but there were a number of others present as well.

The programme was a very entertaining one and well enjoyed by those who heard it. It included vocal solos by Miss Hyatt and Miss Katheryn Glen, recitations by Miss Enda Barr and Miss Hoagland, mandolin solos by Wickham Beekman, and piano solos by Master VanArsdale.

After the programme was completed, a social time was enjoyed during which refreshments were served. Mrs. L. H. Bigelow, Jr., exercised a general supervision over the whole affair, which was arranged by a committee composed of Mrs. William Gray, chairman, Miss Fanny Hayden, Miss Mathilde Moraller and Miss Nellie Kreger.

TO STUDY A GREAT POET.

Browning Club to Be Organized By Young Congregationalists.

Plans have been laid for the organization of a Browning Circle among the young people of the Congregational church. The movement was headed by the pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, who will explain the different poems of that celebrated author as they are read to the circle at the meetings. The first meeting will be held in the church parlors Friday evening, when a formal organization will be effected and the work of the circle begun. That evening the following poems will be read and discussed: "How They Brought the Good News From Ghent to Aix," "An Incident of the French Camp," "Herve Riel," "The Lost Leader," "The Last Ride Together," "Gold Hair."

ENDEAVORERS STRIVE FOR BETTER RESULTS.

Union County Members Held a Conference Tuesday.

E. E. ANTHONY'S REMARKS.

HE DISCUSSED THE SUBJECT OF EVANGELIST.C WORK.

In the Afternoon an Interesting Session for the Junior Workers was Held—Officers Elected—An Open Parliament in the Evening—Mr. Anthony Told How Evangelistic Work Should be Done.

Christian Endeavorers from all over Union county gathered in the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday afternoon and last night to engage in open parliament, discussions and addresses and thus promote the Endeavor work in this county preparatory for the fall and winter. The afternoon session was given over to the Junior workers, who listened to papers and addresses, enjoyed a couple of social hours at supper, then gathered in the large hall where members of the entire union gathered and took part in two open parliaments.

At the afternoon session Miss Bogart, of Roselle, read a paper on "Enthusiasm in Junior work;" Mrs. Henry Manson, of Plainfield, one on "How to Interest the Mothers," and C. Routzann spoke on "What to do with the Boys."

The election of officers resulted as follows: For president, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, of Plainfield; vice president, F. G. Williams, of Rahway; secretary, Miss Baumgartner, of Rahway; treasurer, Miss Bogart, of Roselle.

During the meeting Miss Minnie G. Morse sang two solos, accompanying herself upon the autoharp.

On the platform in the evening were Rev. Mr. Braker, of Scotch Plains; F. G. Williams, of Rahway, president of the Union county union; E. E. Anthony, Mrs. W. Lowry and Miss Florence G. Hawkins. Rev. A. I. Martine, of Dunellen, led the singing and Clifford Braider presided at the piano.

The devotional exercises were in charge of Rev. Mr. Braker, and then Mr. Williams announced that the programme committee had decided upon two open parliaments for the evening, one upon Bible study and evangelistic work led by E. E. Anthony. The attendance at the evening session was large, and endeavorers were present from Westfield, New Market, Dunellen, Washingtonville, Metuchen and perhaps from every society in Union county, and the responses to the queries put by the leaders were prompt.

A good practical way in which the young people can do evangelistic work, Mr. Anthony said, was to go out and invite others to come out to church. Some one suggested that they go into those homes where the people cannot get out and carry the word of God. Several other suggestions on the same line were also made.

Mrs. W. S. Lowry had a few words to say about the junior work of the society, the most important work, she claimed, of any in connection with the Christian Endeavor.

Mr. Anthony gave a little talk on "Finance," as the leader called it. Mr. Anthony was called upon to make these remarks before taking up the collection because he is blessed with the ability to place before the union in such a clear but pleasant way that the pocketbooks and purses open of their own free will and pour the coppers and silver upon the plates. The offering was large.

The lookout and prayer meeting conference was led by Miss Florence G. Hawkins. There was quite a number of people in the audience who were members of one of the lookout committees. A few suggestions made by Miss Hawkins, that the meetings begin on time, that they open with prayer, that the leaders pray, that all the societies encourage sentence prayers, were considered good. The closing exercises, a consecration service, was conducted by Rev. Mr. Martine.

The Washingtonville society won the banner for having the largest percentage of members present. The Washingtonville society consists of twenty four members, twenty-two of whom were out. Marconier, with six members, had five present, and Warren chapel society, with thirty-six members, had eighteen out.

Annual Meeting O. A. A.

The annual meeting of the Organized Aid Association of Plainfield will be held in the lecture room of the Crescent Avenue church, Thursday evening, November 3d, at 8 o'clock. An address will be delivered by Rev. Amory H. Bradford, of Montclair, N. J.

ARCANUM ENTERTAINS.

SECOND ANNUAL ENTERTAINMENT OF GREENBROOK COUNCIL.

Held in Washington Hall Tuesday Night and Largely Attended—Lengthy but Enjoyable Programme—The Programme.

There was a large gathering of the members and friends of Greenbrook Council, No. 1735, Royal Arcanum, at Washington Hall, last Tuesday, when the second annual entertainment of the council was held. A lengthy but enjoyable programme was given during the evening.

The entertainment opened with an overture, rendered by Emil Adolphi, of New York. The rest of the programme included bird warbling and imitations by Miss Ella Gertrude Gustam, of New York, several selections by the Nonpareil Banjo Trio, from New York, a vocal solo, by E. C. Martin, of this city, zither solos by J. Schwartzwalder, of New York. Miss Etta Krymer was to sing but illness prevented her appearance. Grand Regent W. Holt Apgar, of Trenton, was down to speak on "Why We Work for the Order."

He was unable to be present and his place was taken by Vice-Regent Lightfoot, of Westfield. Mr. Lightfoot apologized for taking the place of a greater attraction, said a few funny things and ended with a short talk on the benefits to be derived from membership in the Royal Arcanum.

The entertainment was given under the direction of Horace I. Bowne, of Hoboken, chairman of the State committee on work of the order. He appeared twice, giving some humorous stories and jokes and then a recitation, 'Knee Deep in June," by James Whitcomb Riley. S. C. Baker, of this city, had his phonograph and entertained with several selections.

The committee from Greenbrook Council who arranged the entertainment was composed of Chas. C. Davis, George O. Stevens, Charles M. Wilson, Frank L. Cobb and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges.

Miss Lillian A. Force acted as accompanist for Mr. Martin.

DEATH OF EPHRIAM RANDOLPH.

He was a Substantial Farmer in Piscataway Township.

New Market, October 26—The death of Ephriam F. Randolph, aged seventy-three years, one of the oldest residents of Piscataway township, occurred last evening after a short illness with heart trouble and inflammation of the stomach. Mr. Randolph was a farmer, and has resided in Piscataway for a great number of years.

He was a member of the Baptist church and was an upright and highly-esteemed citizen. He leaves a widow, two sons and one daughter, William D. Manning, of Netherwood, is a son-in-law. The funeral services will be held from his late residence next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the Baptist church, will officiate. Interment will be in the Baptist church cemetery at Plainfield.

SETTLING INSURANCE CLAIMS.

Various Agents are Busy as a Result of the Big Fire.

The insurance companies represented by Elston M. French & Co., of North avenue, have settled the loss by fire on the building occupied by the U. S. Express Company and Stephenson's restaurant. The damage amounted to $106, and was the result of the big fire in the Thompson building opposite.

The insurance on the Bard Company's stock lost by fire has not yet been settled, owing to the fact that the Bard Company has not yet completed the inventory of stock lost.

W. H. Abbott, of North avenue, has settled with John F. McIntyre for the damage to his North avenue property, as a result of the big fire at A. D. Thompson's building. The damage amounted to $122.

Handsome Residence to be Built.

J. B. Mills & Company have given out the contract for the building of a handsome residence on Sandford avenue. The contract was awarded to Herman Hanson, of this city. The cost will be $4,500. Work will be started tomorrow, and the house is to be completed by the first of March. Jesse A. Oakley & Son, of Elizabeth, are the architects.

Death of Mrs. Froelich.

The death of Mrs. Augustus Froelich, of Midway avenue, occurred last Tuesday after a long illness from a complication of diseases. She was well known among a large circle of friends and her death will be a shock to many. She was about 53 years of age and had lived in Plainfield for many years. A husband survives her.

—There is still room in the educational department of the Y. M. C. A. for any who desire to enter.

WALLER IS NOT GUILTY.

ACQUITTED OF CHARGE OF ROBBING EAST MILLSTONE DEPOT.

The Trial Has Been Going On for a Week and Excited Great Interest—Shine and Wright Declared Guilty.

Somerville, October 25.—Justice of the Peace William N. Waller, of East Millstone, who was indicted for robbing the Pennsylvania Railroad station at that place, was yesterday acquitted of the charge. The two men who were indicted and tried with him on the same charge, Thomas Shine and Thomas Wright, were found guilty.

The trial has occupied the Somerset Court since Tuesday of last week. "Jerry" Washington, a colored resident of Millstone, was indicted with the others, but he turned State's evidence and the indictment against him was nolle prossed. The case has attracted much interest. Prosecutor Dungan was assisted by Joseph M. Noonan, former Assistant Prosecutor of Hudson county, and by former Judge Cowenhoven, of New Brunswick. The defendants were represented by former Prosecutor William V. Steele, Alvah A. Clark and George W. Anderson.

According to the prosecution, the defendants bound and gagged Henry Jones, the night watchman at the station, the morning of September 17th, and then blew open the safe. Some days after the assault Jones died suddenly. The evidence that the State could produce was largely circumstantial.

The jury, after remaining out all night, arrived at a verdict early in the morning.

NO CHANCE TO EVADE THE LAW.

Men Accused of Murder Will Be Indicted in Two Counties

New Brunswick, Oct. 26—The dispute as to where Warren Streeter and Joseph Spencer, Jr., shall be arraigned for trial upon charges of assaulting Wm. Daubney, who was killed near Bound Brook the night of Oct. 15th, has not yet been settled. Prosecutor Voorhees, of Middlesex county, and Prosecutor Dungan, of Somerset county, have agreed to have the accused men indicted by the Grand Juries of both counties.

Then the accused will be placed on trial in Middlesex county. There is doubt as to where they should be tried, because, apparently, the dead man was assaulted in Middlesex, a few feet from the dividing line, and then crawled across the county line into Somerset, where he died.

Should counsel for the men question the jurisdiction of the Middlesex court and the case come in the docket Middlesex will be dropped and Prosecutor Dungan will move the trial in Somerset. To prove Middlesex has no jurisdiction the defense will have to prove that Somerset should try the case.

PARK CLUB PRESIDENT RESIGNS.

George P. Dupee Resigns and Mr. Hegeman is Chosen in His Place.

A meeting of the Park Club was held last Tuesday and the resignation of George P. Dupee as president of the club was received, with deep regret by the members. Mr. Dupee felt obliged to resign owing to the fact that his business would not permit his giving a sufficient amount of his time to the office. The club accepted Mr. Dupee's resignation, and unanimously elected former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., as president of the club. Mr. Hegeman is one of the charter members of the club, and has served as an officer and member faithfully for many years. He will no doubt infuse new life into the club and thus make the future one of great success for all interested.

COULDN'T GET AT HER BANK BOOK.

It Was in a Trunk That Was Attached by a Creditor.

Justice Nash issued an attachment Tuesday for D. M. Groendyke against Mrs. Forrest Jones, colored. Mrs. Jones' trunk was attached just as she was ready to leave town, and everything, including a bank book, was packed up. As Mrs. Jones couldn't open the trunk to get at the bank book, because of the attachment, she was in a dilemma, for the woman had enough money in the bank to satisfy the demands.

So Constable Mattox brought Mrs. Jones to Justice Nash, and after a deal of figuring on both sides the matter was finally adjusted.

GAVE THE GLAD HAND TO YOUNG SOLDIERS.

Camp Fire Held by Winfield Scott Post Last Night.

PATRIOTIC REMARKS HEARD

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS OF SPANISH WAR WERE THERE.

Rev. William C. O'Donnell and Former Mayor L. Y. F. Randolph Were Present and Gave Entertaining Remarks—Programme in Charge of Commander E. C Morse—Relief Corps Served the Banquet.

Under the auspices of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of this city, an open camp-fire was held last Tuesday in their rooms on East Front street. In addition to the members of the Post, there were present soldiers and marines of the present war, members of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., together with old soldiers who do not belong to any Post. The affair was a sort of a reunion and was very enjoyable throughout.

The features of the evening were the two addresses, one by Rev. William C. O'Donnell, pastor of Monroe Avenue church, and a Son of a Veteran, and another by former Mayor L. Y. F. Randolph, who is an enthusiastic member of the Post. These addresses were full of patriotism and were intensely interesting. They were along the line of the late war, the present war and the Revolutionary contest.

Commander E. C. Morse, of the Post, had the programme in charge and after making remarks of a welcome nature, he announced the several numbers on the programme, which consisted of remarks by Mrs. Ford, Comrades W. D. Mattox, Past Commanders Charles Randolph, W. C. Coriell and I. L. McVoy. There was also a reading by Commander Morse, entitled "The Hero in the Ranks." Miss Jennie Smith favored those present with several piano solos, and Officer of the Day Wm. C. Smith, rendered a popular song, and several cornet solos were given by Mrs. J. D. Anderson, and John Becker gave several recitations. Comrade Forman, of Woodbridge, was present, and he spoke a few words. The programme throughout was listented to with pleasure and each number received cordial approbation.

All present were invited to the banquet room after the camp-fire, where the members of the Woman's Relief Corps had prepared a fine supper for the guests. This part of the affair was in charge of Mrs. Morse, Mrs. W. C. Smith, Mrs. Brokaw, Mrs. Stephenson, Mrs. Nash, Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Dobbins, Mrs. McVoy and several other members of the corps, the young women members of the corps waited on the tables.

FINE LECTURES BY FAMOUS MAN.

Garrett P. Service Will Deliver a Series of Three at the Casino.

The series of three pictorially illustrated lectures that are to be delivered in the Casino next month by Garrett P. Service form an unusual attraction to the public of Plainfield. Mr. Service is an author and journalist of unusual ability, who is well known by all the reading public. His lecturer he promises to be very interesting. The lectures are to be given the evenings of Nov. 3d, 10th and 17th, beginning at 8:15 o'clock. The subjects are well chosen. They take place in the following order—"William Tell and the Romance of the Alps," "Spain, the Land of the Bull Fight and the Alhambra," and "Peter the Great and the Making of Russia." In the three, history, romance and travel are delightfully combined.

A new feature of the series is that they are by subscription only. The charge for the course is $3. There are still remaining a few subscriptions, which may be obtained by application to Wm. T. Gregg, 104 Fulton street, New York.

REV. A. R. DILTS ACCEPTED CALL.

Former Plainfield Pastor to go to the Lowell Tabernacle December 1st.

Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, for several years the pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church of this city but who went to Northampton, Mass., six years ago, has just accepted a call from the Lowell Tabernacle, Lowell, Mass., where he will enter upon his duties December 1st. Rev. Mr. Dilts has many friends in this city who will be glad to learn of his advancement. The Lowell Tabernacle is one of the principle churches in that thriving New England city and is noted for its activity.

—There will be a meeting of the membership committee of the Y. M. C. A. tonight at 8 o'clock.

THE WOMAN IN BLACK

Traveling recently from Chicago to New York, I found in the morning, upon crawling out of my berth, that the train was standing stock still. The porter told me it had been standing thus for an hour and a half, while I had been sleeping the sleep of the just. I dressed and peeped out and saw that we were alongside the platform of a country station. I took a good breakfast in the dining car, and then went out to stroll up and down the platform.

In the cab sat the driver, or engineer as they call him, alone, waiting. With the natural fondness of an Englishman for machinery, I stopped and gossiped with him a moment about the engine.

Then I offered him a cigar, which he took with thanks, and asked me to come in. I swung myself into his cab.

The engineer, a bright, pleasant-faced man, about 40 years old, explained to me the uses of the numerous valves and levers about him. They were all as bright and shining as polish could make them, for an engineer is proud of his engine as a housewife is of the neatness of her dwelling. I glanced at the two shining steam gauges with the clock between them, then I noticed what seemed to be an ordinary white moth, mounted in a glass case, hanging up against the wall of the cab.

"Is that for an ornament?" I asked, pointing to the moth.

The driver smiled. "Well, partly for an ornament," he said, "but a good deal more for sentiment. I put that moth there because it saved my life and the lives of 250 people as well."

"How in the world could an insect save human lives?" I asked.

"Well, I will tell you if you want to hear the story. I reckon there's time enough before we are able to get out of this."

I settled myself in the absent stoker's seat and prepared to listen. "It wasn't such a long time back," said the engineer, "only a year ago last spring. I was running this very train, and this very engine—old 449. My stoker was Jim Meade, the same fellow as I have got now. You can see him over there leaning up against the telegraph office.

"Jim's a good boy, but he's very superstitious; believes in ghosts, dreams and warnings. I used to laugh at his fancies, but I don't feel so much fun of him as I did—not since we saw the 'Woman in Black.'

"We were timed to leave M—— about 1 o'clock in the morning, and to arrive in S—— about 6 o'clock. On the night when the thing took place a fearful storm of wind and rain had been raging since early evening, and was at the height of its fury when I started from the engine shed.

"It was about midnight and the wind seemed to sweep clear round and through the buildings. It was terribly dismal. Jim was there, and the engine was all ready, so, after getting my working clothes on, I ran the engine down to the station. Our train, the vestibule limited, was an hour late, I gave the engine a thorough oiling and made sure that all was in order.

"As we sat in the cab we could hear the storm raging outside, while the rain, driven by the gusts of wind, beat fiercely against the windows.

"'It's going to be a bad run, Frank,' Jim said. 'I wish we were in S——, safe and sound.'

"I laughed. 'What makes you feel so terribly glum, Jim?' I said.

"'Oh,' said he, 'I feel creepy, somehow—like there's something terrible going to happen. I can feel it in my bones.'

"I laughed again. 'You got a little wet coming over, I guess, Jim,' said I. 'And now the sound of the wind isn't very encouraging, that's a fact.'

"'To tell the truth, I was a little nervous myself, notwithstanding my easy way of treating Jim's notion.

"Presently our train came in, long and heavy, consisting mainly of sleepers. I was glad to see nervous to know that the lives of hundreds of my fellow men were in my keeping, but now I think nothing of it. That night I was nervous. What if the frightful storm had made a signalman carelessly fix a rail had been loosened by the settling of the track somewhere? On these fast trains a man must rely on the vigilance of the employees, for in order to keep to time he must run at such good speed that often he cannot see a signal before he is upon it.

"But I laughed at myself for my fears as I backed down and coupled on the train. I set the brakes, and found everything in good order.

"By and by the little gong above my head clanged sharply, and with a puff and hiss of escaping steam we were off into the night and storm, rattling over junctions, past signal lights, and between long lines of carriages till, with a roar and a rumble, we rushed over the long iron bridge and away through the hills, waking their slumbering echoes with our shrill whistle.

"Then I pulled the throttle wide open, and with a mighty roar soon settled into a hum, for old 449 was doing her best, and we were making fifty miles an hour.

"The darkness was intense, save where the headlight, an electric device, cast a funnel of light and gloom. Jim had a big fire, and kept it up to a high pressure, so that we fairly flew past sleeping hamlets and still farm houses.

At our first watering station I made sure that all was working smoothly, while Jim inspected the headlight. The station master handed out the orders, which showed that the line was clear as far as our next stopping place. On we went.

"The darkness grew more intense, if possible, while the wind shrieked by. The rain became more blinding, till nothing could be distinguished in the gray murk which enveloped us.

"Suddenly through the mist and rain I saw looming right up in front of us the gigantic figure of a woman wrapped in a long, black mantle, which seemed to flutter in the wind. She waved great spectral arms about in swift, twisting movements. As I stood looking in horror, the figure vanished with a final wave of the arms.

"I was too much astonished and stupefied even to make a movement of my hand toward the throttle. At that moment Jim had been bending over the fire. As he looked up he exclaimed:

"'Hallos, Frank. What's up? You look as though you had seen a ghost.'

"I did not answer. My mind was too full of the strange figure I had perceived.

"We were now nearing Rock Creek, where there is a bridge over a deep creek. I felt more nervous than ever. We dashed around the curve and whizzed by Rock Creek station, which is only a mile from the bridge. As we passed I glanced at the steam gauge for an instant. A cry from Jim caused me to turn quickly toward him. He sat rigid, his eyes large and staring. His jaw dropped, the very picture of terror. He pointed with a shaking finger out into the darkness. I turned and looked, and then I began myself to shake. There on the metal was the same hideous figure of a woman outlined on a background of light from the engine, now motionless, now whirling in a witch dance, but all the time motioning us back.

"'Frank,' gasped Jim, but scarcely above a whisper, 'don't go over the bridge. Don't go, for heaven's sake! Don't until you are sure it's safe.'

"I suppose I was pretty badly scared. At any rate, I put on the brake for all I was worth. I couldn't have resisted the impulse to stop the train.

"As we came to a stop I could hear the roar of the water in Rock Creek, just ahead. I stepped out of the cab, and met the guard coming up.

"'What's the matter? What's the matter?' he asked impatiently.

"I felt decidedly foolish. There was no gigantic woman to be seen now. Nothing could be made out more than a few feet away in the blinding storm.

"'Well,' said I, 'we're seen something. I don't know what it is—seemed like it was a great black ghost that was waving its arms and warning us not to go forward.'

"The guard looked at me curiously. 'Are you all right?' he said. 'I should think you were. But we're so near the Bridge we'd take a look at it.'

"We took our lanterns and went ahead, leaving Jim with the engine. He looked decidedly scared at that. But I tell you we hadn't gone five rods before we stopped in horror.

"There at our feet lay a black chasm, filled with the roar of the river, as swollen with the spring rains, it dashed down toward the lake. The bridge was washed away.

"Only a few splinters of wood and twisted iron clung to the abutment, while now, far out over the blackness, that awful black figure of a woman danced again on the thin air, relieved against the shaft of light that the headlight threw.

"It was flinging its arms about as it in wild glee. The guard stared at the chasm and then at me.

"'Was that the thing you saw when you stopped the train?' he asked.

"'Yes.'

"'Well, it's something more than luck that saved us to-night, Frank.'

"We went back slowly to the train, feeling very queer and thankful, too, I can assure you. Several passengers had come running forward by this time. Among them was a young fellow from Chicago, about 18 years old, who was quicker than the whole of us, as it turned out.

"When he was told of the woman in black he turned and looked at the locomotive headlight. Then he ran up toward it. I looked up as he did so, and saw a moth-like object on the glass.

"'There's your woman in black,' said the boy.

"And there it was, sure enough—that same moth miller that you see there in the frame. He was clinging to the inside of the glass. As I tapped on the glass the creature flew back and lighted on the reflector.

"That's the whole story, sir. The moth, by fluttering on the glass just in front of the illuminator, had produced a great black shadow like that of a woman dancing in front of us, and when he flapped his wings in his vain attempt to sail out through the glass, he gave his mysterious shadow the appearance of waving the arms wildly.

"Then when he flew back out of the direct shine of the light, the figure disappeared, of course.

"We never knew just how he got in there, but no doubt it happened when Jim went to fix the light at the pumping station.

"Anyhow, he saved our lives by scaring us with that woman in black.

"So you see why I keep the moth in the frame. It's to remind me of the way we were saved that night. Yes, you may call it accidental, but I call it Providential."—Pearson's Weekly.

Care of Gold Fish.

Gold-fish should never be taken in the hand, but should be removed, when necessary, by means of a small net made of mosquito netting. They may be fed with anything that they will eat, but what they do not eat should be taken out of the water. They generally die from handling, starvation, or impure water.

THE LOUISIANA TREATY.

It Was Made in Paris Nearly One Hundred Years Ago.

Another famous American treaty, made in Paris, and of which the centennial will soon be in hand, was that which gave us the territory west of the Mississippi for something like 60,000,000 francs or a little over eleven million dollars.

The commissioners who brought about the transaction were Robert R. Livingston and James Monroe, for the United States, and Napoleon Bonaparte and Francis Barbe Wanbois, for the French.

For half a century before the purchase Louisiana had been bought and sold in turn by France and Spain. The French settled it in 1700. In 1762, France, finding that if she tried to hold Louisiana, it might be seized by England, transferred it by secret treaty to Spain. This cession, the treaty said, was "from the pure impulse of his Majesty's heart." Spain was surprised, and the Spanish minister with whom the treaty was made only accepted Louisiana as a gift upon the expressed condition that it should not be considered until his King approved the acceptance. Thus Louisiana and the territory west of the Mississippi actually went begging as a gift 133 years ago. The French people who formed the colony objected to the cession, the transfer to Spain did not take place until 1769. The Spanish rule was gradually accepted, and it continued thirty-five years. People of this day talk of per capita expenses of government. The figures for several years show that it cost the King of Spain $16.55 for each of his Louisiana subjects annually. That was the expense of maintaining government in Louisiana.

The time came when Bonaparte, after conquering Italy and driving the Austrians beyond the Alps, concluded that he wanted the Louisiana territory in the New World. Spain was weak, and all that was necessary was the expression of a wish from the Little Corsican. Louisiana was secretly ceded to France. The treaty was signed, but the Spanish government over Louisiana was continued. This secrecy was made necessary by the fact that France and England were then at war. The King of Spain ceded Louisiana in its entirety, east and west of the Mississippi. In return he received from France the little republic of Etruria.

When the treaty reached this country President Jefferson called Congress together to ratify it. In doing so he frankly admitted that the purchase went beyond constitutional authority, and that a constitutional amendment was necessary to carry out the purchase. But he told Congress that the acquisition of an outlet to the Gulf was essential to the national life and to the preservation of peace. In that way he vindicated the action of his commissioners. Congress ratified the treaty, six New England Senators voting against it.

Why Red Enrages Animals.

"You might just as well show a red rag to a bull." How many times this expression made use of daily and how many of its utterers think for one instant of its significance, or as to why the expression should have come into such common vogue!

Why should a bull—or, indeed any animal—exhibit feelings of rage or annoyance when a mere scrap of scarlet cloth is flaunted before it? A strange instinct, indeed, and yet no stranger than many others, the cause of which it might be interesting to prove.

To begin, then, with the bull and red rag. All animals, or at any rate a large proportion of them, are strangely moved by the exhibition of any bright color, a fact in itself perhaps sufficient to account partially for the rage of the bull.

He sees, maybe, a scarlet flag fluttering out to the breeze, flapping conspicuously before his vision, and he wonders—because he is a thing of the hands of a man, his lord and master, with whom he has always connected superior force and power, and at once his wonderment is translated to fear, which in turn gives place to anger.

His annoyance gives way to rage. That red flaring thing is meant as a direct challenge to himself. Down goes his head, and away—if he be wise—goes the too-daring biped, for Mr. Bull now means mischief.

Cocks and turkeys among birds, and sheep among our domestic animals, often exhibit symptoms of fear and rage when challenged by these means. The first named have often been known to fly at children and red garments, and to peck savagely at them, while sheep will often become transported with frenzy at their shepherd suddenly producing a piece of red cloth.

Closely associated with this strange instinct seems the excitement caused by the smell of blood, chiefly to be noticed among horses and cattle of our domestic animals.

And when we consider that blood is red, that the smell of it, as well as its bright color, has always been associated by the animal with bodily hurt and discomfort, we can more readily comprehend why it is that the strange instinct should have obtained such firm hold.

The animal's eye is attracted in no less a degree than his sense of smell. Blind instinct cries out to him that all is not as it should be, and so unreasoning as he is, he gives vent to his feelings in the only way he knows, either that of abject fear or of maddening.

The smallest republic in the world is Franceville, one of the islands in the New Hebrides. The inhabitants consist of forty Europeans and five hundred black workmen employed by a French company.

REST.

Let us but ourselves a bit,
Worry? Waves your hand to it!
Kiss your finger tips and smile
It farewell a little while.

Weary of the weary way
We have gone since yesterday.
Let it fret us not, in dread
Of the weary way ahead.

While we but look down—not up—
To seek out the buttercup
And the daisy, where they wave
For the zephyrs' love to crave.

Let us launch us smoothly on
Listless billows of the lawn,
And drift out across the main
Of our childhood once again.

Voyage off, beneath the trees,
O'er the field's enchanted seas,
Where the lilies are our sails,
And our seagulls, nightingales.

Where no wilder storm shall beat
Than the wind that waves the wheat
And no tempests burst above
The soft laughs we used to love.

Lose all troubles—gain release,
Languor and exceeding peace,
Cruising idly o'er the vast
Calm and midway of the past.

Let us rest ourselves a bit.
Worry? Waves your hand to it—
Kiss your finger tips and smile
It farewell a little while.

THE OTHER GIRL

On my arrival at the station, Lady Mannington, Molly and the French maid had collected their chattels and stood round the immense heap in attitudes denoting various degrees of impatience. I apologized.

"It's of no consequence," said Lady Mannington, in a tone signifying it was of the greatest. Molly shook her head at me and smiled. I looked at the two ladies and the French maid and then I looked at the miniature conveyance.

"The brougham is only seated for two," I hinted.

"Celeste can walk," said Lady Mannington.

"I should prefer to walk, mamma," said Molly, with an air of much good nature.

"Perhaps that will be best," Lady Mannington conceded reluctantly.

"I am sure of it," I indorsed heartily

"If only your aunt had sent the omnibus"—Lady Mannington began agrievedly.

"It was most careless of her," I admitted instantly. I caught Molly's eye. She has a curious way of smiling at nothing.

So Molly and I started to walk over the crisp snow. Just outside the station I helped her over the stile. "We may as well take the short cut," I observed; "it is not so very much longer, and I have so much to say to you."

"What about?" asked Molly.

I hesitated. "It is about a friend of mine," I replied at length.

"Oh!"

"He is in the deuce of a mess," I began, confidentially, "I want your help."

"What can I do?" asked Molly, opening her eyes.

"You can advise me," I replied, taking courage. "A womans' wit—"

Molly was pleased. "Go on, Mr. Trevor."

"I fear you will think my friend particularly foolish," I said, sorrowfully.

"Very likely," replied Molly, indifferently.

"I assure he has many good points. But it happened a girl wanted to marry him."

"What!" exclaimed Molly.

"I can't think what she saw in him," I replied, uncomfortably.

"She could not have been quite nice," said Molly, decisively.

I stopped to test the strength of the ice over the pool.

"I have seen her look quite nice," I remarked, thoughtfully.

"You know her?" asked Molly, quickly.

"Oh, yes. It wasn't really the girl who wanted to marry my friend; it was her mother. I mean the mother wanted the girl to marry my friend. I hope I make myself clear?"

"I don't think that improves matters," retorted Molly.

"My friend was in love with another girl—a really nice girl. In fact, a quite splendid girl. One of the very best," I said, kindling.

"You know that girl, too?" asked Molly a little coldly.

"Yes—"

"Well?"

"My friend was staying at a country house, and so were both the girls and her mother, and she—"

"Who?" asked Molly.

"The girl whose mother wanted her to marry him. I do hope I am clear. She got him into a quiet corner, and somehow or other my friend found out she had hold of his hand. I don't know how it happened. It just occurred."

"How clever of your friend to find it out," said Molly, sarcastically.

I went on hastily. "And then he saw her head coming nearer and nearer his shoulder, and he didn't know what to do."

"I wonder," said Molly, "he did not call for help."

"You see," I went on, "he was afraid she would propose, or—or—the mother might come. He guessed the mother was pretty near. Then he thought of the other girl, and he got into a dreadful panic. In fact he lost his head."

"It could not have been a great loss," observed Molly disdainfully.

"No-o. But it was the only one he had, and he was accustomed to it. He didn't know what to do. So he said he was already engaged."

"Did he say 'already?'"

"Yes." It was a cold day, but I mopped my brow with my handkerchief.

Molly uttered a peal of silvery laughter. "I am really almost sorry for that girl, but it served her right."

"The girl didn't turn a hair. She simply straightened herself up and asked to whom he was engaged."

"Well?"

"He blurted out the name of the other girl. He couldn't think of any other name."

"To whom, of course, he is not engaged?"

"No. And I don't suppose she would have him."

"Is that your whole story?"

"Very nearly. The girl went away and told her mother, who came up gushingly and congratulated him. She is a true sportswoman. Afterward she went about telling everybody of the engagement, and my friend has had to receive congratulations ever since."

"How awkward!" said Molly, meditatively. "Has the other girl heard of it?"

"Not yet. This all happened yesterday."

"Yesterday?"

I nodded. "And the worst is the other girl is expected to arrive at the Towers almost immediately."

"Dear me," said Molly. "And your friend is at the Towers now?"

"I didn't mean to let it out," I replied, a little sheepishly.

Molly began to laugh. "It is most amusing; but why did you tell me about it?"

"I want your advice."

"Who is the other girl?" asked Molly, curiously."

"Please don't ask for names," I implored.

"What," I asked, with elaborate indifference, "would you do if you were the other girl?

Molly stopped and broke off a spring of red berries. They were not so red as her lips. "Of course," she said, "I should be very annoyed."

"Ah, of course," said I, forlornly.

"At any rate, I should pretend to be very annoyed."

"But, really—" I began, delighted.

"Oh that would depend on the man."

"Supposing, for the sake of illustration," said I, surveying the white expanse of a neighboring field, "I was the man?"

"This is nonsense," said Molly. "We can't make believe to that extent."

"Why can't we?"

"You could never be so foolish."

"But if—"

"But my poor friend is depending on me for advice."

She thought. "Of course, your friend must get away from the Towers before the other girl arrives."

"You are quite clear he ought to go away?" I asked mournfully.

"There can be no doubt about that. Just fancy everybody reading to congratulate the other girl, and your friend being present at the time. There might be a dreadful scene."

"I can picture it," I said, repressing a groan.

We had arrived at the entrance to the avenue. I stopped and held out my hand.

"Good-bye," I said.

"What do you mean?" she exclaimed.

"I—I am going away. I am the man."

I do not think I am mistaken. The color faded slightly from her face.

"And the other girl?" sne queried faintly.

"You are the other girl."

The red replaced the white. She stood quite still, with her eyes bent downward, and then I began to trace figures in the snow with the toe of her tiny boot.

"Good-bye," I repeated.

She looked up. "Of course, I am very angry," she said. And then she smiled and held out her hand. I took it humbly and forgot to relinquish it.

"Mamma will be getting anxious," she remarked. "We must hurry."

But we did not hurry.—Pick-Me-Up.

The Governor's Regard for Sunday.

"It was during the administration of Governor Albion K. Parris," says the Kennebec (Me.) Journal, "that General Lafayette made his memorable tour of the United States, and paid his visit to Maine. It was on Sunday that the General concluded that visit and proposed leaving the State from Portland. Governor Parris remonstrated with him for taking his departure on that day and said: 'If you will postpone your trip until Monday I will myself escort you to the State line with all the military honors.' But Lafayette, accustomed to the Continental Sabbath, insisted on not altering his plans, and left Maine on Sunday, while the Sabbath-honoring Governor of a God-fearing State attended his church service as was his habit."

Hand Painted Shoe Soles.

If you want to be in style, as Paris sees it, have your boot soles illustrated.

Cupids, landscapes, poster girls, actresses, anything, in fact, that Americans can put up in club windows, and show the passing throng.

This illustrated footwear is now to be seen in the show windows of all the fashionable shoe shops on the Paris boulevard and in the Rue de la Paix.

These figures are hand painted. The wealthier the customer, the higher priced the painter.

A Chinese philosopher has been found in the kitchen in one of our Western college students who makes this distinction between the Orient and the Occident: "In China the men boss the women; in America the women boss the men." "Do I 'boss' President Blank?" inquired Mme. President. "No, you no boss him," replied the astute Chinaman, "but he do what you say."—Chicago Advance.

GOOD OLD PROFESSOR.

His Knowledge Rather Unpleasant to Have Around at All Times.

It has never ceased to be a cause of regret to the good Mrs. Parvenu that she had the professor at her little gathering of local literary lights.

"There's a teapot that was used by William the Conqueror," she announced, with pride, as all the company gathered about and discussed the prize in hushed tones of voice.

"But, dear madam," said the professor, with whom truth is given preference to every other consideration, "they never brewed tea in England until some years after William I. came to these shores."

Mrs. Parvenu ignored the interruption, but the teapot was soon put away, and now it has another history.

"Here is a pipe that one of the Caesars smoked in the ninth century," she declared, triumphantly, and she was answered only by the professor.

"But, my good woman," he declared, "tobacco was unknown then, and for centuries after. Someone must have imposed upon you."

The pipe was put away with a slam, and then beneath a pile of silk patches in a sewing bag the angered lady produced a book.

"There," she announced, in strident tones, "is a Bible that belonged to my great-great-grandmother. I hope that you are satisfied now that I am not a mere heathens in her time, or that the golden rule was not discovered until the good old lady had gone to her reward."

But the professor looked judicially at the title-page, and said the book was printed in 1670.

Spain Really the Gainer.

Spain, in reality, loses little by this war except some ships. Cuba she had proven worthless to herself and to the rest of the world. The Philippines were rapidly approaching the same condition. Since the war began she has not sent a soldier or a musket to Cuba, and she has some of the soldiers already there returned to her on a pass. She spent some money in tolls for the passage of her fleet through the Suez Canal, but the crews can say with the old whaler captain in the story, though they did not "get any oil," they had "a mighty fine sail." Her colonies have never been in the true sense outlets for superfluous population, nor yet commercial feeders. They have been a source of deep-seated civil corruption. Spain has a large, industrious and thrifty home population and a diversified territory, part of it also peculiarly productive, part rich in minerals. Her coast population are admirable sailors, and she is favorably situated for commerce. If she will abandon her medieval methods there is no reason why in ten years she should not find herself more prosperous than she has been since the fifteenth century.—Hartford Courant.

Am rican Women and Gray Hair.

Is it true that the hair of American women turns gray much earlier than that of the women of other countries? There are those who make the assertion. It is, to say the least, a most thorough gray. While the locks of an English or French woman will late in life show a few "hasting threads," the head of an American woman at a much younger age will be quite blanched, if not altogether. To two things may the cause of the tendency be ascribed, American air and American atmosphere—terms not at all synonymous. If the former turns our leaves, why should it not turn our hair? And what the latter may accomplish through the agencies of ice water, hot bread and worry needs no comment. Early gray hair, as a rule, means inability to cope with nerve-destroying things. It was declared in the language a matter of temperament. That it should be a characteristic of American women is in keeping with most other traits of our race.—Harper's Bazar.

Beauty After Fifty.

A bright woman, when applauded recently for her goodness, begged her friend to take no notice of drop. "For," she said, whimsically, "though I do try to do good from some really high motives, yet I have a reason for trying which I am afraid is a low one." "What is that, pray?" inquired her laughing friend. "I mean that I care, heard, many years ago, that beauty after 50 depended not on features, but on character. Like all women, I desired to be beautiful, and, a Providence of beauty, I resolved to 'feature' necessary to secure that result in early life. I determined to make the attempt to be beautiful at 50. I am 35 now," she concluded, merrily, "and I must confess that I see no signs of this Indian summer loveliness, but I still try to be good."

These friends treated the matter as a jest, but there is really sense and truth in the saying that beauty in later life, in either man or woman, is dependent upon character far more than upon form or color.—The Churchman.

PRETENDER TO SPAIN'S THRONE.

Don Carlos a Brave Man—Immensely Wealthy but Very Penurious.

Don Carlos, the pretender to the throne of Spain, may at any moment become a prominent personage in the affairs of that country. He lives, as he has for years, in Loredan Palace, on the Grand Canal, Venice, where he and his wife, the Duchess of Madrid, keep up a semi-royal state. The two ladies-in-waiting upon the duchess live within the palace, while the gentlemen in Don Carlos' suite club together and live in a mess, just as officers in the army do. The well-known pecuniosity of Don Carlos is such that any one attached to his suite must live on as little as possible.

Before the death of his first wife, with whom he had not lived for many years, Don Carlos led a life well calculated to give the gossips plenty of material for their scandals. He used to enjoy making his escapades public, and even the Venetians, who are by no means prudish, were shocked.

Don Carlos' first wife, and the mother of his children, was Princess Margherite, daughter of a murdered king. She was called queen "by birth and by the goodness of heart." She was a fair woman with soft blue eyes and most gracious manners.

DON CARLOS.

Since his marriage to the Princess Bertha de Rohan, a rather pretty and stylish young woman, descended from the ancient sovereigns of Brittany, he has apparently led a most exemplary domestic life. He is often seen bathing on the Lido, and going up and down the canal in a penny boat in a most democratic manner. In their gondola he and the duchess seem almost loverlike, both sharing under the shade of the duchess' parasol.

Notwithstanding this apparent democratic simplicity, they exact from their friends and acquaintances costly homage when they "receive." The duchess' royal hand is extended to be kissed, and her manner could not be more ceremonious if she were reigning Queen of Spain. Perhaps she is practicing that she may be able to appear in good form when she does come to the throne—if she ever does.

It is said that the duchess is jealous of her position and will have no one forget it. Some of the Venetian nobility, however, a most thorough gray. While the locks of an English or French woman will late in life show a few "hasting threads," the head of an American woman at a much younger age will be quite blanched, if not altogether. To two things may the cause of the tendency be ascribed, American air and American atmosphere—terms not at all synonymous. If the former turns our leaves, why should it not turn our hair? And what the latter may accomplish through the agencies of ice water, hot bread and worry needs no comment. Early gray hair, as a rule, means inability to cope with nerve-destroying things. It was declared in the language a matter of temperament. That it should be a characteristic of American women is in keeping with most other traits of our race.—Harper's Bazar.

Don Jaime of Bourbon, the only son and heir of Don Carlos, was educated at the Vienna Military Academy and is at present serving as a captain in the Russian army, practicing against the day of revcolution in Spain, perhaps. He has an independent and adventurous spirit like his father, and is quite a favorite.

When Don Jaime heard of his sister's elopement with Count Folchi, a penniless artist, a cripple, and a married man, he obtained leave of absence from his regiment and went to the Spanish Embassy at Rome to catch the couple on their way to France, and to kill the count; but he missed them and they still live to repent their hasty action. Don Carlos was naturally very much cut up over this episode in his family affairs. He addressed a communication to his followers announcing that his daughter was "dead" to him and asking them to pray for "her miserable soul." He would have nothing to do with her, notwithstanding that she wrote letter after letter to him from Barcelona imploring his pardon and making excuses for her conduct by saying that, since his second marriage, she had found life miserable with her stepmother, the duchess. Neither this letter nor the fact that the wife of Count Filippo Folchi had obtained a divorce, so that the count was now free to marry his daughter, had any effect upon Don Carlos; he had buried his daughter and would not have her resurrected.

Don Carlos is immensely wealthy, and with increasing fortune he has grown avaricious. It is said that his household expenses are conducted on an economic scale that would do credit to a miser.

With all his faults, he is as good a man, and in many respects a better one, than the majority of royal personages. He is a brave and courageous soldier, daring to rashness. He is a fine horseman, and can, when he pleases, look every inch the air of divinity which is supposed to be about a king.—Washington Star.

PRIZE SYSTEM SHOULD GO.

The Navy Has an Unfair Advantage Over the Army in Natives.

In the rapid and decisive victory over Spain in the war for Cuba there is plenty enough to go all round, and the veterans of the battles on both land and sea are sure of the Nation's eternal gratitude. But in the substantial fruits of the victory there is a certain disproportion between the navy and army which seems incongruous, absurd and unfair. For instance, by reason of the fact that the fleet under Admiral Sampson's command captured, without resistance of any sort, a number of unarmed Spanish merchant vessels, and in the Santiago fight killed a certain number of Spanish seamen, the Admiral will get over $60,000 in cash when peace is declared, as his share of the spoil, while all the other officers and sailors will receive a substantial share of the prize money, in addition to their regular pay. Admiral Dewey, for killing a certain number of Spanish sailors at $100 a head in the battle of Manila, will get about $9,000, and all his men will get their proper share for the killing. Less than a dozen men in the American Navy were killed or wounded. They were comfortable in their roomy quarters, they were far removed from fevers and miasma, well fed and well tended, and, as events showed, were never in any great danger.

But Gen. Shafter, Gen. Wheeler and the men who braved the fevers of Santiago and the withering fire of the Spanish sharpshooters at El Caney and San Juan make no money out of the war. Even the gunboats in Santiago Bay, surrendered to Miles and Shafter, but claimed at first by Sampson as his lawful prizes, yielded no prize money to either army officers or soldiers. Many of the latter are buried in Cuban soil. Others died on the way to or in the hospitals on their arrival North. Others, weak, fever-stricken and wasted, are still fighting for life and health. The survivors get, or will get some day, $16 a month, or $64 for their four months' campaign, together with their board.

Is there not something wrong in the prize money and bounty system which causes this absurd disproportion between army and navy rewards? It is true that it has been largely a naval war, and the officers and men of the navy have come out of it covered with glory. Nothing was further from their thoughts in the fierce fighting at Manila and Santiago than the fact that every Spaniard killed was $100 in their pockets. But the whole prize and bounty system smacks of piracy and medievalism. It has no place in the naval code of any civilized and Christian nation. It ought to go, together with the system of naval promotions, which, in honoring one brave officer and increasing his pay, demotes, degrades and fines other officers just as brave, whose only fault was that to them was not offered the opportunity which presented itself to and was improved by their more fortunate fellow officer.

ROBERT BROWNING'S LOVE STORY.

His Devotion and Reverence for His Wife Read Like a Tale from Fiction.

"Wherever Mrs. Browning trod, whatever she touched became endowed with the sacredness of her presence," writes Clifford Howard, of Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning, in the "Ladies Home Journal." "When Mr. Browning returned with her on a visit to England, after an absence of several years, he repaired to the little church in which they had been married, and there, at the entrance, he reverently kneeled and kissed the paving-stones upon which she, the light of his being, had stepped. And in after years, when the light had gone from his life, he sought this sacred spot on the 12th of each September, and in the dusk of the evening shadows passers-by might have seen a white-haired man kneeling for a moment as if in prayer before the doorway of the dark and silent church. Yet little would they have thought to recognize in this man the poet Browning, he whose mystical writings had led the world to regard him as a man of austere nature.

"Not once in all the years of their married life was Browning absent from his wife a single day. At home or on their occasional journeys he was ever with her, ready to protect her and to wait upon her. Often ill and unable to leave her room, he nursed her with the tenderness of a woman, cheering her in her convalescence with stories and songs or reading to her for hours at a time, as he oft had done in the days before their marriage. It was in his touching thoughtfulness of her the acts of loving and unsolicited attention—that his love for her was most truly shown.

About Precious Stones.

A remarkable fact has been discovered. The colors of precious stones are not permanent in the light. To give a chemical and physical explanation of this is difficult; for, although chemical reunions in solid bodies have been proved, one would no reunions them to occur in the exceedingly hard minerals in concerned. A ruby, which had been left for two years in a light show window, was found to be considerably lighter after this time had elapsed than a stone previously of exactly the same color which had been kept in the dark. Similar results were observed with emeralds and sapphires. Still more has it than with these valuable colored gems is the action of light on the light expensive stones. Garnet and topaz differ in that former becomes dim and dull, while the latter only turns lighter.

HOW MONKEYS ARE CAUGHT.

One of the Peculiar Methods Adopted by the Natives.

In capturing monkeys, it is said that their curiosity is the thing that makes them an easy prey. Nearly all of the monkeys that we see in this country come from Gornona, a little village situated a short distance from the Panama railroad.

The inhabitants of this district are mostly native negroes, for few white men could bear the climate. The whole region is marshy, and covered with tropical vegetation. At night there arises a thick vapor laden with fever, which hangs over the woods like a cloud.

This region of woods is the paradise of the monkeys. They travel in troops, led by an older monkey. When the people receive information that the "rolling monkey troops" are near the village they go to the woods to chase them.

Their plan is very simple. They cut a hole in a cocoanut large enough for a monkey's paw to enter. The nut is then hollowed out, and a piece of sugar is placed in it. A piece of string is then fastened to it, and it is placed in the road of the approaching monkeys.

It is well known that monkeys are very inquisitive. When they see the cocoanut in the grass they hurry to examine it. It does not take them long to find out that the inner part contains a piece of sugar. One of the boldest and greediest sticks a paw into the nut to get the sugar, and grasps it as firmly as he can. But his fist is so large that he cannot draw it out of the hole again with the sugar, to which he holds fast, cost what it may.

The natives now pull the string until nut and monkey arrive in the vicinity of their ambuscade. In the meantime the other monkeys wonder what is the matter with their comrade. They hurry to see where he is being pulled to, with his paw in the cocoanut. They crowd around him chattering and gesticulating, and the natives, who have a large net ready, cast it over them, and before they know it all are prisoners. They are sold to the employes of the Panama railroad, and reach the North American markets through commercial dealers.—Philadelphia Times.

A GENTLE PROMPTER.

One of the Many Good Stories That Ministers Have To Relate.

Ministers generally have a stock of good wedding stories, but a rather old little incident took place at an Episcopal rectory in the city not long ago, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It was a very stormy night and the bride and groom arrived alone about 9 o'clock, having had to walk a long way against the storm, and the poor little bride was greatly worn out with fatigue and nervousness.

After a few words explaining the service to the couple, the minister put on his surplice and began the ceremony. All went beautifully until the question, "Will you have this man to be your wedded husband, etc.," came upon the scene. The minister read it through with his most kindly and fatherly air, but when he finished the bride was dumb—not a word would he get out of her. The long question was repeated, the minister's voice taking on a most insinuating rise toward its end, but still there was silence.

Before the groom had seemed flustered, but his feelings then were nothing to what they appeared to be at the second halt.

With an admonishing kick that reached to the rector and made him rub his unlucky shins, the irate bridegroom announced in a loud stage whisper, "Darn it, Lina, why don't you speak up and tell him yes?"

And wonders will never cease, for even after such an exhibition of her future lord and master's temper, 'Lina spoke, and all she said was "yes."

Seed Corn 3,000 Years Old.

Three or four years since an Indian mound in Arkansas was being excavated, when an earthen jar was found hermetically sealed that contained a small quantity of grains of Indian corn. Some of the grains were the next year planted in Missouri, and several bushels raised. On the top of the mound from which the jar was dug out, a large tree four feet in diameter was growing, and it is thought the corn lay buried about 3,000 years. Squire James L. Neal, one of our most prosperous and progressive farmers, sent and procured a small quantity of the corn, paying over two cents a grain. This he planted last year, but the yield was small, on account of the severe drought. He saved enough, however, to get in a good patch this year. He has used it for roasting ears, and says it is the best he ever had. The ears are not large, but grow two to three on a single stalk. The one thing peculiar about this corn is its color, or rather colors. On the same cob are grains of different colors, and in the row you can find an ear that is white, another blood red, one salmon colored and another perfectly black.—Harrodsburg (Ky.) Sayings.

"What want to leave to-day, Jane, and you only came yesterday?"

"Well, yes'm. You see, you're the thirteenth missus I've had this year, and you're unlucky."

"Why, then, did you come?"

"'Cause I 'ad to 'ave a thirteenth, and I thought I'd get it over. I leaves ternight, mum."

Simple Remedies for Headaches.

Too little blood in the brain is a frequent cause of headache, and may be recognized by the ache being on the top of the head, by constant dizziness, and by noises in the ears. The best cure is a slight stimulant, such as strong tea or coffee or hot soup—anything diluted a short distance from the Panama railroad.

The inhabitants of this district are mostly native negroes, for few white men could bear the climate. The whole region is marshy, and covered with tropical vegetation. At night there arises a thick vapor laden with fever, which hangs over the woods like a cloud.

Wired Bows.

Nothing could be prettier or more up-to-date to accompany a summer dance frock than a set of Louis XV wired bows, made like the accompanying sketch.

No. 1 is to be set upright on the head in front of the soft Japanese knot of hair, which is the pretty fashion of the day; No. 2 to be worn as a breast knot, and Nos. 3 and 4 for each shoulder—these also to be placed upright like the bow for the hair. To make these latest fashionable bows, wire ribbon is sewn on one-half of the velvet ribbon (black is most fashionable), and the colors may be used to match the gown if preferred), and the other half folded over it and the two halves stitched together. The loops and ends are then bent, as shown in the sketch.

A Good Photograph.

A photographer advised a young man sitting for his picture, who consulted him as to the suitable dress, not to wear a striped or spotted tie, one of plain dark color being preferable. A decided pattern becomes very monotonous in a picture. A collar that was a becoming style was also recommended, and a coat that fitted well, without so much regard to its fashionableness. A further caution was to go into the studio at a moment of the day when one felt the best physically. "A young man came in here the other day," said the same photographer, "and sat for his picture. Three or four proofs afterwards submitted to him he rejected because, as he explained, they looked to him just as he felt at the time of sitting—awfully hungry. It seems that he had come to the studio about two in the afternoon, without having eaten anything since a light and early breakfast, and his condition betrayed itself in his expression. I told him to try again after a satisfying meal, and it is a fact that the second picture scarcely looked like the same person."

Silk and Satin Coats.

One of the season's smart specialties is the black satin jacket. They are made precisely like other jackets and are fitted everything. Taffeta silk and gros grain is also extensively employed for these garments this year.

A very stylish model of black taffeta is made quite long, reaching well below the hips, and is belted in at the waist with a band of the material. The material is cut at the shoulders to form small epaulets over the close-fitting sleeves. The jacket is cut low in the neck and opens all the way down the front. Silk embroidery forms the garniture.

The latest dictate of fashion is that the summer girl's wardrobe is not complete unless she has at least eighteen shirtwaists.

you make a passionate, baffled exit."

A moment later the plainly gowned woman and the slender youth sank into their chairs, and a tall, middle-aged man wearing a long Prince Albert coat, patent leathers, and a silk hat, with a tightly rolled umbrella in his hand, but without a bundle of typewritten paper, capered up and down the floor as if tipsy, reeling off a string of drunken negro dialect as if he knew it by heart. Presently a big blonde woman, also smartly dressed, took her place at the front and at once broke out in a faultless imitation of a negro mammy's talk.

To these seasoned veterans, who had been saying the same things in the same way for years, the mild boss with the curly fringe of hair paid no attention whatever—they evidently needed only to be set going like cleverly made automatons to proceed until run down. But when a young woman strolled in murmuring between her set teeth, "Mammy Green, Mammy Green," the boss was seized with agony.

"That is not the way, my child! Oh! that is not the way, at all! You should call out excitedly, 'Mammy GREEN! Mammy GREEN!'—not loudly, but with intensity, and you should not be listless, but alert. You should express your excitement in your step, as I do now; you should put all about the story for which you are trying to tell a part, and then you'll do it better."

And so it continued for half an hour or more, till at last, an apparently satisfactory place in the play having been reached, the various members of the group not directly under the eye of the boss, and who had been talking the sort of gossip one hears behind the scenes, each drew a long breath, while one of them wondered aside to his friend if it wasn't about lunch time.

"Not on your life," replied the other. "It's time to begin all over again—that's what it is, as you'll find out in a minute."

And so it was, for the round face of the boss assumed a particularly benignant expression as he called them all to the front.

"Now, ladies and gentlemen," he declared, "we'll try that first act over again now, while it's fresh in our minds, and see if we can't do it better."

The Earth Growing Heavier.

As people grow old they usually grow stouter, and in this respect our planet is very like unto indeed, for the earth is growing stouter and heavier every year by some ten thousand tons.

The food on which our planet is thus fattening herself consists of meteors or shooting stars. Though we have only one each night on the average—more in November—still, every day the earth is crossing the paths of meteors and catching shooting stars in her atmosphere, which acts as a net. Shooting stars are pieces of stone, varying in size from a pea to a house, generally revolving round the sun. The earth attracts them by her weight, and they rush towards us at a tremendous speed.

On plunging into the atmosphere they become heated by the friction they encounter, and soon become white hot, and are finally driven off into gas. Every minute the earth is being subjected to this fusillade, though most of the meteors are too small to be seen by the naked eye. The gas condenses into dust and slowly sinks to the earth. At the very lowest estimate, 400 millions of meteors fall into our atmosphere every day, or over 140,000 millions a year.

The dust into which all these shooting stars are dissolved sinks to the earth, and if the dust of each meteor weighs but a single grain, this amounts in the aggregate to 22,000,000 pounds, or 10,000 tons. By this amount the earth increases every year, and as she nets up about 3 1-3 grains a day, she is growing rapidly heavier. But large as it may seem in the mass it is really a trifle compared with the weight of the earth.

If this annual increment of meteor dust were spread evenly over the entire surface of the earth, it would form a layer less than one-hundred-millionth part of an inch in thickness. But when the twentieth century opens, our little globe will be 900,000 tons heavier than it was when the nineteenth century dawned.

The largest locomotive in the world is the Giant, of French type, on the Mallet compound articulated system, that was constructed by the Belgian State Railway Administration for the sharp gradients near Liege, having been shown at the Brussels Exhibition of last year. This engine, carried by six pairs of coupled wheels, has a working order 108,000 kilos, equal to 106 tons, which weight is entirely utilised for adhesion; but the arrangement is such that each pair of wheels only loads the rails with 18,000 kilos, equal to 17¾ tons.

Animals that Don't Drink.

There are some animals which never drink, for instance, the lamas of Patagonia and certain gazelles of the Far East. A number of snakes, lizards, and other reptiles live in places devoid of water. A bat of Western America inhabits wholly rainless plains. In parts of Algeria, France, there are herds of cows and goats which hardly ever drink, and yet produce the milk for Roquefort cheese.

An epicure says there are always seven wrong ways to eat an egg, and only one right way. We have discovered a time when there are eight wrong ways, and that is when the egg is a bad one.

THEATRICAL REHEARSALS.

This One Was Enough to Sadden the Actors Heart.

It was a group of three. The central figure was a man of medium height who would have been almost dapper had his clothes been new and carefully worn. His head was bare on the top, but there was a thick and curling fringe of hair at the back and sides. His round face wore an expression of intense but amiable anguish. At his right stood a soberly clad woman with hat and veil; at his left, a tall, slim youth with hair parted in the middle, wearing a sawed-off, double-breasted sack coat, knife-edge trousers and tan shoes. A bundle of typewritten sheets was in the hand of each. The boss was gently expostulating with the woman.

"No—my—dear!" he said, with intense emphasis. "Not that way at all. You must put more animation into the lines. Now listen:

"'I thought he was DEAD!' see? Lots of emphasis on 'dead.' 'His death WAS published in the papers!'

"And when you say this you must suit the action to the word—so"—(here he went through the desired series of gestures)—"and step back—so. Now, when she says that" (turning to the youth) "you must put some snap into your answer. Say it like this: 'He WAS given up by the doctors,' and so on.

"And then when the Judge comes in you must start as you perceive him and look warningly at Mrs. So and So here. And before you say 'Introduce me to the Judge as your brother, that he may not suspect anything,' you must come close to her so that she could hear if you should whisper the words as you would, were you not anxious to have the whole house hear you. And when you ask for the loan of $5,000 and promise to pay it with 6 per cent. interest, you must express both feelings and threats by your tone. Remember that you are the villain and must talk like one and act like one."

While the intruder gazed and listened, the Judge, an individual without coat or waistcoat, who was also conning a bundle of typewritten sheets, came on. He read his lines without looking up or varying once from a monotone. This, however, seemed to make no impression upon the boss, who was laboring earnestly with the youth in the sawed-off sack coat, to the end that he should make his devilish nature apparent in his speech and action. But when the Chaste House Blouses.

Pretty blouses in light woolen and silk fabrics are much in demand at this season for home wear, and some suitable and pretty models are seen in the large establishments.

A simple and attractive blouse bodice is made of rose colored challie, the material divided into three fullnesses in front, divided by bands of lace insertion. Over the shoulders are bretelles of pleated material, edged with small pleated frills. A similar band is arranged between the bretelles in the front. It is below these bands that the fullness of the material starts. The bishop sleeves are gathered into cuffs of the material, trimmed with lace insertion.

The Well-Dressed Woman.

The chief characteristic of fashion's present show is its infinite variety, its modified and graceful designs and outlines, and endless styles, affording an unlimited choice of models suited to any peculiarity of form, face, or feature. There has been a great rage for brilliant color-effects, but as a rule these melanges have been toned and artistically combined, and we have become entirely accustomed to the once most impossible union of odd colors. Personal choice and individuality in gowns are everywhere apparent, and thus, perfectly attired women are seen everywhere among the refined class of society, particularly at the fashionable resorts, where all the nice phases in modern gowning are best studied. Consistency is another characteristic that is receiving especial attention, and gowns and garnitures, jewels and laces are all appropriate to their own particular time and place. Of course there are very noticeable departures from this progressive and artistic state of things, but, as a whole, our American women are undoubtedly the best dressed people in the world. We are not treated any longer to the sight of a bedizened white lace parasol carried en suite with a cotton gown, however smart and pretty that same cotton gown may be. Neither do we behold, as in days past, the very absurd sight of diamond dog-collar worn either with morning or travelling costumes, no matter how elegant these costumes may be. One strange thing, however, was noticed this season at a very celebrated watering-place, and that was the display of superb diamond earrings by women of wealth and social standing who were attired in the sable gowns of mourning.

The New Cashmeres.

The handsome double-faced cashmeres will find increasing favor and admiration as the new weaves and rich fall colorings are brought out. This material is quite heavy enough for winter wear, while the quality is such as not, unless well lined and worn above warm underskirts. The elegant Venetians and faced cloths make up into very stylish tailor costumes, but unless of the best quality, the surface guaranteed to have fuzz, spewed rain and other spots show aggressively, as they do, in fact, on most dressed materials. India cashmere, being alike on both sides, is an economical purchase in the long run. It is very soft, and in black is somewhat dull, but this all-wool variety is everlasting wear, and makes up handsomely, no matter how simply trimmed. Another variety of soft, flexible India fabric is covered with fine silk fibers, like an improved camel's hair, but many women object to it on this account. French cashmere is a very beautiful material, but its somewhat lustrous surface like many weaves in silk, has the objectionable fault of becoming quickly glazed by wear. Cleaners profess to remove this oily-looking gloss, but very frequently they do not succeed.

A Doctor on Sunstroke.

As eminent doctor has been investigating the malady, and has come to the conclusion that sunstroke is not due simply to excessive heat or exposure to the full rays of a cloudless sun He declares that sunstroke is, on the contrary, an infectious disease, caused, like fever or small-pox, by a specific organism or germ. But this germ he has not yet succeeded in isolating, though he hopes in the course of time to do so. There is little doubt, he says, that the germ is bred in the superficial layers of the soil in certain low-lying regions of the earth, and that it is imbibed into the human system by the breathing of dusty air.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Womankind in general is interested in her fall and winter wardrobe at this season of the year, and suitable gowns and wraps are in order, as elaborate assortment of all kinds of wearing apparel having been liberally provided to meet the demand.

Many prefer to wait until the winter modes are practically settled before investing in an outfit, and the gowns designed in the spring of light weight wool and silk, which met away during the hot spell come in handy at this time. But for the woman who only has last winter's costumes to fall back upon, there are any number of ways this autumn of altering and renovating these frocks so as to pass over the interval between fall and winter fashions.

Now that the combination of two contrasting colors in a gown is again fashionable, the economical woman may turn out a stylish and up-to-date costume by employing the materials of two last season gowns, or combining new material with the old. Before starting to work, however, all the goods should be well cleaned and pressed, and a stock of new linings laid in, as old or washed linings tend to spoil and give a tawdry appearance to the prettiest dress.

There are any number of simple recipes for cleaning woolen and silk fabrics, which usually work wonders in the way of renovation. Naphtha, French chalk and magnesia are all excellent stain removers, but when benzine or naphtha is employed care should be observed in applying it and it is better to try it first on a small piece of the goods. Above all things these mixtures should be kept out of the reach of children and at a safe distance from the light or fire as they are apt to explode if brought in contact with heat. Fine flour or cornmeal is a simple and efficacious method of removing white woolen goods, the process consists in burying the material in the substance for twenty-four hours.

Velvet, which promises to be extensively employed this season on gowns, and hats, may be made to regain its former loveliness by holding the wrong side over a pan of boiling water and brushing the nap up with a whisk broom as the steam does its work. Another mode of brightening velvet is to dampen it on the wrong side, and then stretch smoothly over a board and set before a hot iron. The former method, however, is the safest and best.

Now for making over the materials. The first necessity is a good up-to-date pattern. This together with some fresh trimmings and an artistic touch is the groundwork of a pretty and fashionable toilette. As the circular effect with the close fitting upper portion is the correct skirt of the moment, this may easily be obtained by employing the top part of last season's skirt, and making the shaped flounce of some contrasting color, headed with a bias or satin fold. It may be necessary to purchase new material for the flounce, but if one possesses another half-worn frock it would be well to rip it and have it dyed a contrasting color to the first gown and then use this for the flounce and trimmings.

The blouse bodice may be easily made over to conform to the latest mode, with yoke or guimpe effect of some pretty silk, with high tucked, stock collar and girdle belt to match, or if preferred one of the popular little boleros, either round or square which are now much in vogue might be made of the cloth, with the vest of silk or some other pretty fabric. The sleeves must be altered to accord with the prevailing style, and may be adorned with a small cap or epaulet if desired to relieve any severe effect of these skin-tight models.

The next item of importance in the autumn outfit is the hat or bonnet to be donned on dressy occasions. Straw hats are now worn quite late into the autumn, especially light colors, while the yellow satin straw hats which have been worn through the summer adorned with flimsy chiffon and pink roses make very attractive fall models trimmed with black ostrich tips and velvet ribbon of the same color. The prevailing style just now being to have the hats worn directly off the face, a good plan is to have the hat turned back in the front, with the feathers arranged to droop gracefully from the left side of the brim, while the crown of the hat is simply encircled with black velvet ribbon finished in the back with a smart bow. A few rich red roses resting on the hair beneath the brim is the best effects are pretty effect, but may be dispensed with.

A woman thus attired in a renovated frock, a pretty hat and immaculate shoes, gloves and veil presents quite as dainty and stylish an appearance as her sister more liberally endowed with the wealth of purse enjoyed in the latest importations from Paris.

To Keep Feathers.

Feathers that are plucked from fowls, ducks, and geese should be put into a dry wooden tub and kept free from dirt until they dry; when the little quills are quite dry, they should be put into large paper bags and hung up in a warm dry place; they must be put in lightly, not packed together. If allowed to hang thus for a few months they may be used for pillows or to fill up beds without further drawing. If wanted for immediate use, they must be put in a cool oven for several hours. Before putting them in pillows, &c., they should be looked through; the fluff should be stripped from the quills of the larger feathers, and the tips of the quills cut from the medium size ones; the small ones may be left whole.

Democratic Nomination.

FOR GOVERNOR,
Elvin W. Crane,
of Essex County.

FOR CONGRESS,
Eighth District,
Edward H. Snyder,
of Essex County.

FOR CONGRESS,
Third District,
Patrick J. Convery, of Middlesex County.

Somerset County.
FOR ASSEMBLYMAN,
Samuel S. Childs, of Bernards.

FOR SHERIFF,
Selah Schoonmaker, of Hillsborough.

Somerset's Sheriff.

Selah Schoonmaker, who has been nominated by the Democrats of Somerset county for Sheriff, will not only poll the full party vote but as well a considerable vote among the Republicans because of his personal popularity. These facts, together with the factional disturbances and jealousies that prevail in the Republican ranks in Somerset, afford him splendid chance of election.

Mr. Schoonmaker would make a creditable Sheriff. He is young, honest and energe tic and the voters of Somerset county can rest assured that if they choose him on election day they will be sure of a clean administration from beginning to end. Though a stanch Democrat, Mr. Schoonmaker, if victorious, will go into office without pledges to make or break. His whole effort will be made to give the people a careful, economical administration.

The office of Sheriff is one of the most powerful in the State, and if the incumbent cares to or can be prevailed upon by unscrupulous politicians to do certain things inimical with the public weal, he is in a position to do it. In the nomination of Mr. Schoonmaker there was no political trickery or deals and it is essential for the welfare of the county that a man chosen for Sheriff shall go into that office entirely free of political obligations.

Such a man is Mr. Schoonmaker, and a vote for him will be a vote for a proper administration of the office of Sheriff for the next three years.

Vote for Col. Snyder.

Col. Snyder will make an admirable representative of the Eighth district in Congress. He is the equal of Congressman Fowler in every business qualification, and has had nearly as wide a range of experience in public affairs. He was a creditable member of the State Legislature from Essex county and for years has been honored with important offices in his own city.

He enters the campaign without any of the political deals that has characterized Mr. Fowler's career from beginning to end in Congress. The next few years are to be important ones in the National life and it is imperative that the country should have its best material in Congress. Colonel Snyder is the right kind of a man for the Eighth district. If elected he will go to Congress unencumbered with personal and private obligations such as Mr. Fowler was obliged to submit to in order to secure a nomination, and which are dangerous instruments to honest administration of the public affairs.

Mr. Crane's Good Work.

The enthusiasm with which Candidate Crane is received throughut the State shows that the Democracy of New Jersey is getting right into line again for an overwhelming victory on election day. Mr. Crane's discussion of the State issues and his intentions if elected to office—which he certainly will be—is making votes by the hundred. It has been several years since the Democrats have conducted such a vigorous campaign as is now going on.

The Republican record needs but the truth told about it, and in some places where the people have had particu lar experience with the sort of rank legislation that the Republicans have enacted it is not necessary even to do this to ensure their voting for Mr. Crane, as well as all the local and Congressional candidates named by the Democrats.

Mr. Childs for Assembly.

There is every reason to believe that Samuel S. Childs, who has been nominated as Assemblyman in Somerset county by the Democrats, stands a splendid chance to win on election day. Even if there was no dissension in the Republican ranks, which, of course, will aid the Democrats, Mr. Childs is possessed of a record in private life that would take him into the campaign with superior chances over his opponent.

Mr. Childs was born and brought up on a farm in Bernards township, and still lives there. He knows the wants of the farmers, and if elected to the Assembly he can be depended upon to successfully legislate not only the whole county at large in a representative way, but for the needs of the agricultural community particularly well.

Poor Mr. Riker.

Possessed of an eloquent manner and a fluent tongue, together with an inside knowledge of the affairs of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, Secretary and Treasurer Riker appeared before the Common Council last night and indulged in some honeyed words in which he sought to stem the tide of honest sentiment among the people as to the requesa he and his associate capitalists and speculators are urging to be granted them in the form of a franchise for the extension of their line to the eastern limits of the city. Mr. Riker is a man of talent and a lawyer of ability. As a legal gentleman he knows how to make black appear white, and as a trolley promoter he has a delightful way of making such corporations as the Plainfield Street Railway Company pose purely as philanthropic institutions for the benefit of the public, and in whom he and his friends have staked vast personal interests to be carelessly dallied with by uncertain fate.

Mr. Riker appeared before the Common Council Monday equipped with every technical fact that could be moulded by his subtle argument into an instrument that would secure for himself and the capitalists a franchise that they would have the people believe is scarcely worth the asking for. From his point of view he had everything his own way for the time being. If he had been a hero in a melo-drama instead of a "bloated capitalist," as he was pleased to term himself at his pathetic—an epithet, by the way that no one has applied to the trolley promoters in the present agitation—he would have been greeted with tumultous applause from the gallery.

Perhaps, unfortunately for his own gratification, Mr. Riker was nothing but a poor, deluded individual upon whom Plainfield has heaped an awful calamity in the form of a franchise for the operation of a street railway in the principal thoroughfares. It is truly pitiful that Mr. Riker and his honest but poor friends have been so terribly duped by the citizens of Plainfield.

But, strange to say, Mr. Riker and his friends actually want more of such privileges from Plainfield, and they want them, too, until Gabriel's trumpet blows.

Crane to be Heard Here.

According to the schedule arranged for the campaign tour of Candidate Crane, Plainfield is to come in for a speech from the Democratic candidate. On Saturday, November 5th, Mr. Crane will "swing around the circle" in Union county, with a meeting in both Elizabeth and Plainfield in the evening. It was reported that Mr. Crane was to speak in Somerset county, but according to the schedule given out at the headquarters of the Democratic State committee that county won't have a chance to hear and see the man who is doing political battle against Voorhees.

We give no rewards, an offer of this kind is the meanest of deceptions. Our plan is to give every one a chance to try the merit of Ely's Cream Balm—the original Balm for the cure of Catarrah, Hay Fever and Cold in the Head, by mailing for 10 cents a trial size to test its curative powers. We mail the 50 cent size also and the druggist keeps it. Test it and you are sure to continue the treatment. Relief is immediate and a cure follows. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

Mr. Barrows' Position.

Councilman Barrows surprised us Monday with an eminently fair and correct, in most particulars, statement of the trolley franchise situation as it has developed up to the present time before the Common Council. Mr. Barrows, no matter how resolute he may be to carry a point when once he undertakes it, seems in this case to be imbued with the idea of doing for the people what the people wish.

His rehearsal of the negotiations to date, the evident advantages of trolley extension, the eastern limits of the people towards the franchise as well as their sudden awakening to its value, were all the truth. We must confess our admiration for Mr. Barrows' action in securing a fair hearing for the public in regard to this franchise, when many others in his position, and with the influences that are being brought to bear on him, would doubtless have ignored the popular sentiment and pushed the ordinance through with "bells on."

Mr. Barrows deserves the appreciation of the people for his statement last night. It shows that he is possessed of the most important qualification of a public official—a desire to do as the majority wishes.

We trust that Mr. Barrows will pursue this course to the finish, and if he does we are confident that the Plainfield Street Railway will secure no further franchises til they pay a fair price for them and submit to stipulations that are in the right interests of the people.

Don't Despair.

East Second street people need not despair of ever securing trolley facilities for their section of the city because Mr. Riker has made bold to withdraw from the Common Council the application of the Plainfield Street Railway Company for a franchise over the proposed route. Such a move was unexpected on the part of the trolley capitalists.

Those who know something of the inside workings of the city government in dealing with the street railway company well remember that four years ago, when Mayor Fisk was chairman of the street committee of the Common Council, the capitalists assumed identically the same attitude in reference to the extension then under consideration that they do now. In order to secure the Dunellen line Mr. Fisk insisted that the company also extend their road to Netherwood. The capitalists said that they would not do so. Mr. Fisk then took the position that the Front street extension franchise would not be granted. The company said that ended it and that they would make no further efforts for a franchise to Dunellen.

It is a fact, however, that the street railway company are running their cars to Netherwood to-day. The same result will eventually prevail in relation to East Second street.

About Judge Coddington.

The New York Mercantile and Financial Times, in discussing the Senatorial situation in Union county from a Democratic point of view, has this to say of former Judge Wm. A. Coddington:

"There have been many names proposed for Senator this year, but no more respected, prominent or popular man has been mentioned than Hon. William A. Coddington, who was the last City Judge Plainfield ever had. He was elected over a very formidable and popular rival—Hon. John Ulrich—afterward Assemblyman, by no majority, and was the first Democrat who had ever beaten a Republican for the seat on the bench.

He is a prominent lawyer, being a member of the well-known firm of Reed & Coddington, and when the partnership was formed he has not run for public office, but has strictly followed his profession. He has, however, always taken a warm interest in politics. He is in fact known throughout the county, and has no savoring, whatever, of a politician. Should he be nominated we venture to predict that he will carry the city of Plainfield and the county solely on his popularity and good standing. Mr. Coddington is a member of the Union County Club, Park Club, League of American Wheelmen, Crescent Wheelmen and an active worker in the United Order of American Workmen. He also belongs to the Knights of Pythias, Royal Arcanum, Knights Templar, Odd Fellows, Knights of Trinity and the Order of Red Men.

He is a very public-spirited and liberal man and his constant aim is the material and moral advancement of the community.

The school savings bank system for keeping the pennies of the children and encouraging thrift among them has been adopted by many schools in this country. The idea is French, but it is a good one, and it is claimed that it now only develops economical habits in the children, but that it benefits them by restricting their expenditures for candy and other useless and injurious articles.

One of the last things the Foster Voorhees did before sending in his resignation as Acting Governor was to appoint an old friend and neighbor, William B. Tucker, of Elizabeth, as deputy factory inspector for this district.

Street Railway a Paying Investment.

One point that Mr. Riker, of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, laid especial stress upon in his statement to the Common Council Monday night was that the road was not a paying investment. For a time his whole effort seemed to be to make it appear that as the street railway company stock holders had not made anything for themselves thus far in the operation of the road, the Council ought to take pity on them and grant a franchise in perpetuity for the extension of the line to the eastern limits of the city to provide the connecting link with a through county line.

When Mr. Riker says that the stockholders of the street railway company have not received one cent of dividends from the operation of the cars for the past six years, he probably knows what he is talking about. But when he says that the street railway company is not and has not been a paying investment, he states something that is not so from the standpoint that the people should look at it.

The use of the franchise that the people granted has produced revenue and profit enough to pay five per cent. interest on the $100 000 bonds that the company has sold to someone. If it was the misfortune of the stockholders in the Plainfield Street Railway Company that they were not equipped with sufficient capital to build and put the road in operation, that is certainly not the fault of the city. But as long as the road has made enough to pay the interest on the bonds that were sold to furnish funds with which to build it, it is a paying investment.

Mr. Riker and his partners succeeded in selling those bonds in Wall street because the buyers were convinced that the amount of traffic that the road would secure from the rights the city had granted would be ample security for the immediate payment of interest and the final redemption of the bonds. Mr. Riker does not attempt to say that the business of the road as it is now operated is not sufficient to do this.

Just let us suppose that Mr. Riker, Mr. Nevins, Mr. Berrell and the other gentlemen composing the stockholders of the street railway company, had not found it necessary to sell any bonds at all, but instead had put up out of their own pockets the $100,000 in cash—or at least, 97½ per cent of it, for which bonds were sold. In that event, instead of paying out five per cent interest on that sum to Wall street bankers, they would be distributing among themselves the interest that they are now paying to the bond holders.

Assuredly, the road is paying interest on someone's investment of $100,000—or 97½ per cent of it—and if that investment is not the personal cash of the stockholders of the company it does not alter the fact that the road is a paying one just the same.

In our humble opinion we do not think that when the city of Plainfield granted a franchise, upon which the favored ones could go into the money market and secure $97,500 with that for security, it is anything but gilt-edged.

However, Mr. Riker and his partners seem to think that because Plainfield has given them a franchise on which they were able to borrow $97,500, and to operate it so that they could pay the interest on that sum from the profits of the enterprise, that they are new perfectly justified in saying that that great public right is not an asset that is worth considering the value of in determining to what extent the city shall go further in the same direction.

How the Soldiers Vote.

About 5,000 soldiers will vote at the coming election although nearly 3,000 of them will be out of the State on November 8th; some of them at Camp Meade, Pa., with the Fourth Regiment; some at Huntsville, Ala., with the Third Regiment, and the rest way down south with the Sixth Alabama. All who are away have been provided with ballots and blank forms, on which have been printed instructions as to the method of casting the votes.

The general statutes of the State provide that every qualified elector absent from the State, in time of war and in the service of the United States, shall be entitled to vote. He must prepare his own ballot, and then sign a paper which authorizes some elector in his election district to cast the ballot for him. The proxy takes the ballot, in a sealed envelope, to the election officers of the soldier's district and takes an oath to the effect that he has not opened the envelope or changed the ballot. Then the envelope is opened and the ballot cast by the election officers.

Though "Farmer Orator" James E. Martine has not been heard to any great extent in political circles thus far in the State campaign, his clarion voice and enthusiastic manner will soon grace the Democratic stump. Mr. Martine has received an invitation from the State committee to deliver a number of campaign speeches and he will soon commence the aggreeeive work for which he is noted throughout New Jersey.

GREAT SECRET IN THE LIVING OF WILLIAMS.

The Once Alleged Dead Man's Mother Tells Her Story.

SAYS NO ATTEMPT AT FRAUD

BUT THE FAMILY HAD REASONS FOR NOT INFORMING THE PUBLIC.

What Those Reasons are Mrs. Williams Declines to Say—She Claims That it Was Harry Who Instructed Her to Make it Known That He Was Alive and to Return the Insurance Money to the Company.

Mrs. Sarah E. Williams, mother of Harry B. Williams, who is now known to be alive instead of being drowned by falling overboard from the steamer "Jane Engils," writes the following "inside facts" to The Daily Press:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I wish to state to the public through the medium of your paper, that the rumor concerning my son, Harry B. Williams, who was reported to have been drowned December 8th, 1897, are, in the main, unfounded. I received a letter from him after his reported death stating that he was alive, and directing me not to take any insurance or to retain the same in case I had taken it, and directing me not to let any one know he was alive or give publicity of the affair for a reason entirely apart from the insurance.

Previous to this Walter C. Williams, my husband, had gone to Seattle to take a position as engineer on a steamer which was chartered to run up the Yukon river. He had been looking after such a position for over a year. Mr. Walter Gordon, had business in the west. He had been advised by leading physicians at this time to go away and take a rest and had been so advised for over two years. The shock of the accident had been terrible to his naturally weak nerves, and his office, in which his brother had recently begun the study of law, became unbearable through its associations.

After receiving the above-mentioned letter from my son, I should have written Mr. Walter Gordon, but on the contrary decided to follow the instructions in the letter and tell no one.

Mr. Williams had assigned his right in the insurance to me, so I knew that I alone could collect it and as the company had refused payment I did not see the necessity for making that matter public. Finally after hearing so much scandal, I decided that a formal renunciation of our claims would be best, and wrote to Mr. Williams to write one to Mr. Marsh.

He did so but before the latter was received the matter was settled by the company to my great surprise and regret.

I felt that we were all now a party to fraud, but after the scandal which had been afloat, it was some time before I could decide what course to pursue, but finally wrote Mr. Williams and my son, W. Gordon Williams, that Harry was alive and that I had had a let'er from him. They at once directed me to state the case fully to Mr. Marsh and take his advice which I have since done and on that same day Mr. Marsh was manufacated with the insurance company and was directed by them to take the legal steps necessary to have the administrator refund the money.

In conclusion, we all desire the money refunded, and will so state when the case comes up for trial. The insinuations made by enemies of my family to the effect that we tried to swindle an insurance company are unfounded and malicious, as, if we had wanted to do so, we certainly had the opportunity. Sarah E. Williams.

New Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

Frank Leslie's popular monthly for November is the initial number in the new and improved form of this long-time favorite illustrated family magazine, with a handsome cover in colors and gold. Its price is reduced to ten cents, one dollar per annum. This is unquestionably a wise and popular move on the part of the publishers; and the return of Mrs. Frank Leslie to the editorship of the magazine assures for it a future as brilliant as its past has been prosperous. The illustrators of this number include: Albert Wenzell, S. Werner, Ch. Grunwald, Hugh M. Eaton, Frank Adams, Florian Peixotto and Walter Goltz.—Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 141-143 Fifth avenue, New York.

$3,200 IN PROFITS AT THE CATHOLIC FAIR

Most Successful Event Ever Held in St. Mary's Parish.

FLAG CONTEST MADE $936.94

T. A. B. SOCIETY LED THE OTHER BY RAISING $448.58.

Father Westman is Declared the Most Popular Curate—Candidate Crane Won the Case Over Voorhees—Few Articles That Were Not Sold—Prizes Will be Awarded to Winners at Banquet.

The fair at the Catholic Clubhouse is ended, and as a result about $3,200 has been raised towards paying for the new chapel which is to be erected on the corner of Midway place and Berckman street, early in the spring.

The fair was the most successful ever held under the auspices of the of the club, both financially and otherwise. The success financially is phenomenal, and everybody is surprised that such an amount of money has been raised.

Saturday night three of the contests were decided. One was for the flag, a beautiful silken banner, 6x6½ feet, with golden fringe and fitted out with a jointed staff. Three societies tried for this, the T. A. B., Catholic Club and A. O. H. The sum of $936.94 was raised in this contest as follows: St. A. B. society, $448.58; A. O. H., $310.75; Catholic Club, $177.41. The flag went to the T. A. B. Society.

The sum of $429 was raised in the contest for the most popular curate, Fathers Westman, Stafford or Murphy. Father Westman won this easily, it being placed to his credit in the contest. The prize is a silver set.

In the contest for the governor, Crane ran far ahead of Voorhees, and will be given the cane put up by Patrick Casey.

When the fair was about to end Saturday night almost everything had been sold. There was a large attendance and a great deal of interest was manifested in the affair. A spirit of good nature and sociability reigned, and there was no jealously manifested by the losers in the contests, but the winners were congratulated on all sides. The main object with all seemed to be the furtherance of the work, not individual honor or gain, and the money spent was wonderful, considering that all of it was taken in little by little.

To Father Westman is due much credit for the handsome way in which everything went off. The Rev. Father was present every evening, staying until late, keeping a watchful eye here and there, and ready to lend a hand whenever it was needed. As the hour was late Saturday night, when the contests were decided, the prizes were not awarded then, but within a couple of weeks a supper will be held at which the contestants and their friends will be invited, and then the prizes will be given out with appropriate exercises.

Harry Worner Married

The announcement has just been made of the marriage of Harry Worner, the well-known clothier, of West Front street, to Miss Kate Geary, also of this city. The wedding took place last June. The occasion of the announcement was celebrated several evenings ago by a large dinner at Pedelfuer Hotel in Washington Valley given by the groom to some fifty of his friends.

—The evening of November 10th the members of Warren Engine Co., No. 1, of the borough, will hold a ball in the Saengerbund Hall.

TROLLEY PROMOTERS ARE EUCHRED.

Unable to Push Their Franchise Through by Bluff and Bluster.

MANY REPRESENTATIVE CITIZENS WERE HEARD.

ALL WANTED TROLLEY EXTENSION MADE, BUT UNDER LIMITED FRANCHISE.

Jacob Kirkner Was the First Citizen to Speak, and He Made Some Strong Points—F. E. Kinsman, J. E. Martine, A. S. Patterson and Others Are Heard—Secretary Riker, of the Company, Appeared For the Company—Council Adjourned Hearing, and Riker Got Mad and Withdrew the Application.

The most exciting hearing ever given by the Common Council on a public improvement was the one held Monday on the ordinance in which it is proposed to grant the Plainfield Street Railway Company a franchise to extend its lines to the eastern limits of the city. The constant agitation of this matter by The Daily Press showed fruitful results when the lobby in the Council chamber became literally packed with representative citizens who had come there to be heard and to watch the proceedings. Lemuel William Serrell's friendly letter to the select circle had the effect of bringing a few of his friends out to the meeting, but they were as mum as mum could be. The remarks made by citizens were overwhelmingly against the petition of the street railway company.

The Council was called to order at 8 o'clock and the hearing opened immediately.

Mr. VanHerwerden wanted to know if those present in the lobby were there in response to Mr. Serrell's letter. If so, he thought it was a reflection on the intelligence of the Council. He said that the newspapers of the city were the mouth-pieces of the people and were competent to express their opinions.

Mr. Wooiston was the first to speak among those in the lobby. He stated that he was not present in response to Mr. Serrell's letter. Until the last meeting of the Council he was of the opinion that the members of the Council had about settled on the conditions of the ordinance, and he thought that the Council knew how to act in the matter. Most people present, he said, were from the First ward and they were desirous of having the trolley extended.

At this time three petitions were read by the City Clerk which were presented by a number of property owners asking the Council to grant the franchise for the extension. In their opinion they thought the present conditions were fair and reasonable, and that the Council should not exact any further conditions. These petitions were received and filed.

The next speaker was Jacob Kirkner, of West Eighth street. He was very pronounced in his views and his remarks were listened to attentively. He stated that he had read in The Daily Press the various remarks made by F. E. Kinsman at a recent meeting giving his views on the trolley question. In the main he agreed with Mr. Kinsman. He was of the opinion that to grant the franchise in perpetuity was an improper thing to do. He said that he had lived here for thirty-four years, and when once there was only 2,000 residents in the city. He had watched the growth of the city, and had seen where councils had made mistakes. Continuing he said, "I hope that this honorable body will give this matter careful consideration. A limited term of years is desirable, and then the matter can be carefully guarded. There is always 'A nigger in the wood-pile' when an effort is made to get a thing of this kind through in a hurry. You probably know that John Kean is no friend of Plainfield. He owns the city water works which he obtained under an old charter, and I doubt if that charter is legal. You no doubt remember our sewage beds. They are so successful that one former member of this Council thought it desirable to leave the city and live elsewhere. This trolley line will be a through one, and the charter should not be granted for a term not to exceed fifteen years. You all know that corporations have no souls, and it would be detrimental to grant it for a longer time."

James E. Martine stated that so far as he could learn no one opposed the extension of the trolley. It is a benefit, but also a very profitable investment. Railroads reap large rewards, and it would be a crime to grant the franchise in perpetuity. He did not think the franchise should be given away for nothing. He insisted that there is much to be gained in trolleys, notwithstanding the claims of the trolley companies. He stated that he was in favor of giving the franchise for a term of twenty-five years, and at the end of that time readjust the conditions to the times.

Col. Dietrich, of Arlington avenue, was the next speaker, and his remarks caused not a little laughter. There are enough consents on Arlington avenue, he said, to secure the trolley. There is only one man on the avenue who objects to the trolley and he does not own a foot of ground on the avenue, but he was fortunate to be elected to the school board. I pay as much money in tax as he does. We don't want the trolley to go to Scotch Plains, but we do want it out our way, and then every time we drop a nickel in the slot we will thank you for it. This year the sewer tax is the largest on the list. You fellows that live on Ninth street, can't you think of us? He did not want the Council to grant this franchise until they put a trolley on Arlington avenue.

F. E. Kinsman, who spoke at the last Council meeting, again reiterated many arguments given at the previous meeting. He spoke of controlling the trolley company, of the evident decrease in the cost of electricity, and extending the road out toward Hillside Cemetery, and of the proper compensation to be received by the city for the granting of the franchise. He also favored a short term of lease, say fifteen years. He said that there was nothing to hinder the company from carrying freight as well as passengers, and that the matter of asphalting a few streets was a small consideration for what the company would receive. He cited the fact that Plainfield merchants now receive all of the trade from Scotch Plains and that that would be no inducement to throw the franchise away.

The next speaker was L. W. Serrell, of the Plainfield Street Railway Company. He said in part: "According to Mr. Kinsman's remarks as to the cost of electricity, if it meets his most sanguine expectation, would scarcely be below ten per cent, and regarding a reduction in fares to three cents, the United States Circuit Court decided in the case of the city of Detroit that they had no right to confiscate property, and that would be the result if they demanded three cent fares. Much has been said in the local papers about the company making money. As a matter of fact the Plainfield Street Railway Company has not made money, on the contrary they have been obliged to borrow money to pay taxes.

"The Plainfield company has nothing to conceal nor has it tried to conceal anything. Last year after paying the interest on our mortgage $2,000 was borrowed to meet expenses. The franchise in this city to date has cost the company $50,000 and and a dividend has never been paid in the six years that the road has been in operation. I ask you tonight to place yourself in our place and consider the matter fairly. The Plainfield papers and some of the citizens have been talking a great deal about what the company would make out of the franchise, but it is evident that the people want the trolley."

At the conclusion of Mr. Serrell's remarks Mr. Riker, of the Plainfield Street Railway Co., was introduced and he spoke somewhat as follows:
